not her people and her kinred, for Mar-docheus had charged her, that she should not tell it. And Mardocheus walked eue-ry day before the courte of the womens house, that he might knowe howe Esther did, and what should become of her.

And when the appoynted time of eue-ry damosell came, that she should goe into the kyng Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twelue monethes in the deckyng of the women (for theyr decking must haue so muche time, namely, sixe monethes with balme and mirre, & syxe monethes with good spices, so wer the women beutified) then wente there one damosell vnto the king, and whatsoeuer she required (so that it were comely) that muste be geuen C her, to goe with her oute of the womens building vnto the kynges palace. In the euenyng she wente, and on the morow a-gayne into the seconde house of the women, abidyng vnder the hande of Saasgas the kynges chamberlayne, whyche kept the concubines.

And she came in vnto the king nomore except it pleased the king to haue her, and that he called her by name. Nowe when the time came of Esther, the daughter of Abihail, the vncle of Mardocheus (which had receiued her as his owne daughter) that she should come into the king, she desired nothing, but what Hagei the kinges chãberlain the keper of the women, sayd.

And Esther founde fauour in the sight of al them that looked vpon her. And Est- D her was taken vnto the kyng Ahasuerus into his house royal in ŷ .x. moneth, which is the moneth Tebeth, in ŷ seuenth yere December of his reigne. And the kyng loued Esther aboue all the women, & she founde grace and fauor in his sight before al the vyrgins: so that he set the crown of the kingdome vpon her head: & made her Quene, in stede of Wasthi. And the kyng made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes (whiche feaste was because of Esther) and caused the landes to bee in quietnesse, and gaue giftes, as became y royaltie of a king.

And when the virgins were gathered together the seconde time, Mardocheus sate in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kinred and her people, accordyng as Mardocheus had bidden her: for Esther did after the worde of Mardocheus, lyke as yf she had bene yet vnder his gouernaunce. At the same tyme, whyle Mardocheus satte in the kinges gate, twoo of the kynges chamberlaynes, Bigthan and Theres, whiche kept the doore, wer wrothe, and sought to lay their handes on the kyng Ahasuerus: whereof also Mardocheus gate knowe-ledge, and tolde it vnto Queene Esther.
Esther vi.a and Esther certifyed the king thereof in Mardocheus name. And when inquisition was made, it was founde so. And they wer both hanged on a tree: & it was written in the Chronicles before the kyng.

The.iii.Chapter.

Haman the Macedonian, after he was exalted, obtained of the king that all the Jewes shoulde be put to death, because Mardocheus had not done him worship as other had.

A After these actes did y kyng Ahasuerus promote Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, & set him on hie, & sette his seate aboue all the princes that he had wt him.
And all the kinges seruauntes that were in the kynges gate, bowed their knees, & worshipped Haman: for the kyng had so commaunded concerning him. But Mar-docheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whiche were in the kinges gate, saide vnto Mardocheus: why transgres-sest thou the kynges commaundement?
And when thei spake this daily vnto him he folowed them not, and they told Haman: that they myght see howe Mardocheus matters would endure: for he had B tolde them y he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe y Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignation, and thought it to litle to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him the naci-on of Mardocheus, wherfore he soughte to destroye all the Jewes y wer throughout the whole empire of Ahasuerus, and that were of the nation of Mardocheus.
In the fyrste moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the twelueth yeare of king Ahasuerus, they caste Phur (that is a lot) before Haman from day to day, and from moneth to moneth, to the.xii. mo-neth, that is the moneth Ader. And Haman sayde vnto kyng Ahasuerus: There is here a people scattered abrode, and dys- C persed among all people in all the landes of thyne empire, & they haue theyr lawes contrary from all people, and doe not after the kynges lawes: neyther is it the kynges profite to suffer them after thys maner. If it please the kyng, let it be written that they may be destroyed, and so will I wey downe ten. M. talentes of siluer by the handes of the workemen, to be brought into the kynges treasure. And the kyng tooke his ryng from his hande, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of A-madatha the Agagite the Jewes enemy.
And the kyng sayde vnto Haman: Let the siluer be geuen thee, and do with that people as it pleaseth thee. Then were the kinges scribes called on the.xiii. daye of the first moneth (Nisan) and there was written (according as Haman comman- D ded) vnto all the kinges officers, and to the Captaines that wer in all y landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countreys on euery side, according to the writyng of euery nation, and after theyr language: in the name of king Ahasue-rus was it written, and sealed with the kinges ring. And the writinges wer sent by postes in to all the kynges landes, to roote oute, to kill, and to destroie all Je-wes, bothe yong and olde, children and women, in one daye (namely, vppon the xiii. daie of the.xii. moneth, whiche is the moneth Ader) and to spoile their goodes.
This was the summe of the wrytynge, Esther ix. that there should be a commaundement geuen in all landes, and published vnto all people, that they should bee readye against the same daie. And y postes went in al y hast, according to the kings comaun-demet. And in Susan y chief citie was y comaundemente deuised: And the king & Haman sat & dranke, when in the meane time the citie of Susan was disquieted.

The.iiii.Chapter.

Mardocheus geueth the Queene knowledge of the cruel decree of the king against the Jewes.

When Mardocheus perceiued A all that was done, he rent his clothes, and put on sackeloth with asshes, and wente out into the myddes of the Ci-tie, and cried loude and lamentably, and came

came before the kinges gate, but he might not enter within the kinges gate bicause he had sackecloth on.

And in all landes, countries and places
B as farre as the kinges worde and commaundement extended, there was greate lamentation among the Jewes, fastynge wepyng and mourning, and many laye in sackeclothes and in asshes. So Esthers damsels and her chamberlaines came and tolde it her. Then was the Queene excedingly astonied. And she sent raymente, ye Mardocheus should put on, and laye the sackecloth from hym. But Mardocheus would not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whiche stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement unto Mardocheus, that he mighte knowe what it were, wherfore he did so. So Hathath wente forth to Mardocheus unto the strete of the citie, whiche was beefore the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde hym of al that had happened unto hym, and of the summ of silver that Haman had promysed to weye downe into the kynges treasurye, bicause of the Jewes, if he would destroye them (and he gaue hym the copye of the kynges commaundement that was devised at Susan, to destroye them, that he myghte shewe it unto Esther) and to speake to her, and charge her, that she shoulde goe into the kynge, and make her praier and supplication unto him for her

And when Hathath came in, he tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus. And againe Esther spake unto Hathath, and commaunded hym to say unto Mardocheus: all the kynges servauntes and the people in the landes of the kyng, knowe that whosoever commeth within the court unto the kyng, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commaundemente is, that the same shall dye: except the kyng holde oute the golden scepter unto hym, (in token of gratiousnesse) for the he shal lyve. As for me, I haue not bene called to come into the kyng now thys xxx. dayes. And they certified Mardocheus of Esthers wordes: and Mardocheus bad say agayne unto Esther: thinke not to saue thine own lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house, beefore all Jewes: for if thou holdeste thy peace at thys tyme, then shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliveraunce oute of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house B shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdome, for thys causes sake. Esther had them geue Mardocheus thys answere: goe thou thy way, and gather together all the Jewes that are founde at Susan, and faste ye for me that ye eate not and drynke not in thre dayes, neyther daye nor night. I and my damsels wyll faste likewyse, and so wyl I goe into the kyng, which thyng is yet contrary to the commaundement: and if I perish I perish. So Mardocheus went hys way, and did al that Esther had commaunded hym.

The. v. Chapter.

Esther entreth into the king, and biddeth hym & Haman to a feast, Haman prepareth a gallous for Mardocheus.

And on the third day it fortuned that Esther put on her A royall apparell, and stode in the court of the kynges palace within, over agaynste the kynges house. And the kyng sat upon hys royal seate in the kings palace over agaynste the gate of ye house. And when the king saw Esther ye Queene standing in the courte, she founde grace in hys sighte. And the king held out the golden scepter that was in his hande toward Esther. So Esther stept forth, & touched B the top of the scepter. Then sayd the kyng unto her. What wilt thou Queene Esther? and what requirest thou, aske even ye halfe of the Empire, and it shalbe geven thee. And Esther answered: if it please ye kyng, let the kyng and Haman come thys daye unto the banket, that I haue prepared for hym. And the kyng sayd: cause Haman to make hast that he may do as Esther hath sayd. So the kyng and Haman came to ye banket that Esther had prepared, and the kyng sayd unto Esther at the banket of wyne: what is thy peticion, that it maye be geuen thee? And what requirest thou? If it be euen the halfe of the Empire, it shalbe

Then answered Esther, and sayde: my petition and desire is, if I haue founde grace in the syghte of the kynge, and if it please the kynge to geue me my peticion, and to fulfyll my requeste, then let the kynge and Haman come to the bankete that I shall prepare for them, and so will I doe to morowe, as the king hath saied.

Then wente Haman forth thesame daye ioyfull and mery in hys minde. And when thesame Haman saw Mardocheus in the kinges gate, that he stode not vp and kne-led before him, he was full of indignation at Mardocheus. Neuerthelesse, Haman refrained himselfe: & when he came home, he sente, and called for his frendes, and zares his wife, and Haman tolde them of the glory of his riches and the multitude of his children, and altogether how the D kyng had promoted hym so greatly, and how that he had set hym aboue the Princes and seruauntes of the king. Haman sayd moreouer: yea, & Esther the Queene did let no man come in with the king vnto the banket that she had prepared, excepte me. And to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the king. But in all thys am I not satisfied, as long as I see Mardoche-us the Jewe sitting at the kinges gate.
Then sayd zares his wife, and al his fren-des vnto him: let them make a galous of fifty cubites hie, and to morowe speake thou vnto ye king, that Mardocheus may be hanged theron: and go thou in merelye with the king vnto the banket. And Haman was well contente withal, and caused the galous to be made.

The. vi. Chapter.

The king turneth ouer the Chronicles, and fin-deth the fidelitie of Mardocheus: and then to the cō-fusion of Haman, commaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honor.

A THe same nighte coulde not the king slepe, and he cōmaunded to bring the Chronicles & stories: which when they were read before the king, they happned on the place, where it was written howe Mardocheus had tolde Esther. ii.d. that Bigthana, and Theres the kynges two chamberlaines (whiche kept the thresholdes) soughte to laye handes on ye king Ahasuerus. And the king sayed: what worship and good haue we done to Mar-B docheus therefore? Then sayde the kinges seruauntes that ministred vnto hym: ther is nothing at all done for hym. And the kynge sayde: who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone into the courte without before the kynges house, that he myght speake vnto the kyng to hang Mardoche-us on the tree that he had prepared for hym.) And the kynges seruauntes sayde C vnto him: beholde, Haman standeth without in the courte. And the king sayde: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kyng sayd vnto hym: what shall be done vnto the man whom the king would faine brynge vnto worshippe? Haman thoughte in his hearte: whom desireth the king to bring vnto worship more than me?
And Haman answered the king: let the mā whom the king pleaseth to bryng vnto worshipp, bee broughte hither: that he maye bee araped with the royall garmentes whiche the kyng vseth to weare, and the horse that the kyng rideth vppon, and that the crowne royall maye be sett vppon hys head. And let thys rayment and horse be delivered vnto the hande of one of the kinges Princes, that they maye araye the man withall (whom the king is disposed to bringe to honor) and carye hym vppon the horse throughe the strete of the citie, and proclaime before hym: thus shall it be done vnto the man, whom the kyng pleaseth to bryng to honor.
And the kyng sayde: make haste, and take as thou haste sayde, the rayment D and the horse, and doe euen so vnto Mardocheus the Jewe that sitteth before the kinges gate, and let nothing faile of all that thou hast spoken. Thē toke Haman raiment and the horse, and arayed Mar-docheus, and broughte him on horsebacke throughe the strete of the citie, and proclaimed before him: euen thus shall it be done to the mā whom the king is disposed to honor. And Mardocheus came againe to the kinges gate: but Haman gat hym home in all the hast, mourning, bare headed, and tolde Zares his wife, and all hys frendes, euery thinge that had happened him.
Then sayd his wise men, and Zares his wife vnto hym: If it be Mardocheus of the sede of the Jewes, before whom thou haste begon to fall, thou shalte not preuaile againste him, but shalte surely fall before hym. And while they were yet talking with him, came the kynges cham-berlaines, and caused Haman to make hast, to come vnto the banket that Esther had prepared.

The

The .vii. Chapter.

The Queene biddeth the king and Haman againe, she prayeth for her selfe, and for her people, She accuseth Haman, and he is hanged on the gallous, which he had prepared for Mardocheus.

A And the king & Haman came into the bãket that Queene Esther had prepared and the kyng sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the bãket of wine: what is thy petytyon, (Queene Esther) yͭ it may be geuen thee?
And what requirest thou? Yea, aske euen halfe of the Empire, and it shalbe done.
And Esther the Queene aunswered, and sayd: If I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O kynge) and if it please the kynge, then graunte me my lyfe at my desire, and my B people for my petitions sake: for we are solde, I and my people, to bee destroied, to be slaine, and to perishe. And would God we were solde to be bondemen and bondewomen, then would I holde my tong: for the enemy pondreth not yͤ kynges harme.
The kyng Ahasuerus aunswered, & sayde vnto Queene Esther: who is he? & where is he, that dare presume in hys mynde to do after that maner? And Esther sayd: the enemy and aduersary is thys wicked Haman. Haman was exceadingly afrayd be-C fore the kyng and the Queene.
And the king arose from the banket and from the wyne in hys displeasure, & wente into the palaice gardẽ. And Haman stode vp, and besoughte Queene Esther for his lyfe: for he saw that there was a mischiefe prepared for him of the king already. And when the kyng came again out of yͤ palace garden, into the place where they dranke wyne, Haman had layed him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayd the kyng wil he force the Queene also before me in the house? As sone as that worde went out of the kynges mouth, they couered Hamãs face: and Harbona one of the chamberlai-nes that stode before the kyng, sayd: be-holde, there standeth a gallous in Hamãs house, fifty cubites hye, which he had made D for Mardocheus, that spake good for the kyng. The kyng sayd: hang him theron: so they hanged Haman on the gallous, that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacified.

The .viii. Chapter.

After the death of Haman, was Mardocheus exalted. And then there are comfortable letters sente vnto the Jewes.

The same day did king Aha- A suerus geue the house of Haman the Jewes enemy vnto Queene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kyng: for Esther tolde how that he belonged vnto her. And the kyng put of hys finger-ring whiche he had taken from Haman, & gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman.
And Esther spake yet more before yͤ king, and fel down at his fete weping, & besought hym that he would put away the wicked- B nesse of Haman the Agagite, and his de-uise that he had imagined agaynste the Jewes. And the kyng (accordyng to the maner) helde out the goldẽ scepter toward Esther (whereby was declared a token of graciousnesse) Then arose Esther, and stoode before the kyng, and sayd: if it please the kyng, and if I haue founde grace in hys syght, and if it be acceptable before the kyng, then let it be written, that the letters of the deuise of Haman the sonn of Hamadatha the Aga-gite, may be called againe: which letters he wrote to destroy the Jewes, which are in al the kynges landes. For how can I suffer and see the euill, that shall happen vnto my people? Or how can I loke vppon the destruction of my kynred? And the kynge Ahasuerus sayd vnto Queene Esther, and C to Mardocheus the Jewe: beholde, I haue geuen Esther the house of Haman, whom they haue hanged vpon a tree, bi-cause he layde hande vppon the Jewes.
Wryte ye also for the Jewes as it lyketh you, in the kynges name, and seale it with the kynges rynge (for the wrytinges that were written in the kynges name, and sealed wyth the kynges ringe, durste no man disanull.) Then were the kynges Scribes called at the same tyme, euen in the third moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the .xxiii. day. And it was writ- D Maye. ten (accordyng to all as Mardocheus cõmaunded) vnto the Jewes and to the Prynces, to the deputies and captaynes in the landes whiche are from India vnto Ethiopia, namelye an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euery one according to the writing thereof,

D of, and to euery people after their speache and to the Jewes according to their writing and language.

And he wrote in the king Ahasuerus name, and sealed it with the kinges ring.
E And by postes that rode vpon horses, and swift younge mules, sent be the writings wherin the king graunted the Jewes, (in what cities so euer they were,) to gather themselues together, & to stande for their life, and for to roote out to slay and to destroy all the power of the people and land, that would trouble them, with children & women, and to spoile their good vpon one day in all the landes of king Ahasuerus, namely, vppon the thirtenth daye of the twelueth moneth, whiche is the moneth Adar. The sum of the writing was, how there should be a commaundement geuen in all landes, and published among al peo-

Februarye.

E ple, and that the Jewes should be readye against that day, and to auenge themselues on their enemies. And so the postes that rode vpon the swift horses & mules, made hast with all spede, to execute the kynges worde: and the commaundement was deuised in Susan the chiefe city. And Mardocheus went out (from the palace, and) from the king, in roiall apparell of yelowe and white, and with a great crown of gold, being araied with a garmente of silke and purple: and the citie of Susan reioysed, & was glad and vnto the Jewes there was come (a newe) light and gladnesse, ioye and worship. In all landes and cities, into what places soeuer the kynges worde and commaundement reached, there was ioye and mirth, prosperitie and good dayes among the Jewes: insomuche that many of the people of the lande, became of the Jewes beliefe, and the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The .ix. Chapter.

At the commaundement of the king, the Jewes put their aduersaries to death. The sonnes of Hamā are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feast day, in remembraunce of their deliueraunce.

IN the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar, vpon the thirtenth day of thesame, whē the kinges worde and commaundemente should be done euen vpon the same day that the enemies should haue destroyed the Jewes to haue oppressed them, it turned contrarywise, euen that the Jewes shoulde subdue their enemies. For then gathered the Jewes together in their cities, within al the landes of king Ahasuerus, to laye handes on suche as woulde doe them euill, and no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And al the rulers in the landes, and Princes, and Deputies and officers of the king, promoted the Jewes, for the feare of Mardoche-us came vppon them. For Mardocheus was great in the kings house, and the report of hym was noised in all landes, how he encreased and grewe.

mies with a sore slaughter, and slue and destroyed, and did after their will vnto such as were their aduersaries. And at Susan the chiefe citie slewe the Jewes, and destroied fiue hundred menne, and slewe Pharsandatha, Dalphon, Asphatha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai and Waizatha the tenne sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Hamadata the enemie of the Jewes: but on hys goods they layed no hands. At the same tyme was the king certified of the nomber of those that were slaine in the citie of Susan. And the king sayd vnto Queene Esther.

The Jewes haue slaine and destroied fiue hundred menne in the citie of Susan and the tenne sonnes of Haman: what haue they done (thinkest thou) in the other lands of the king? And what is thy petition, that it may be geuen the? Or what requirest thou more to be done? Esther aun- C

And the king charged to do so, and the commaundemente was deuised at Susā, and they hanged Hamans tenne sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Susan gathered themselues together vppon the fourtenth day of the moneth Adar, and slewe three hundred men at Susan, but on their goodes they layed no handes. As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges landes, they came together, and stode for their liues, that they might haue reste from their enemies, and slew of their enemies fiue and seuentye thousande: howbeit they layed no handes on theyr goodes. Thys they dyd on the thirtenth daye

D daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth day of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they helde with feastinge and gladnesse. But the Jewes whiche were at Susan came together, bothe on the thirtenth daye, and on the fourtenthe, and on the fiftenth daye of the same they rested, and helde that daye with feastyng and gladnesse. And therfore the Jewes that dwelte in the villages and unwalled townes, helde the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar with gladnesse and feasting and kept holy day, and euery one sent giftes unto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and sente the wrytynges unto all the Jewes that were in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, bothe nie and farre, that they shoulde make a lawe among themselues and holde the fourtenth, and fiftenth daye
E of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherein the Jewes came to reste from their enemies, and as a moneth wherin their paine was turned to ioye, and their sorow into an holy day: and that in those dayes they shoulde make feastes, and gladnesse, and one to sende giftes unto another, and to distribute unto the poore.

And the Jewes were contente with it that they had begon to do, and that Mardocheus wrote unto them, howe that Haman the sonne of Hadamatha all the Jewes enemye, had deuised against the Jewes howe he mighte destroy them, and caused to cast Phur (that is a lot) for to put them in feare, and to brynge them to noughte: and howe Esther wente and spake to the kinge: that throughe letters hys wicked deuise (whiche he imagined agaynste the Jewes) mighte bee turned upon his own head, and howe he and his sonnes were hanged on the tree. For the which cause they called this day Phurim, bicause of the name of the lot, and bicause F of all the wordes of this writing: & what they themselues had sene, and what had happened unto them.

And the Jewes set it up, and toke it upon them and their sede, and uppon all suche as ioyned themselues unto them, that they woulde not misse, but obserue these two dayes yearely, accordinge as they are written and appointed: howe that these daies are not to bee forgotten, but to be kepte of childers children amonge all kinreds, in all landes and cities. They are the dayes of Phurin, whiche are not to be ouer slipped among the Jewes, & the memoriall of them ought not to perish frõ their sede.

And Queene Esther the daughter of Abihahell, and Mardocheus the Jewe, wrote with all aucthoritie (to confirme the seconde writing of Phurim) and sente the letters unto all the Jewes in the hundred and seuen and twenty landes of the Empire of Ahasuerus, with frendly and faithful wordes, to cõfirme these dayes of Phurim in their time appointed, accordinge as Mardocheus the Jewe, and Esther the Queene had appointed them. And they bounde their soule and their sede to fasting G and praier. And Esther stablished the wordes of these lottes, as it is written in the booke.

And the kyng Ahasuerus layd tribute upon the lande, and uppon the yles of the sea. And all that he did by hys power and aucthoritie, and ỹ great worship of Mardocheus, which the king gaue him, be they not written in the Chronicles of ỹ kinges of Media and Persia? For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde next unto king Ahasuerus, and great among the Jewes, and accepted among the multitude of his brethren, as one that seketh the wealth of his people, and speaketh the best for al his sede.

Job is plaged of God by the losse of hys goods and children.

Ge.xxii.d In the lande of *Hus, there was a man whose name was Job: and the same was a perfecte and juste man, suche a one as feared God, and eschewed euill. And he had Job.xlii.d seuen sonnes, and three daughters. His substaunce also was seuen thousand shepe and three thousande camels, fiue hũdred yoke of oxen, and fiue hundred she asses, and a very great housholde, so that he was one of the most principall men amonge al them of the east countrey. And his sonnes went and made bankets, one day in one house, another day in another, and sente for their three sisters to eate and drinke w Job.ii.a. them. And it fortuned, that when they had passed ouer the time of their banketing round about, Job sent for them, and sanctified them, and gat vp early, and offred for euery one a burnt offering. For Job sayd: least peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offēce, & haue bene vnthākeful to God in the hearts. Thus dyd Job eue-ry day: and vpon a day when the children of God came and stode before the Lord, it fortuned that Satan came also among them.

And the Lord sayd vnto Satan: from whence commest thou? Satan answered i.Pe.v.c the Lord & sayd: *I haue gone about the lande, and walked through it. And y Lord sayd vnto Satan: hast thou not considered my seruaunt Job, how that there is none like him in the lande: a perfecte and a juste man: such a one as feareth god, and escheweth euil. Satan answered, and sayd vnto the Lorde: dothe Job feare GOD for nought? haste thou not preserued him and his house, and all that he hath on euery side? Thou hast blessed the workes of his handes, and his possession is encreased in the lande. But lay thyne hande now vppon him (a litle) & touche all y he hath, and he shall curse thee to thy face. And the lord sayd vnto Satan: loe al that he hath be in thy power: onely vpon himselfe, see thou lay not thy hande. And Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord.

And vppon a certaine daye, it fortuned that his sonnes and daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brothers house, and there came a messenger B vnto Job, and sayd: while the oxen wer a plowing, and the asses going in the pasture beside them, the Sabees came in violently, and toke them away: yea, they haue slaine thy seruauntes with the edge of the sworde, and I onely ran my way to tell thee.

While he was yet speaking, there came another, and sayd: the fire of god is fallen from heauen, and hath brente vp all thy shepe and seruauntes, and consumed thē: and I only ran my away, to tel thee. And while he was yet speakinge, there came another, and sayde: the Caldees made three armyes, and fell in vppon the Camels, and haue caried them awaye: yea, and slaine thy seruauntes with the sword:
and I onely am gotten away to tell thee.
And while he was yet speaking, ther came another, and sayd: thy sonnes and thy daughters wer eating and drinking wine D in their eldest brothers house: and behold, there came a mightie greate winde out of the South, and smote the foure corners of the house which fell vpon thy children, and they are dead: and I am gotten away alone to tell thee.

Then Job stoode vp, and rente hys clothes, and shaued hys head, fell down vppon the grounde, worshipped, and Eccl.v.c. sayd. *Naked came I oute of my mo- i.Ti.vi.b thers wombe, and naked shall I turne thyther agayne. The LORD gaue and the LORDE hath taken awaye, (euen as it hath pleased y Lord, so it is come to passe) Job.ii.c. blessed be the name of the Lord. *

In

In al these thinges did Job not offende, nor murmured folishly agaynst God.

The. ii. Chapter.

Job is plaged with sore byles, and afterwardes is mocked of hys wife. Hys frendes visite hym, and haue compassion on hym.

A AND the children of God came and stode before the Lord, and Satan came also among them, & stode before the lord. And the Lord sayed vnto Satan: from whence commest thou? Satan answered the lorde and sayde: I haue gone about the land and walked through it. And the Lord sayd vnto Satan: haste thou not considered my seruaunt Job: for ther is none like vnto him in al ŷ lād. For he is a perfect and a iust man, suche a one B as feareth God, and escheweth euill, and continueth still in hys Godlynesse. And thou mouedst me againste hym, that I should punish him for nought. And Satan answered the Lord and sayd: skin for skin yea a man wil geue all that euer he hath for hys lyfe. But lay thyne hande now vpon hym, and touch once his bone & flesh, and he shall curse thee to thy face. And the lord sayd vnto Satan: lo, there hast thou hym in thy power, but spare hys lyfe. So
C went Satan forth from the presence of ŷ Lord, and smote Job, with merueylous sore byles, from the sole of hys fote, vnto hys crowne, so that he sat vpon ŷ ground in the ashes, and scraped of the filth of his sores with a potsharde.

Then sayd his wife vnto hym: doest thou yet cōtinue in thy perfectnesse? curse God and dye. But Job sayde vnto her thou speakest like a foolish woman. What? we receiue prosperity at the hand of God, and not receiue aduersitie? In all these thynges dyd not Job synne with hys lyppes. Nowe when Jobs frendes heard of all the trouble that happened vnto hym, there came three of them, euery one from hys own place, namely, Eliphas D the Themanite, Byldad the Suhite, and Sophar the Naamathyte. And they were agreed together to come to shew their cōpassion vppon hym, and to comforte hym. So when they lift vp their eyes a farre of, they knew hym not.

Then they cryed and wept, and euery one of them rent hys clothes, and sprinkled duste vppon their heades in the ayre.
They sat them down by hym also vpō the grounde, seuen dayes and seuen nightes.
Neither was there any of thē that spake C one word vnto hym: for they saw that hys payne was very great.

The. iii. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherein he declareth that thys present lyfe is miserable, and that the death of the righteous is ioyous and fortunable.

AFter this opened Job hys A mouth, and cursed hys day. And Job answered, & sayd: lost be that day, wherin I was born: and the night in the which it was sayd: there is a manchilde conceiued. The same daye be turned to darkenesse, and not regarded of God from aboue: neyther let hym shine vpon it with light, but let it be stayned wt darkenesse, and the shadow of death. Let the dim cloude fal vpon it, and let it be lapped in with sorow on the day tyme. Let ŷ darke storme ouercome that nyght, and let it not be ioyned vnto the dayes of the B yeare, nor counted in the monethes. Desolate be that night, & without gladnesse: let them that curse the day, and that be redy to raise vp mourning, geue it also their curse. Let the starres of that night be dim through darkenesse of it. Let it looke for light, but let it see none, neither the rising vp of the faire morning, bicause it shut not vp the wombe that bare me. For then should these sorowes haue been hid from mine eyes.

Alas, *why dyed I not in the byrthe? why did not I perish as soone as I came Iere. xx. b. out of my mothers wombe? Why sett they me vpon their knees? why gaue they me sucke with their breastes? Then should I now haue lyen styll, I shoulde haue slepte and been at rest, lyke as the kynges and Lordes of the earth, which haue bu[i]lded themselues speciall places: or as the Prin- D ces that haue had great substaūce of gold, and their houses full of siluer. Or why was not I hydde, as a thing borne oute of tyme, either as yoūge children, which neuer saw the light? There must the wicked cease from their tiranny, and there suche as bee ouerlabored be at reste: there are those let out free, which haue been in prison, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressor.

There are small and greate, and the ser-uaunt is free from his maister.
Wherfore is the light geuē to him that is in misery: and life vnto them that haue D heauy heartes? Which long for death (and though it come not) would digge it out of hid places, which also would be exceading glad and reioyce, if they could finde theyr graue any where. That should be ioye to that man whose way is hid, and God kepeth it backe from him. For my sighes come beefore I eate, and my roaringes fall out like ÿ water. For the thing that I feared is come vppon me: and the thynge that I was afrayd of, is happened vnto me: was I not happy? Had I not quietnesse? Was I not in rest? And now cōmeth such misery vpon me.

Job is reprehended of impatience and vniustice: and of the presumption of hys owne righteousnesse

A AND Eliphas the Themanite answered, and sayde:
if we beginn to commune with thee, wilt thou be dis content? But who can wtholde himselfe from speaking? Beholde thou hast ben a chaster of many, and hast comforted the wery handes.
Thy wordes haue set vp those ÿ were fallē, thou hast refreshed ÿ weake knees.
Cob.4.b. But now that the plage is come vpon the Job.ii.c. thou art grieued: now that it hath touched thy selfe thou art faint hearted. Is not this thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy patiēce and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consi-B der (I pray thee) who euer perished being an innocent? Or when were the Godly de stroyed? For (as I haue proued by experi-Gal.vi.c, ence:) they that plow iniquitie, *and sow wretchednesse, reape the same. With the blast of god they perish, and with ÿ breath of his nostrelles are they consumed away, the roaring of the Lyon, and the voyce of C the Lyon, & the teeth of ÿ Lions whelpes are pulled out. The Lion perisheth for lacke of pray, and the Lions whelpes are scattered abrode.
And vnto me came the woorde secretly and mine eare hath receiued a litle thereof. In the thoughtes and visions of the nighte (when slepe commeth on mē) feare came vpon me, and dread, which made all my bones to shake, The winde passed by, before my presence, and made the heare of my flesh to sta nde vp. He stode there, b I knew not hys face: an ymage ther was before mine eyes, and in ÿ stilnesse heard I a voyce. *Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall a man be purer thā his maker? Beholde, he founde no truthe in his seruauntes, and in his Angels there was foly: how much more in them that dwell in houses of clay, and whose foundacion is but dust, which shalbe consumed as it were with a moth? They shalbe smitten from the morning vnto the euening: yea, they shall perish for euer, when no man taketh thereon. Is not their royaltie gone away with them? they shal dye truely, and not in wisedome.

The.v.Chapter.

The ende of a foole. The righteousnesse of God. The Lorde chasteneth hys, and delivereth them a-gayne.

and the weaponed man spoiled it, and the uises of the subtyle, so that their handes woundes, and from the threatnynges of the vngodly, and from the violence of þ mighty. He is the hope of the poore: and the mouthe of the wicked shall be stopped. Beholde, happye is the manne whom God punisheth: therfore refuse not thou the chastening of the almightie. For though he make a wounde, he geueth a plaister: though he smite, his hande maketh hole againe.

He shall deliuer thee in sixe troubles, C and in the seuenth, there shall no euyll come to thee. In hunger he shall saue thee from deathe: and when it is warre, from the power of the swearde. Thou shalte be kepte from the euill tonge, and D when trouble commeth, thou shalte not nede to feare. In destruction and dearth, thou shalte be merye, and shalt not bee afrayde of beastes of the earthe. For the stones of the lande shall bee confederate with thee, and the beastes of the fyelde shall geue thee peace.

And thou shalt knowe that thy dwellyng place shall be in reste, and thou shalt goe and beholde thy habitation, and shalte not synne. Thou shalt see also, that thy seede shall encrease, and that thy posteritye shall bee as the grasse vpon the earthe. Thou shalte come also to thy graue in a faire age: lyke as when they take vp a corne sheefe in due season. Lo, this we oure selues haue proued by experience, and euen thus it is. Hearken thou to it also, that thou mayest take heede to thy selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

Iob aunswereth that his payne is more grieuous than his faulte, yet notwithstandyng he delyteth therein.

A IOb aunswered also and said: O that þ displeasure whiche I haue, wer truly wayed, and my punishement laide in the balaunces together: for now is it heauier than the sande of the sea. And this is the cause þ my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arrowes of the almightye are rounde aboute me, whose indignation hath dronke vp my spirite, and the terryble feares of God are sette agaynst me. Doeth the wylde asse rore when he hath grasse? Or cryeth the Oxe when he hathe fodder ynough? That which is vnsauerie shall it be eaten without salte? or is there any taste in the white of an egge? The thinges that sometyme I myghte not awaye withall, are nowe my meat for very sorowe. O that I might haue my desyre, and that God woulde graunt me the thing that I long for. O that God would beginne and smite me: that he woulde let his hande goe, and take me cleane away. Then should I haue some comforte: yea, I woulde desire him in my payne, that he woulde not spare, for I will not bee against the wordes of the holy one.

For what power haue I to endure? And what is myne ende, that my soule myghte be patiente? Is my strength the B strength of stones? Or is my fleshe made of brasse? Is it not so, that there is in me no helpe, and that my substaunce is taken fro me? He that is in tribulation ought to be comforted of his neighboure: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane away.

Myne owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water brooke, and as the riuer of water, doe hastely goe awaye. But they that feare the hoarefrost, the snowe shall fall vpon them. When their tyme commeth, they shal be destroyed and perishe, when they bee set on fyer, they shall C be remoued out of theyr place: for the pathes that they goe in, are crooked, they haste after vayne thynges, and shall perishe. They tourne them to the pathes of Theman, and to the wayes of Saba, wherein they haue put their truste. Confounded are they that put any confidence in them.

For when they come to obtain þ thinges, that they looke for, they are brought to confusion. Euen so are ye also com vnto me: but nowe that ye see my miserie, ye are afraide. Did I desire you to bring vnto me, or to geue me any of youre substaunce? To deliuer me from the enemies hande, or to saue me from the handes of Tirauntes? Teache me and I wil hold my tong, and when I doe erre, shewe me wherein. Howe stedfast are the wordes D of truthe? And whiche of you can rebuke and reproue them? Doe ye take deliberation to checke mennes sayinges, & iudge a poore worde spoken in vaine? Ye fal vpon the fatherlesse, and goe about to ouerthrowe youre owne frende.

And therefore be contente, and looke nowe vpon me, and I will not lie before youre face. Tourne (I praie you) bee indifferente iudges, tourne againe, and ye shall see my vngiltinesse, whether there be any vnrighteousnesse in my tong, or vain woordes in my mouthe.

thinges? How long shall woordes? Doeth god per-uerte the thing ẏ is law-thing that is right? For seing that thy sonnes sinned against him, did not he punishe them for their wickednesse? If thou wouldest nowe resort vnto God betimes and make thy humble prayer vnto the al-mightie, if thou wouldest liue a pure and a Godly lyfe, should he not awake vp vnto thee immediately, and geue thee the beu-tie of righteousnesse againe? In so much, that wherein so euer thou haddest litle afore, thou shouldest haue nowe greate a-boundaunce. Enquire (I praie thee) of Deu. xxxii.a foorth, and or euer it be gathered) it wi-thereth before any other herbe: Euen so goeth it with all them that forgette god, and euen thus also shall the Ipocrites

D and as for other, they growe oute of the earth. Beholde, God will not cast awaye a vertuous manne, neyther will he helpe the vngodly. Thy mouthe shall he fill wt laughing, and thy lippes with gladnesse. They also that hate thee, shall be confounded, and the dwelling of the vngodly shal come to naught.

Job declareth the benefites of god: and that mannes righteousnesse is nothing.

IOb aunswered, and sayd: I know it is so of a truth. For how may a man (compared vnto God) *be iustified? If he wil argue with him, ther is not one among a thousãd that can aunswere him. Concerning such as be wise of heart, or mightie in strength who euer prospered, that tooke parte against him? He trãslateth the mountains or euer they be aware. It is he that ouerthroweth them in his wrathe. He remoueth the earth out of her place, that the pillers therof shake withall. He cõmaundeth the sunne, and it riseth not: he closeth vp the starres, as it were vnder a signet. He himselfe alone spredeth out the heauens, and goeth vppon the waues of the sea. He maketh the waines of heauen, the Orion, *the seuen starres, and the secret places of the South. He doth great thinges suche as are vnsearcheable: yea, and B wonders without number.

Lo, when he goeth ouer by me, I shal not see him. And when he departeth by me, I shall not looke vppon hym, I shall not perceyue him. If he be hastye to take any thyng awaye, who wyll make him restore it agayne? Or who wyll saye vnto him: What doest thou? He is God, whose wrathe no manne maye wythstande, but the proudeste of all, muste stoupe vnder him.

Howe shoulde I then aunswere hym? Or what woordes shoulde I finde out against him? yea though I were righteous, yet might I not geue him one word againe, but mekelye submitte my selfe to him as my iudge. If I had called vppon him, and he had aunswered me, yet would I not beleue, that he heard my voice: he troubleth me so, with the tempeste, and woundeth me oute of measure without a cause. He will not lette my spirite be in reste, but filleth me with bitternesse. If menne will speake of strength: Lo, he is stronge: If menne will speake of righteousnesse, who dare be my recorder? If I will iustifye my selfe, myne owne mouthe shall condemne me: If I will putte foorth my selfe for a perfect manne he shall proue me a wicked doer.

For though I be an innocent, and my conscience cleare, yet am I werye of my life. One thing it is, and therfore I said: C He destroyeth bothe the ryghteous and vngodly. And thoughe he slay sodeinlye with the scourge, yet wyll he laughe at the punishment of the innocent. As for the worlde, it is geuen ouer into the hand of the wicked, and he shall couer the faces of the iudges, thereof. Is it not so? where is there any, but he is such a one. *My daies are more swifte than a runner they are gone, and haue seene no good Job.vii.a thing.

They are passed awaye as the ships that be good vnder sayle, and as the Eagle that flieth to the praie. When I am purposed to forgette my complaining, to leaue of fro my wrathe, and to coumforte my selfe, then am I afraide of all my sorowes: for I knowe that thou wilte not iudge me innocente. If I be then a wicked dooer, why laboure I in vaine? If I washe my selfe with snowe water, and make my handes neuer so cleane at the Well, yet shalte thou dip me in the mier, and mine owne clothes shall defyle me.

For he that I muste geue aunswere vnto, and with whom I goe to lawe, is not a manne as I am: Neither is ther any daiesman to lay his hand betwene vs. Lette him take his rod away fro me, yea, let him make me no more afraid of him, & then shall I aunswere him withoute any feare: for as long as it is thus, I cã make no aunswere.

and thy wrath increasest thou vppon me, Job. iii, b very many are the plages that I am in. *
Wherfore hast thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had perished, and that no eye had seen me. If they had caried me to my graue assoone as I was D borne, then should I be nowe as though I had neuer been. Are not my daies fewe? Let him then leaue of fro me, and let me alone, that I maie ease my selfe a litle, afore I goe thither, from whence I shall not turne againe: euen to the lande of darkenesse and shadowe of death: yea, into that darke cloudie land, and deadlye shadowe, whereas is no order, but terrible feare as in the darknesse.

The. xi. Chapter.

Job is vnkindly reprehended of Sophar. God is incomprehensible. He is mercifull to the repentaunt.

A Then aunswered Sophar ye Naamathite, and saide: Shoulde not he that ma-keth many wordes be aun-swered? Should he that bableth much be commended therin? Should men geue eare vnto thee openly? Thou wilt laugh other men to scorne, and shall no bodie mocke thee again? Wilt thou saie vnto god: The thing that I take in hande is perfect, and I am cleane in thy sighte? O that God woulde speake and open his lips against thee, y he might shewe thee (out of his secret wisdom) why he rewardeth the double as he was appointed to do: then shouldest thou knowe, that God had forgotten thee, because of thy sinne. Art thou able to finde B out the secretes of god? Or wilte thou attaine to the perfectnesse of the almightie?
He is hier than heauen, what arte thou able to do? Deper than the hell, how wilt thou then know him? His lēgth exceedeth the length of the earthe, and his bredth y bredth of y sea. Though he turne al thin-ges vpside down, close thē in, gather thē together, who wil turne him, frō his purpose? (Or who may say vnto hym, why doest thou so? * For it is he that knoweth the vani-tye of men, he seeth their wickednesse also, should he not then consider it? A vaine C bodie exalteth himselfe, and a man newe borne is like a wilde asses colte. If thou haddest now a right heart, and liftedst vp thy handes towarde him: if thou wouldest put away the wickednes which thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlinesse dwel in thy house, then mightest thou lifte vp thy face withoute shame, and then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.
Then shouldest thou forget thy misery, & thinke no more vpon it, than vpō the waters that runne by.
Then should the residue of thy life bee D as cleare as the noone daie, and spring foorth as the mornyng. Then mightest thou haue comfort, in the hope that thou haste: and slepe quietely, when thou arte buried. Then shouldest thou take thy rest and no manne to make thee afraide: yea, many one should set much by thee. As for the eyes of the vngodly, they shalbe consumed, and not escape: their hope shall be misery, and sorow of minde.

The. xii. Chapter.

Job shewyng his patience, declareth the myghte and power of god.

So Job aunswered, and said: A Then (no doubt) ye are y mē alone, and wisedome shal perish with you. But I haue vnderstanding aswel as ye, and am no lesse than ye.

Yea, who knoweth not these thinges?
Thus he that calleth vpon God, & whom God heareth, is mocked of his neighbor: the Godly and innocent man is laughed to scorne. Godlinesse is a light despised in the heartes of the riche, and is set for thē to stomble vppon. The houses of robbers are in wealthe and prosperitie: and they that maliciously meddle against GOD, dwel without care, in those thinges that B God hath geuen richly with his hand.
Aske the cattell, and they shall enfourme thee, the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell thee. Or the encrease of the earth, and it shall shewe thee. Or the fishes of ŷ sea, and they shall certifie thee.
* What is he, but he knoweth that the hande of the Lorde, made all these? * In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuyng thyng, and the breathe of the fleshe of all men.
Haue not the eares pleasure in hearing, and the mouthe in tasting the thing that it eateth? Among olde personnes there is wisedome, and in age is vnder-standing. Yea, with God is wisedom and strengthe, it is he that hath counsell and foreknowledge. Behold, if he break down a thing, who can set it vp againe? * Yf he shut a thing, who will open it? Beholde, if he with holde the waters, they drye vp:
If he let them go, they destroy the earth.
With him is strengthe and wisedome: he C knoweth both the deceiuer, and him that is deceyued. He carieth away ŷ wise men, as it wer a spoyle, and bringeth the Judges out of their wittes. He taketh awaye the subiectiō of the people from their kinges: and girdeth their loins with a band.
He leadeth away the great men into cap-tiuitie, and turneth the mightye vp si de downe. He taketh the veritie from out of the mouthe, and disapointeth the aged of their reason. He powreth the confusion vpon Princes, and coumforteth them that haue bene oppressed.
* Looke what lyeth hid in darknesse, he declareth it openlye: and the very shadowe of death, bringeth he to lyght. He bothe increaseth the people, and destroyeth them. He maketh them to multiplye, and driueth them awaye. He chaungeth the hearts of them that rule the people of the earth, and disapointeth them: so that they go wandryng oute of the waye, and grope in the darke without lyght: he ma-keth them also to stacker to and fro, lyke dronken men.

Job reproueth his frendes with their owne say-inges, and condemneth ypocrisy.

derstand it. Loke what then might ye bee taken for wise menne.

Nowe heare my chiding, and ponder the sentence of my lippes. Do ye speake iniquitie against God, and talke agaynste hym with deceipte? Wyll ye not accepte the persone of him? Or wyll ye contend with God? Shall that helpe you, when B he calleth you to reckening? For as one manne mocketh another, so doe ye mocke him. He shall punishe you, and reproue you, if ye doe secretely accept any person.
Shall he not make you afraide, when he sheweth himselfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? your remēbrāce is like vnto a sparke, and your bodies like ges, and then will I not hide my self frō

The .xiiii. Chapter.

Job describeth the lyfe of man, and prophecyeth of the resurrection. Hope susteyneth the godly, tyll they obtayne the thyng that they looke for.

A MAn that is borne of a woman, hath but a shorte time to liue, and is full of misery. He commeth vp & is cut down like a floure.
He flieth as it wer a shadowe, and neuer continu-eth in one estate. Doest thou open thyne eyes vppon suche one, and bringest me in thy iudgement? Who can make it cleane, Job. vii. a that commeth of an vncleane thyng? No mined, the number of his monethes are knowen onely vnto thee. Thou haste appointed him his boundes, which he cānot looketh for, like as an hierling doeth.

If a tree be cut downe, there is som hope yet that it wyll sproute, and shoote foorth the braunches againe. For though the roote of it bee waxen olde, and the stocke therof be dead in the grounde, yet when it getteth the scent of water, it wil bud and bring foorth boughes, like as a tree that is planted. But as for manne, when he is dead, perished and consumed awaie, what becommeth of hym? The floudes when they be dryed vp, and the riuers when they be emptye, are filled a all my goinges, yet bee not thou to extreme vppon my sinnes. My iniquitie is sealed vp as it were in a bagge: but be mercifull vnto my wickednesse. The mountaines fall awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters perce through the very stones by litle and litle, the floudes washe away the grauell and earth: And destroyest thou ẏ hope of man? Thou preuailest stil against him, so that he passeth away: thou chaungest his estate, & puttest him frō thee. And whither his children come to worship or no, he cannot tell. And if they bee men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he liueth, his fleshe must haue trauaile: and while the soule is in him, he must be in so-rowe.

The .xv. Chapter.

Eliphas reprehendeth Job because he ascrybeth wisedome and purenesse to hymselfe. He describeth the curse that falleth on the wicked, reckenyng Job to be one of that number.

THen aunswered Eliphas A the Themanite, and said: Shall a wise mans aunswere be the science of the winde, and fill any mans belly, as it were with the winde of the East? Shall he reproue with a worde that is nothing worthe, and speake the thyngs which can doe no good? As for shame, thou hast set it aside, els wouldest thou not make so many wordes before god, but thy wickednes teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen thee a craftie tong. Thine own mouth condemneth thee, and not I: yea, thine owne lippes shape an aunswere agaynst thee. Art thou the first manne ẏ euer was borne? Or waste thou made before the hils? haste thou heard the secrete counsail of God, that all wisedome is to little for thee? What knowest thou that we knowe not? And what vnderstandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are bothe olde and aged men: yea, suche as haue lyued B longer than thy father. Thinkest thou it a small thing of the consolations of God.
With thee is a lying worde. Why doeth thine heart so bewitche thee? And wherefore winkeste thou with thine eyes, that thy mynde is so puft vp against god, and lettest such wordes goe out of thy mouth?
What is man, that he shoulde be cleane?
What hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) whereby he might bee righteous?
Beholde, he dooeth not trust his saincts:
yea,

yet, the very heauens are not cleane in his sight. Howe muche more then an abhominable, and vile man, which drinketh wickednesse like water? I will tell thee, heare me, and I will shewe thee what I haue seen: whiche wise men haue tolde, and [illegible] not bene hid from their fathers, vnto whom onely the earth was geuen, C and no straunger went among them.
Ec. iiii. b The vngodly sorowth al daies of his life, as it wer a woman with chylde, and the number of a Tirauntes yeares is vnknowen.

A fearefull sound is euer in his eares and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He beleueth neuer to be deliuered out of darkenesse, for the sweard is alway before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his liuing, he seeth plainly that the day of darkenesse is at hand. Sorow and carefulnesse will make him afrayde, and compasse him rounde about, like as it wer a kyng with his hoste ready to the battel.

For he hath stretched out his hande against God, and armed hymselfe against the almightye. He runneth proudly vppon hym, and with a stiffe necke fyghteth he againste him: where as he couereth hys face with fatnesse, and maketh his bodye wel liking.

Therefore shall his dwellyng bee in desolate Cityes, and in houses which no manne inhabiteth, but are becom heapes of stones. He shall not be riche, neyther shal his substaunce continue nor increase vppon earthe. He shall neuer comme
D oute of darkenesse, the flame shall drie vp his braunches, wyth the blaste of the mouthe of God, shall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vanitie, and yet he is out of the way, and vanitie shall be his recompence.

He shall perishe, afore his tyme bee worne out, and his braunche shal not bee greene. He shall be plucked of as an vntimely grape from the Vine: and shall let his floure fall, as the oliue dothe. For the congregation of ypocrites shall bee desolate and vnfruitfull, and the fyre shal consume the houses of suche as are gredye to receiue giftes. * He conceyueth trauayle, Psa. vii. d Esay. lix. a and beareth vanitie, and their body bringeth foorth deceyt.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Job repetyng his misery, sayeth that he suffreth more than his wickednesse hath deserued.

Job aunswered, and sayde: I haue oft tymes heard such thynges, myserable geuers of coumforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not vayn woordes come yet to an ende? Or hast thou yet any more to saye? I coulde speake as ye doe also.

But woulde God that your soule wer in my soules steade: then shoulde I heape vp woordes against you, and shake my head at you. I shoulde coumforte you with my mouthe, and release your payne with the talkyng of my lyppes. (But what shall I doe?) For all my woordes, my sorow wyll not ceasse, and though I holde my tong, yet will it not depart from me. But nowe that God hath sent me aduersitye, B thou hast troubled all my congregation. And that thou haste fylled me with wrinkels, my fleshe is record, and my leanesse riseth vp agaynste me, and beareth witnesse against me. He is angry at me, he hateth me, and gnasheth vppon me wyth his teeth. Mine enemy scouleth vpon me with his eyes.

They haue opened theyr mouthes C wide vpon me * and smitten me vpon the 3. Ki. xxii. d cheeke despytefullye, they gather them- Mar. xiiii. g. selues together against me. God hath put me in preace with the vngodly, and delyuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was in wealthe, but he hath broughte me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rent me, and sette me as a marke for himselfe. His archers compas me rounde about: he wounded my loines and dooeth not spare. My bowels hathe he powred vppon the grounde. He hathe geuen me one wounde vppon another, & is fallen vppon me like a giaunt. I haue sowed a sackclothe vppon my skinne, and lie with my heere in the duste. My face is swollen with weping, and in mine eyes is the shadowe of death. Howebeit there is no wickednesse in my handes, but my praier is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my bloude, and lette my crying fynde no D rowme.

For loe, my witnesse is in heauen: and he that knoweth me, is aboue in ye height. My frendes geue me many woordes to scorne: and mine eye poureth oute teares vnto god, O that a body might pleade wt god, as one man dooeth with another: yet the number of my yeares is com, and the way that I must goe is at hande, from whence I shall not turne againe.

The.xvii.Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth away, and yet doeth patiently abide it.

A My breath stinketh, my daies are shortned: I am hard at deathes doore.
Frowarde men are with me, and mine eye must cōtinue in y bitternes of thē.
O deliver me, and looke out one to be my surety in thi sight. What is he that knoweth who will promis for me? For thou hast w holden their heartes from understanding: therfore shalt thou not set (them) up on hie. He promiseth his frends part of his good, but his own children spend it.

B He hath made me as it wer a bywoord of the people: where as afore I was their ioy. Mine eye is dimme for very heavynesse, and all my strength is become like a shadowe. Vertuous men therfore shall well consider this, and the innocent shal take part against the ypocrite.

C The righteous also wil kepe his way and he that hath cleane handes, wyll ever be stronger and stronger. As for you, turn you, and get you hence (I pray you) seyng I can not fynde one wise manne among you: My daies are past, and my counsayles and thoughtes of my heart are banished away, chaunging the night into day, and the lyght into darknesse.

D Though I tary never so much, yet the grave is my house, and I have made my bed in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my sister. What helpeth then my long tarying? Or who hath considered y thing that I loke for? Al y I have shal go down into the pit, & lie with me in y dust.

The.xviii.Chapter.

Byldad rehearseth the paynes of the unfaithfull and wicked.

A Then aunswered Byldad y Suhite, & said: when wyll ye make an ende of youre woordes? Marke wel, and then we will speak. Wherfore are we counted as bestes, and reputed so vile in your syght? He destroyed himself with his anger. Shal y earth be forsaken, or any stone removed out of his place, because of thee? Yea, the light of the ungodly shall be put out, and the sparke of his fier shall not burne. The light shall be darke in his dwellyng, and his Candell shall be put out wyth hym.
His presumptuous goyngs are kept in, & B his own counsell shal cast him down. For his feete are taken as it wer in the nette, and he is at his wittes ende. His fote shal be holden in the snare, and it shall catche them that be thirstie of bloud. The snare is layd for hym in the grounde, and a pitfall in the way. Fearfulnesse shall make him afrayde on every syde, that he shall not knowe, wher to get out. Hunger shal C be his strength: misfortune shal hang up-pon him. He shall eate the strength of his own skinne, even the first borne of death shall eate his strength. His hope shall be rooted out of his dwelling, very fearful-nesse shall bryng hym to the kyng. Other men shall dwell in his house (but shall be none of his) and brimstone shalbe scattered upon his habitation. His rootes shall be dryed up beneath, and above shall hys braunch be cut down. His remembraunce D shall perysh from the earth, and he shall have no name in the strete: thei shal drive hym from the lyght into darknesse, and cast hym cleane out of the world. He shall neyther have chyldren nor kynsfolkes among his people: no, nor any posterity in his dwellyngs. They that com after him shal be astonied at his day, and they that go before, shall be afrayd. Such are now the dwellynges of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not god.

The.xix.Chapter.

Job reciteth his miseries and grievous paines.
He prophecieth of the generall resurrection.

Job aunswered and said: how A long wil ye vexe my soule, & trouble me with wordes? Lo ten tymes have ye reproved me, and are not ashamed for to laugh me so to scorne: if I go wrong, I go wrong to my selfe. But if ye will enhaunce your selves againste me, & accuse me to be a wicked person, because of the shame that is come uppon me: know this then, that it is God whiche hath handled me so violentely, and hath compassed me about with his net. If I complaine of the Abac.i.i. violence that is done unto me, I cannot B be heard.

And yf I crye, there is no sentence geven with me. He hath hedged up my Job.iii.8 waye, that I cannot passe, and he hathe sette darkenesse in my pathes. He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken

the crown away from my head. He hath destroyed me on euery syde, and I am vndone: my hope hath he taken away fro me, as it wer a tree plucked vp by ỹ rote.
His wrath is kindled againste me: he taketh me, as though I were hys enemye.
His men of warre came together, which made their way ouer me, and besegedmy Psalm. dwelling rounde about. He hath put my xxxviii.c. brethren farre away from me, and suche Psalme. as were of mine acquaintaunce, are belxxxviii.c. come straungers vnto me, mine owne kinsefolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remēbraūce.
The seruauntes and maidens of mine C own house, toke me for a straunger: and I am become as an aleaūt in their sight.
I called my seruaunt, and he gaue me no aunswere; no though I prayed hym with my mouth.

Mine own wife might not abyde my breath: I was faine for to speake faire, for the childrē of mine own body: yea, the children despised me. And when I was gone from them, they spake euill vpō me.
All suche as were my most familiars, abhorred me: and they whom I loued best, are turned against me. My bone hangeth to my skin, and my fleshe is away, onelye there is left me the skinn about my teeth.
Haue pitie vpon me, haue pitie vpon me, (O ye my frendes) for the hande of God hath touched me.

Why do ye persecute me as God dothe and are not satisfied of my fleshe? O that my wordes were nowe written: O that they were put in a boke: woulde GOD D they were grauen with an yron penne in leade, or in stone, to continue. For I am sure that my redemer liueth, and that I shall ryse oute of the earth in the latter daye: that I shalbe clothed againe wyth thys skinne, and see God in my fleshe.
Yea, I my selfe shall beholde hym, not with other, but wyth these same eyes.
My raines are consumed within me, did not ye saye: why doeth he suffer persecution? Is there founde an occasiō in me?
But beware of the swearde, for ỹ sweard wil be auenged of wickednesse: and bee sure, that there is a iudgement.

The. xx. Chapter.

Sophar sayeth, that the vnfaithfull, the coue-A tous, and the wicked shall haue a short ende.

Then answered Sophar the Naa-mathite, and sayd: for ỹ same cause doe my thoughtes compell me to answere. And why? my minde is ready within me. I haue sufficiently heard thy checking and reprofe, therfore am I pur-posed to make answere after my vnder-standing. Knowest thou not this, namely that from the beginninge (euer since the B creation of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of the vngodly hath been short, and ỹ the ioy of ypocrites continued but the twinkling of an eye? Though he be magnified vp to ỹ heauen, so that his head reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he peryssheth for euer, in somuch that they which haue seen him, shal say: Where is he? He shal vanishe as a dreame: so that he can no more be founde, and shal passe awaye as a vision in the night. So that the eye which saw him before, shal haue no more C sight of hym, and his place shal know him nomore. His children shalbe fayne to agree with the poore, and his handes shal restore them their goodes.

From his youth his bones are full of pleasures, but nowe shall it lye downe within him in the earth. Whē wickednesse was swete in hys mouth, he hydde it vnder his tong. That he fauoured, that woulde he not forsake, but kept it close in hys throte. The breade that he did eate is turned to the poison of Serpentes within his body. The richesse that he deuoured, shall he perbrake agayne, for God shall drawe them oute of his bellye: he shall sucke the gall of Serpentes, and the adders tonge shall slaye him: so that he shall nomore see the riuers and brokes of honye and butter. The thynge that other menne haue laboured for, shall he restore againe, and shall not eate it vp.

Great trauaile shal he make for riches but he shall not enioy them. And why? He hath oppressed the poore, and not helped D thē: houses hath he spoyled, and not builded them. His belly could neuer be filled, therefore shall he perish in his couetousnesse. There shall none of his meate bee left behinde, therefore shall no man looke for hys prosperitie. When he had plenteousnesse of euery thing, yet was he poore thoughe he was helped on euery syde.

For thoughe the wycked haue neuer so muche to fyll hys bellye, yet God shall sende hys wrath vppon hym, and cause hys indignation to raygne ouer hym: so that if he flie the yron weapons, he shall be shotte with the stele bowe. The arowe uer, and a glistering swearde throughe

There shall no darkenesse be able to hide him. An vnkindled fier shall consume him, and looke what remaineth in his shall declare his wickednesse, and the earth shall take parte againste him. The substaunce that he hath in hys house,

Job xxvii. s. daye of the Lordes wrath. * Thys is the portion that the wicked man shal haue of God, and the heritage that he may loke for of God, bicause of his wordes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Job reciteth the prosperitie of the wicked, and after describeth their sodayne ruyne and destruction.

A Job answered and sayde: O heare my wordes, and that shall be my comforte of you. Suffer me a litle, that I may speake also, & then laugh my wordes to scorne (if it like you.) Is it for mannes sake that I make this disputation? Which if it were so, should not my spirit be then in sore trouble? Marke me well, and be abasshed, and lay your hand vpon your mouth. For when I consider my selfe, I am afraide, and my fleshe is

Jer. xii. a men liue in health and prosperity, come to their olde age, and increase in riches?
Their children liue in their sighte, and their generatiō before their eyes. Their house are safe from all feare, and the rod of God doth not smite them. Their bullocke gendreth, and that not out of tyme:
their cowe calueth, and is not vnfruitful.
They sende forth their childrē by flockes and their sonnes lede the daunce.

Esa. v. c. * They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of mu-sicke at their pleasure. They spende their daies in welthinesse: but sodainly they go down to hell. They say also vnto God go from vs: we desire not the knowledge of Esa. v. a thy wayes.* Who is ẏ almighty, that we should serue him? And what profit should we haue to submit our selues vnto hym?
Loe, there is vtterly no goodnesse in thē, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsaile of the vngodly.

Howe ofte shall the candel of the wicked be put out? howe oft commeth their destruction vpon them? O what sorowe shall God geue them for their part in hys wrath? Yea, they shalbe euen as hay before the winde, * & as chaffe that ẏ storm Psal. i. carieth away. And though god saue their C children from such sorow, yet will he re-warde themselues, that they shal knowe it. Their owne destruction and miserye shall they see with their eyes, and drynke of the fearefull wrathe of the almightie.
For what careth he what becommeth of his householde after hys death, when the number of his monethes is cut short? Inasmuch then as God hath the hiest power of all, who can teache him any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is mightie, and at his beste, riche, and in D prosperitie, euen when hys bowells are at the fatteste, and his bones full of mary. An other dieth in sorowe & heauinesse and neuer had good dayes. They shal slepe both alike in the earth, and ẏ wormes shal couer them. Beholde, I knowe what ye thinke, yea, and the subtiltie that ye ymagine against me. For ye say: wher is the Princes palace? and where is the dwelling of the vngodly? haue ye not asked them that go by the way? Doubtlesse, ye can not deny their tokens, ẏ * the wic- ii. Pet. ii.
ked is kept vnto the day of destruction, & b.
that the vngodly shalbe brought forth to Math.
the day of wrath. Who dare reproue hym xiii. b. for hys way to hys face? Who wil reward him for the vngratiousnesse that he doth?
Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and dwell among the heape of the dead. Thē shall he be faine to be buried amonge the stones of the plaine. All men also must fo-low him and there are innumerable gon before hym. Howe vayne then is the cō-fort that ye geue me? Doth not falshed re-maine in all your answers?

The. xxii. Chapter.

Eliphas reprehendeth Job of vnmercifulnesse.

So Eliphas the Themanite A gaue answere, and sayd: Maye a man be profitable vnto God, as he that is wise may be profitable to himselfe? Is it any auauntage to the Almightie, that thou arte righteous? Or shall it profite hym, that thou makeste thy wayes perfyte? Is he

be afraid to reproue the, and to step forth with thee into iudgemente? Is not thy wickednesse great, and thine vngracious dedes innumerable. For thou hast taken B the pledge from thy brother for noughte, and robbed the naked of their clothing:
to such as were wery, hast thou geuen no water to drinke, and haste withdrawen bread from the hungry. Should such one then as vseth violēce, wrong and oppression (doing al thing of parcialitie and hauing respect of persons) dwel in ye lande?
Thou hast sent widdowes away empty, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse. Ther fore art thou compassed about with snares on euery side, and sodenly vexed with feare: shouldest thou then see no darke-nesse? Should not the water floud runne ouer thee? Now bicause that God is hyer than the heauens, and bicause thou seeste that the starres are so hie, wilt thou therfore say: tush, how shuld god know? Doth his dominion reache beyond the cloudes?
Tush, the cloudes couer him that he may C not see, and he dwelleth aboue heauen.
Doste not thou kepe the olde waye that vaine men haue gone? whiche were cut down out of time and whose foundation was a running water? whiche sayd vnto God: go from vs, and what did ye almigh-tie with them? He filled their houses with good thinges. But the counsaile of the vngodly is farre fro me. The righteous saw it, and were glad, and the innocente laughed them to scorne. Is our encrease hewen down? As for the remnaunte of them, the fyre hath consumed it. Therfore reconcile thee vnto God, and be content, so shall all thinges prospere with thee right well. Receiue the law at hys mouth D and lay vp his wordes in thine heart.
For if thou wilte turne to the almightie, thou shalt stande fast, and put al vnrigh-teousnesse from thy dwelling: thou shalte make golde as plentifull as the duste, & the golde of Ophir as the flintes of ye riuers. Yea, almightie God his owne selfe shalbe thy defence, and thou shalte haue plenty of siluer. Then shalte thou haue thy delite in the almighty, and lift vp thy face vnto God. Then shalte thou make thy prayer vnto hym, and he shall heare thee, and thou shalt keepe thy promysses.
Then loke what thou takest in hande, he shal make it to prospere with thee: and the light shal shine in thy waies. For *whoso humbleth himselfe, him shal he set vp: and whoso loketh mekely, shalbe healed. If thou be innocente, thou shalte deliuer the country, bicause of the vngiltinesse of thy handes.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he both knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge, and sayeth that he hath walked in hys rightcousnesse.

IOb aunswered, and sayde: A my saying is yet this daye in bitternesse, and my hand heauy, bicause of my groning. Oh, that I might see hym, and find him, Oh, that I mighte come before his seate to pleade my cause before him, and to fil my mouth with argumentes. That I might know, what aunswere he would geue me: and that I might vnderstāde what he would say vnto me. Wil he pleade against me wt his great power and strength? No, but he B wil make me the stronger. He that is iust, shal enter disputation with hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for euer. Beholde, though I goe before, I finde hym not, if I come behind, I can get no knowledge of him. If I go on the left side, where he doeth hys worke, I can not attaine vnto him. Againe, if I go on the ryght syde, he hideth himselfe, that I can not see hym.
But as for my waye, he knoweth it, and tryeth me as the golde in the fyre. My Sa. iii. b. fote doth kepe his path, his hie way haue i. Pet. i. b I holden, and wil not go out of it. I will C not forsake the commaundemente of hys lippes, but loke what he charged me with hys mouth, that haue I shut vp in my heart. He is still at one poynte, and who will turne hym backe. He doeth as hym lusteth, & bryngeth to passe what he wil.
He perfourmeth the thing that is appoin ted for me, and many such thinges doeth he. Thys is the cause that I shrynke at his presence, so that when I consider him I am afrayde of hym. For insomuche as he is God, he maketh my heart softe: and seeyng that he is almightie, he putteth D me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darkenesse, neither hath he couered the cloude fro my face.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

Exo.xxii. c. a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the way, and oppresse the simple of the world together. Beholde, euen as the wilde asses in the deserte, goe they forth to theyr worke, and rise by times to spoyle: yea, the very wildernesse ministreth fode for B their children. They reape the corne field that is not their owne: and let the vine-yarde of the vngodly alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauing no clothes to couer them, & to kepe them from colde: So that when the showres in the mountaines haue rained vpon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succoure, but to keepe them among the rockes. They spoile the sucking fatherlesse childe, and take the pledge from the poore, insomuche ỹ they let him go naked without clothinge: and haue taken away the sheafe of the hun-grye. The poore are faine to laboure in their oyle milles: yea and to treade in their wine presses, and yet to suffer thirst.
The men of the citie cry to the Lord with himselfe: tushe, there shall no eye see me: and so he disguiseth his face. In ỹ nyghte season they searche the houses and hyde themselues in the day tyme, but will not knowe the light. For assoone as the day breaketh, the shadow of death commethe vpon them, and they go in horrible dark-nesse. The vngodly is swifter than the water: their portion shalbe cursed in the earth, and he shall not beholde the waye of the vineyardes. O that they (for the wickednesse which they haue done) were drawen to the hel, soner than snow mel-teth at the drouth and heate. O that all compassion vpon them were forgotten, ỹ their dainties were wormes, that they were cleane put out of remembraunce, & vngodlinesse vtterly hewen downe lyke as a tree. He hath oppressed the barrain, that he can not beare: & vnto the widdowe hath he done no good. He drew the mighty after him with his power, and whẽ he was gotten vp, no man was wythoute feare, as long as he liued. And though they mighte bee safe, yet they wil not receiue it, for their eyes looke vppon their own wayes. They are exalted for a little but shortly are they gone, broughte to extreme pouertie, and takẽ out of the way:

yea, and vtterly pluckt of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wil then reproue me as a liar, and say that my wordes are nothing worth?

The.xxv.Chapter.

Byldad proueth that no mã is cleane, and with-

Suhite and sayd: is there power and feare with him aboue his highnesse, whose men of warre are in numerable, and whose light ariseth ouer all? But how may a man compared vnto B God, be iustified? Or how can he be clean Job.iiii. that is borne of a woman? Beholde, the moone shineth nothing in comparison to Psalm. cxliii.a.

him, and the starres are vncleane in hys Ro.iii.c. sight. How much more then, man, that is but corruption: and the sonne of man, which is but a worme?

The.xxvi.Chapter.

Job sheweth that man can not helpe God, and proueth it by hys miracles.

come out of thy mouth? Are not dead thin-ges shapen vnder the waters, and things by the waters side? Hell is naked before B him, and the very destruction it selfe, cannot be hid out of his sight. He stretcheth out the north ouer the emptie, and hangeth the earth vpon nothing. He bindeth deth his cloude before it. *He hath cõpas-sed the waters with certain boundes, vntill the daye and nighte come to an ende.

The very pillers of heauen tremble and quake at his reprofe. He stilleth the Sea with his power, and through his wisdom smiteth he the strength therof. His spirite hath made the rebellious serpent. Loe, this is now a short summe of his wayes.

But who is able sufficiently to rehearse his workes? Who can perceiue and vnderstande the thunder of his power?

The.xxvii. Chapter.

The constantnesse and perfectnesse of Job, and the part of the vnfaithfull wyth God.

A AND Job proceaded and went forth in his communication saying: as truely as God liueth (whiche hath takẽ away my iudgemẽt) & the almightie ỹ hath vexed my minde: my lips shal talke of no vanitie, and my tong shal speake no disceit, while my breath is in me, & as long as ỹ winde (ỹ God hath geuen me) is in my nostrels. God forbid, that I should graunte youre cause to be right. As for me, until mine end come B wil I neuer go fro mine innocencye. My righteous dealing kepe I fast, whiche I will not forsake: my hearte shall not re-proue me of my daies. Therefore mine enemy shalbe founde as ỹ vngodlye, and he that taketh part against me, as ỹ vn-righteous. For what hope hath the ypocrite though he hath greate good, and thoughe God geue him richesse after his heartes desire? Doth God heare him the soner, whẽ he crieth vnto him in his neces-sitie? Hath he such pleasure and delite in the almightie, that he dare alway cal vpõ God? I wil teach you in the name of god and the thing that I haue of the almigh-tie, wil I not kepe from you. Behold, you stande in your own conceit, as though ye knew all things. Wherfore then do ye go about wt such vaine words, saying? This receiue of ỹ almighty, if I get many children, they shal perish wt the sweard, & his haue pitie of his widdowes. Though he haue as much money as the duste of the earth, and rayment as ready as the clay, he may wel prepare it: but the godly shal put it vpon him, and the innocente shall deale out the money. His house shall endure as the moth, and as a bouth that the leth him away, in the night season. A vehement cast winde carieth him hence: and his place. It rusheth in vpon him, and spareth him not, he may not escape from the power therof. Then clap men theyr handes at him: yea and iest of him, when they loke vpon his place.

The.xxviii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that the wisdome of God is vnsearcheable.

THere is a place where siluer is broughte out of, and where golde is tried, *where yron is digged out of ỹ groũd and stones resolued to metal. The darknesse shall once come to an ende: he can seke oute the grounde of all thinges, the stones, the dark, and the shadow of death. With ỹ riuer of water parteth he a sonder the straunge people, that know no good neighbourhead: such as ar rude, vnmanerly & boysterous. He bringeth fode out of the earth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he wt fier. There is found a palace whose stones are al cleane Saphirs & where the clots of ỹ earth are golde. There is a waye also ỹ the birdes know not, ỹ no vulturers eye hath seen, wherin ỹ Lions whelpes walke not, and B where no Lion commeth. There putteth he his hande vppon the stonye rockes, uers flowe out of the rockes: and looke what is pleasaunte, his eye seeth it. Oute of drops bringeth he great floudes together, and the thing that is hid, bryngeth

The.xxix. Chapter.

Job complaineth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, subtilly reprouing hys frendes of iniurye, bicause they sayd that Job suffered according to hys deseruing.

A SO Job proceded and wēt forth in his communication, saying: O, that I wer as I was in the monethes paste by, and in the daies when God preserued me: when hys light shined vpon my head, when I went after thesame lyghte and shining, euen through the darkenesse. As it stode with me, when I was yong: when God prospered my house: when the almighty was yet with me: when my children stode about me: when my wayes ran ouer with butter, and when the stony rockes gaue B me riuers of oyle, when I went through the citie vnto the gate, and when they set me a chaire in the strete: when the yonge men (as soone as they saw me) hid themselues, and when the aged arose, and stoode vp vnto me: when the Princes left of their talking, and layed their hand to their mouth, when the mightie kept stil their voice, and when their tong cleued to the rofe of their mouth. Whē al they that heard me, called me happy: and when all they that saw me, spake good of me. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and so did I the fatherlesse, and hym that had C none to helpe him. He that shoulde haue been lost, gaue me a good worde, and the widdowes heart praised me. And whyle I put vpon me righteousnesse, which coue-red me as a garmente, and equitie was my crowne. I was an eye to the blynde, and a fote to the lame: I was a father vn to the poore: and when I knew not the cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake the chawes of ỷ vnrighteous man, *and pluct the spoyle out of hys teeth. There- Ge. fore, I thought verely that I shuld haue died in my nest: and that my daies should haue bene as many as the sandes of the Sea. For my rote was spred out by the water side: and the dew lay vpō my corn.
My honor encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in mine hande. Unto me men gaue eare, me they regarded: and with silence they taried for my counsayll. If I had spoken, they woulde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken among them.
They wayted for me, as for the rain: and gaped vpon me as the grounde dothe to receiue the latter shoure. When I laugh- D ed, they knewe well it was not earnest.
And the light of my countenaunce would they not put out. When I agreed vnto their way, I was the chiefe, and sat as a king with his army about him. And whē they wer in heauinesse I was their comfortor.

The.xxx. Chapter.

The great despising of men, and curse of God that Job suffreth.

BUt nowe they that are A yonger than I, haue me in derisiō: yea, euen they whose fathers I woulde haue thoughte scorne to haue set with the doggs of my cattell. The power and strength of their handes myghte doe me no good, for the tyme is but lost amōg them. For very misery and hunger they fled into the wildernesse, a darke place, horrible and waste, plucking vp nettels among the bushes, & the Juniper rootes for their meate. And when they wer driuen tien forth [illegible] then as it had ben after a thefe. Their dwellig was beside foule brokes, yea, in the caues and dennes of the earth: Among the busshes went they about cryinge: and vnder the thornes they gathered themselues together. They were the children of foles and B villaines, which are vexed out of ẏ world.

Ch.iii.f Ps.lxix.c * Now am I their song, and am become their iestinge stocke: they abhorre me, and flie farre fro me, and stayn my face with spittle. For the lord hath loosed ẏ strẽgth of my body, and brought me lowe: the bridle haue they cast out of my sight. Upon my right hande rise the yong men against me: they haue hurt my fete, treading vpõ me, as vpon the wayes that they woulde destroy. My pathes haue they cleue marred. It was so easy for them to doo me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. They fel vpon me as it had ben the C breaking in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroy me. Fearefulnesse is turned against me. Mine honor vanished away more swiftly than the winde, & my prosperity departeth hence like as it were a cloude. Therfore is my minde poured ful of heauinesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed through in the nighte season, and my synewes take no rest. For the vehemency of sorow, is my garment chaunged, and according to the diuersity of heauinesse, am I girded with my cote.
He hath cast me into the mier, and I am become like ashes and dust. When I crye vnto thee, thou doest not heare me: and though I stande before thee, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become mine enemy, and with thy violent hande thou takest part against me. In times past thou didst set me vp on hie, as it were aboue the winde, but now hast thou geuen me a very sore fall. Sure I am that thou D wilt deliuer me vnto death, euen to ẏ lodging that is due vnto al mẽ liuing. Now vse not men to do violence vnto thẽ, that are destroyed already: but where hurte is done, there vse they to helpe. Did not I wepe with him that was in trouble? had not my soule compassion vpon the poore.
Yet neuerthelesse, where as I looked for good, euil happened vnto me: and whereas I waited for light, there came darke-nesse. My bowels sethe within me, and take no rest, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mekely and lowelye came I in: yea, & without any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacion, and communed with them: but now I am a companion of dragons, and a felow of Estriches. My skin vpõ me is turned to blacke and my bones are brent with heate. My harpe is turned to sorow, and my pipe to weping.

what enheritaunce from Job.xxi.
the almightie on hie? Is it b.
for the vngodly and he that ioineth him Pro.v.b. selfe to the company of wicked doers? shall not destruccion and misery come vpon him? Doth not he se my wayes Ps.vii.a. and tell all my goinges? If I haue walked in vanitie, or if my fete haue runne to disceite: let me be wayed in an euen balaunce, that God maye see mine inno- B cencye. If so be ẏ I haue withdrawen De.xvii.
my foote out of the right way, and if my a. heart hath folowed mine eye sight: if I haue stained or defiled my handes, than shall I sow, and another eate: yea, my generation and posteritie shall be cleane rooted out. If mine heart hath lusted after my neighbours wife, or if I haue lai-ed waite at his doore: O then let my wife grinde vnto an other man, and let other men lye with her. * For this is a wickednesse and sinne, that is worthy to be puni- C shed: yea a fier that vtterly shoulde consume and roote out all my substaunce.
Did I euer thinke scorne to do right vnto my seruauntes and maidens, when they had any matter against me? But se-ing that God will sit in iudgement what shall I do? And forsomuche as he wyll nedes visit me, what answer shal I geue him? He that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not hym also? were we not both shapen alike in our mothers bodyes? When ẏ poore desired any thing at me, haue I denyed it them? Haue I caused the widowe to stande waiting for me in vaine? Haue I eaten my porcion alone, ẏ the fatherlesse hath had no parte with me? for mercy grewe vp with me frõ my youth, & cõpassion from my mothers

Or any poore man for lacke of raymente, whose sides thanked me not, bicause he Did I euer lift vp my hande to hurt the fatherlesse: yea in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in authoritie: then let mine arme fall from my shoulder, and myne arme boles be broken from the ioyntes.

For I haue euer feared the vengeaunce and punishmente of God, and knew very well, that I was not able to beare his burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde: Or haue I sayd to the finest golde of all:

owne housholde saye: who shall let vs to haue our bely full of hys fleshe: I haue not suffered a straunger to lie without, but I opened my dores vnto him, that went by the way. Haue I kept secret my sinne, and hid mine iniquitie, as Adam did: Haue I feared any great multitude of people: or if I had bene despised of the simple, O then should I haue ben afraid.
Thus haue I quietly spente my life, and not gone out at the dore: O that I hadde one which would heare me. Loe, this is my cause. In the which the almighty shal answer for me: though he that is my cō-trary party, hath written a boke against me: yet will I take him vppon my shoulder, and as a garlande about my head. I will tell him the number of my goinges, and go vnto him as to a Prince. But if case be, that my lande crye against me, or that ÿ furrowes thereof make any complaint: if I haue eaten the fruites therof vnpaid for: yea, if I haue greued any of the plowmen: then let thistles growe in steade of my wheate, and cockle for my barly.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

Elihu after the other had finished their communicacion reproueth them of foolishnesse. Age maketh not a man wise but the spirite of God.

So these thre men would 1 striue nomore with Job, because he helde hym selfe a righteous man: but Elihu the sonne of Barachell, the Bu-site, of the kinred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, bicause he called hym selfe iust before God. And with Jobs. iii. frendes he was angry also, bicause they had founde no reasonable answere to o-uercome Job, Now taried Elihu, til they had ended their communicatiō with Job, for why: they were elder than he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachell the Busite, saw that these thre men were not able to make Job answere, he was miscontent, Elihu the sonne of Barachell D the Busite answered himselfe, & sayd. *
Considering that I am yong, and ye bee B Eccl. xxxii. men of age: I was afrayd and durste not shew forth my mynde. For I thoughte thus within my selfe. It becommeth old men to speake, and the aged to teache wisdome. Euery man (no doubte) hath a mynd, * but it is the inspiration of the almighty that geueth vnderstanding. Great men are not alway wise, neither doeth iii.Re.iii. euery aged man vnderstande the thynge b.
that is lawfull. Therefore will I speake Sapi.ix.
also (heare me) and I will shewe you also Eccl.xi. myne vnderstanding. For when I had Iaco.i. waited till ye made an ende of youre tal- Pro.ii.
king, and heard your wisedom, what ar- Da.ii. gumentes ye made in youre communication: yea when I had diligently pondred what ye sayed, I founde not one of you that made any good argumente againste Job, that directly could make aunswere vnto hys wordes, lest ye should saye, We haue founde out wisdom: god shall caste hym down, and no mā. He hath not spoken vnto me, and I will not answer him as ye haue done (for they wer so abashed that they could not make answere, nor speake one worde) but insomuch as ye wol not speake, standing still like domm men, and making no answere, I haue a good C hope for my part, to shape him an answer and to shewe him my meaning: for I am full of wordes, and the spirit that is within me compelleth me. Beholde my belly, is as the wyne which hath no vent, and bursteth ÿ newe vessels in sonder. Therfore will I speake ÿ I may haue a vent.
I will

I will open my lippes, and make answer.
I wil regarde no maner of person, no mā wil I spare. For if I would go aboute to please men, I knowe not how soone my maker would take me away.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherein Job offendeth, with god maye we not striue, nor curiously searche oute hys workes.

A Wherefore, heare my wordes (O Job) and hearken vnto me all that I wyll saie: Behold, I haue now opened my mouthe, my tong hathe spoken in my throte: My heart doth order my wordes a right, and my lips talk of pure wisedome. The spirit of god hath made me, and the breath of the almightye hath geuen me my life. If thou canst then geue me aunswere: prepare thy self to stād before me face to face.

Beholde, before God am I, euen as thou, for I am fashioned and made, euen of the same moulde. Therfore, thou nedest not to be afraide of me, neyther nedest thou to feare that my authoritie shall be to heauy for thee. Now hast thou spoken in mine eares, and I haue heard ẏ voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane withoute any faulte: I am innocente, and there is B no wickednesse in me. But lo, he hath picked a quarell against me, and taketh me for his enemy: he hath putte my foote in the stockes, and looketh narrowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, in this haste thou not done right. I will make aunswere vnto thee, that God is more than manne. And why doest thou then stryue against him: for he shall not geue thee accomptes of all his wordes. For when god hath once commaunded a thing, there would no man be curious to search whe-C ther it be right. *In dreames and visions of the nighte (when slombring commeth vppon men, that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he roundeth them in the eares, he informeth them, and sheweth them plainly ẏ it is he, whiche withdraweth man from euill, delyuereth him frō pride, kepeth him frō the graue, & his life from the swearde.
He chasteneth him with sicknes, & bringeth him to his bed: he layeth sore punishement vpon his bones, so that his life may away with no bread, and his soule abhorre to eate any dainty meate: insomuche that his body is cleane consumed away, & his bones appeare no more. His life draweth vnto the graue, and his life to deth. Now if there be a messenger (one amōg a thousand) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shew him the right waie: then the lord is mercifull vnto him, and saieth: He shall be delivered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconciled.
Then shall his fleshe be as well liking as it was afore, and shal bee as it was in his youthe. For if he submitte himselfe vnto god, he shall bee gracious vnto hym, and shew him his countenaunce ioyfully, and rewardeth man for his righteousnesse.
Such a respect hath he vnto men. Therfore, let a man confesse (and saie:) I haue offended: I did vnrighteously, & it hathe doone me no good. Yea he hath delivered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe shall see the lyght. Loe, thus worketh god alway with man, that he kepeth his soule from peryshyng, and letteth hym enioy the lyght of the liuyng. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: hold thee stil, and I will speake. But if thou haste anye thing to say, then aunswere me: & speake for thy answer pleaseth me. If thou haste nothyng, then heare me, and holde thy tong, so shall I teache thee wysedome.

The.xxxiiii. Chapter.

Elihu prayseth the iustice of god, which iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

Elihu procedyng forth in his aunswere, sayde: Heare my A wordes (O ye wise menne) hearken vnto me, ye ẏ haue vnderstanding. For the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes, and the mouthe tasteth the meates. As for Job.xii.b iudgement, let vs seke it among oure selues, that we may knowe what is good.
And why? Job hath sayd: I am righteous but God dothe me wrong. I must nedes be a lyar, though my cause bee ryght, and violently I am plaged where as I made no faulte, where is there suche a one as Job, that drinketh vp scornefulnesse lyke water: whiche goeth in the companye of wicked doers, & walketh with vngodlye menne: For he hath sayde, though a man be good, yet is he nought before God.
Therefore hearken vnto me, ye ẏ haue B vnderstandyng. Farre be it from God, that he should meddle with wickednesse, and farre be it from the almighty, that he should meddle with vnrighteous dealing Mat.xvi.d For he shall rewarde the workes of man, Rom.ii.b and cause euery man to finde accordyng to his wayes.

Ro.iii. a. * For sure it is, that god condemneth no man wrongfully and the iudgement of the almightie is not vnrighteous. Who ruleth the earth in his stede? Or whom hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde? To whō hath he geuen his heart, for to draw his spirite and breath vnto him? All flesh shall come together vnto naught, and all men shall turne againe vnto dust. Yf thou Gen.iii.d nowe haue vnderstanding, heare what I Ps.cxlvi. saye, and hearken to the voyce of my wordes.

May he be a ruler, that loueth no right?
Or male he that is a very innocent man, doe vngodlye? Is it reason that thou shouldest saie to the king: Thou art wicked, or thou art vngodly, and that before the Princes? He hath no respecte i.Pa.xix. c. vnto the personnes of the Lordly, and regardeth not the riche more than the Rom.ii.d pore. For they bee all the worke of his Eph vi.b hands. In the twinckling of an eye, Col.iii.b. shall they dye: and at midnighte when Ecclesia. xxxv.d the people and the tirauntes rage, then C shall they perishe, and bee taken awaye Job.xxxi. a. without handes: And why? his eyes Pro.v.d. looke vpon the waies of manne, and he seeth all his goinges. There is no dark-nesse nor shadowe of death, that can hide the wicked dooers from him. For no man shall be suffred to go into iudgement with god.

Many one: yea innumerable doth he punishe, and setteth other in their stedes.
Therefore shall he declare their workes, he shall tourne the nighte, and they shall be destroyed. They that were in the stede of Sears, deals like vngodly menne: and therefore he punished them, because they tourned backe from him, and would not consider all his waies. Insomuche that they haue caused the voice of y poore to come vnto him, and howe he heareth the complaint of suche as are in trouble.
D If he graunt pardon, who will condemne thee? And if he hide awayhis countenance who shalbe able to see it? whether it be to the people or to any man, thus will he do.
For the vngodlinesse of the people, doeth God make an ypocrite reigne ouer them.
Forsomuche then as I haue begonne to talke of god, I will not hinder thee. If I haue gone amisse, enfourme thou me. If I haue done wrong, I wil leaue of. Can he doe nothing without thee? For thou hast reproued his iudgement. Thou also hast thine owne minde and not I.
But speake on what thou knowest.
Let men of vnderstanding tel me, and let a wise man hearken vnto me. As for Jo he hath nether spoken to the purpose, nor wisely. O father, let Job be well tried, because he hath aunswered for wicked men yea, aboue his sinne he dooeth wickedly, triumpheth among vs, and multiplieth his wordes against god.

The xxxv. Chapter.

Neither doeth godlinesse profite, or vngodlines hurt to god, but to man.

Elihu spake moreouer, and saide: Thinkest thou it right, that thou sayest: I am righteous before god?
For thou saiest: What ad-uauntage will it be vnto thee and what profit shalt thou haue of my sinne? Therefore will I geue answere vnto thee, and to thy companions with thee: loke vnto the heauen and behold it: consider the cloudes, which are hier than thou. If thou hast sinned, what hast thou doone against him. If B thine offences be many, what haste thou done vnto him? If thou be righteous, what geuest thou him? Or what wyll he receiue of thine hande? Of suche an vngodly person as thou, and of the sonne of manne that is righteous as thou pretendest to be: there is a great crye and complaint made by them that are oppressed w violence: yea, euery man complaineth vp- C pon the crueltie of tirauntes. For suche a one neuer saith: Where is god that made me? and geueth vs occasion to praise hym in the night? Which geueth vs more vnderstanding than he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more than he doeth the foules of heauen. If any suche complaine, no man geueth aunswer, and that because of the wickednesse of proude tirauntes. But if a manne call vpon god D dooeth not he heare hym? Dooeth not the almightie accepte his crye? When thou speakest then, should not he pardon thee, if thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy trust in him? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath, neyther hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisitions. Therfore dooeth Job open his mouth but in vayn, and foolishlye dooeth he make so manye wordes.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherefore God punisheth and correcteth.

Elihu proceded forth in his talkyng, and sayde: Holde thee still a litle, and I shall shewe thee what I haue yet to speake on gods behalfe. I will open vnto the yet more of mine vnderstandyng: & proue my matter ryghteous. And truely, my wordes shall not be vain, seyng he is with thee ÿ is perfect in knowledge: beholde, the great god casteth away no man, for he himselfe is mighty in power and wisedom. As for the vngodly, he shal not preserue hym, but shal helpe the poore to their ryghte. He shall turne his eyes awaye from the righteous but as kynges shal they be in theyr trone: he shal stablishe them for euer, & they shal be exalted. But if they be layde in prison and chaynes, or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then will he shewe them theyr worke, and the synnes wherewith they haue vsed cruel violence. He with punishyng and nurtryng of them roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from their wickednesse, and to amend.

B *If they now wyl take heede and serue him, they shall weare oute theyr dayes in prosperitye, and theyr yeares in pleasure, and ioye. But yf they wyll not hearken, they shall goe through the swearde, and perysshe or euer they bee aware. As for suche as be fayned ypocrites, they shall heape vp wrath for themselues: for they call not vppon hym, thoughe they be hys prisoners. Thus shall theyr soule perysshe in foolysshenesse, and theyr lyfe shall bee condemned among the fornicatours. The poore shall he delyuer oute of hys affliction, and rounde them in the eare when they bee in trouble. Euen so shal he keepe thee (if thou wylte be contente) from the bottomlesse pit that is beneath: and if thou wylte holde thee quiete, he shal fyl thy table with plenteousnes. Ne-C uerthelesse, thou hast condemned ÿ iudgment and sentence shalt thou suffer.

For then shall not thy cause be stylled with crueltie, nor pacifyed wyth manye gyftes. Thinkest thou that he wil regard thy riches? he shall not care for gold, nor for all them that excell in strength. Prolong not thou the tyme, tyll there come a night for thee, to sette other people in thy stede. But beware that thou tourne not aside to wickednesse and sinne, which hytherto thou hast chosen more than mekenesse.

Behold, God is of a mighty hye power: D Where is there suche a guide and law gener as he? Who will reproue hym of hys waye? Who will say vnto hym: thou haste done wrong? O consider how great & excellent his workes be, whom all menne loue and prayse: yea, wonder at hym, and yet they se him but a farre of. Behold, so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neither are we able to come to the experience of his yeares. *He turneth the water to small droppes, he driueth hys cloudes together for to rayne, so that they poure downe and drop vpon men. He can sprede out the cloudes (a couering of his tabernacle) and cause his light to shine vpon them, and to couer the botome of the sea. By these thynges gouerneth he hys people, and geueth them aboundaunce of meate. With the cloudes he hydeth the light: and at his commaundement it commeth againe. The rising vp therof sheweth he to his frendes, and to the cattel.

The. xxxvii. Chapter.

Elihu proueth that the wisedome of God is vnsearcheable.

At this my heart is astonied, and moued oute of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voice, and ÿ noise that gooeth oute of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder ÿ heauen, and his light reacheth vnto the ende of the world. A roaring voice foloweth him: for his glorious maiesty geueth such a thonder clappe, that (thoughe a manne heare it) yet may he not perceiue it afterwarde. It geueth an horrible sound when God sendeth out his voice: great thinges doth he which we cannot comprehende. A
*When he commaundeth the snow, it falleth vppon the earth: Assoone as he geueth the raine a charge, immediately the showers haue their strengthe, and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man that they myghte knowe theyr owne workes. The beastes creepe into theyr dennes and take their reste: oute of the Southe commeth the tempest, and colde out of the Northe. At the breath of God, the frost commeth, and the waters are B shed abroade. He maketh the cloudes to do their labor, in geuing moistnes: and again with his light he driueth awaye the cloud. He distributeth also on euery syde, according as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes: that they maye doe whatso-

Ps.cxlvii b.

C euer he commaundeth them through the whole worlde: whether it be to punishe any lande, or to do good vnto them that seeke him. Hearken vnto this (O Job) stande still and consider the wonderous workes of God. Art thou of counsaile with God, when he doeth these thynges? When he causeth the lyght to come foorth of hys cloudes? Art thou of his counsayle, when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Haste thou the perfecte knowledge of his wonders?
And howe thy clothes are warme, when D the land is stil through the south wynde?
Haste thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen whiche is to looke vpon, as it wer cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall say vnto hym, for we are vnmeete because of darkenesse. Shal it be tolde him what I say? Should a man speake, or should he kepe it backe? For euery mā seeth not the lyghte that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he clenseth when he maketh the winde to blowe.

Golde is brought out of the Northe, but the prayse and honour of gods feare commeth from god hymself. It is not we that can fynde out the almightye: for in power, equitie and righteousnesse, he is hier than can be expressed. Let men therefore feare him, for there shall no man see him, that is wise in his owne conceit.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

The wonders and maruels that the Lord hath done from the beginning.

A THen aunswered the lord vnto Job, out of ẏ storme and said: What is he that Job.xi.a. hideth his mynde wyth foolish wordes? ⁊ gird vp thy loines lyke a man, for I wil question with thee: see thou geue me a direct aunswer. Wher wast thou when I layde the foundations of the earth? Tel plainly, if thou haste vnderstanding. Who hath measured it, kno-west thou? Or who hath spred the lyne vpon it? Whereuppon stande the pillers of it? Or who layed the corner stone therof?

Where wast thou when the morning starres praysed me together, and all the chyldren of God reioyced triumphantly?
*Who shut the sea with doores, when it Job.xxvi.a. brake forth as a childe out of his mothers Jere.v.c. wombe? When I made ẏ clouds to be a Psal.ciiii.d couering for it, ⁊ swadled it with ẏ dark? whē I gaue it my cōmaundement, makīg dores ⁊ barres for it, sayīg: Hitherto shalt thou com but no farther: ⁊ here shalt thou lay down thy proud and hye waues. Hast thou geuen ẏ morning his charge (alone as thou wast born) ⁊ shewed ẏ day spryng his place, ẏ it might take holde of the corners of the earth, ⁊ that ẏ vngodly might be shaken out? Their tokens ⁊ weapons are turned like clay: ⁊ set vp again as the chaunging of a garmente. The vngodlye shalbe disapointed of their lyght: and the arme of the proud shalbe broken. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the sea? or walkedst in the low corners of the depe?
Haue the gates of death been opened vnto thee, or hast thou seen ẏ doores of ẏ shadow of death? Hast thou also perceiued how brode ẏ earth is? yf ẏ hast knowledge of al this, thē shew me where light dwelleth, ⁊ where darkenesse is: ẏ thou mayest bring vs vnto their quarters, if thou canst tel ẏ way to their houses. Knewest thou C (afore thou waste borne) howe olde thou shouldest bee? Wentest thou euen into the treasuries of the snowe, or hast thou seen Eccl. the secrete places of the hayle, ✚ whiche I Josua haue prepared against the tyme of trouble, againste ẏ time of battel and warre.
By what waye is the lyghte parted, and into what lande breaketh the East winde?
Who deuideth the aboundaunce of Waters into ryuers? or who maketh a waye for the lyghtenyng and thunder, that it watereth and moystureth the drye and barren grounde: to make the grasse grow in places where no bodye dwelleth, and in the wildernesse where no man remayneth? Who is the father of raine? Or who hath begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yse? Who hath gendred the coldnesse of the ayre, that the waters are as harde as stones, and lye congeled aboue the depe? Wylt thou hyn-der the swete influēces of ẏ seuen starres?
Or arte thou able to breake the cyrcle of heauen? Canst thou bryng forth the mornyng starre, or the euening starre at conuenyente tyme, and conuey them home a-gayne? Knowest thou the course of Heauen, that thou mayest sette vp the ordy-naunce therof vpon the earth? Moreouer D canst thou lift vp thy voice to the cloudes that they may powre downe a great rain vpon thee? Canst thou thunder also that they maie goe their way, and be obedient vnto thee, saying: Loe, here are we? Who geueth sure wisedome, or stedfast vnder-standing? Who noumbreth the cloudes in wisedome? Who stylleth the vehemente waters of the heauen? Who tourneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes againe. Wilt thou hunt the praye from the lyon, or fede his whelpes lying in their dennes, and lurking in their couches.

Who *prouideth meat for the Rauē, whē [illegible] his yonge ones cry vnto god, and flye about for lacke of meate.

The.xxxix.Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewynge him by the examples of his workes, that his righteousnesse is vnsearcheable.

A Knowest thou the tyme when the wilde goates bring foorth their yong among the stony rockes.
Or laist thou wayte whē the hindes vse to fawne. reckenest thou the mone-thes after they engender, that thou knowest the time of their bearing. Or when they lye down when they cast their yong ones, and when they are deliuered of their trauaile and paine. Howe their yong ones growe vp, and waxe greate thorow good feding. Whē they goe forth and returne not againe vnto them. Who letteth the wilde asse goe fre, or who lo-seth ÿ bondes of the mule. Euen I which haue geuen the wildernesse to be their house, and the vntilled land to bee their dwelling place. That they may geue no force for the multitude of people in the cities, neither regarde ÿ crying of the dri-that he will bring home thy corne, or to cary any thing vnto thy barne. Gauest ÿ the faire winges vnto the pecockes, or he leaueth his egges in the earth & laieth

Job humbleth himselfe vnto god: the description of Behemoth and Leuiathan.

Moreouer, god spake vnto Job, with the almightye, be at rest.

Should not he which disputeth with God, geue him an answere: Job answered the lord, saying: Behold, I am to vile a person to answere thee, therfore will I laye myne hande vpon my mouth.
Once or twice haue I spoken, but I will say nomore. Then answered the lord vnto Job out of ÿ storme, and sayed: *gird Job. 38. a.

Wilt thou disanul my iudgemēt. Or wilt and what power he hath in the nauil of a Cedre tre, al his vaines are stiffe. Hys hid him with their shadow, and the wil-lowes of ÿ broke couer him round about.

Lo, without any laboure might he drink out of the whole floud, and sup of Iordā

Of the same Leuiathan whereof is mentioned in the Chapter afore.

teth him vp, and strippeth him out of his clothes? or who taketh him by the bitte of his bridle? Who openeth the dore of his face? For he hath horrible teeth rounde about. His body is couered with scales, as it wer with shildes, lockt in, kept & well cōpact together. One is so ioyned to an- B other, that no ayre can come in: Yea, one hangeth so vpon an other, & sticketh so together, that they cānot be sondred. His nesing is like a glistering fire, and hys eyes like the morning shyne. Out of hys mouth goe torches, & oute of his nostrelles there goeth a smoke, like as out of an hote sething pot. His breathe maketh the coales burne, and the flame goeth out of hys mouthe. In his neck remaineth strēgth, and nothyng is to laborious for him. The members of his body are ioyned so strait one to an other and cleaue so C fast together, that he cannot be moued.
His hart is as hard as a stone, & as faste as the stithie that the smith smiteth vpō.
When he goeth, the mighty are afraied, & feare troubleth them. Yf any man drawe out a swearde at him, it shall not hurte him: there may neither speare, iaueling nor brestplate, abyde him. He setteth as muche by a strawe as by iron, & as much by a rotten stocke as brasse. He starteth not away for him that bendeth the bow, & as for slinge stones, he careth as much for stubble as for them. He counteth the D dartes no better thā a straw, he laugheth him to scorne that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the gold in the mire, like ÿ sharp potsherdes. He maketh the depe to boyll like a pot, & stirreth the sea together like an ointment. He maketh a path to be sene after him, the depe is his walking place.
Upon earth is there no power lyke vnto his: for he is so made, that he feareth not: Yea a man will consider al hie things, this same is a king ouer al ÿ children of pride.

The third Psalme.

Domine quid multiplicati.

O ye sonnes of mē how long will ye blaspheme mine honor: and haue suche plesure in vanitie, and seke after leasing?

Know this also, that the Lorde hath chosen to himselfe the man that is godly: whē I call vpon ẏ Lord, he wil heare me.

And let al them that put their truste in thee, reioyce: they shal euer be geuinge of thankes, bicause thou defendest them, they that loue thy name shalbe ioyfull in thee.

For thou Lord wilt geue thy blessing vnto the righteous: and with thy fauourable kindnesse wilt thou defende hym, as with a shield.

And so shall the congregation of ẏ people come about the: for their sakes: therefore lift vp thy selfe again.

The lorde shall iudge the people, geue sentence with me, O lorde: according to my righteousnesse and according to the innocency that is in me.

Thou hast rebuked the heathen, & destroyed the vngodly: thou haste put out their owne name for euer and euer. B

O thou enemy, destructions are come to a perpetuall end: euen as the cities whiche ẏ haste destroied, their memorial is perished with them.

But the lorde shall endure for euer: he hath also prepared his seat for iudgemēt.

For he shal iudge the world in righteousnesse: and minister true iudgemēt vnto the people.

The lord also wil be a defēce for the oppressed: *euē a refuge in due time of trouble. And they that knowe thy name, wil put their trust in thee: for thou (lord) hast neuer failed them that seke thee. Ec.xxxiii.a.

face in that nedefull time of trouble.
The vngodly for hys own lust doeth persecute the poore: lette them bee taken in the craftye wylynesse that they haue ymagyned.
For the vngodlye hath made boast of his own heartes desire: & speaketh good of the couetous (whom god abhorreth.) The vngodly is so proude, that he ca-reth not for god: neither is God in al hys thoughtes.
His wayes are alwaye grieuous, thy B iudgementes are farre aboue out of hys syght: and therefore defyeth he all hys enemies.
For he hath said in his heart: tush I shal

He dothe rauishe the poore, when he getteth him in to his net.
He falleth down and humbleth himself, that the congregation of the poore maye fal into the hand of this captaines.
He hath sayde in his heart: tushe, God hath forgotten, he hideth away his face, and he will neuer se it.
Arise (O lord) and lifte vp thine hand:

Wherfore shuld the wicked blaspheme C God, while he doth say in his heart: tush thou God carest not for it.
Surely thou hast sene it: For thou beholdest vngodlynesse and wrong.
That thou mayst take the matter into vnto thee, for thou arte the helper of the frendlesse.

Breake thou the power of the vngodly nesse, and thou shalte finde none.

The lord is king for euer and euer: & the

The .xij. Psalme.

Saluum me fac.

To him that excelleth upon an instrumente of eight stringes, a Psalme of Dauid.

3 Helpe (me) Lord, for there is not one godly man left: for ÿ faith-ful are minished from amonge the children of men.

They talke of vanitie euery one wyth his neighbor: they do but flatter wt their lips, and dissemble in their double heart.

The Lord shal roote out all deceitfull lips, and ÿ tõg ÿ speaketh proude things.

Which haue sayd: with our tonge wyll b we preuaile: we ar they ÿ ought to speke, who is Lord ouer us?

Now for the comfortlesse troubles sake of the nedy: * and bicause of the depe sighing of the poore.

I wil up (sayeth the lord) and wil help euery one, frõ him that swelleth against him, and wil set them at rest.

The wordes of the Lord are pure wordes: euen as the siluer: which from earthe is tried and purified seuen times in ÿ fier.

Thou shalt kepe them (O Lorde,) thou shalt preserue him from this generation for euer.

The ungodly walke on euery syde: when they are exalted, the children of mẽ are put to rebuke.

The .xiij. Psalme.

Usquequo domine.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

3 How lõg wilt thou forget me (O Lord) for euer? how long wilte thou hide thy face frõ me?

How lõg shal I seke counsell in my soule, and be so uexed in myne heart? howe longe shall mine enemye triumphe ouer me?

Consider and heare me (O Lorde my God:) lighten mine eies that I slepe not in death.

Least myne enemy say, I haue preuailed against him: for if I be cast down, thei that trouble me wil reioice at it.

But my trust is in thy mercy, and my heart is ioyfull in thy saluation.

I wil sing of the Lord, bicause he hath dealt so louingly with me, (yea I wil praise the name of the Lord the most hiest.)

The .xiiij. Psalme.

Dixit insipiens.

The * foole hath sayd in hys hearte, there is no God. A Ps.liij.a.

They are corrupt, and become abhominable in their doinges: * there is not one that doeth good (no not one.) Ps.liij.a Ro. iii. c.

The Lord loked downe from heauen uppon the children of men, to se if there were any that would understand, & seke after God.

But they are all gone out of the way, they are altogether become abhominable there is none that doth good, no not one.

Their throte is an open Sepulchre: with theyr tonges they haue deceiued, the poison of aspis is under their lippes.

Their mouth is full of cursing and bitternesse: their fete are swift to shed bloud.

Destruction and unhappinesse is in their waies, and the way of peace haue they not knowen, there is no feare of God before their eyes.

Haue they no knowledge that they are all such workers of mischiefe, eatyng up my people as it were bread: and call not upon the Lord.

There were they broughte in greate feare, (euen where no feare was:) for God is in the generation of the righteous.

As for you, ye haue made a mocke at the councel of the pore: bicause he putteth his trust in the Lord.

Who shal geue saluation unto Israel, * out of Sion? When the Lorde turneth the captiuity of his people, then shall Iacob reioyce: and Israel shalbe glad. Esa.lix. d Rom.xi.d

The .xv. Psalme.

Domine quis habitabit.

Lord who shall dwell in thy tabernacle? who shal rest upõ thy holy hill? The .ij. daye. A Morning prayer.

Euẽ he that leadeth an uncorrupte life, and doeth the thing that is righte, and speaketh the truth from hys heart. Psalme. xxiiij. b. Esay. xxxiij.c. Math. xix. b.

He that hath used no deceit in his tong nor done euil to hys neighbor, and hath not slaundered hys neighbors.

He that setteth not by himselfe: but is lowly in his own eyes, and maketh much of them that feare the Lord.

He that sweareth unto hys neighbor, and disapointeth hym not, though it were to hys own hynderaunce.

Eze.xviii a. *He that hath not geuen his money vpon vsury, nor taken rewarde againste the innocente.

Whoso doth these things shal neuer fal.

The.xvi.Psalme.

Conserua me domine.

The badge or armes of Dauid.

A PReserue me, O God, for in thee haue I put my truste.

O my soule, thou hast said vnto the Lord: thou arte my God, my goodes are nothing vnto thee.

Al my delite is vpon the saintes that are in the earth, and vpon suche as excell in vertue.

But they that runne after another God, shall haue great trouble.

Their drinke offeringes of bloud, will not I offer, neither make mentiō of their names within my lippes.

Tre.iii.e *The Lord himselfe is the portion of mine enheritaunce, and of my cupp: thou shalt maintaine my lot.

The lot is fallen vnto me in a fayre grounde: yea, I haue a goodly heritage.

I wil thanke the Lord for geuinge me warning: my reines also chasten me in the night season.

B I haue set God alwaies before me, for he is on my right hande, therefore I shall not fall.

Wherfore my heart was glad, and my glory reioysed: my fleshe also shall rest in hope.

Act.ii.d. and.xiii.e For why? *thou shalte not leaue my soule in hel: neither shalt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption.

Thou shalt shewe me the pathe of life: in thy presence is the fulnesse of ioy, and at thy righte hande there is pleasure for euermore.

The.xvii.Psalme.

Exaudi domine iusticiam.

A prayer of Dauid.

A HEare the right O Lord, consider my complaint, and hearken vnto my praier that goeth not out of fained lips.

Let my sentēce come forth from thy presence: and let thine eyes loke vpon the thing that is equall.

Pro.xvii. a. *Thou hast proued and visitest myne heart in the night season, thou hast tryed me, and shalt finde no wickednesse in me: for I am vtterly purposed ẏ my mouth shall not offende.

Bicause of mennes workes ẏ are done against the wordes of thy lippes: I haue kept me from the waies of the destroyer.

O holde thou vp my goinges in thy pathes: that my fotesteps slip not.

I haue called vpon thee, O God, for thou shalt heare me: encline thine eare to me, and hearken vnto my wordes.

Shewe thy meruailous louing kindnesse, thou that art the Sauiour of them which put their trust in thee, from suche as resist thy right hande.

B Kepe me as *the apple of an eye, hide me *vnder the shadow of thy winges.

From ẏ vngodly that trouble me: mine enemies compasse me rounde aboute, to take away my soule.

They ar enclosed in their own fat: and their mouth speaketh proude thinges.

They lie waiting in our way on euery side, turning their eyes down to ẏ groūd.

Like as a Lion that is gredy of his pray, and as it were a Lions whelpe, lurking in secret places.

Up Lord, disapoint him and caste him down: deliuer my soule from the vngodly which is as a sworde of thine.

C From the men of thy hande, O Lord, from the men, I saye, and from the euill worlde, which haue their portion in this life, whose bellies thou fillest with thy hid treasure.

They haue children at their desire: and leaue the reste of their substaūce for their babes.

But as for me, I wil beholde thy presence in righteousnesse: and when I awake vp after thy likenesse, I shalbe satisfied with it.

The.xviii.Psalme.

Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde for I

Let me not be confounded, O lord, for I haue called vpon thee: let the vngodlye be put to confusion, and bee put to silence in the graue.

Let the lying lyppes be put to sylence, which cruelly, disdainfullye, and despyte-

O howe plentifull is thy goodnesse, whiche thou haste layde vp for them that feare thee: and that thou haste prepared

Thou shalte hyde them priuylye by How thou hast driuen oute the heathen with thy hande, and planted them in: how thou hast destroyed the nations, and cast them out.

For I wil not trust in my bow: yet it is not my sweard that shal helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs from oure enemy: and puttest them to cõfusion that hate vs.

B We make our boast of God al the daye long: and will prayse thy name for euer.

But now thou art farre of, and puttest vs to confusion: and * goest not forth w our armies.

Psa. xl. c. Thou makest vs to turne our backes vpõ our enemies: so that they which hate vs, spoile our goods.

Thou lettest vs be eaten vp like shepe: and hast scatred vs among the heathen.

Thou sellest thy people for noughte: and takest no mony for them.

C Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neighboures: to be laughed to scorne, and had in derision, of them that are rounde about vs.

Psalme. lxxix. a. *Thou makest vs to be a by worde among the heathen: and that the people shake their heades at vs.

My confusion is daily before me: and the shame of my face hath couered me.

For the voice of the slaunderer, and blasphemer: for the enemy and auenger,

And though al this be come vpon vs, yet do we not forget thee: nor behaue our selues frowardly in thy couenant.

Our heart is not turned back: neither our steppes gone out of thy way. D

No not when thou hast smitten vs in to the place of dragons: and couered vs with the shadow of death.

If we haue forgotten the name of our God: and holden vp our handes to any straunge God: shal not God search it out: for he knoweth the very secretes of the heart.

*For thy sake also are we killed al the day long: and are counted as shepe appointed to be slayne. Ro. viii.

Neuerthelesse, my fete were almost gone, my treadinges had wel nye slipte.

Iob.xii.a. Ier.xii.a. And why? *I was greued at the wicked: I see also the vngodly in such prosperitie.

For they are in no perill of death, but are lusty and strong.

They come in no misfortune like other folke, neyther are they plaged lyke other men.

And thys is the cause that they be so holden with pryde, & ouerwhelmed with crueltie.

Their eyes swell for fatnesse: and they do euen what they lust.

They corrupt other, and speake of wycked blasphemy: their talking is against the most hiest.

For they stretch forth their mouth vnto the heauen, and their tong goeth thorow the world. B Therfore fall the people vnto them, and therout sucke they no small aduauntage.

*Tush (say they) how should God perceiue it: is their knowlege in the most hiest? Psalme. xciiii. b.

Lo, these are the vngodly: these prosper in the world, and these haue richesse in possession: (and I sayd,) Then haue I clensed my heart in vaine, and washed my hādes in innocency.

All the day long haue I bene punished, and chastened euery morning. C

Yea, & I had almost sayd euen as they: but lo, then shuld I haue condemned the generation of thy children.

Then thought I to vnderstande thys but it was to hard for me.

Untill I went into the Sanctuary of God: then vnderstode I the ende of these men.

Namely, how thou dost set them in slippery places: and castest them downe and destroyest them.

O how sodainly do they consume, perish, and come to a fearefull ende.

*Yea, euen like as a dreame when one awaketh: so shalt thou make their ymage to vanish out of the citie. Esa.xxix. b.

Thus my heart was grieued: and it went euen through my reynes.

So foolishe was I and ignoraunte: euen as it were a beast before thee.

Neuerthelesse, I am alway by thee: for thou hast holden me by my right hande.

Whom haue I in heauen but thee? And there is none vpon earth, that I desire in comparison of thee.

Nu. xviii. c. My fleshe and my heart fayleth: but God is the strength of my heart, *and my portion for euer.

For loe, they that forsake thee shall perish: thou hast destroyed all them that cōmit fornication against thee.

Turne vs againe, O God: shew ỳ light

Psa. lxii, a. O Lord God of hostes, how long wilte Turne vs againe, thou God of hostes:

B Thou hast brought a vine out of Egipt thou hast cast out ỳ heathē, and plāted it.
Thou madest roume for it: and whē it had taken rote, it filled the lande.
The hilles were couered with the sha= dow of it: and the boughes thereof were lyke the goodly Cedree trees.
She stretched out her braunches vnto the sea: and her boughes vnto the ryuer.
Why hast thou then broken downe her hedge: that all they which go by, plucke of her grapes.
The wylde bore out of the wood doth rote it vp: and the wylde beastes of ỳ field deuoure it.
Turne thee againe, thou God of hostes, C loke down from heauen: beholde, and vi=

And the place of the vineyarde that thy right hande hath planted: and the braūch that thou madest so stronge for thy selfe.
It is brent with fier, and cut down: and they shall perish at the rebuke of thy coū= tenaunce.
Let thy hande be vpon the man of thy ryght hande: and vpon the sonne of man whō ỳ madest so strōge for thine own self.
And so wil not we goe backe from thee:
O let vs liue, & we shall cal vpō thy name.
Turne vs againe, O Lord God of ho= and we shalbe whole.

A psalme and song of the sonnes of Corah.

Very excellent thynges are spokē of thee: thou citie of god. Sela.

Domine deus salutis.

A song and Psalme of the sonnes of Corah: To the chaunter vppon Mahelath, to geue thanks: an instruction of Heman the Ezrahite.

1 O Lord god of my saluation, I haue cryed day and night before thee: Oh let my prayer enter into thy presence, encline thine eare to my callig.

For my soule is full of trouble: and my life draweth nye vnto hell.

I am counted as one of them that go downe vnto the pit: and I haue ben euen as a man that hath no strength.

Free among the dead lyke vnto them that bee wounded and lye in the graue: which be out of remembraunce, and are cut away from thy hand.

B Thou hast layde me in the lowest pyt: in a place of darcknesse, and in the deepe.

Thine indignation lieth hard vppon me: and thou hast vexed me wyth all thy stormes. Sela.

Thou hast put away mine acquaintaunce farre from me: and made me to bee abhorred of them.

I am so faste in prison: that I cannot get forth.

My sight faileth for very trouble: lorde I haue called daily vpō thee, I haue stretched out mine handes vnto thee.

* Doest thou shew wonders among ẏ dead: Or shal the dead rise vp again, and praise thee? Psa. vi. a. Ec. xvii. d.

C Shall thy louing kindenesse be shewed in the graue: or thy faithfulnes in destruction?

Shall thy wonderous workes be knowen in the darke: and thy righteousnesse in the lande where al thinges are forgotten?

Unto thee haue I cryed, O Lord: and early shall my prayer come before thee.

Lorde, why abhorrest thou my soule: & hidest thou thy face from me?

I am in misery, and like vnto him that is at the poynt to dye (euen fro my youthe vp,) thy terrors haue I suffered wt a troubled minde. D

Thy wrathfull displeasure goeth ouer me: and the feare of the hath vndone me.

They came round about me daily lyke water: and compassed me together on euery side.

My louers and frendes hast thou put away fro me: and hid mine acquaintance out of my sight.

God is very greatly to be feared in the counsell of the sainctes: and to bee had in reuerence of all them that are about him.

O Lorde God of hostes, who is like vnto thee: thy truthe (moste myghty lord) is on euery side.

Ex.xiiii.d Mat.viii.d *Thou rulest the ragyng of the Sea: thou stillest the waues therof, when they aryse.

Thou hast subdued Egipt & destroyed it: thou hast scattered thyne enemyes abrode with thy mighty arme.

The heauens are thyne, the earth also is thyne: thou hast layde the foundation of the round world, and al that therin is.

C Thou haste made the Northe and the South: Tabor and Hermon shall reioyce in thy name.

Thou haste a mightye arme: strong is thy hande, and hye is thy right hand.

Righteousnesse and equitie is the habitation of thy seat: mercy and truthe shal go before thy face.

Blessed is the people (O lord,) that can reioyce in thee: they shal walk in the light of thy countenaunce.

Theyr delite shalbe daily in thy name: and in thy ryghteousnesse shal they make their boast.

But thou haste abhorred and forsaken thyne annoynted: and art displeased at hym.

Thou hast broken the couenant of thy seruaunte: and caste his crowne to the grounde.

All they that goe by, spoyle hym: and he is becom a rebuke vnto his neighbors

Thou hast set vp the ryght hand of his enemies: and made all his aduersaries to reioyce.

Thou hast taken away the edge of his sweard: and geuest hym not victory in the battayle. G

Thou hast put out his glory: and caste his throne downe to the grounde.

The dayes of youth hast thou shortened: and couered hym with dishonoure. Sela.

Lorde, where are thy old louing kindnesses: whiche thou swarest vnto Dauyd in thy truthe?

Remember (Lord) the rebuke that thy seruauntes haue: and howe I doe beare in my bosome the rebukes of many people.

A prayer of Moses the manne of god.

Lorde thou hast bene oure refuge: from one generation to another.

Before the moūtayns were brought foorth, or euer ỷ earth & the worlde were made: thou art God frō euerlasting, and world without ende.

Thou turnest manne to destruction: agayne thou sayeste come agayne ye chyldren of men.

* For a thousand yeres in thy sight ar but as yesterday: seing that is paste as a watche in the night.

Assone as thou scatterest them they ar euen as a slepe: and fade away sodeinly lyke the grasse.

In the morning it is greene & groweth vp: but in the euening it is cut downe (dried vp) and withered.

B For we consume away in thy displeasure: and are afrayde at thy wrathfull indignation.

Thou hast set our misdedes before thee: and our secrete sinnes in the lyght of thy countenaunce.

For when thou art angry, al our dayes are gone: we bryng our yeares to an end, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of our age are three score yeres and ten, and though menne bee so strong that thei come to foure score yeres: yet is their strength then but labour and sorowe, so soone passeth it away, and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrathe: for euen thereafter as a man feareth, so is thy displeasure.

C * O teache vs to number oure dayes: that we maye apply our hartes vnto wisdome.

Turne thee again (O lord) at the last: and be gratious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfy vs with thy mercy, and that soone: so shall we reioyce and be glad all the daies of our lyfe.

Comfort vs againe, now after ỷ time that thou hast plaged vs: and for the yeres wherein we haue suffered aduersitie.

To tel of thy louing kindnesse early in the mornyng: and of thy truthe in the nyght season.

For thou lorde hast made me gladde through thy workes: and I will reioyce, in geuing prayse, for the operatiōs of thy handes.

B O lorde, how glorious are thy works: thy thoughtes are very depe.

An unwise man doth not well consider this: and a foole doth not understande it.

When the ungodly are greene as the grasse, and when al the works of wickednesse doe florish: then shall thei be destroied for euer, but thou lord art the most hyest for euermore.

For loe, thyne enemyes, O Lorde, loe thyne enemyes shall peryshe: and all the workers of wickednesse shalbe destroyed.

But my horne shal be exalted, like the horne of an Unicorne: for I am annoynted with fresh oyle.

Deus laudem meam.

A Holde not thy tõgue (O god) of my prayse, for the mouth of the vngodly, yea, and the mouth of þ deceitfull is opened vpon me.

And they haue spoken against me wt false tonges: they compassed me aboute also with wordes of hatred, and fought against me without a cause.

For the loue that I had vnto them: lo they take now my contrary part: but I geue my selfe vnto prayer.

Thus haue they rewarded me euill for good: and hatred for my good wyll.

Set thou an vngodly man to be ruler ouer hym: * and let Satan stand at his ryght hande.

When sentence is geuen vpon hym, let hym be condemned: and let his praier be turned into synne.

*Let hys dayes be few: and let another take hys office.

B Let hys childrẽ be fatherlesse: and hys wyfe a widdow.

Let hys children be vagaboũdes, and begge their bread: let thẽ seke it also out of desolate places.

Let the extorcioner consume all that he hath: and let straungers spoile his labour.

Let there be no man to pitie hym: nor to haue compassion vpon hys fatherlesse children.

Let hys posterity be destroied: and in þ next generation, let hys name be cleane put out.

Let the wickednesse of hys fathers be had in remembraunce in the sight of the lord: and let not the sinne of hys mother be done away.

Let them alway be before the lord: that he may roote out the memoriall of them from of the earth.

And that bicause hys mynde was not to do good: but persecuted the poore helplesse man: that he might sley hym þ was vexed at the heart.

C Hys delite was in cursing, and it shal happen vnto hym: he loued not blessing, therfore shall it be farre from hym.

He clothed hymselfe with cursing, like as with a raiment: and it shall come into hys bowels lyke water, and lyke oyle into hys bones.

Let it be vnto hym as a cloke that he hath vpon him: and as the girdle that he is alway girded withall.

Let it thus happen from the lord, vnto mine enemies: and to those that speake euill against my soule. D

But deale thou with me, (O lord god) according vnto thy name: for swete is thy mercy.

O deliuer me, for I am helplesse, and poore: and my heart is wounded within me.

I go hence lyke the shadow that departeth: and am driuen away as þ grashopper.

My knees are weake through fasting: my flesh is dryed vp for want of fatnesse.

I became also a rebuke vnto them: * they that loked vpon me, shaked their heades. Psalme. xxii. b.

Helpe me (O lord my god) Oh saue me according to thy mercy.

And they shall know how that this is thy hande: and that thou lorde hast done it.

Though they curse, yet blesse thou: and let them be confounded þ rise vp against me, but let thy seruaunt reioyce.

Let mine aduersaries be clothed with shame: and let them couer themselues wt their own confusion, as with a cloke.

As for me, I will geue great thankes vnto the lord with my mouth: and praise hym among the multitude.

Bonitatem fecisti.

I O Lord,thou hast dealt gratiously wyth thy seruant:according unto thy word.
O learne me true understanding and knowlege:for I haue beleued thy cōmaūdements.
Before I was troubled,I went wrong: but now haue I kept thy worde.
Mat.xix c ✱Thou art good & gratious:O teach me thy statutes.
The proud haue imagined a lye against me:but I will kepe thy commaundemēts with my whole hart.
Theyr harte is as fat as brawne: but my delite hath bene in thy law.
It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble:that I may learne thy statutes.
The law of thy mouthe is deater unto me:than thousandes of golde and syluer.

Manus tue fecerunt me.

K Gene.i.d Iob.x.a Euening Prayer. T✱Hy hands haue made me and fashyoned me:O geue me understandyng, that I may learne thy commaundemēts.
They that feare thee will be glad whē they see me:bicause I haue put my truste in thy worde.
I knowe,O lorde,that thy iudgemēts are ryght:and that thou of very faithfulnesse,hast caused me to be troubled.
O let thy mercifull kindnesse bee my comfort:accordyng to thy worde unto thy seruaunt.
O let thy louing mercies com unto me, that I may liue:for thy law is my delite.
Let the proude be confounded,for thei goe wickedly about to destroye me:but I wyll be occupyed in thy commaundemētes.
Let such as feare thee and haue knowen thy testimonies:be turned unto me.
O let myne harte be sounde in thy statutes:that I be not ashamed.

Defecit anima mea.

L My soule hath longed for thy saluatiō: & I haue a good hope, bicause of thy worde.
Myne eyes long sore for thy worde, saying:O when wilt thou comfort me?
For I am become lyke a bottell in the smoke:yet do I not forget thy statutes.
How many are the dayes of thy seruāt? when wilt thou be auenged of them that persecute me?
The proud haue digged pittes for me: whiche are not after thy lawe.
All thy commaundementes are true: they persecute me falslye, O bee thou my helpe.
They had almoste made an end of me, uppon earth: but I forsooke not thy commaundementes.
O quicken me after thy louyng kyndenesse:and so shall I kepe the testimonyes of thy mouth.

In eternum domine.

M O Lorde,thy worde: endureth for euer in heauen.
Psa.cx i.Pet.i ✱Thy truth also remaineth from one generation to another:thou hast layd the foundation of the earth,and it abideth.
They continue this day,according to thyne ordinaunce: for all thynges serue thee.
If my delite had not bene in thy law: I should haue perished in my trouble.
I will neuer forget thy commaundementes:for with them thou hast quickned me.
I am thine, Oh saue me: for I haue sought thy commaundementes.
The ungodly haue layd wayte for me, to destroy me:but I wil consider thy testimonies.
I see that al thinges come to an ende: but thy commaundementes are exceding broade.

Quomodo dilexi.

L Ord,what loue haue I unto thy law: all the day long is my study in it.
Thou,through thy commaundements hast made me wyser than mine enemies: for they are euer with me. N I haue more understanding than my teachers:for thy testimonies ar my study.
I am wiser than ẏ aged:bicause I kept thy commaundementes.
I haue refrayned my feete from euery euil way: that I may kepe thy worde.
I haue not shrincked from thy iudgementes:for thou teachest me.
O how swete are thy wordes unto my throte:yea, sweter than honye unto my mouth.
Throughe thy commaundementes, I gette understandyng: therfore I hate all wycked wayes.

Lucerna pedibus meis.

O Morning prayer. The .xxvi. daye. Psa.xix.c T✱Hy word is a lanterne unto my fete: and a lyght unto my pathes.

I haue sworne, and am stedfastly purposed: to kepe thy righteous iudgements

I am troubled aboue measure: quycken me, O lord, according vnto thy word.

Let the free wyl offrynges of my mouth please thee, O lord: & teach me thy iudgementes.

[illegible] * My soule is alway in thy hande: yet do not I forget thy lawe. [illegible]

The vngodly haue layd a snare for me: but yet swarued not I from thy commaundements.

Thy testimonies haue I claymed as mine herytage for euer: and why? they are the very ioy of mine hart.

I haue applyed mine hart to fulfyl thy statutes alway: euen vnto the ende.

Iniquos odio habui.

P I hate them that imagine euill thynges: but thy lawe do I loue.

Thou art my defence and shielde: and my trust is in thy worde.

Awaye fro me ye wycked: I wyll kepe the commaundementes of my god.

O stablishe me accordyng vnto thy worde: that I may liue: and let me not be disapointed of my hope.

Hold thou me vp, and I shalbe safe: yea, my delyte shal euer be in thy statutes.

Thou hast troden downe al them that depart from thy statutes: for thei imagine but deceit.

Thou puttest away all the vngodly of the earth lyke drosse: therefore I loue thy testimonies.

My fleshe trembleth for feare of thee: and I am afrayd of thy iudgementes.

Feci iuditium.

Q I deale with the thyng that is lawfull & ryghte: O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressors.

Make thou thy seruaunt to delyte in that whiche is good: that the proude doe me no wrong.

Myne eyes are wasted away with lokyng for thy health: and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruaunt accordyng vnto thy louing mercy: and teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruaunt, O graunt me vnderstanding: that I may know thy testymonies.

It is time for thee lorde to lay to thyne hand: for they haue destroyed thy law.

For I loue thy commaundementes: aboue golde and precious stone.

Therfore hold I streight all thy commaundementes: and all false wayes I vtterly abhorre.

Mirabilia.

R Thy testimonies are wonderfull: therefore doth my soule kepe them.

When thy woorde goeth foorth, it geueth light and vnderstanding, euen vnto the simple.

I opened my mouthe and drew in my breath: for my delite was in thy commaundementes.

O loke thou vpon me, and be mercifull vnto me: as thou vsest to doe vnto those yt loue thy name.

Order my steppes in thy woorde: and so shall no wickednesse haue dominion ouer me.

O deliuer me from the wrongful dealinges of men: and so shall I kepe thy commaundementes.

Shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce vpon thy seruaunt: and teach me thy statutes.

Mine eyes gush out with water: bicause men kepe not thy law.

Iustus es domine.

S Ryghteous art thou, O lord: and true is thy iudgement.

Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastyng righteousnesse: and thy law is the truthe.

Trouble and heauinesse haue taken hold vpon me: yet is my delite in thy commaundementes.

The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlasting: O graunte me vnderstandyng and I shal liue.

Clamaui in toto corde meo.

T I call with myne whole harte, heare me, O Lorde: I wil kepe thy statutes. Euening Prayer.

Yea, euen vpon thee do I call: help me and I shall kepe thy testimonies.

Early in the mornyng do I cry vnto thee: for in thy worde is my trust.

Mine eyes preuent the night watches: that I myght be occupied in thy wordes.

Heare my voyce, O lord: according vnto thy louing kindenesse: quicken me accordyng as thou art wont.

They drawe nye that of malyce persecute me,and are farre from thy law.

Auenge thou my cause and deliuer me: quicken me accordyng vnto thy worde.

regarde not thy statutes.
Great is thy mercy,O lord:quickē me as thou art wont.
Many there are that trouble me,& persecute me:yet doe I not swarue from thy testimonies.
It greueth me when I see the trans-gressors:bicause they kepe not thy lawe.
Consyder O lord,how I loue thy com-ding vnto thy worde.

Oh lette my supplication come before thee:deliuer me accordyng to thy worde.

when thou hast taught me thy statutes.
Yea,my tong shal sing of thy word:for al thy commaundements are righteous.
Let thine hand helpe me:for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.
I haue longed for thy sauing health, O lorde:and in thy law is my delite.
O let my soule lyue,and it shall prayse

The.xix. day. Mornyng prayer.

Thou art about my path,and about my bed:and spyest out all my wayes.

For lo, ther is not a word in my tong: but thou, O Lord knowest it altogether.

Thou hast fashioned me behinde and before:and layed thine hand vpon me.

Such knowlege is to wonderfull and excellent for me:I can not attaine vnto it.

If I say, paraduenture, the darknesse shall couer me:then shal my night be turned to day.

Yea,the darknesse is no darknesse with the:but the night is all cleare as the day, the darknesse and light (to thee) are both alyke.

C For my reynes are thyne: thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe.

My bones are not hid from the:though I be made secretly,and fashioned beneth in the earth.

The prayse of wisdome. We may not hearken vnto the voluptuous prouocatiõs and enticinges of sinners. Wisdome complayneth her to be despised of al men, & prophecieth destruction vnto her despysers.

wisdome, and to perceiue the instruction, & to perceiue the wordes of vnderstanding: and therby to receiue prudẽce, righteousnesse, iudgement and equitie. That the very symple might haue wit, and that the yonge men might haue knowlege and true vnderstanding. By hearing, the wyse man shal come by more wisdom: and he that is endued with vnderstanding, shall obtayne wyt to perceiue a parable, and the interpretation therof, the wordes of the wyse,

My sonne, walke not thou wt thẽ: restrain

But in vain is ẏ net layd forth before the Pro. [illegible] a.

would sley another. These are ẏ wayes of all such as be couetous, ẏ one would rauish anothers lyfe. * Wisdome cryeth without, and putteth forth her voyce in the

how long will ye loue childishnesse? how long will ẏ scorners delite in scorning, & the vnwise be enemies vnto knowlege? O turne you vnto my correction: lo, I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes. * I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande, and no mã regarded it but all my counsels haue ye despised: and set my correction at naught. Therfore shal I trouble and heauinesse cõmeth vpon you.

Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shal seke me early, but they hated knowlege, and receiued not ẏ feare turning away of the vnwise shal sley thẽ: and the prosperitie of fooles shall be their any feare of euill.

The .ii. Chapter.

Wisdome is to be embraced and set by. And an aduouterous woman is to be eschued.

My sonne if thou wilt receiue my A wordes and kepe my cõmaundements by thee, that thou wilt encline thine eare vnto wysdome, apply thyne heart then to vnderstanding. For if thou cryest after wisdom, and callest for knowlege: if ẏ sekest after her as after mony, & diggest for her as for treasure: thẽ shalt ẏ vnderstãd ẏ feare of ẏ lord, and fynde ẏ knowlege of God. * For it

it is ẏ Lord that geueth wisdome, out of hys mouth commeth knowlege and understanding. He hideth up health for the righteous. He preserueth ẏ welfare of the righteous and defendeth them that walke

When wisdome entreth into thyne hart, and thy soule deliteth in knowlege: then shal counsel preserue thee and understanding shal kepe thee. That thou mayst be deliuered from ẏ euill way, and from the man that speaketh frowarde things. From such as leaue ẏ hye strete, and walke in ẏ wayes of darknesse: which reioyce in doing euil, and delite in wicked things: whose waies are croked, and they froward in their pa-C thes. That thou mayest be deliuered also from ẏ straunge woman, & from her that is not thyne own: which geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her God. For her house is enclined unto death, and her pathes unto hell. All they that go in unto her come not againe, neither take they holde of the way of lyfe. Therfore, walke thou in the way of such as be vertuous, and kepe ẏ pathes of the righteous. For the iust shal dwel in the land, and they ẏ be perfect shall remaine in it: but the ungodly shalbe roted out of ẏ land, and the wicked doers shalbe rooted out of it.

The .iii. Chapter.

The commaundementes of God must be diligently regarded and obserued.

A My sonn, * forget not thou my law, but se that thine heart kepe my commaundementes. For they shal prolong ẏ dayes & yeares of thy lyfe, and bryng thee peace. My sonne despise not ẏ chastening of ẏ Lorde, neyther faynt whe thou art rebuked of hym. For whom ẏ Lord loueth, hym he chasteneth, and yet deliteth in hym, euen as a father in hys own sonne. Well is hym that findeth wisdome, and obteineth understanding: for ẏ getting of it is better than any marchandise of siluer, and ẏ profit of it is better tha golde. Wisdom is more worth tha precious stones, and all ẏ thinges ẏ thou canst desire ar not to be compared unto her. Upon her right hande is long lyfe, and upon her left hande is riches and honor. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, & al her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of lyfe to them that lay holde upon her, and blessed is he that kepeth her fast. Wyth wisdom hath ẏ Lord layed ẏ foundation of ẏ earth: and thorow understanding hath he stablished ẏ heauens. Thorow hys wysdom ẏ depthes breake up, and ẏ cloudes drop down ẏ dew. My sonne, let not these things depart from thyne eyes: but kepe my law and my counsel, that thou mayest haue ẏ pleasure of long lyfe & understanding: for they shalbe lyfe unto my soule, & grace unto my mouth. Then shalt ẏ walke safely in thy way: and thy fote shall not stomble. If thou sleapest, thou shalt not be afrayd: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe
D swetely. Thou nedest not to be afrayd of any sodeine feare, neyther for ẏ violent rushing in of the ungodly, when it commeth. For the Lord shall stande by thy side, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. Withdraw no good thyng from them that haue nede, so long as thyne hande is able to do it. Say not unto thy neighbour, go thy way and come againe, to morow wyll I geue thee: wheras thou hast now to geue him. Intende no hurt unto thy neighbour seing he doth dwell in rest by thee.

Striue not lightely with any man without cause, wheras he hath done thee no harme. Folow not a wicked man, and chose none of hys wayes: for ẏ Lord abhorreth the froward, but hys counsell is among the righteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of ẏ ungodly: but he blesseth ẏ dwellinges of ẏ righteous. As for ẏ scornful doth not he laugh them to

Wisdome and her fruites ought to be searched

A HEare, O ye childrē, ẏ fatherly exhortation, & take good hede, ẏ ye may learne wisdom. For I haue geuē you a good doctrine,forsake not Deute. vi.b. xi,c.xxxii, g. ye my law. For when I my selfe was my fathers deare sonne, & tenderly beloued of my mother:he taught me also, & sayd vnto me. *Let thine heart receaue my wordes:kepe my commaundemēts, and thou shalt liue. Get thee wisdom,and get thee vnderstanding:forget not ẏ wordes of my mouth,and shrynke not from thē.
B Forsake her not & she shall preserue the loue her & she shal kepe thee. The chiefe point of wisdome is,that thou be willing De,xxvi. d. to obtaine wisdome: and before all thy goodes to get thee vnderstādīg. Make much of her & she shall promote thee:yea, if ẏ embrace her,she shal bryng thee vnto honor. She shall make thee a gratious head,& garnish thee w a crown of glory.
Heare my sōne & receaue my words:and the yeres of thy life shalbe many. I haue shewed thee ẏ way of wisdom, & led thee into ẏ right pathes. So that if thou goest therin,ther shal no straitnes hinder thee and when thou runnest,ẏ shalte not fall.
C Take fast holde of doctrine, and let her Psa.i.a. c.xxvii.a. not go:kepe her,for she is thy lyfe. Come not in the path of ẏ vngodly, and walke not in the way of the wicked. Abhorre it, and go not therin: depart asyde, & passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe, excepte they haue first done some mischiefe: neyther take they any rest, except they haue first done some harme. For they eate the bread of wickednesse, & drink ẏ wyne of robbery. The path of ẏ rightwise shineth as ẏ light that is euer bryghter & bryghter, vnto the perfect day. But the way of D the vngodly is as the darkenesse: they De. vi.b. and.xi, c. know not where they fal. My sōn, mark my words, & encline thine eare vnto my sayinges:let them not depart from thine eyes, but kepe them euen in the middest of thine heart. For they are life vnto all those ẏ finde them, & health vnto al their bodyes. Kepe thine heart w al diligence, for therupon hangeth life. Put away fro thee a froward mouth,and let the lippes of sclaunder be far from thee. Let thyne eyes beholde the thing that is right,and let thine eye lyddes loke streight before thee. Ponder the path of thy fete,& let all thy wayes be ordred a right. Turne not asyde,neither to the right hande, nor to the left, but whold thy fote from euill.
*(For the Lorde knoweth the wayes that are on the righte hande. As for the wayes that be on the De.xx. xxviii. lifte hande they be frowardes. For he shall direct thy goynges, and thy wayes shal he gyde in peace.)

The.v.Chapter.

He warneth to eschue and flye whoredome. He forbiddeth prodigalitie and wastfull spending. He willeth vs to liue of our own labours. Men muste loue their wiues.

MY sonne,geue hede vnto my A wisdom,and bow thine eare vnto my prudence:that thou mayest regarde good counsail, and that thy lippes may kepe knowlege. *(Apply not thy selfe to the disceitfulnesse of a woman.) For the lyppes Pro.ii. and.vii.
of an harlot are a dropping hony combe, and her throte is more glistering than oyle. But at the last she is as bitter as B wormwood, and (her tonge,) as sharpe as a two edged sweard. Her fete go down vnto death,and her steppes pearce thorow vnto hel. Perchaūce thou dwelling with her,wilt ponder ẏ path of life: so vnstedfast are her wayes ẏ thou canst not know them. Heare me now therefore (O my sonne) and depart not from the wordes of my mouth. Kepe thy way farre from her:and come not nye the dores of C her house. That ẏ geue not thy strength vnto other, and thy yeares to the cruell.
That other men be not filled with thy goodes, and that thy labours come not in a straunge house. Yea, ẏ thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spent thy body and lusty grene youth) and thē say: Alas, why hated I nurtoure? why did my heart despise correction? Wherfore was not I obedient vnto the voice of my teachers,and hearkned not vnto them ẏ enfourmed me? I am come almost into al misfortune in the middest of ẏ multitude and congregation. Drynke of the water of thyne own well,and of the riuers that runne

[illegible] thine owne springes. Let thy welles flowe out abroade, that there may be ryuers of waters in the stretes, but let them be only thyne owne, & not straungers with thee. Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wife of thy youth. Louing is the hynde, and frendly is ẏ Roe: let her brestes allway satisfye the, and holde the euer content in her loue. My sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosome of an other woman? For euery mannes wayes are open in ẏ syghte of the lorde, and he pondereth al theyr goings. The wickednesse of the vngodly shall catch himselfe, and with the snares of his owne synnes shall he be trapped. He shall dye without amendmēt, and for his great folishnes he shal go astraye.

The.vi.Chapter.

The slothfull and sluggishe is pricked & stirred to worke. The Scismatike is reproued. Aduoutrye ought to be earnestly auoyded.

A My sonne if thou be surety for Pro.xvii. thy neyghbour, and hast fast-c ned thine hand for another and.xx.c mā, thou art bond with thine own wordes & taken w thine own speche. Therfore my sonne do this, & thou shalt be discharged: when thou art com into thy neighbors daunger. Go thy waies then soone, humble thy selfe, & with thy frendes entreate thy creditor, let not thine eyes slepe, nor thine eyelids slumber.
Saue thy self as a Doe from the hād of a hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fouler. Go to the Emmet (thou sluggard) consider her waies, and learne to be wise.
She hath no gide, nor ouerseär, nor ruler yet in the sommer she prouideth her meat & gathereth her foode together in the har-B uest. How long wilt thou slepe thou sluggish man? When wilt thou arise out of thy slepe? yea, slepe on stil a litle, slumber a litle, folde thine handes together yet a litle, ẏ thou mayst slepe: so shall pouerty com vn-Pro.xxiiii.b to thee as one that trauaileth by ẏ waye, and necessity like vnto a weaponed man.
(But yf thou bee not slouthfull, thy haruest C shall come as a sprynging well, and pouertye shall flye farre from thee.) An vngodly person, a wicked man, goeth with a froward mouth, he wynketh with his eyes, he to-keneth with his fete, he poynteth wyth his fingers, he is euer ymagynyng mis-Pro.xii.c chiefe and frowardnesse in his heart, and causeth discorde. Therfore shall his destruction come hastely vpon him, sodenly shal he be all to broken & not be healed. These
vi. thinges doth the lorde hate, and the vii he vtterly abhorreth. A proude looke, a lying tong, handes ẏ shede innocent bloud, an hart that goeth about wicked ym-magynacions, fete that be swyft in run-nyng to do myschef, a false wytnesse psa.xiiii.a that bryngeth vp lyes, and such one as Prou.i.a D soweth discorde among brethren. My sonne kepe thy fathers commaundement, and forsake not the law of thy mother.
Put them vp together in thyne hart, and bynde them about thy necke. That they may lead thee wher thou goest, preserue thee when thou art a slepe, and that whē thou awakest, thou mayst talke of them. ps.cxix.b For the commaundement is a lanterne, and thy law a lyght: yea, chastenyng and nurtour is the way of lyfe, that they may ps.v.a.vii kepe thee from the euyll woman, and b. from the flaterynge tong of the harlot, ẏ thou lust not after her beauty in thyne hart, & least thou be taken with her fayre lookes.
An harlot wyll make a man to begge his bread, and a woman will hunt for the precious lyfe. May a man take fyre in E his bosome, and his clothes not be brent?
Or can one go vppon hoate coales, and his fete not be hurt? Euen so whosoeuer goeth into his neighbours wife, and toucheth her, cannot be vngilty. Men do not Ex.xxii.a vtterly despyse a thefe that stealeth to satisfy his soule, when he is hungry: but yf he may be gotten, he restoreth agayn. vii. tymes as much, or els he maketh recompence with all the good of his house. But whoso committeth aduoutry with a woman, he is a foole, and bringeth his life to destruction. He getteth himself also shame and dishonor, such as shall neuer be put out. For the gelousy and wrath of the mā wyll not be intreated: no, though thou wouldest offer hym great gyftes to make amendes, he wyl not receiue them.

The.vii.Chapter.

God ought to bee feared and honored. His commaundementes ought to be kept. Wanton appetites and desires ought to be shunned.

My sonne kepe my wordes A & lay vp my commaunde- Deu.vi.b ments by thee. Kepe my and.xi.a commaundementes and my law, euē as ẏ apple of thine eye, and thou shalt liue. Binde the vpon thy fingers,

fingers, & wryte them in the table of thine hart. Say vnto wisedom, thou art my sister: and call vnderstanding thy kinswo-Pro.ii.b, and.vi.a man: that they may kepe thee from the straunge woman, and from the harlotte B which geueth swete wordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I loked thorowe the lattesse, and behelde the simple people: and among other yong folkes, I spyed one yong foole goyng ouer the streete by the corner in the way toward the har-lottes house in the twilyght of the euening when it began nowe to be night & darke.
Eccl.ix.a And behold, there met hym a woman with open tokens of an harlot, onely her harte was hyd. She was full of loude woordes and ready to dally: whose fete could not abide in the house, now is she without, nowe in the streetes and layeth a bayte in euery corner. She caught the young manne, kys-sed hym, and was not ashamed, saying I had a vow of peace offrynges to paye, & this day I perfourme it. Therefore came C I foorth to mete thee, that I myght seke thy face, and so haue I found thee. I haue deckt my bed with couerings and clothes of Egipt. My bed haue I made to smel of Myrre, Aloes, and Cinamon. Com let vs lye together, and take our pleasure tyll it be day light, and we wyll enioy the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of money with hym: and wyll returne home at the appoynted solemne D feast. Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame hym, and with her flatteryng lyppes, she entyced hym sodaynlye to fo-lowe her, as it were an Oxe ledde to the slaughter, and lyke as it were a foole that laugheth when he goeth to the stockes to bee punished, so long til she had wounded his liuer with her dart: like as if a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowyng that the peryll of his lyfe lyeth thereupon. Heare me now therfore, O my chyldren, & marke the words of my mouth. Let not thine hart wander in her waies, and be not thou de-ceiued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded, and cast downe: yea, many a strong man hath ben slaine by the meanes of her. Her houses are the way vnto hell: and bryng men down into the chambers of death.

The.viii.Chapter.

The prayse of the wisedome of God.

Doth not wisedome crye? doth not vnderstanding put forth her voice? Stan-deth she not in the hye places, in the streetes & waies? doth she not crye before the whole citye, and in the gates where men go out and in? O ye ye men (sayeth she) whome I call, vnto (the chyldren of menne) doe I lift vp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowledge, O ye ignoraunte, be wyse in hart; O ye fooles, Geue eare, for I wil speake of great matters, and open my lippes to tell thynges that be ryght. For my throte shall be talking of the truthe, and my lippes abhorre vngodlinesse. All the wordes of my mouth are ryghteous, there is no frowardnesse nor falshed therein. They are all playne to such as wil vnderstande, and ryghte to them that fynde knowledge. Receiue my B doctryne, & not siluer: and my knowledge more than fyne golde. For wisedom is more woorth than precious stones: yea, Prou.iii. al thyngs that thou canst desyre, may not bee compared vnto it. I wisedome haue my dwellyng with knowledge, and prudent counsaile is myne owne. The feare of the Lord abhorreth wickednesse, pride, dysdayne, and the euyll waye: and a mouthe that speaketh wycked thynges, I vtterly abhorre. I can geue counsayle, and I conferre thynges: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strength. Through me kynges reygne: through me, counsellers C make iuste lawes. Through me do prin- Dan.iiii ces beare rule: and all iudges of the earth Sap.vi. execute iudgement. I am louyng vnto those that loue me: and they that seke Luk.xi. me early shal fynd me. Ryches & honor ar wt me: yea, excellent goodes & righteousnes. My fruit is better thã gold and precious stone, & mine encrease more worthe than fine siluer. I wyll guyde thee in the way of ryghteousnesse, and in the strete of iudgement. That I may send prosperitie to those that loue me, and to encrease their treasure. The lord himself had me in pos- D session in the beginning of his wayes, Sap.ix. or euer he beganne his woorkes aforetyme. I haue bene ordeyned from euer- Ecc.xxiiii lastyng, and from the begynnyng, or euer the earth was made. When I was borne, there were neyther depthes, nor springes of water. Before the foundations of the mountaynes were layde: yea, before all hylles was I borne. The earth and all that is vpon the earth was not yet

C yet made, no, not the ground it self . For when he made the heauens, I was present: when he set vp the depthes in order, when he hanged the cloudes aboue, whē he fastned the springes of the depe. When he shut the sea within a certain boundes, that the waters should not go ouer their markes ẏ he commaunded. When he laid the foundacions of the earth I was with him ordring al things: deliting daily, and reioycing alway before him. As for ẏ round compasse of the world, I make it ioyful: for my delite is to bee among the children of men. Therfore harken vnto me, O ye children, blessed are they that kepe my waies O geue eare vnto nurtor, be wyse and refuse it not . Blessed is the man ẏ heareth me: watching daily at my gates, & geuing attendance at the postes of my dores. For whoso findeth me, findeth lyfe: & shall obtain fauor of the lord. But whoso offēdeth against me, hurteth his owne soule . All they that hate me, are the louers of death.

The. ix, Chapter.

Wisedome moueth all men to embrace her. The propertie of an whore.

A Wysdome hath builded her self an house, and hewen out. vii. pillers: she hath killed her vi-tailes, poured out her wyne, & prepared her table. She hath sent forth her maidens to cry vpon ẏ hiest place of the citie. Whoso is ignoraunt let him come hither. And to the vnwyse she sayd: O com on your way, eate my bread, B and drink my wyne, which I haue poured out for you. Forsake ignorāce, and ye shal liue: & se that ye goe in the waye of vnder-standing. Whoso reproueth a scornefull person, getteth hymself dishonor: and he ẏ rebuketh the vngodly, staineth hymselfe.
Reproue not a scorner, least he owe thee euil wil: but rebuke a wise mā, and he wil loue thee. Geue a discrete man but an occasion, and he wyll be the wyser: teache a righteous mā, & he wil encrease in know-C ledge. The feare of the lord is the begyn-Job xxviii b. ning of wisdome, and the knowlēdge of Ps.cxi.b, holy things, is vnderstāding. For thorowe Prou.i.a me thy daies shalbe prolōged, & the yeres Eccle.i.c of thy life shalbe many. Yf thou be wyse, thy wisdō shal do thy self good: but if thou thinkest scorne therof, it shalbe thine own harme. A foolish retchlesse woman full of wordes, and such a one as hath no knowledge, sitteth at the dore of her house, and in the hye places of the citie, to cal such as go by, and that walke streight in theyr wayes. Whoso is ignoraunte (sayeth she) let hym come hyther, & to the vnwyse she sayth, stollen waters are sweete, and the bread that is priuily eaten, hath a good taste. And he doth not consider, that they are but dead which be there, and that her gestes are in the deepe of hell. * (For he ẏ wyll be ioyned vnto her, shall go down to hel: but he that auoideth from her, shalbe saued.)

The. x. Chapter.

In this Chapter and in al that folow vnto the. xxx the wise man exhorteth by diuers sentences (which he calleth parables) to folow vertues, and flie vices. And sheweth also what profite commeth of wisdom and what hindraunce procedeth of foolishnesse.

keth poore, but a quicke labouring hande gathereth in Sommer is wyse: but he ẏ confusion. Blessynges are vpon the head of the righteous, and the mouth of the vngodly kepeth mischief in secrete. The me- ps.cxii,a moriall of the iuste shall haue a good reporte: but the name of the vngodlye shall of a righteous man is a well of lyfe; but the mouth of the foolish is nye destructiõ.

The rich mannes goodes are his strong holde, but theyr owne pouertye feareth ye nyng of nurtour, is the way of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be refourmed, deceyueth Pro. xi. b hymself. Dissembling lippes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh any slaũder is a foole. Where muche babling is, there must nedes be offence: and he that refray-neth his lippes is wise. An innocent tong is a noble treasure: but the hart of the vngodly is nothyng worth. The lippes of ye ryghteous feede a whole multitude: but fooles shall dye in their owne folye. The blessyng of the Lorde maketh ryche men, man yt hath vnderstandyng. The thing yt the vngodly are afrayde of, shall come vppon them, but the ryghteous shall haue D theyr desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempest commeth: but the ryghteous remaineth sure for euer. As vineger is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is a sluggishe person to them that send him forth. The feare of the lorde ma-keth a long lyfe, but the yeares of the vngodly shalbe shortned. The pacient abydyng of the ryghteous, shall be turned to gladnes: but the hope of the vngodly shal perysh. The way of the Lorde geueth co-rage vnto the godlye: but it is a feare for Ps. cxxv. a wycked doers. The ryghteous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodly shal not ps. xxxvii. e. remayne in the lande. The mouthe of the iust will be talkyng of wysedome, but the tong of the froward shal perysh. The lips of the ryghteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngod-ly taketh them to the worst.

The. xi. Chapter.

A Pro. xvi. b and, xx. d A false balaunce is an abhomination vnto ye lorde: but a true weyghte plea-seth hym. Where pride is, there is shame also & confusion: but where as is lowlines, ther is wisdom.
The innocente dealing of the iuste shall leade them, but the wickednes of such as dissemble, shal be theyr owne destruction.
Pron. x. a Richesse help not in the day of vengeaũce, Eccl. v. b but righteousnes delyuereth from death.
The ryghteousnesse of the innocent order-eth his way: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wickednesse. The ryghteousnes of the iust shall deliuer them: but ye wicked shall be taken in theyr owne vngodlynes.
When an vngodly man dieth, his hope is B gone: the confidence of ryches shal perish.
The ryghteous shalbe deliuered oute of trouble, and the vngodly shall com in hys stede. Thorowe the mouthe of the dissem-bler is his neyghbour destroyed: but tho-rowe knowledge shall the iust be delyue-red. When it goeth well with the ryghte-ous, the citie is mery, and when ye vngod-ly perysh, there is gladnesse. When ye iuste are in wealth, ye citie prospereth: but when vngodly haue the rule, it decaieth. A foole bryngeth vp a slaunder of his neyghbor: a wyse man wyll kepe it secrete. A dissem-blyng person will discouer priuy thinges, but he that is of a faythfull hart wil kepe counsayle. Where no good counsel is, ther the people decay: but where as many are that can geue counsel, there is wealth. He C that is surety for a straunger hurteth him self: and he that medleth not with surety-ship, is sure. A gracious woman maynteineth honesty, as for ye wycked, they main-tayne rychesse. He that is mercyfull dothe hym selfe a benefite: but whoso hurteth his neyghbour, is a tyraunt. The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he that soweth ryghteousnesse shal receiue a sure rewarde. Lyke as ryghteousnesse bryn-geth lyfe: euen so to cleaue vnto euil bringeth death. The lorde abhorreth them yt bee of a fayned hart, but he hath pleasure in them that are of an vndefyled conuersation.

The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage, but the sede of the ryghteous shall be preserued. A fayre woman wythout discrete maners, is like a ring of gold in a swines snoute. The desyre of ye ryghteous is acceptable, but the hope of ye vngodly is indignation. Som man geueth out his goodes, and is the rycher: but the nygarde (hauing ynough) wyl depart fro D nothyng, and yet is euer in pouerty. He yt is liberall in geuyng, shall haue plentye: and he that watereth, shalbe watered also hymself.

Whoso hourdeth vp his corne, shalbe cursed amõg the people, but blessing shall lyght vpon his head that geueth foode.
He that laboureth for honestye, fyndeth his desyre: but whoso seketh after mischief it shall happen vnto hym.

He that trusteth in his richesse, shall haue a fall:but * the ryghteous shall florish as the grene leafe. Who so maketh disquyetnes in his owne house, he shal haue wind for his heritage, and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse. The fruit of the ryghteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endeuoureth hymselfe to win mennes soules, is wyse. If the righteous be recompenced vpon earth, how muche more then the vngodly and the synner?

A Who so loueth wisedom will be content to be refourmed but he that hateth to bee reproued is a fole. A good man is acceptable vnto ÿ lord:but the wycked imaginer wyll he condemne. A manne cannot endure in vngodlinesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shal not be moued. A huswifely woman is a crowne vnto her husbande:but she that behaueth her self vnhonestly, is a corruption in hys bones. The thoughtes of the ryghteous ar right:but the ymaginations of the vngodly are deceytfull. The talkyng of the vngodly is howe they may lay wayte for bloude:but the mouthe of the ryghteous wyll delyuer them. God ouerturneth the

B estate of the wycked, and they stand not: but the house of the ryghteous shall stand stedfast. A man shalbee cōmended for his wysedom, but a foole shall be despysed. A simple man which laboreth and worketh is better than one that is gorgeous and lacketh bread. A ryghteous man regardeth the lyfe of his cattell, but the vngodly haue cruell heartes. He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of bread: but he that foloweth ydlenesse, is a verye foole. * (Whoso hath pleasure to continue at the wyne, leaueth dishonesty in his owne dwellyng.) The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after mischiefe: but the roote of the ryghteous bryngeth foorth fruit. The wicked falleth into the snare, through the malice of hys own mouthe:but the iust shal escape out of al peryl. Euery mā shal enioy good, accordyng to the fruit of his mouthe, and after the workes of his hands shall he bee rewarded.

Loke what a foole taketh in hand, he thinketh it well done:but he that is wyse, wyll be counsayled. A foole vttereth hys wrathe in all the hast:but a discrete man couereth wrong. A iuste manne wyll tell the truthe, and shewe the thyng that is ryght:but a false witnesse deceyueth. C

A slaunderous persone prycketh lyke a swearde, but a wyse mannes tong is holsome. A true mouth is euer constant:but a dissemblyng tong is soone chaunged. They that imagine euyll in theyr minde, wyl deceyue, but the counsaylers of peace shall haue ioy folowyng them. Ther shall no misfortune happen vnto the iuste, but the vngodly shall be fylled with miserye. The Lorde abhorreth lying lyppes: but they that labor for truthe please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng doeth hide wisdome:but an vndiscrete harte telleth oute his foolishnesse. A diligente hande shall beare rule:but the ydle shalbe vnder trybute. Heauinesse discourageth the hart of man: but a good woorde maketh it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth hys neyghbour: but the way of the vngodlye wyll deceyue themselues. The deceytfull man shall not rost that he tooke in huntyng, * but the rychees of the iuste man is of great value. In the way of ryghteousnesse there is lyfe: and in the same waye there is no death. D

The .xiii. Chapter.

A Wise sonne wyll hearken to his fathers warnyng, but he that is scornefull, wyll not heare when he is reproued. A good man shal enioy the fruit of his mouth, but he that hath a frowarde mynde, shall be spoyled. He that kepeth his mouth, kepeth his lyfe: but whoso openeth his lippes to euil, destroyeth hymself. The sluggarde woulde faine haue, and cannot get his desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plentye. A ryghteous man abhorreth lyes: but ÿ vngodly shameth both other and hymself. Ryghteousnesse kepeth the innocente in ÿ way: but vngodlinesse doth ouerthrow the synner. Some men are rych, though they haue nothyng: agayne some menne are poore, hauyng great rychesse. With goodes euery man deliuereth his lyfe, and the poore wyll not be reproued. The light B of the righteous maketh ioyful, but ÿ cādle of ÿ vngodly shalbe put out. Among the proud there is euer strife, but amōg those that do al thinges with aduisement, ther is wisedome.

plucketh it down. He that walketh in ẏ right pathe of the lorde, feareth hym:
but he that turneth hymself away frō his wayes, despiseth him. In the mouth of the foolish is the rod of pryde: but the lippes of ẏ wise wil preserue them. Where no Oxen are, ẏ crib is empty: but where the Oxen labor, pro.viii.a there is muche fruit. A faithfull witnesse will not dissemble, but a false record wyll make a lye. A scornefull body seketh wis-dome and fyndeth it not, but knowledge is easy to come by, vnto hym that wil vnderstande. See that thou meddle not w a foole, in whom thou perceiuest to bee no knowledge. The wysedome of him ẏ hath vnderstanding, is to take hede vnto hys way: but the folishnesse of the vnwyse, deceyueth. Fooles make but a sport of sinne: but there is a fauourable loue among the ryghteous. The hart feleth his own inwarde B bitternesse, neither shall the straunger be partaker of his ioy. The house of the vngodly shal be ouerthrowen, but the tabernacle of the ryghteous shal florish. There is a way whiche some men thinke to bee Prou.xvi Deu.xii Esa.lii ryght: but the ende therof, leadeth vnto death. The hart is sorowful euē in laughter, and the ende of mirth is heauinesse. A backsliding hart shalbe filled w his own wayes, but a good man shall liue of his fruites. An ignoraunt bodye beleueth all thynges: but whoso hath vnderstanding looketh well to his goinges.
(* A deceytfull sonne shall haue no good: but a discrete seruaunt shall doe full vvell: and his vvaye shall prosper.)

A wyse man feareth, & departeth from euill: but a furious foole goeth on presūp-tuously. An vnpatient man dealeth foo- C lishly, but he that is well aduised, is hated of the foole. The ignoraunt haue foolish-nesse in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowledge. The euyll shal bow themselues before the good: and the vngodly shall wayt at the dores of ẏ ryghte-ous. The poore is hated euen of his own neighbors, but the rych hath many frēds.
Whoso despiseth his neighbour doeth a-misse, but * blessed is he that hath pity of the poore. * (He that putteth his trust in the lord Ps.xli. loueth to be merciful.) Without dout thei erre that imagine wickednes, but they ẏ muse vppon good thynges vnto such shall happen mercy and faithfulnesse. In euery labor there is some profit. But onely lip labor bryngeth foorth penury. Riches are a crowne vnto the wyse, but the ignorance of fooles is very folishnes. A faithful witnes delivereth soules, but a deceitful witnes bryngeth forth lyes.

The feare of the Lord is a strong hold, and his children are vnder a sure defence.
The feare of the lord is a wel of lyfe, to a-uoyde the snares of death.

The encrease and prosperitie of the D commons, is the kynges honour: but the decay of the people, is the confusion of the prince.

He that is patient, hath much vnder-standing

standyng:but he that is soone displeased, prouoketh foolishnes. A mery harte is the lyfe of the bodye: but rancour consumeth away the bones. He that dothe a poore man wrong blasphemeth his maker: but whoso hath pitie of the poore, doth honor vnto god. The vngodly is cast awaye for his iniquitie, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in death.

Wisdome resteth in the hart of hym ye hath vnderstanding, and it shalbe knowen among them that are vnlearned. Ryghteousnesse setteth vp the people, but the sacrifyce of the heathen is sinfull. A dyscrete seruaunt is a pleasure vnto the kyng: but one that is not honest prouoketh him vnto wrathe.

The. xv, Chapter.

A A Soft aunswere putteth downe displeasure: but froward wordes prouoke vnto anger. The tong of suche as bee wyse, vseth knowledge aright, as for a foolishe mouth it babbleth out nothing but foolishnesse. The eyes of the Lord looke on euery place, beholdyng both the good and bad. A wholsom tong is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A foole despyseth his fathers correction, but he that taketh heede when he is reproued, shall haue the more vnderstandyng.

B *(VVhere righteousnesse is plentifull, there is very great povver: but the imaginations of the vngodly shalbe rooted out.)

The house of the ryghteous is full of riches, but the encrease of the vngodly are the destruction. A wyse mouthe powreth out knowledge, but the hart of the foolish doth not so. The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifyce of the vngodly, but the prayer of ye ryghteous is acceptable vnto hym. The way of the vngodly is an abhomination vnto the Lord: but whoso foloweth ryghteousnesse, him he loueth. He that forsaketh the ryght way, shalbe sore punished, and whoso hateth correction shall dye. The hell with her payne is knowen vnto the Lord, how much more then the harts of men? A scornefull body loueth not one that rebuketh him, nether wil he com nie vnto ye wyse. A mery hart maketh a chereful countenance: but an heauy harte compelleth a man to sygh. The hart of hym ye hath vnderstādyng doth seke after knowledge: but the mouth of fooles is fed with foolishnesse. All the dayes of the poore are miserable: but a quiet hart is a continual feast. Better is a little with the feare of ye lord, than great treasure with sorow. Better is a messe of pottage with loue, than a fat oxe with euil wil. An angry man styrreth vp strife, but he ye is paciente stylleth discord. The way of a slouthful man is as it wer hedged with thornes: but the strete of ye ryghteous is wel clensed. A wyse son maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete body shameth his mother. A fole reioiceth in folish things, but a wyse mā loketh wel to his own goings. Unaduised thoughts shal com to naught: but where as mē are ye can geue good counsel, there is stedfastnes. A ioyful thing it is to a man, whē his counsel is folowed: and very pleasant is a word spoken in due seasō. The way of life leadeth vnto heauen, ye a man should beware of hel beneth. The lord will breake down the house of the proud, but he shall make fast the borders of the wydow. The lord abhorreth the imaginations of ye wicked, but pure wordes of innocentes are pleasant vnto him. The couetous manne rooteth vp his own house, but whoso hateth rewardes shall liue. *(Through mercye and faith are sinnes purged, and throughe the feare of the Lord doth euery one eschue euyll.)

The hart of the ryghteous studyeth hys answer afore: but ye wicked mans mouth spueth out mischief. The lord is far from ye vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the righteous. Like as the clerenesse of ye eyes reioyseth the hart, so doeth a good name fede the bones. The eare that herkneth to the reformation of lyfe, shall dwel among the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despiseth his owne soule: but he that submitteth hymself to correction is wyse.

The feare of the lorde is the ryght science of wysedome; and lowlinesse goeth before honor.

The. xvi. Chapter.

A Man may wel purpose a thing in his hart, but the answer of ye tong cometh of the lord. A man thinketh al his waies to be clean, but it is ye lord ye iudgeth ye minds. Comit thy workes vnto the lord, and loke what thou deuisest, it shall prosper.

The lord doth all thynges for his own sake, yea, and when he kepeth the vngodly for the day of wrath.

one that hath vnderstanding, he wyll be the wyser. He that hurteth hys father or shutteth out hys mother, is a shamefull & an vnworthy sonne.

My sonne, heare no more the doctryne that leadeth thee vnto errours from the wordes of vnderstanding. A false wyt-nesse laugheth iudgement to scorne: and the mouth of the vngodly eateth wickednesse. Punishments are ordeined for the scornefull: and stripes for fooles backes.

Who so curseth hys father and mother: his light shalbe put out in ẏ myddest of darcknesse. The herytage ẏ commeth to hastely at the first, shal not be praysed at the end. Say not thou, I wil recompence euil: but put thy trust in ẏ Lord, and he shal defend the. * The Lord abhorreth two maner of weightes, & a false balaunce is an euill thyng. The Lord ordreth euery mannes goinges: how may a man then vnderstãd hys own way? It is a snare for a man to deuoure that which is holy: and after the vow to turne to thine own vse, the thing thou hast vowed. A wise kyng destroyeth the vngodly, and bryngeth ẏ whele ouer them. The lanterne of ẏ lord is the breth of man, and goeth thorow al the inwarde partes of the body. Mercy and faythfulnesse preserue the kyng: and with louing kindnesse hys seate is holden vp. The strength of yong men is their worship, & a gray head is an honour vnto the aged. Woundes dryue away euil, and so do strypes inwarde partes of the body.

The.xxi.Chapter.

A The kynges heart is in the hande of the Lord, like as are the riuers of water: he may turne it whether soeuer he wil. Euery man thinketh hys own way to be right: but the lord iudgeth the heartes. To do righteousnesse and iudgement, is more acceptable to ẏ Lord than Sacrifice. A presumptuous looke, a proude stomake, and the plowing of ẏ vngodly, is synne. The deuices of one that is diligent bryng plenteousnesse: but he that is vnaduised commeth vnto pouerty. Whoso hoordeth vp riches with ẏ deceitfulnesse of hys tong, he is vayne and a foole, and lyke vnto them that seke their own death. The robberies of ẏ vngodlye shalbe their own destruction: for they wil B not do the thyng that is ryghte. The wayes of ẏ frowarde are straunge: but the workes of hym that is cleane are right. It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house top, than with a brawling woman in a wyde house.

The soule of ẏ vngodly wisheth euill, and hath no pity vppon hys neyghboure. When the scornefull is punished, the ignoraunt take the better heede: and when he seeth the wyse men prospere, he wyll receiue the more vnderstanding.

The righteous mã wysely considereth the house of the wicked: and for their wickednesse god ouerthroweth the vngodly. Whoso stoppeth hys eares at the crying of the poore: he shal cry hymselfe and not be heard. A pryuy reward pacifieth displeasure, and a gift in the bosom, stylleth furiousnesse. The iust deliteth in doing ẏ thig that is right: but ouer the workers of wickednesse hangeth destruction. The man that wandreth out of the way of wisdom, shall remayne in the congregation of the dead.

He that hath pleasure in bankets, shal be a poore man. Whoso deliteth in wyne and delicates, shal not be rych. The vngodly shalbe geuen for the righteous, and the wycked for ẏ iust. It is better to dwel in a wildernesse than with a chiding and an angry woman. In a wyse mannes house there is great treasure and oile: but a foolysh body spendeth vp all. Whoso followeth righteousnesse and mercy, findeth both lyfe, righteousnesse, and honoure. A wyse man wynneth the citie of the myghty: and as for the strength that they trust in, he bryngeth it down. Whoso kepeth hys mouth and hys tong, the same kepeth hys soule from troubles. He that is proud and presumptuous, is called a scornefull man, whiche in wrathe dare worke maliciously. The voluptuousnesse of ẏ slouthfull is hys owne death: for hys handes wyll not laboure. He coueteth and desireth all the daye long, but the righteous is alway geuing, and kepeth nothyng backe.

The Sacrifice of the vngodly is abhomination: how much more when they offer the thing that is gottẽ with wickednesse. A false witnesse shal perishe: but he that is a true man, boldely speaketh ẏ he hath heard. An vngodly man goeth forth rashly: but ẏ iust reformeth hys own way. There is no wisdome, there is no vnderstanding, there is no counsell against the Lord. The horse is prepared against the daye of battayle: but the Lorde geueth victory.

The.xxii.Chapter.

A Good name is more worthe than great richesse, and louing fauoure, is better thã siluer & golde. The rich & poore are together, the Lord is the maker of them al. A wyse mã seeth ẏ plague and hideth himselfe, but ẏ folish go on still and are punished. The end of lowlynesse and ẏ feare of God, is riches, honor prosperity and health.

Thornes and snares are in the way of the frowarde: but he that doth kepe hys soule, will flee from such. Teach a child in hys youth what way he should goe: for he shall not leaue it, whẽ he is old. The rich ruleth the poore: and the borower is seruaunt to the lender. He that soweth wyckednesse shal reape sorow: and the rodd of hys cruelty shal perish. He that hath a louing eye shalbe blessed: for he geueth of hys bread vnto the poore.

Caste oute the scornefull man, and so shall strife goe out with hym: yea, variaunce and slaunder shal ceasse. Whoso deliteth to be of a cleane heart and of gracious lippes, the kyng shalbe hys frende. The eyes of the Lord preserue knowlege, but as for the wordes of the dispitefull, he bringeth thẽ to naught. The slouthful body sayth: ther is a Lyon without, I might be slaine in ẏ strete. The mouth of an harlot is a depe pit, wherin he falleth that the lord is angry withall. Folishnesse sticketh fast in the heart of the ladd, and the rod of correction shal dryue it away.

Whoso doth a poore man wrong to increase hys own riches, and geueth vnto the rich to please him, at the last commeth to pouerty hymself. My sonne, bow down thyne eare, and hearkẽ vnto the wordes of wisdome, apply thy mynde vnto my doctrine, for thou shalt be excellẽt if thou kepe it in thyne heart, and practise it in thy mouth, that thou mayest put thy trust in the Lord. I haue shewed thee thys day ẏ thing that thou knowest. Haue not I warned thee very oft wyth counsell and learning: that I might shew thee the truth, and that thou with the veritie mightest answere them that sayd vnto thee?

Se that thou robb not the poore, bicause he is weake, and oppresse not the simple in iudgement: for the Lord himself will defende their cause, and do violence vnto them that haue vsed violence.

Make no frendship with an angry wilful man, and kepe no company wyth the furious: least thou learne hys wayes, and receiue hurt in thy soule. Be not thou one of them that binde their hande vpon promise, and are suretie for weightie causes: for if thou hast nothing to pay, they shall take away thy bedd frõ vnder thee. Thou shalt not remoue the lande marke, which thy forelders haue set. Seest thou not they which be diligent in their businesse, stande before kynges, and not among the simple people.

When thou sittest at the table to eate wyth a Lord, order thy selfe manerly with ẏ thinges that ar set before thee. Measure thyne appetite: and if thou wilt rule thyne owne selfe, be not ouer gredy of hys meate, for meate begileth and disceiueth. Take not ouer great trauaile and labour to be rich, beware of such a purpose. Why wilt thou set thyne eye vpõ the thing, which sodenly vanisheth away? For riches make thẽselues wynges, and take their flight like an Eagle into the ayre. Eate thou not w the envious, and desyre not hys meate. For he doth as a man that prescrybeth a measure to thee in hys heart.

Tell nothing into the eares of a foole, for he will despise the wisdome of thy wordes. Remoue not the olde lande marke, and come not within the fielde of the fatherlesse. For he that delivereth them, is mighty, euẽ he shal defende their cause against thee. Apply thyne heart vnto correction, and thyne eare to the wordes of knowlege. Withholde not correction from the childe, for if thou beatest hym with the rod he shal not dye therof. If thou smite hym with the rodd, thou shalt deliuer his soule from hell. My sonne if thy heart receiue wisdome, my heart also shal reioyce: yea, my reynes shalbe very glad, if thy lyppes speake the thing that is right. Let not thyne heart be gelous to folowe synners, but kepe thee styll in the feare of the lord, al the day long: for ẏ ende is not yet come and thy pacient abiding shall not bee in vayne.

Do so y thy father and mother may be glad of the, and y she that bare thee may reioyce. The.xxiiii. Chapter.

A Be *not thou gelous ouer wicked men, and desyre not to be among them. For their heart ymagineth to do hurt, & their lips talke of mischiefe. Thorow wisdom is an house builded, & with vnderstādyng is it set vp. Thorow discretion shal the chaumbers be filled with al costly and pleasaunt richesse. A wyse man is euer strong: yea, a mā of vnderstādyng encreaseth of strength. For with discretion must warres be taken in hande, and wheras are many that can geue counsel, there is the victory. Wysdom is to hye a thyng for a foole, for he dare not open his mouth in the gate. He that ymagineth mischiefe, may wel be called an vngracious person. The thought of the foolish is synne, and the scorneful is an abhomination vnto men. If thou be ouersene and negligent in tyme of nede, then is thy strength but small. Delyuer them that goe vnto death, and are led a way to be slaine and be not negligent therein: if thou be able to do them good. If thou wilt say: I knew not of it. Thinkest thou y he which made the heartes, doth not consider it? and that he which regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shal not he recompence euery mā according to hys workes? My sonne, thou eatest hony and the swete hony combe, bicause it is good and swete in thy mouth. Euen so shall the knowlege of wisdom by vnto thy soule, assone as thou hast gottē it. And thou shalt haue long dayes: yea, thy hope shal not be in vain. Lay no priuy wayt (O wycked man) vpon the house of the righteous, & disquiet not hys resting place. *For a iuste man falleth seuen tymes and ryseth vp agayn: but the vngodly fall vnto wyckednesse. Reioise not thou at the fall of thyne enemy, and let not thyne heart be glad when he stumbleth. Least the Lord (when he seeth it) be angry, and turne hys wrath from hym vnto thee.

C *Let not thy wrath and gelousy moue thee to followe the wycked and vngodly. And why? the wycked shall haue no posteritie, and * the candle of the vngodly shalbe put out. My sonne, feare thou the Lord, and the kyng, and kepe no company wyth them that slyde backe from hys feare: for their destruction shall come sodenly, and who knoweth the aduersitie that may come from them both? These are also the sayinges of the wyse. * It is not good, to haue respect of any person in iudgement. He that sayth to the vngodly thou art righteous, hym shall the people curse: yea, the communaltie shal abhorre hym. But they that rebuke the vngodly, in them doth God delyte, and a rych blessyng shall come vpon them. Euery man shall kysse hys lyppes that geueth a good answere.

D Firste make vp thy worke that is without, and loke well vnto that whiche thou haste in the fielde, and then builde thine house. Be no false wytnesse against thy neighboure, and speake no falshode wyth thy lyppes. Saye not: I will handle hym euen as he hath dealte wyth me, and wyll rewarde euery man according to hys dedes.

ence discerneth al thynges well: but he

Lyke

Lyke as a dogge turneth againe to his vomite, euen so a fole begynneth hys foolishnesse againe a fresh. If thou seest a man that is wyse in hys awne conceyte, there is more hope in a foole than in hym.

The slouthful sayth: there is a Lyon in the way, and a Lyon in the middest of the stretes. Lyke as the doore turneth about vpon the henges, euen so doth the slouthfull welter hymselfe in his bed. The slouthful body thrusteth hys hande into hys bosome, and it greueth hym to put it againe to hys mouth. The sluggarde thynketh hymselfe wyser than seuen men that syt & teach. Whoso goeth by and medleth with other mennes strife: he is lyke one that taketh a dogge by the eares. Lyke as a mad man that casteth fyrebrandes, and shoteth deadly arrowes and dartes, euen so doth a dissembler with hys neighbour. And then sayth he: when he is taken, I did it but in sport. Where no wood is, there the fyer goeth out: euen so where the tale bearer is taken away, there the strife ceaseth. Coles kyndle heate, and wood ye fyer: euen so doth a brawling felowe stirre vp variaunce. A tale bearers wordes are lyke men yt strike with hammers, but they perse the inward partes of ye body. Venemous lyppes and a wycked hart, are lyke a potshard couered with siluer drosse. An enemy shalbe knowen by hys talking, and in the meane season he ymagineth mischief, but when he speaketh faire, beleue hym not: for there are seuen abhominations in his heart. Whoso kepeth euill will secretly to hurt, hys malice shalbe shewed before the whole congregation. Whoso diggeth vp a pit, shall fall therein: and he yt welteth a stone, shal stomble vpon it hymselfe. A dissembling tongue hateth one that rebuketh hym, & a flattering mouth worketh mischiefe.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

A Make not thy boast of to morow, for thou knowest not what may happen to day. Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth: yea, other folkes lippes and not thine. The stone is heauy, and the sand weighty: but a fooles wrath is heauier than them both.

Wrath is a cruell thing, and furiousnesse is a very tempest: but who is able to abyde enuy? An open rebuke is better than a secret loue. Faythfull are the woundes of a louer, but the kisses of an enemy are cruell. He that is full, abhorreth an honye combe, but vnto hym that is hungry, euery sower thing is swete.

B He that oft tymes flytteth, is lyke a byrd that forsaketh her nest. Bawme & swete incense make the heart mery, so is a frendly counsell of a mannes frende that agreeth to hys purpose. Thyne own frende and thy fathers frende se thou forsake not: but go not into thi brothers house in time of thy trouble. For better is a frende at hande than a brother farre of. My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalt make me a glad hart, so that I shall make answere to my rebukers.

A wyse man seeing the plague, will hide hymselfe, as for fooles, they go on still and suffer harme. Take hys garment that is suretie for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mannes sake. He that is to hasty to prayse hys neighboure aboue measure, shalbe take as one that geueth hym an euill report.

C A brawling woman and the roofe of ye house droppyng in a rayny day, may well be compared together. He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth the oyle fast in hys hande. Lyke as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man comfort another. Whoso kepeth hys fygge tree, shall enioy the fruites therof: euen so, he that wayteth vpon hys maister, shall come to honour. Lyke as in one water there appeareth diuerse faces, euen so diuerse men haue diuerse heartes. Lyke as hell and destruction are neuer full, euen so the eyes of men can neuer be satisfied.

D Siluer is tryed in the moulde, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man, when he is openly prayed to hys face. whiche are the destructiō euen of kings. O Lamu-ell, it is not for kinges, it is not (I say) for kinges to drink wine, nor princes strong drinke, for there is no secret where drōkennesse reigneth least they being dronken forget the lawe, and peruert yͤ iudge-ment of all poore mennes children. Geue strong drinke vnto suche as are condemned to death, and wine vnto those that mourne, that they may drinke it, and forget their misery and aduersitie. Be thou aduocate for the dombe, & stand in iudge-ment thy self, to speake for all suche as be soccourlesse in this transitory world. Open thy mouth, defende the thing that is lawfull and righte, and the cause of the poore and helplesse.
Whoso fyndeth an honeste faythfull woman, she is muche more worthe than pearles. The harte of her husbande may safely trust in her, so that he shall fall in B no pouertie. She will doe him good and not euyll, all the dayes of her lyfe. She occupyeth wooll and flaxe, and laboureth gladlye with her handes. She is like a marchauntes shippe, that bringeth her vittailes from a farre. She is vp in the night season, to prouyde meate for her houshold, and foode for her maydes.
She considereth lande and byeth it, and with the fruit of her handes she planteth a vineyard. She girdeth her loines with strength, and courageth her armes. And if she perceiue that her huswiferye dothe good, her candle goeth not out by nyght.
She layeth her fingers to the spyndle: & her hand taketh hold of the distaffe. She openeth her hande to the poore, yea, she stretcheth foorth her handes to suche as C haue nede. She feareth not that the cold of winter, shall hurt her house, for all her householde folkes are clothed with scarlet. She maketh her self faire ornamēts her clothing is white silke and purple.
Her husbande is much set by in the gates when he sitteth among the rulers of the lande. She maketh clothe of sylke, and selleth it, and deliuereth girdels vnto the marchaunt. Strength and honour is her clothing, and in the latter daye she shall reioyce. She openeth her mouthe with wisedome, and in her tong is the lawe of grace. She looketh well to the wayes of her householde, and eateth not her bread with idlenesse. Her children shall aryse, and call her blessed: and her husband shal D make muche of her. Manye daughters there be that gather riches together, but thou goest aboue them all. As for fauour, it is deceitful, and beauty is a vain thing, but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she is worthy to be praysed. Geue her of the fruite of her handes, and lette her owne workes prayse her in the gates.

The ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

The Booke of the Preacher, otherwise called Ecclesiastes.

The first Chapter.

All that is in this worlde, is vanitie.

Ecc.xii.c These are the woordes of the Preacher, the sonne of Da-uid, king of Jerusalem. All is but most vain vanitie (sayeth the Preacher) and all is most vaine (I saye) and but plain vanitye. For what els hath a mā of all the labour that he taketh vnder the sunne? One generation passeth away, another commeth: but the earth abideth styl. The sunne aryseth, the sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he may there rise vp again.
The winde goeth towarde the south, and turneth vnto the North, fetcheth his compasse, whirleth about, and goeth foorth & B his circuit returneth again to hymself. All Ps.ciiii b. floudes runne into the sea, and yet the sea it selfe is not filled: for looke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come Pro.xvii c. to flowe agayne. All thinges are so hard to be knowen, that no man can expresse Ec.xiiii b them. The eye is not satisfied with sight: the eare is not filled with hearyng. The thing that hath bene commeth to passe againe: and the thing that hath bene done Ecc.iii.b shall be done agayne. There is no newe thyng vnder the sunne. Is there anye thyng whereof it may be sayde: loe, thys is new? For it was long ago in the tymes C that haue bene before vs. The thing that is paste is oute of remembraunce: Euen so the the thynges that are to come, shall no more bee thought vpon among them that come after. I my selfe the Preacher was king of Israel at Jerusalem, and did applye my mynde to seke out and searche for the knowlege of all thynges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauaile and labour hath God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercise themselues therein.
Thus haue I considered all the thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: & loe, they are all but vanitye, and vexation of D mynde. The crooked can not bee made streight, nor the thyng that is vnperfecte, cannot be accompted with thynges that are perfect. I communed with mine own harte, saying: loe, I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten more wisdom, than al they that haue bene before me in Jerusalem. Yea, my hart had great experience of wisedome and knowlege, for therunto I applyed my minde, that I might know what were wisedom and vnderstanding: what errour and foolishnesse: and I per-ceyued that this also was but a vexation of minde: for where muche wysedome is, there is also great trauayle and disquietnesse: and the more knowlege a mā hath, the more is his care.

The.ii. Chapter.

Aboundaunce of riches, of pleasure, and of building, are vaine thinges.

Then sayde I thus in my hart. Now A goe to, I wyll take myne ease, and haue good dayes. But loe, that is vanitye also: insomuche that I sayd vnto the manne geuen to laughter: thou arte mad, and to mirthe, what doest thou? So I thought in my harte, to geue my fleshe vnto wyne, and again to apply my minde vnto wisedome, and to comprehende foo-lishnesse, vntill the tyme that (among all the thinges whiche are vnder the sunne) I might see what were best for menne to doe, so long as they liue vnder heauen. I iii King. made gorgeous fayre woorkes. I buyl- xxviii. b ded me houses, and planted vineyardes. and. vi.
I made me Orchardes and gardeyns of B pleasure, and planted trees in them, of al maner fruits. I made pooles of water, iiii.king. to water the greene and fruitefull trees iiii.c withall. I bought seruauntes and may-dens, and had a great housholde. As for cattell and sheepe, I had more substaunce of them, than all thei that were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered siluer & golde together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes. I prouided me syngers, and women, whiche coulde playe on instrumēts to make menne myrth and pastyme. I gat me Psalteries and songes of musike. And I was greater and in more worship than all my predecessours in Jerusalem. For wisedome remayned with me: and looke whatsoeuer mine eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and wherein soeuer my hart delited or had any pleasure, I withhelde it not from it. Thus my hart reioysed in al that I did: and this was my portion of all my trauaile. But when I considered al the workes that my hands had wrought: and all the laboure that I had taken therein: loe, all was but vanitye & vexation of minde, and nothyng of anye value vnder the sunne. Then tourned I me to consider wisdome, errour and foolishnesse: (for what is he among men that might be compared to me ẏ kyng in such C workes?) and I sawe that wysedome excelleth foolishnesse, as farre as light doth darkenesse. For a wise man hath his eyes in his head, but the foole goeth in ẏ darknesse. I perceiued also that they had both one ende. Then thought I in my minde: if it happen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to laboure any more for wisedome? So I confessed within my harte, that this also was but vanitie. For the wyse are euer as litle in remembraunce as the foolysh, for the daies shall come when all shall bee forgotten: yea, the wyse manne dyeth as well as the foole. Thus beganne I to be wery of my lyfe, insomuche that I coulde away with nothyng that is done vnder the sunne, for all was but vanitie and vexatyon of mynde: yea, I was wearye of all my labours, whiche I hadde taken vnder the sunne, bicause I should be fayne to leaue them vnto another manne that commeth after me. And who knoweth whyther he shall be a wyse manne or a foole? And yet shall he bee Lorde of all my labours, whiche I with such wisdome haue taken vnder the sunne. Thys is also a vaine thyng. So I turned me to refrain my minde from all suche trauayle, as I D tooke vnder the sunne: forsomuche as a man should wery himself with wisedom, with vnderstanding, and oportunitie, & yet bee fayne to leaue his labours vnto another, that neuer swet for them. This is also a vaine thyng and great miserye. For what getteth a man of all the laboure and trauaile of his minde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heauinesse, sorowe, and disquietnesse all the dayes of his life? Insomuch that his hart cannot rest in ẏ nyght: this is also a vayne thyng. Is it not better then for a manne to eate and drynke, and his soule to bee mery in hys labour? yea, I sawe that this also was a gift of God.

For who wyll eate or goe more lustely to his worke than I? And why? God geueth to the man that is good before hym, wisdome vnderstanding and gladnesse: but vnto the sinner he geueth wearinesse (and superfluous care,) that he may gather and heape together the thyng that afterward shalbe geuen vnto hym, whom it pleaseth God. This is nowe a vayne thyng: yea, a very disquietnesse and vexation of mynde.

The.iii.Chapter.

All thinges come in their time, and passe away in their time.

Euery thing hath a tyme: yea, A all that is vnder the heauen, hath his conuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne and a tyme to dye. There is a time to plant, and a time to plucke vp the thing that is planted. A time to sley, and a time to make whole. A time to breake downe, and a time to build vp. A time to wepe, and a time to laughe. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a time to gather stones together. A time to embrace, and a time to refrayne from embracyng. A time to winne, and a time to lose. A time to spare, and a time to spende. A tyme to cut in peces, and a time to sowe together. A time to kepe silēce, and a time to speak.
A time to loue, and a time to hate. A time B of warre, and a time of peace. What hath a man els (that dothe any thyng) but werinesse and labor? For as touchyng ẏ trauaile and carefulnesse, whiche God hath geuen vnto menne, I see that he hathe geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All this hath he ordeyned maruellous goodly, to euery thing in his due time. He hath plāted ignoraunce also in the hartes of mē, that they shoulde not comprehende the grounde of his workes whiche he dothe from the begynnyng to the ende. So I perceyued, that in those thynges there is nothing better for a manne, than to bee C mery, and to do wel so long as he liueth. For all that a manne eateth and drinketh: yea, whatsoeuer a manne enioyeth of all his laboure, that same is a gifte of God. I considered also that what soeuer God dothe, it continueth for euer.

And that nothing can be put vnto it, nor taken from it: and that God dothe it to the intent that men should feare hym.
Eccl.i.b The thyng that hath bene, is nowe: and the thyng that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme: for God restoreth agayne the thing that was past. Moreouer I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlinesse in steade of iudgement, and iniquitye in steade of ryghteousnesse. Then thoughte I in my mynde: GOD shall seperate the ryghteous from the vngodlye, and then shall be the tyme and iudgemente of all counsailes and woorkes. I communed with myne owne harte also, concernyng the children of men, howe God hath cho-
B sen them, and yet letteth them appeare, as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it dothe vnto beastes: and as the one dieth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of breathe: so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beast, but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They goe all vnto one place, for as they be all duste, so shall they all turne Sapi.ii.a vnto dust againe. Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth vpwarde, and the breath of the beast that goeth down into the earth?
D Wherfore I perceiue that ther is nothing better for a man, than to bee ioyfull in his labour, for that is his portion. But who wil bring him to see the thyng that shall come after hym.

The.iiii.Chapter.

The miseries of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The childe that is poore and wise. &c.

Ibac.i.a. Ecc.b.b. SO I turned me, and considered all the violēt wrōg that is doone vnder the sunne: and beholde, the teares of such as were oppressed and there was no man to comfort them, or that would deliuer and defēd them from the violence of their oppressors. Wherefore I iudged those that at dead, to be more happy than those that be aliue: yea, hym that is yet vnborn, to be better at ease than thei both bicause he seeth not the miserable works that are done vnder the sunne. Agayne I sawe that all trauayle and diligence of labor that euery man taketh in hande, was B done of enuy against his neighbor. Thys is also a vaine thing, and a vexation of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesh. One handfull (sayth he) is better with rest, thā bothe the handes full with labour and trauayle of minde. Moreouer I turned me, and beholde yet another vanitye vnder the sunne. There is one man no moe but C himselfe alone, hauyng neither chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauaile: his eyes cannot be satisfied with ryches, and yet doth he not remember hymselfe, and say: For whom doe I take suche Gen.xlb trauayle? For whose pleasure doe I thus i.Al.xvi c cōsume away my life? This is also a vain iii.Al.xiii and miserable thing. Therfore twoo are c. better than one: for they may well enioy the D profite of theyr labour. For if one of them ii. Par. fal, his companion helpeth him vp again. xxx.iii. c.
But wo is hym that is alone: for if he fall, iiii.King. he hath not another to helpe hym vp. A- xx b. g gain when twoo sleepe together they are warme, but how can a body be warme alone? One may be ouercome, but two may make resistaunce. A threefolde cable is not lightly broken. A poore chylde beyng wise, is better than an olde kyng that doteth, and cannot beware in time to come. Some one commeth out of prison, and is made a king: and another which is borne in the kyngdom commeth vnto pouertye. And I perceiued that all men liuing vnder the sunne, go with the second chylde, that shall stande vp in the steade of the other. As for the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after hym, they are innumerable. And they that come after hym shall not reioyce of hym. This is also a vayne thyng and vexation of mind. i.Al.xv.e When thou commest into the house of god kepe thy foote, and draw nye, that god, which is at hand may heare: that thou geue not the offerynges of fooles: for they knowe nought but to doe euill.

The .v. Chapter.

An admonicion to beware of rash communication. We oughte not to maruaile at the oppression of the poore. The couetous is not satisfied with his riches.

BE not hasty with thy mouth, A and let not thine hart speake any thyng rashly before god. For God is in heauen, and thou vpon earth, therfore lette thy woordes be few. For where much carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: and where many woordes are, there menne maye heare fooles. If thou make a vowe De.xxiii.c vnto GOD, bee not slacke to performe Bar.vi.c it. As for folyshe vowes he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promise any thyng

B paye it, for better it is that thou make no vowe, thã that thou shouldest promise, and not pay. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to sin, neither say thou before the Angell, that it is thy ignoraunce. For then God will be angry at thy voyce, and destroy all the workes of thyne handes.
And why? where as are manye dreames and manye woordes, there are also dy-uers vanities: but looke that thou feare God. ☙ If thou seest ẏ poore to be oppres-

Abacu.i.a equitie and the right of ẏ law is wrested in the lande, maruell not thou at suche a of the earth vpholdeth all thyng: yea, the kyng hymselfe is mayntayned by husbãdry. He that loueth money wyll neuer be satisfyed with money, and whoso delighteth in rychesse, shall haue no pro-fyte thereof. This is also a vain thing.

Wheras much rychesse is, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that posses-seth them, sauyng that he may looke vp-C pon them with his eyes? A laboring man slepeth swetely, whyther it bee lyttle or much that he eateth, but the aboundance of the ryche, will not suffer hym to slepe.
Yet is there a sore plage, whiche I haue seen vnder the sunne, (namely) rychesse kept to the hurt of him that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perish with his great miserye and trouble: and yf he Job.i.d haue a childe it getteth nothing. Lyke as i.Timo. vi.b he came naked out of his mothers womb D so goeth he thither again: and carieth nothyng away with him of all his laboure.
This is a miserable plage that he shal go away euen as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath labored in ẏ wind?
All the daies of his life also, he did eate in the dark, with great carefulnesse sicknesse and sorow. Therfore me think it a better Eccl.ii.d and a fairer thyng, a manne to eate and drink and to be refreshed of all his labor, that he taketh vnder the sunne al ẏ daies of his life, which god geueth hym, for this is his portion. For vnto whomsoeuer god geueth richesse, goodes, and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his portion, and to be refreshed of his laboure: this is the gifte of God. For he thinketh not muche howe long he shall liue, for somuch as God filleth his hearte with gladnesse.

The.vi.Chapter.

The misery of the ryche and couetous. The difference of a foole and a wise man.

There is yet a plage vnder ẏ sunne, A and it is a generall thing amõg men, when god geueth a mã riches, goodes and honor so that he wanteth nothyng of all that his harte can desyre, and yet God geueth hym not leaue to enioy the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a vayne thyng, and a miserable plage. If a manne beget a hundred children, and lyue many yeres so that his dayes are many in number, & yet cannot enioy his good, neither be buried: as for hym I saye, that an vntimely birth is better than he. For he commeth B to nought, and spedeth his tyme in dark-nesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreo-uer, he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth not of it: and yet hath he more reste than the other. Yea, though he liued two M. yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place? All the labour that a man taketh is for himself, and yet his desire is neuer filled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more than the foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walke with fooles, before the lyuyng? C The cleare syght of the eyes is better thã that the soule should walke after desires of the luste. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thyng, and a disquietnesse of minde. The thing that hath bene is named already, and knowen that it is euen man himself. neither may he go to lawe with hym that is mightier than he. Many thinges there be that encrease vanitie: and what hath a manne els. For who knoweth what is good for man liuyng, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe? Or who wyll tell a manne what shal happen after hym vnder the Sunne?

The.vii.Chapter.

That whiche passeth our strengthes & wittes ought we not to seke after.

A Good name is more woorth, A than a precious oyntmente, Prouer. a and the daye of death is bet- Can.i.a ter than the day of byrthe. It is better to go into an house of mourning, thã into a banketting house.
For there is the ende of all men: and he ẏ is liuyng, taketh it to heart. Grauitye is better than to laugh: for when the countenaunce is heauy, the hearte is refourmed.

The hart of the wyse is in the mournyng house,but the harte of the foolyshe is in y house of myrth. It is better to geue eare to the chastenyng of a wyse man, than to Pro.xvii a. heare the song of fooles. For the laugh-yng of fooles is lyke the crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thing. The wise man hateth wrong dealing:and abhorreth the hart that coueteth rewardes.Better it is to consyder the end B of a thyng,than the begynnyng. The patient of spirite is better than the hie mynded.Be not hastely angrye in thy mynde, for wrathe resteth in the bosom of fooles.
Say not thou:What is the cause,that the dayes of the olde tyme were better than they that be nowe:for that were no wyse question.Wisedome with enherytaunce is good:yet better is it with them that with out care may behold the Sunn.For wis-dome defendeth as well as money, and y excellent knowlege and wisedom,geueth life vnto hym that hath it in possession.
Consider the worke of God,how that no man can make the thing streyght which he maketh crooked.Use well the tyme of prosperity,and remember the time of mis-C fortune:for God maketh the one by the other,so that a man can finde nothyng els.
All things haue I cōsidred in y tyme of my vanity:that the iust man perysheth for his righteousnesse sake, and the vngodly ly-Ec.xii.b. ueth in his wickednesse.Therfore be thou neyther ryghteous,nor ouerwyse, y thou perysh not:be neither to vnryghteous also nor to foolysh,lest thou dye before thy tyme.It is good for thee to take holde of this,and not to let that go out of thy hād.
For he that feareth God, commeth foorth with them all . Wisedome geueth more iii.king. viii.d courage vnto the wise, than ten mightye men of the citye:for there is not one iust vii.Par.vi. d. pon the earth that doeth good, & synneth Pro.xx.d not.Take not hede vnto euery word that i.Joh.i.d. is spoken,lest thou hear thy seruant curse thee,for thine own hart knoweth y thou thy self also hast oft tymes spokē euyl by other men.All these thynges haue I proued in wisedome:for I thought to be wise Job but she went farther fro me than she was xxviii.d before:yea,and so depe that I mighte not D reache vnto her.I applyed my minde also vnto knowlege, and to seke and searche out science,wysedome and vnderstādyng: to knowe the foolishnesse of the vngodlye Pro.vii.d and the errour of dotyng fooles. And I founde that a woman is bitterer than death,for she hath cast abrode her hart as a net that men fysh with:and her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shall escape from her:but the synner wyl be taken with her.Beholde(sayeth the Preacher)this haue I diligently searched out and proued.One thyng must be consydered with an other that a man maye come to knowlege: whiche as yet I seeke and fynde it not. Among a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman among all.Loe,this onely haue I founde, Gene.i.d that God made manne iust and ryghte, but they sought many inuentions.

The.viii.Chapter.

The kynges commaundemente oughte to be obeyed.Gladnesse is one of the chief thinges vnder the sunne.

Who is wyse?Who hath know- A lege to make an aunswer?A Pro.xvii c. mannes wysedome maketh Job.ix.d. his face to shine:but vnshame fastnesse putteth it out of fa-uoure.I must kepe the kynges commaūdemente, and the othe that I haue made vnto God.Be not hasty to goe oute of his syght, and see thou continue in no euyll thyng: for whatsoeuer it pleaseth hym, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kyng geueth a charge, his commaundemente is Job.ix.b. mightye: Euen so, who maye saye vnto Le.xvii.a hym: what dooest thou ? Whoso kepeth the commaundement,shal fele no harme; but a wyse mannes harte discerneth the tyme and iudgemente. For euery thyng B wyll haue oportunitye and iudgemente, and this is the thing that maketh menne full of carefulnesse and sorow.And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyll tell hym.Neyther is there any man that hath power ouer the spirite, to kepe styll the spirite, nor to haue anye power in the tyme of death:is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle? neyther may vngodlinesse deliuer them y meddle withall.

All these thynges haue I consydered, and applyed my mynde vnto euerye worke that is vnder the sunne:how one manne hath Lordship vpon another, to hys owne harme. For I haue seen often the vngodly brought to theyr graues and yet they haue retourned into the Ci- ps.xxxviii c. tye agayne, and came from the place of holy men,whiche in the Citye wer grow-en out of memory,as were those also that lyued well.This is also a vayne thyng,

XUM

C bicause nowe that euill workes are not hastely punyshed, the hart of man geueth himselfe ouer vnto wickednesse. But though an euill persone offende an hundred times, and God deferre, geuyng him long lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall goe well with them that feare God, bycause they haue hym before theyr eyes. Agayn, as for the vngodly it shall not be well w hym, neyther shall he prolong his dayes, but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God. Yet is there a vanity vpon earth: there be iust men, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they had ẏ wor-kes of the vngodlye. Agayne, there bee vngodlye with whom it goeth as though they had the workes of the ryghteous.
Thys haue I called also a vayne thyng.
D Therefore I commende gladnesse, by-cause a man hath no better thing vnder the Sunne, than to eate and drinke, and to be merry: for that shall he haue of hys labour all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God geueth hym vnder the Sunne. And so I applyed my mynde to learne wisdom and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of suche a fashion that I suffred myne eyes to slepe, neither day nor nyght:) I vnderstoode of al ẏ workes of God, but it is not possible for a manne to attayne vnto the workes ẏ are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestowe his labor to seke them out, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wise mā would vndertake to know them, yet shall he not fynde them.

The. ix. Chapter.

A man wotteth not by the righteousnesse of his owne workes, whether he be worthye of loue or hate. A man ought to liue merily with his wyfe. A prayse of wisedome.

A For all these thynges purposed I in my mind to seke out.
The righteous and wise: yea and their seruantes also, are in the hand of God: and ther is no man that knoweth eyther loue or hate, but all thynges are before them. It happeneth vnto one as vnto an other: it goeth with the ryghteous as with ẏ vngodly: with the good and cleane, as wyth the vncleane with hym that offereth, as with hym that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also w the synner.
Job. ix. c. As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also to hym that is afrayd to be forsworne. Among all thinges that come to passe vnder the sunne, this is a miserye, that it happeneth vnto all alyke.
This is the cause also that the heartes of menne are full of wickednesse, and madd foolishnesse is in theyr heartes, as longe as they liue, vntyll they dye.
And why? as long as a manne liueth B he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better than a dead Lion: for they that be liuyng, knowe that they shall dye: but they that be deade, knowe nothing, neither deserue they any more. For theyr memoriall is forgotten, so that they bee neyther loued, hated, nor enuyed: neither haue they any more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the sunne. Goe thou thy waye then, eate thy bread with ioye, and drinke thy wine with a gladde hearte, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alway whyte, and let Mat. vi. b thyne head lacke no oyntment.
Use thy selfe to lyue ioyfully with thy Pro. v. c. wyfe whome thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, whiche is but vaine, that God geueth thee vnder the sunne, al the daies of thy vanitye: for that is thy porcion in C this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takest vnder the sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to doe, that doe with all thy power, for in the graue that thou goeste vnto, theyr is neither worke, counsayle, knowledge, nor wis-dome. So I turned me vnto other thyn-ges vnder the sunne, and I sawe, that in runnyng, it helpeth not to be swift: in battaile, it helpeth not to bee strong, to feding, it helpeth not to be wise: to riches, it helpeth not to be subtill: to be had in fa-uoure, it helpeth not to be cunnyng: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a Lu. xii. a. mā knoweth not his time but lyke as the fishes are taken with the Angle, and as the birdes are caught with the snare: euē so are menne taken in the perilous tyme, when it commeth sodainly vpon them.
This wisedome haue I seen also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great D thyng. There was a litle citye, and a few menne within it: so there came a greate kyng and besieged it, and made great bulwarkes against it. And in that City there was founde a poore manne (but he was wyse) which with his wisedome de-liuered the citye: yet was there no bodye that had any respect to such a simple mā.
Then sayde I: Wysedome is better than strength.

strength. Neuerthelesse, a simple mannes wysedome is despised, and his woordes are not hearde. A wise mannes counsayle Sap.vi.a that is folowed in scilence, is farre aboue i.Ba.i.vii. the crying of a capitayne among fooles. c *For wysedome is better than harnesse:
i.Ki.xxii but one vnthrift alone destroyeth muche c good.

The.x. Chapter.

The difference betwixt a foole and a wise man. Fortunate and happy is that realme, whiche hath a wise Prince.

A A Dead flye dooeth corrupte swete oyntmente, and maketh it to stinke: Euē so oftē tymes he that is made for wisedome and honoure, is abhorred bicause of a lytle foolishnesse. A wise mannes hart is vpon the ryght hand, but a fooles heart vpon ẏ left. A foole wil shewe hymselfe, when he goeth by the way, yet thinketh he that euery mā doth as foolishly as hymself. If a principal spirit be geuē the to beare rule, Ra.xii.b. *be not negligent then in thine office: for he that can take cure of hymself auoydeth great offences. An other plague is there which I haue seen vnder the sūne: namely, the ignoraunce that is commonlye a-B mong Princes, in that a foole sytteth in great dignitye, and the rych are set down beneath. I haue seen seruauntes ryde vpon horses, and Princes goyng vppon Pro.xxvi their feete as it were seruauntes. But he
b. that diggeth vp a pit shal fal therin hym-Ec.xxvii self, and whoso breaketh downe ẏ hedge d a serpent shall byte him. Whoso remoueth stones, shall haue trauayle withall: and he that heweth wood, shall be hurt therewith. When an yron is blunt and ẏ poynt not sharpened, it must be whet again, and that with might, euen so doth wisedome folow diligence. A babler of his tonge is C no better, than a serpente that styngeth without hissing. The words out of a wise mannes mouthe are gracious: but ẏ lips of a foole wyll destroye hymselfe. The begynnyng of his talkyng is foolishnesse, & the last worde of his mouth is stark madnesse. A foole is full of woordes, & a man cannot tell what shall come to passe, who will then warne hym of it that shal folow after hym. The labour of the foolyshe is greuous vnto them, whyle they knowe not howe to goe into the citye. Wo be vnto thee (O thou lande) whose kyng is but a chylde, and whose Princes are early at theyr bankets. But well is thee (O thou D land) whose king is come of nobles, and whose Princes eate in due season, for necessitie and not for luste. Through slouthfulnesse the balkes fal downe, & through ydle handes it rayneth in at the house. Ps.ciiii.b Meate maketh men to laugh, and *wyne maketh them merry: but vnto money are all thynges obedyent. Wish the kyng no euyll in thy thoughte, and speake no hurt of the ryche in thy priuye chamber, for a byrde of the ayre shall bettraye thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewray thy woordes.

The. xi. Chapter.

Riches ought to be distributed vnto the nedy.

Lay thy bread vpō wete faces, A and so shalt thou fynde after many daies. Geue part seuen dayes, and also vpon ẏ eight, for thou knowest not what misery shall come vpon earth. When the cloudes are full, they powre out rayne vpon the earth. And when the tree falleth (whether it be toward the south or north) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wind shal not sow: and he that hath respect vnto the cloudes B shall not reape. Nowe lyke as thou knowest not the way of the spirite howe it entereth into the litle body, beyng yet in the mothers wombe: Euen so thou knowest not the workes of God, whiche is ẏ workmaster of al. Ceasse not thou therefore thy hands to sowe thy sede, whether it be in the mornyng or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prospere: and if they bothe take, it is the better. The lyght is swete and a pleasaunt thyng is it for the eyes to looke vppon the sunne. If a man liue many yeres C and be glad in them all, let hym remember the dayes of darkenesse, which shalbe many: and that foloweth, al thinges shal be but vanity. Be glad then (O thou yong man) in thy youth, and let thy hart be mery in thy yong dayes: folow the wayes of thyne own hart, and the lust of thine eyes but be thou sure that god shall bring thee into iudgement for all these thynges.

The.xii. Chapter.

From our youth ought we to consider, and regarde the goodnesse of god.

A Put away displeasure oute of thine harte, and remoue euill from thy body: for chyldehod, and youth is but vanitie. Re= member thy maker the soner in thy youth, or euer the dayes of aduersi= tye come, and or thy yeres drawe nye, whē thou shalt saye: I haue not pleasure in thē before the sunne, the light, the moone and starres be darkened, and or the cloudes turne again after the rayne, when the ke= B pers of the house shall tremble, and when the strong men shall bowe themselues.
When the milners stand styl, bicause they be so few, and when the syght of the win= dowes shal ware dimme, when the dores in the stretes shal bee shut, and when the voyce of the milner shall be layde downe: when men shal rise vp at the voyce of the bride, and when all the daughters of mu= sike shall be brought lowe: when mē shall feare in hye places, and be afrayde in the stretes: when the Almond tree shal florish C and be laden with the grassehopper, and when all lust shal passe (bicause mā goeth to his long home: and the mourners go a= bout the stretes.) Or euer the siluer lace be taken away, and or the golden well be broken. Or the pot be broken at the well, and the whele vpon the cesterne. Thē shal the dust be turned again vnto earth, from whence it came: and the spirit shal returne vnto god which gaue it. * Al is but vanity (sayth the Preacher) al is but plain vany= Eccl.i.a. ty. The Preacher was yet more wyse and D taughte ẏ people knowlege: he gaue good hede, sought out the ground, and set forth many parables: His diligence was to find out acceptable wordes, ryght scrypture, & He. iiii.c the wordes of truthe. For * the wordes of the wyse, are like prickes and nayles, that go through, wherwith the stuffe gathered is holden vp: for they are geuen of one shepeheard only. Therefore beware (my sonne) of that doctrine that is beside thys: for to make many bokes, it is an endles worke, and to loud crying werieth the bo= dy. Let vs heare the conclusion of al thin= ges: feare God, and kepe his commaunde= mentes: for that toucheth al men. For god shal iudge all workes and secret thinges, whether they be good or euyll.

The ende of the Booke of the Preacher, otherwise called Ecclesiastes.

The Ballet of Ballets of Salomon: called in Latin, Canticum Canticorum.

The .i. Chapter.

A mysticall song of the spirituall and Godlye loue betwene Christ the Spouse, and the church or congregation his spousesse.

O That he would kysse me A wt the kisses of his mouth for thy loue is more plea= sant than wyne, and that bicause of the good and pleasaunt sauoure of thy most precious balmes.
Thy name is a swete smelling oyntment when it is shed forth: there do the maidēs loue thee, draw thou me vnto thee, we wil runne after thee. The kyng hath brought me into his priuy chambers. We wyll bee glad and reioyce in thee: we thinke more of thy loue than of wyne. They ẏ be rygh= teous loue thee. I am blacke (O ye daugh= ters of Ierusalem) lyke as the tentes of Cedarenes, and as the hangyngs of Sa= lomon, but yet am I fayre and welfauou= red withall. Maruayle not at me that I am so blacke: for why, the sunne hath shy= ned vpon me. My mothers chyldren had euyll wyll at me, they made me the keper of the vyneyardes, but mine owne vyne= yarde haue I not kepte. Tell me of hym whom my soule loueth where thou feedest the sheepe, where thou makest them reste at the noone day: for why shall I be lyke him that goeth wrong about the flockes of thy companions: If thou know not thy selfe (O thou fayrest among women) then goe thy way foorth after the footesteppes of the sheepe, and fede thy goates besyde
the

Ca.iiii the shepherdes tentes. Unto the hoste of Pharaos charettes haue I compared thee, O my loue. Thy chekes and thy necke is beautyfull as the Turtles, and hanged with spanges, and goodly Jewelles. A neckbande of golde will we make thee with siluer buttons. When the kyng sitteth at the table, he shall smell my Nardus. A bondell of Myrre is my loue vnto me, he wyll lye betwyxte my D brestes. A cluster of Camphere in the Ca.iiii.a vineyardes of Engaddy is my loue vnto me. O howe fayre arte thou (my loue) Oh howe fayre art thou: thou hast doues eyes. O howe fayre art thou (my beloued) how well fauoured art thou? Our bed is decke with floures, the sylinges of oure house are of Cedre tree, and oure rofte wyntres of Cipresse.

The. ii. Chapter.

I Am the Lilly of the field, and Rose of the valleys: as the Rose among the thornes, so is my loue among the daughters.
Like as the apple tree a-mōg the trees of ye wood, so is my beloued among the sonnes. My delite is to sitte vnder his shadowe, for his fruite is swete vnto my throte. He bryngeth me into his wineseller, hys bā-ner spred ouer me, is loue. Set about me Ca.viii.b cuppes of wyne, comforte me with ap-pels: for I am sicke of loue. His left hand Can.iii.b lieth vnder my head, & his right hād shal B embrace me. I charge you (O ye daughters of Jerusalem) by the Roes and Hin-des of the fielde, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her, tyll she bee contente her selfe. Me thinke I heare the voyce of my beloued: loe, there commeth he hop-pyng vpon the mountaynes, and leaping ouer the litle hilles. My beloued is like a Roe or a yong harte. Behold, he standeth behind our wal, he looketh in at the windowe and pepeth through the grate. My beloued aunswered and sayde vnto me: O stande vp my loue, my beautifull, and go to thine owne: for loe, the winter is now past, the raine is away & gone. The C floures are come vp in the field, the time of the birdes singing is come, and ye voice of the turtle Doue is heard in our lande.
The figgetree bringeth forth her figges, and the vines beare blossomes, and haue a good smell. O stande vp then, and come E my loue, my beautiful, and come. (I say) O my doue) out of the caues of the rockes, out of the hoales of the walle: O let me se thy countenaunce and heare thy voice, for swete is thy voyce and faire is thy face.
Get vs the foxes, yea the litle foxes ye hurt the vynes, for our vines beare blossomes.
My loue is mine and I am his, which fe- Can.vi.a deth among the Roses, vntyll the daye breake and till the shadowes be gone.
Come again (O my beloued) and be lyke as a Roe, or a yong Hart vpon the wyde mountaines.

The. iii. Chapter.

By ye nighte in my bedde I A soughte hym whome my soule loueth: yea diligēt-lye soughte I him, but I found him not. I wil get vp (thought I) and go about the citie, in ye wayes in all the streates will I seke hym whom my soule loueth: but when I sought hym I found him not. The watchmē also that goe about the city found me. Saw ye not him whom my soule loueth? So when I was a litle past them, I found him whom B my soule loueth. I haue gotten hold vpon him, and will not let him goe, vntill I bring him into my mothers house, and in to her chāber that bare me. I charge you, Can. ii.b O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by ye Roes, and Hindes of the field, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her till she be content her selfe. Who is this that commeth vp out of the wildernesse, like vapours of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrre, fran-kensence, and all maner spices of ye Apo-ticary. Beholde, aboute Salomons bedstede, there stand threscore valiaunt men of the most mighty in Israel. They holde sweards euery one, and ar expert in war.
Euery man also hath his sweard vpō his thigh, bicause of feare in the night. Kyng Salomon had made himselfe a palace of the wood of Libanus, the pillers are of siluer, the couering of gold, the seat of pur ple, the ground is pleasantly paued with loue, for the daughters of Jerusalem. Go forth, O ye daughters of Sion, & beholde king Salomon in the crowne wherwith his mother crowned him in the daye of his mariage, and in the daie of the glad-nesse of his heart.

The. iiii. Chapter.

A O How fayre art thou my loue, Can.iii.c how faire art thou: thou hast Doues eyes beside yͭ which Can.vi.c lyeth hyd within. Thy heery lockes are lyke the wool of a flocke of Goates that be shorne vppon mount Gilead. Thy teeth are lyke sheepe of the same bignesse, which went vp from the washyng place: where euery one beareth two twinnes, and not one vnfruytefull among them. Thy lippes are lyke a Rose colored rybande, thy wordes are louelye, thy chekes are lyke a piece of a Pomegranate within thine heares. Thy necke is lyke the tower of Dauid buyl-ded with costlye stones, lying out on the sydes, wherupon ther hang a thousand Can.viii.d shieldes: yea, al the weapons of yͤ Giantes.
Thy two brestes are lyke two twinnes of young Roes, which fede among Roses.
O that I myght go to the mountayne of B Myrre, and to the hyll of Frankensence, tyll the day breake, and tyl the shadowes be past away. Thou arte all fayre, (O my loue) and no spot is there in thee. Come to me from Libanus (O my spouse) come to me from Libanus, looke from the topp of Amana, from yͤ top of Sanir, and Hermon, from the Lions dennes, and from yͤ mountayns of the Leopardes. Thou hast with loue bewitched my harte, O my sister, my spouse, thou hast bewitched myne harte with one of thyne eyes, and wͭ one chayne of thy necke. O how fayre are thy brestes, my sister, my spouse: Thy brestes are more pleasaunt than wyne, and the smell of thyne oyntmentes passeth al spices. Thy lippes, O my spouse, drop as the hony combe: yea, milke and honye is vnder thy tong, and the smell of thy garmentes, is like the smell of Libanus. A gardeyn wel locked is my sister, my spouse a gardein well locked, and a sealed well.
C The fruites that are planted in thee, are lyke a verye paradise of Pomegranates, with swete fruits: as Saphore, Nardus, & Saffron, Calamus, and Sinamon, with all swete smelling trees: Myrre, Aloes, & al the best spices: a wel of gardeins, a well of liuing waters, which run downe from Libanus. Up thou Northwind, com thou Southwind, and blow vpon my gardein yͭ the smel therof may be caried on euerye side: yea, yͭ my beloued may come into his gardein and eate of the swete fruits that grow therin.

The .v. Chapter.

I Am come into my garden, O my sister, my spouse. I haue gathered my Myrre with my spice.
I haue eaten hony with my hony combe, I haue dronk my wyne with my mylke. Eate, O ye frendes, drynke and be mery, O ye beloued. As I am a slepe and my hearte is wakyng, I heare the voyce of my beloued, when he knocketh.
Open me, O my syster, my Loue, my Doue, my Dearlyng for my head is ful of dewe, and the lockes of my heare are full of the nyght droppes. I haue putte of my coate, howe can I doe it on agayne?
I haue washed my feete, howe shall I B fyle them agayne? My loue putte in his hande at the hoale, and my harte was moued within me. I stode vp to open vnto my beloued, and my handes dropped with Myrre, and the Myrre ran downe my fyngers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone his way. Now when he spake, my hart was gone. I sought hym, but I could not fynde hym. I cryed vpon hym, neuer-thelesse he gaue me no aunswere. So the watchmen that went about yͤ citie, found me: smote me, and wounded me: yea, they that kept the walles, tooke away my kerchief fro me.
I charge you therefore O ye daugh- C ters of Jerusalem, yf ye fynd my beloued that ye tell hym howe that I am sicke for loue. What maner of man is thy loue aboue other louers, O thou fayrest among women? Or what can thy loue doe more than other louers, that thou chargest vs so straytlye? As for my loue he is whyte, and red coloured, a goodly person among tenne thousande, his head is as the most fyne golde, the lockes of his heare are bushed, and blacke as a crowe. His eyes are as the eyes of Doues by the water brookes, as thoughe they were washed with milke, and are sette lyke pearles in golde. His cheekes are lyke a gardein bedde, wherein the Apoticaryes plante all maner of swete thynges. His lippes are lyke Roses that drop swete smelling D Myrre. His handes are lyke golde ringes, hauyng enclosed the precious stone of Tharsis. His bodye is as the pure I-uorye, deckt ouer with Saphires: hys legges are as the pyllers of Marble, set vppon sockettes of golde. His face is as Libanus, and as the bewty of the Cedre dry trees. The woordes of his mouth are swete, yea, he is altogether louely. Suche one is my loue, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, suche one is my loue.

The.vi. Chapter.

A Whither is thy loue gone then (O thou fayrest among women) whither is thy loue departed? We wil seke him with thee. My loue is gone down into his gardein, vnto the swete smelling beddes, that he maye refreshe hymself in the gardeyn and gather Roses. My loue is myne and I am his, whiche fedeth among the Roses. Thou arte beautifull, O my loue, as is the place of Thirza, B thou arte fayre as Jerusalem, fearefull as an army of men, with theyr banners.
Tourne away thine eyes fro me, for they haue sette me on fyer. Thy heary lockes Ca.iiii.c are like a flocke of Goates, shorne vppon the mounte of Gilead. Thy teeth are like a flocke of shorne sheepe, whiche goe oute of the washyng place, where euerye one beareth twinnes, and not one vnfruitefull among them. Thy cheekes are like a piece of a Pomegranate, within thy lokes. There are .lx. Queenes .lxxx. wy-ues & Damoselles without noumber: one is my Doue, one is my dearlyng. She is the onelye beloued of her mother, and deare vnto her that bare her. When the daughters sawe her, they sayde she was Ca.iiii.c blessed: yea, the Queenes and Wyues C praysed her. What is she this that looketh foorth as the mornyng, fayre as the Moone, cleare as the Sunne, and fearefull as an armye of men with theyr banners. I went downe into the nutte gardeyn, to see what grewe by the brokes, & to looke if the vineyard florished, or yf the Pomegranates wer shot foorth. I knew D not that my soule had made me the Chariot of the people that be vnder tribute.
Turne againe, turne agayn, O thou perfect one, turne again, turne agayne, and we will looke vpon thee. What wyl ye see in the Sulamite? She is like men of war singyng in a company.

The.vii. Chapter.

A How pleasaunt are thy treadynges with thy shooes, thou Princes daughter? Thy thighes are like a faire Jewell, whiche is wrought by a cunning workemaister. Thy nauel is like a round goblet, whiche is neuer without drinke. Thy wombe is like a heape of wheat that is set about with Roses. Thy two brestes are like two twines of yong Roes. Thy necke is as it were a tower of Cā.iiii.a Iuory: thyne eyes also are lyke the water pooles that are in Hesebon, beside the port of Bathrabim: thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus, whiche looketh toward Damascus. That head that standeth vppon B thee, is like Charmell: and the hear of thy head is lyke Purple, and like a kyng goyng foorth with his garde about hym. O how fair and louely art thou my dearling in pleasures? Thy stature is lyke a palme tree, and thy breastes like the grapes. I sayd: I wyll clime vp into the Palme tree C and take hold of his hye braunches. Thy brestes also shalbe as the vine clusters, the smel of thy nostrelles like as the smell of apples, and thy iawes lyke the best wine.
Which goeth streight vnto my beloued, & brusteth foorth by the lippes of the auncient elders. There will I tourne me vnto my loue, and he shall turne hym vnto me.
O come on my loue, we will go forth into the field, and take our lodgyng in the vil- D lages. In the mornyng will we go se the vineyard: we wil see if the vine be sprong forth, if the grapes be growen, and yf the Pomegranates be shot out. There will I geue thee my brestes: the Mandragoras geue their sweete smell, and besyde oure doores are al maner of pleasaunt fruites bothe newe and olde: which I haue kept for thee, O my beloued.

The.viii. Chapter.

O That I might finde thee A withoute and kisse thee, whom I loue as my brother which suckt my mothers brestes: and that thou shalte not bee despised, I wyll leade thee and bring thee into my mothers house: that thou mightest teach me, and that I myghte geue thee drynke of spiced wine, and of the swete sap of my Can.ii.a Pomegranates. His lefte hande shalbe B vnder my head, and his ryght hand shal embrace me. I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her, tyl she be con-tente her selfe. What is she this that commeth vp from the wyldernesse, and leaneth vppon her loue? I waked the vp among the appel trees, where thy mother conceiued thee, where thy mother (I say) brought brought thee into the worlde. O sette me as a seale vpon thyne heart, and as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is mightye as the death, and gelousy as the hell. Her coales are of fyer, and a very flame of the C lorde: so that many waters are not able to quenche loue, neyther may the streams drowne it. Yea, if a man woulde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shoulde count it nothyng. Oure sister is but yong and hath no breastes, what shal we do for our sister, when she shall be spoken for? If she be a wall, we shall builde a siluer bulwarke thereupon: if she be an open doore, we shall fasten her with borders of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my brestes lyke towers, then was I as one yͤ hath found D fauour in his syght. Salomon hath a vineyard at Baal Hamon, and this vine-yarde delinered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the fruite therof should geue him a thousande peces of siluer. My vine-yarde is in my sighte: thou (O Salomon) must haue a thousande, and the kepers two hundred with the fruite. Thou that dwellest in the gardeins, O let me heare thy voice, that my companions may her-ken to the same. O gette thee awaye my loue, and be as a Roe, or a yong hart vpon the swete smellyng mountaynes.

¶ The ende of the Ballet of Ballettes of Salomon, called in Latin, Cantica Cā-ticorum.

The Booke of the Prophete Esaye.

The first Chapter.

Esaye prophecieth that the anger of God shal come vpon Jerusalem, bicause of their sinnes.

The vision of Esay yͤ sonne A of Amos, whiche he saw vpon Juda, and Jerusalem: in the dayes of Uzia and Joathan, Ahaz and Jehezikiah kings of Juda. Heare, O heauen, and hearken O earth. For the Lorde hath spoken. I haue nourished and broughte vp chyldren, but they haue done wyckedlye against me. The Oxe hath knowen hys owner, and the Asse his maysters cribbe: B but Israell hath receyued no knowlege, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for this synnefull nation, a people of greate iniquitie: a frowarde generation, vnnaturall children. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holye one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone backward. Wherby should ye be plaged any more? For ye are euer fallyng awaye.
The whole head is sicke and the heart is heauy. From the sole of the foote vnto the hed, there is no whole part in all your body, but all are woundes, botches, sores, & strypes whiche can neyther bee helped, bound vp, mollified, nor eased with anye C oyntment. Your land lyeth wast, your cities are burnt vp, your enemies deuoure your lande, and ye must be fayn to stande, and looke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemies in a battayle. More-ouer, the daughter of Sion is lefte alone, like a cotage in a vineyarde, like a lodge in a gardein of cucumbers, lyke a besye-ged citie. And excepte the Lorde of Hostes had had left vs a fewe aliue:we shoulde haue ben as Sodoma,and like vnto Gomorra Heare the worde of the Lorde,ye Lordes of Sodoma,and hearken vnto the lawe of our god,thou people of Gomorra. Why offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me:I am full of the burnt offeringes of Weathers, and of the fatnesse of fed beastes. I haue D no pleasure in the bloude of Bullockes, Lambes and Goates. When ye appeare before me, who requireth you to to tread within my porches? Offer me no moe ob= lations,for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thig vnto me. I maye not away with your new Moones,youre Sabbothes,and solemne dayes. Youre fastinges are also in vaine. I hate youre newe holy dayes and feastings,euen fro my very heart. They make me werye, I cannot abide them. When you holde out your handes,I wyll turne mine eyes from you. And though ye make many praiers, yet wyll I heare nothyng at all,seynge E youre handes are full of bloude. Wash you,make you cleane,putte awaye youre euill thoughtes out of my sight,ceasse frõ doyng of euill. Learne to do right,apply your selues to equitie,deliuer the oppres= sed, helpe the fatherlesse to his righte,let the widdowes complainte come beefore you. Now go to(saieth the Lorde)lette vs talke together. Though your synnes bee as red as Scarlet,they shall be as white as snow. And though they wer like Pur= ple,they shall be as white as wolle. If ye be louing and obedient,ye shall enioye ẏ best thing that groweth in the land. But if ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shall be deuoured with the sweardes, for thus the Lorde hath promised with his owne mouthe. How happeneth it then that the F righteous citie(which was full of equity) is become vnfaithfull as a whore:Ryght= teousnesse dwelt in it,but nowe murthe= rers. The siluer is tourned to drosse, and thy wyne mixte with water. Thy Prin= ces are wicked, & companions of theues: They loue giftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they help him not to his right,neither wil thei let the widdowes causes come before thẽ.

Therefore saith the lorde God of hostes, the mightye one of Israell: Ah,I muste ease me of mine enemies,and auenge me of mine aduersaries. I shal lay my hande vpon thee,and burne out thy drosse from the finest and purest,and put oute all thy tyne,and set thy iudges againe as they were sometime, and thy Senatours as they were from the beginning. Thẽ shalt thou bee called the righteous Citye, the faithfull citie. Sion shalbe redemed with equitie,and they shall turne againe vnto her in righteousnesse. For the transgres= sors and vngodly, and such as are becom vnfaithful vnto the lord,must altogether be vtterly destroyed. And excepte ye be a= shamed of the Oke trees wherin ye haue so delited, and of the gardeyns that ye haue chosen,ye shall be as an Oke whose leaues are fallen away:and as a gardein that hath no moistnesse. And as for ẏ glo= ry of these thinges,it shalbe turned to dry straw,and he that made them to a spark.
And thei shal both burne together,so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The.ii.Chapter.

Of the commyng and death of Christ,and of the callyng of the heathen.

THis is the worde that was opened A vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz v= pon Iuda and Ierusalem. It wyll be also in the laste daye,that the hyll where the house of the Lorde is builded, shal be the chiefe among hilles,and exal= ted aboue all little hylles. And all na= tions shall preace vnto him,and the mul= titude of people shall goe, speakyng thus one to another:vp,let vs goe to the hill of the Lorde,and to the house of the God of Iacob:that he may shew vs his way,and Par.xx ii that we may walk in his pathes. For the Mic.iiii. law shal come out of Sion,and the word of the Lorde from Ierusalem, and shall geue sentence among the heathen, and shal reforme the multitude of people:they shall break their sweardes also into mat= tocks,and their speares to make sythes. B And one people shal not lift vp a weapon against another, neither shal they learne to fight from thencefoorth. Come ye (O house of Iacob)let vs walke in the lyght of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Iacob, bicause they goe farre beyonde theyr fathers in Sor= ceries(whom they haue as ẏ Philistines had)and in straunge children they think themselues to haue inough. Their lãd is ful of siluer and gold,neither is there any ende of their treasure:Their lande is al= so full of horses, and no ende is there of their charets. Their lande also is full of vayne Gods,and before the work of their own handes haue they bowed thẽselues,
yea,

yea euen before the thyng that their own fingers haue made: There kneeleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so that thou canste not bryng him C away from thence. And therefore gette thee into some rocke, and hyde thee in the grounde for feare of the Lorde, and for the glorye of his maiestye: Which casteth downe the hygh lookes of presumptuous persones, and bryngeth lowe the pride of manne, and the Lorde onely shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of Hostes shall goe ouer all pryde and presumption, vpon all them that exalte themselues and shall bring them all downe, vppon all high and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the Okes of Basan, vpon all high hilles and vppon all stout mountaynes, vpon al costly towers, and vpon all strong walles, vpon all shippes of the Sea, and vpon euery thing that is glorious and pleasaunt to loke v-D pon. And it shall bryng downe the pryde of man, and lay mannes presumpteous-nesse full lowe, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victory in that daye. But the Idols shall vtterly be rooted out. Men shall crepe into hoales of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lord, and for the glory of his maiesty: what tyme as he shall wake hym vp to condemne ẏ earth.
Then shall man cast away his goodes of siluer, and his goodes of golde, (which he neuerthelesse had made to honour them) vnto Moles and Battes. And they shall crepe into the caues and rockes, and into the cliftes of hard stones, for feare of god, and for the glory of his maiesty, when he riseth to condemne the earth. Feare not ye then any manne, whose breathe is in his nostrels. For what is he of reputatiõ.

The .iii. Chapter.

He prophecieth that at the commyng of Christ all strength and power shalbe put foorth of Iury.

A For loe, the Lorde god of hostes doth take away from Ie-rusalem and Iuda, al possessions and power, al meate & drink, ẏ captain, & the souldior, the iudge and the prophete, the wise & the aged man, the Prince of fifty yere old & the honorable: the Senators & men of vnderstandinge, the maisters of craftes, and orators. And I shall geue them children to be theyr Princes, and babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shall be pilled and polled, and one shal euer bee doing violence and wrong to another. The boy shal presume against the Elder, and the vile persone, agaynste the Honorable. Yea, one shall take a frende of his owne kinred by the bosome, & saye: thou hast clothyng, thou shalt be our hed, B for thou mayst kepe vs from this fall and peryll. Then shall he sweare and saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreouer, there is nether meat nor clothing in mi house, make me no ruler of the people. For Ierusalem and Iuda must decaye, bycause that both their wordes and counsayles ar against the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of hys maiesty vnto anger. The chaunging of their countenaunce bewrayeth them, yea they declare their owne synnes thẽselues as the Sodomites, and hyde them not.
Wo be vnto theyr soules, for they haue rewarded euill vnto themselues. Byd the righteous do well for they shall enioy the fruites of their studies. But wo bee to the vngodlye and vnrighteous, for they shall be rewarded after their workes. Chyldren are extortioners of my people, and women haue rule of them. O my people, the leaders deceyue thee, and depraue the C way of thy footesteppes. The lord is here to commen of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgement of the people. The lorde shall come foorth to reason with the Senators and Princes of his people. It is ye that haue burnt vp my vineyarde, the poore is in your houses. Wherefore doe ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the poore, saith the lorde God of hostes.
Moreouer, thus sayeth the lorde: Seyng the daughters of Syon are become so proude, and come in with stretched oute neckes, and with vaine wanton eyes: se-ing they come in tripping so nicely with their fete: Therefore shall the lorde shaue the heades of the daughters of Syon, & shall discouer theyr shame. In that daye shall the lorde take awaye the gorgeous- D nesse of their apparel, & spanges, cheines, partlets & collers, bracelets, and hooues, ẏ goodly floured, wyde and broydred ray-ment, brooches, and headbandes, ringes and garlandes, holyday clothes and vales kerchiefes and pinnes, glasses and cypresses, bonets and taches.

And in stede of good smel, there shalbe stinke among them. And for their girdels there shall be loose bandes. And for well set heere, there shal be baldnesse. In stede of a stomacher, a sackclothe, and for theyr beuty witherednes, and sunne burning.
Your husbandes and mightye men shall perish perish with the sweard in battaill. At that tyme shall their gates mourne and complaine, and they shall sit as desolate folke vpon the earth.

The.iiii.Chapter.

For want of men, seuen wemen desire to haue one man.

A Then shal seuē wiues take hold of one man, and say, we wil lay al our meate and clothyng together in common, onely that we may be called thy wiues, & that thys shameful reprofe may be taken from vs. After that tyme shall the braūch of the Lord be beautifull and mightie, & the fruite of the earth shalbe fayre & pleasant, for those Israelites that shal spryng therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Sion, and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely al such as are written amōg the liuing at Jerusalem: what tyme as ye Lord shal washe away the filthinesse of ye daughters of Syon, and purge the bloud out from Jerusalem with ye wynde of hys B iudgement, and with fier. Moreouer vpō all the dwellinges of the hil of Sion, and vpon their whole congregation, shall the Lord prouide a cloude and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night for all their glory shalbe preserued. And Jerusalem shalbe a tabernacle for a shadowe, bicause of heate in the daye tyme: C a place and refuge where a mā may kepe hym from wether and rayne.

The.v.Chapter.

Of Christ and his vineyarde, with an execratiō of couetousnesse and dronkennesse.

A Now will I singe my beloued frende a songe of my frendes, bicause of his vineyarde. My beloued frende hath a vine-yarde in a very fruitful plenteous grounde. Thys he hedged, thys he walled rounde about, and planted it wt goodly grapes. In ye middest of it builded he a towre, and made a winepresse therin And afterwarde when he loked yt it shuld bryng hym grapes: it brought forth thornes. Now therfore (O ye citezins of Jerusalem & whole Juda:) Judge I pray you betwixt me and my vineyard. What more B could haue bene done for it, that I haue not done? Wherefore then hath it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it? Well, nowe I shall tell you how I will do with my vineyarde. I will take the hedge from it, that it may perish, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll lay it waste that it shal neyther be digged nor cut, but beare thornes and bryers: I wyl also forbyd the cloudes that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vineyarde of the Lorde of hostes: it is the house of Israell, and whole Juda his faire planting. Of these he loked for equity, but see ther is wronge: for righteousnes, loe, it is but miserye.
Wo vnto them that ioyne one house to C another, and bring one lande so nigh vnto another, that the pore can get no more grounde, and that ye may dwel vpon the earth alone. These thinges are in the eares of the Lorde of hostes: shal not many greater and more gorgeous houses be so wast, that no man shall dwell in theme?
And.x. akers of vines shall geue but a quarte, and.xxx. bushels of sede shall geue but an Epha. Wo be vnto them that ryse vp early to followe dronkennesse, and to them that continue so vntill nyghte, and tyll they be set on fire with wine. In those companyes are harpes and lutes, tabretes, and pipes, and wine. But they regard not the worke of the Lorde, and consider D not the operation of hys handes. Therefore commeth my folke also into captiuity bicause they haue no vnderstandinge.
Their glory is famished with hūger, and their pryde is marred for thirst. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth mar-ueylous wyde: that their pryde, boasting, and wealth, with such as reioyce therein, may discende into it. Thus hath man a fall, & is brought low, & the high loke of ye proude shalbe layd downe. But the Lord of hostes shalbe exalted in iudgemente, God that is holy, is praysed in righteous-nesse: then shal the shepe eate in order, and the riche mennes landes that were layed wast, shal straungers deuoure. Wo be vnto them that draw wickednes vnto them with cordes of vanitie: and sinne, as it wer with a cart rope. Which vse to speake on thys maner: let hym make haste nowe and go forth with his work that we may see it. Let the counsayll of the holy one of Israell come, and draw nie, that we maye know it. Woe be vnto them that call euill good, and good euill, which make darke- E nesse light, and light darkenes, that make sowre swete, and swete sowre. Wo be vnto them that at wise in their own sight and thinke themselues to haue vnderstāding.

Wo be vnto them that are stronge to sup out wine, and expert men to set vp dronkennes. These geue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iust cause of the righteous. Therfore like as fire licketh vp ŷ straw, & as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr roote shalbe as corruption: & their blossom shall vanishe away like dust: for they haue cast away the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, and blasphemed the worde of the holy maker of Israell. Therefore is the wrath of the Lorde kindled also against his people, & he shaketh his hand at thē: yea, he hath smitten so that the hilles did tremble. And their carcases did lie in the F open stretes like mier. And in al thys the wrathe of God hath not ceassed, but hys hande is stretched out still. And he shall geue a tokē vnto a strange people, & call vnto thē in a farre countrey: and behold, they shal come hastely with spede. There shall not be one faynte nor feble amonge thē, no not a sluggish nor slippery persō.
Ther shal not one of them put of the girdle from his loines, nor lowse the latchet of hys shoe. Hys arowes are sharpe, and al hys bones bent. Hys horse hoofes are like flint, and his cart wheles like a stormy wynde, Hys cry is as it were of a lion, and he roareth lyke lions whelpes. They shall roare, and hantch vp the praye, & no man shal recouer it, or get it from them.
In that daye they shalbe so fearce vppon them as the sea. And if we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it shalbe al darknesse and sorow. If we loke toward heauē, behold, it shalbe darke.

The. vi. Chapter.

Esay saw the glory of the Lord, and was sent to prophecy the desolation of Iury.

A IN the same yere ŷ king Oziah dyed, I saw the Lord sitting vpon a high & glorious seate, and hys trayn filled ŷ temple. And about hym stode Seraphins, wherof euery one had. vi. winges. With twain ech couered his face with twain, hys fete, and with twain did he flye. They cryed also eche one to another on thys maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hostes. The whole world is ful of hys glory. Yea the geastes & dorechekes, moued at his crying, and ŷ house was ful B of smoke. Then I sayd: O wo is me, for I am lost: in asmuch as I am a man of vncleane lips, and dwel among people that hath vncleane lippes also: for mine eyes haue sene ŷ kyng & Lord of hostes. Then flew one of ŷ Seraphins vnto me hauīg a hoate cole in hys hande, whiche he had taken from ŷ aultar with the tonges, and touched my mouth and sayd: lo, thys hath touched thy lips, and thyne vnrighteousnesse is taken away, and thy sinne forge- C uē. Also, I heard ŷ voyce of the Lord saying on thys maner: Whō shal I send, and who wil be our messanger? Then I sayd: here am I, sende me. And he sayd: go, and Mat. xiii.
tell thys people: ye shal heare in dede, but b. ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall plainly Mar. iiii. see and not perceiue. Hardē ŷ hart of this b. people, stop their eares, & shut their eyes, Luk. viii.
that they see not wt their eyes, heare not b.
with their eares, & vnderstande not with Actes, their hartes, & cōuert, & be healed. Then xxviii. spake I: lord, how long? he answered: vn- Iohn. xii.
til ŷ cities be vtterly wasted wout inhabi- f. tors & the houses wout men, til ŷ land be Rom. xi. also desolate, & lye vnbuilded. For ŷ Lord shal take ŷ men farre away, so ŷ the land shal lye wast a long season, yet in it shall succede ten kynges, & ŷ lande shal return and be layed wast. And as the Terebinte tree & oke in winter cast their leaues, and yet haue their sap in them: so shal the holy sede continue in their substaunce.

The. vii. Chapter.

The Sirians moue battail against Ierusalem.
A virgine shal beare a childe.

IT hapned in ŷ tyme of Ahaz A the sōn of Iothā, which was the sōn of Uziah king of Iu-da: ŷ Razin ŷ kyng of Siria, iiii. Re. and Pechah ŷ sōn of Romeli- xvi. ah, kyng of Israel, wēt vp towarde Ieru- ii. Paral.
salē to be siege it: but Razin was not able xxviii. to win it. Now whē ŷ house of Dauid (ŷ is Ahaz) heard word therof, that Syria, and Ephraim were confederate together, his hart quaked (yea and the hartes also of hys people) like as whē a tree in ŷ fieldes is moued with the wynde. Thē sayd God vnto Esay: goe mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Iasub) at the head of ŷ ouer poole, in ŷ fotepath by the fullers ground and say vnto hym: take hede to thy selfe, and be stil: but feare not, neyther be faynt harted for these two tayles: ŷ is for these two smoking firebrandes, the wrath and furiousnesse of Razin ŷ Syrian, and Ro-melies sonn: bicause that the king of Si-ria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly conspired against thee, saying: B we will go vp againste Iuda, vexe them, and

and bring them vnder vs, and set a king there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus sayth the Lord God therto. It shal not so go forth: neither come so to passe: for the head citie of the Sirians is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after .lxv. yere, shal Ephraim be nomore a people. And the chiefe citie of Ephraim is Samaria, but ye hed of Samaria is Ro-melies sōne. If ye beleue not, it commeth of this: ye ye are vnfaithful to God. More-ouer God spake once againe vnto Ahaz, saying, require a tokē of ye Lord thy God: whether it be towarde the depth beneth, or towarde the heighth aboue. Then sayd, Ahaz: I will require none, neyther wil I tempt the Lord. The Lord answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Da-C uid: is it not ynough for you ye ye be greuous vnto mē, but ye must greue my god also: And therfore the Lord shal geue you a token: Beholde, a virgin shall conceiue and beare a sonne, and (thou his mother) shalt cal his name Emanuel. Butter and hony shall he eate, that he may know to refuse the euil, and chose the good. For or euer the childe come to knowlege, to eschue the euill, and chose the good: the lād (that thou so abhorrest) shalbe desolate of both her kynges. The Lord also shall sende a tyme vpon thee, vpon thy people, and vpō thy fathers house (such as neuer came since the tyme that Ephraim depar ted from Iuda) thorow the kyng of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shall the Lord whistle for the flyes that are aboute D the water of Egipt, and for the bees in ye Assirians lande. These shall come & shall lyghte all in the desolate valleyes, in the holes of stones, vpō all thorny and bushy places. At the same tyme shal the Lorde shaue the heere of the head, and the feete, and the bearde cleane of, with the rasor, that he shall hier beyonde ye water namely, with the king of the Assirians. At the-same tyme shall a man liue with a cowe and two shepe. Then bicause of the aboudance of milk, he shal make butter & eate it. So that euery one which remaineth in the lande, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme al vineyards (though ther be a thousand vines in one, and wer sold for a thousād siluerlinges) shalbe turned to bryares & thornes. Lyke as they shal come into ye lande with arrowes and bowes, so shall al the lande become bryares and thornes. And as for al hilles that ar hewen down, there shall not come vppon them any feare of bryars and thornes.
But the cattell shalbe driuen thither, and the shepe shal fede there.

The .viii. Chapter.

The deliuerance of the lande by Emanuel. The stone of offence, at which many shal stumble.

Moreouer, the Lord sayd vnto A me: take thee a great leafe, & wryte in it, as men do with a pen: make hasty spede to rob, and hast to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faithfull witnesses to recorde. Vriah the Priest & Zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that I wente vnto the Prophetesse that had conceiued and borne a sonne.

Then sayd the Lorde to me: geue hym thys name: a spedy robber, an hasty spoy-ler. For why or euer the childe shall haue knowlege to cry father, and mother: shall the riches of Damascus and the substāce of Samaria be taken away by ye spoyler, B before the king of the Assiriās. The Lord spake also vnto me, saying: forsomuch as thys people refuseth the stil renning water of Silo, and put their delite in Razin and Romelies sonne: Beholde the Lorde shall bryng mightie and great floudes of water vpon them: namely, the king of the Assirians with al hys power. Which shall clime vp vpon all hys floudes and runne ouer all their bankes. And shal breake in vpon Iuda, flowing and encreasing in power till he get hym by the neck. He shal fyll also the widenesse of thy lande, wyth hys brode wynges, O Emanuell. Breake down (O ye people of Assur) and ye shalbe broken down: harken to al ye of farr coūtries. Muster you, and ye shalbe broken down: prepare you to battail, and you C shalbe torne in peces: take your counsell together, yet must your counsell come to nought: go in hande withall, yet shall it not prosper, for God is with vs. For the Lord spake thus to me in the power of hys hande, and warned me, saying vnto me, that I should not walke in the waye of thys people. He sayd moreouer, rounde with none of them whosoeuer say, yonder people are bounde together: feare them not, neyther be afrayd of them, but sanctifie the lord of hostes, let him be your feare and dread. For he shalbe the holy place to flye to, and stone to stumble at, the rocke to fall vppon, a snare and net to both the houses of Israell, and the inhabitors of Ierusalem. And many shall stumble, fall, and be broken vpon hym: yea, they shalbe

D snared and takẽ. Now lay the witnesses together, and seale the law with my disci ples. Thus will I wayte vpon the Lorde that hath turned hys face from ẏ house of Jacob, and I wil loke for hym. But lo, as for me and the children which the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a tokẽ and a wõder in Israell, for the Lord of hostes sake which dwelleth vpon ẏ hill of Sion. And if they say vnto you: aske counsayle at the Sothsaiers, Witches, charmers, and cõ-iurers, then make them thys answere: Is there a people any wher, that asketh not counsel at hys God? * Should men run vnto the dead for ẏ liuing? If any man Lu.xxiiii. b. want light, let hym loke vpon ẏ law, and the testimonie, whither they speake not after thys meaning. If he do not thys, he stumbleth and suffreth hunger. And if he suffer hunger he is out of pacience, and blasphemeth his king and hys God. Thẽ loketh he vpward, and downward to the earth: and beholde, there is trouble and darknes, vexation is rounde about him, and the cloude of error. And out of suche aduersitie shal he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past, it hath ben wel sene, that the lande of Zabulon, and the lande of Nepthaly (wher through the sea way geeth ouer Jordan into the land of Galile) was at the first in litle trouble: but afterward sore vexed.

The.ix.Chapter.

He prophecieth of Christes natiuitie and dominion.

A The people that walke in darknesse haue sene a great lyght. As for thẽ that dwell in the lande of the shadow of death, vpon them hath the lyght shined. Thou hast multiplied the people Osa.cix.c and not increased their ioy. They reioyce before thee, euen as men make mery in haruest: and as men that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthen, the staffe of hys shoulder, and the rodde of hys oppressor, as in ẏ dayes of Madian. And truly euery bataile that the warrior accomplisheth, is done wyth B confused noyse, and defiling their garmẽtes with bloud. But thys battaile shalbe with burning, and consuming of fire. For vnto vs a childe is borne, and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Upon hys shoulder doth the kingdom ly, and he is called with his own name, wonderful: The geuer of cõ-saile, the mighty God, the euerlasting father, the Prince of peace: he shal make no end to encrease ẏ kingdome & peace, and shal sit vpon the seate of Dauid, & in hys kyngdom to set vp thesame, and to stablish it with equitie and righteousnesse, from henceforth for euermore. Thys shal the gelousy of the Lord of hostes brynge to passe. The lord sent a word into Jacob C thesame is come into Israell. And al the people of Ephraim shal know, and they ẏ dwel in Samaria, that cã say with pride and hye stomackes, on thys maner. The tyle work is fallẽ down, but we will build it with squared stones. The mulbery tim ber is broken, but we shal set it vp againe with Cedre. Neuerthelesse, the Lord shall prepare Razin the enemy against them, and so order their aduersaries, that the Sirians shal lay holde vpon them before and the Philistines behinde: and so deuoure Israell with open mouth. After all thys is not the wrath of the Lord ceased, but yet is hys hand stretched out stil. For the people turneth not vnto him ẏ chasti-seth them, neyther do they seke the Lord of hostes. Therfore hath the Lord roted out of Israell both head and taile, braũch and twigge, in one day. By ẏ head is vnderstande the Senatoure and honorable man, and by the tayle the Prophete that preached lyes: for all they which enforme the people ẏ they be in a right case, suche be disceiuers. Such as men thynke also to be perfect among these, are but cast a-wayes. Therfore shal the Lord haue no pleasure in their younge men, neither fa- D uor their fatherlesse and widowes. For they are altogether hipocrites and wyc-ked, and all their mouthes speake folly.
After all thys is not the Lordes wrath ceased: but yet hys hande is stretched out still. For vngodlinesse burneth, as a fyre in the briers and thornes. And as it wer out of a fire in a wood, or a redde bush, so ascendeth the smoke of their pryde. For bicause of the wrath of the Lord of hostes is the land ful of darknes, and the people be consumed, as it were with fier: no man doth spare hys brother, but he robbeth on the ryght hãd, and doth famish, he eateth on the left hand, and he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shal eate the fleshe of hys own arme. Manasses, shal eate Eph-raim, and Ephraim Manasses: and they both shal eate Juda. After al thys is not
the

the Lordes wrath ceased, but yet is hys hand stretched out stil.

The.x.Chapter.

He threatneth the oppressoures of the pore, and prophecieth against Senacherib.

A WO be vnto them ẏ make vnrighteous lawes, and deuise things which be so hard for to kepe, whertho row ẏ pore are oppressed on euery syde and the in-nocẽtes of my people robbed of iudgemẽt: ẏ widowes may be their pray, and ẏ they may rob the fatherlesse.
What wil ye do in time of the visitacion, & when destruction shall come from farre?
To whom wil ye run for help? and to whõ wil ye geue your honor, that he may kepe it? ẏ when I withdraw my hand, ye come not amõg the prisoners, or lye amõg the dead. After all thys doth not ẏ wrath of ẏ Lord cease, but yet is hys hande stretched out still. Wo be also vnto Assur, which is a staffe of my wrath, in whose hande is the B rod of my punishmẽt. I shal sende hym among those hipocritish people, amõg the people ẏ haue deserued my dissfauoure, shal I sende hym, ẏ he may vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, & treade them downe, lyke the myre in the strete. Howbeit, hys meaning is not so, neyther thynketh hys hart on thys fashion. But he imagineth only, how he may rote out & destroy much people for he saith: are not my Princes al kynges? Is not Calno as easy to wyn as Charchamis? Is it harder to cõquere Hamath than Arphad? Or is it lighter to o-uercome Damascus, than Samaria? As who say: I wer able to win the kyngdom of the Idolaters and their Gods: but not Jerusalem, & Samaria. Shal I not doe C vnto Jerusalẽ & their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and their idols? Wherfore the lord sayth: Assone as I haue perfourmed my whole work vpõ the hill of Sion and Jerusalẽ, then wil I visit ẏ noble & stout hart of ẏ kyng of Assiria, wyth hys proude lokes. For he standeth thus in his own cõceit: thys do I through ẏ power of myne own hande, & through my wisdom For I am wyse: I am he that remoue the landes of ẏ people: I rob their treasures, and (lyke one of ẏ worthies) I driue them from their hie seates. My hand hath foũd out the strength of the people, as it wer a nest. And like as egges that wer laid here and there, are gathered together: so do I gather all countries. And ther is no man D that dare be so bold, as to touch a fether: that dare open hys mouth, or once whisper. Shall the axe boast it selfe against hym that heweth therewith? or doth the saw make any bragging against hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as if the rod did exalt it selfe against him that beareth it: or as though the staffe shoulde magnifie it selfe, as who say, it were no wood. Therfore shal the Lord of hostes send hym among hys fatlyngs, leanesse, & burne vp hys glory, as it were with a fire But the light of Israell shall be the fyre, and hys Sãctuary shalbe the flame, and it shall kyndle and burne vp hys thornes & bryers in one day: yea, all ẏ glory of hys woods and fieldes shalbe consumed with body & soule. And they shalbe as an host E of men, whose standerd bearer fayleth.
The trees also of the field which remaine shalbe of such a number, ẏ a child may tel them: after that day shal the remnaunt of Israell and such as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke no more comfort at hym that smote them, but in faythfulnes and truth shall they trust vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israell. The remnaunte, euen ẏ posteritie of Jacob, shal cõuert vnto God ẏ mighty one. For though thy people (O Israell) be as ẏ sande of ẏ sea, yet shall ẏ remnaunt of them cõuert in hym. F Perfit is the iudgemẽt of hym ẏ floweth in righteousnesse, and therfore ẏ Lord of hostes shall perfitly fulfill the thing that he hath determined in the middes of the whole world. Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God of hostes: thou my people, that dwellest in Siõ, be not afrayd, for ẏ king of the Assirians. He shal smyte thee wyth a rod, & shall wag hys staffe at thee, as the Egiptians did somtyme. But sone after shall my wrath and mine indignation be fulfilled in ẏ destruction of them. Moreo-uer, the Lorde of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the slaughter of Madiã vpõ ẏ rock of Oreb. And he G shall lift vp hys rod ouer ẏ sea, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egiptians. Then shall hys burthen be taken from thy shoulders and hys yoke from thy necke: yea the same yoke shalbe corrupt for very fatnesse. He shal come to Aiath, & go through towarde Migron: at Michmas shal he lay vp his harnesse, & go ouer ẏ forde. Gibea shall be their resting place: Ramath shall be a-stayd: Gibea Saul shal flye away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daugh ter Gallim) shalbe hard vnto Lais, and to Anothoth, which also shalbe in trouble.

Madmena shal tremble for feare, but the citezins of Gabin are manly, yet shall he remaine at Nob ẏ day. After that shall he lift vp his hand against the mount of the daughter of Sion, the hill of Jerusalem.
But see the Lord God of hostes shal take away the proude from thence with feare.
He shal hew down the proude, and fel the hye mynded. The bushes also of ẏ wood shall he rote out with yron, and Libanus shal haue a mightie fall.

The.xi.Chapter.

He prophecieth of the natiuitie of Christ, and of his people: of the remnaunt of Israell, and of the faith of the heathen or Gentiles.

A And there shal come a rodde forth of ẏ kinred of Isai, and a blossome shall florish out of his rote. The spirit of ẏ Lord shall light vpon him: ẏ spirite of wisdom and vnderstanding, ẏ spirit of counsell and strength, the spirit of knowlege and of the feare of ẏ Lord: and shall make him feruent in the feare of god. For he shall not geue sentence after the thing that shalbe brought before his eyes, neyther reproue a matter at the first hearing but with righteousnesse shal he iudge the pore, and with holinesse shall he reforme B the simple of the world. He shal smite the world with the rod of hys mouth, and w the breth of his mouth shal he slaye ẏ vngodly. Righteousnesse shalbe ẏ girdle of his loines: truth and faythfulnesse, ẏ girding of his raines. The wolfe shall dwell with ẏ lambe: & ẏ Leopard shal lye down by ẏ goate. Bullockes, lions, and cattell shall kepe company together, so ẏ a litle childe shall rule them. The kow and the beare shall fede together, & their young ones shall lye together. The liō shall eate strawe like the oxe or the kow. The childe C while he sucketh shal haue a desire to the serpentes nest, & when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into ẏ cockatrice den.
No mā shall do euill vnto another, no mā shall destroy another, in all the hill of my holinesse. For ẏ earth shalbe ful of ẏ know lege of ẏ Lord, euen as ẏ sea floweth ouer with water. And in ẏ day shall ẏ gentiles enquire after ẏ rote of Jesse which shalbe set vp for a tokē vnto the people, and his dwelling shalbe glorious. At ẏ same time shall ẏ Lord take in hande againe, to cōquere ẏ remnāt of his people (which shal-be left aliue) from ẏ Assirians, Egiptians Arabians, Morians, Elamites, Calders, Antiochians: and from ẏ Ilandes of ẏ sea And he shal set vp a tokē among ẏ gentiles, and gather together ẏ dispersed of Iraell: yea, and the outcastes of Juda from the.iiii.corners of the world. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemies of Juda shalbe cleane roted out. Ephraim shall beare none euill will to Juda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both to- D gether shall flye vpon ẏ shoulders of the Philistines towarde the west, and spoile them together ẏ dwell towarde the east.
The Idumites and the Moabites shall let their handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them. The Lord also shall cleaue ẏ tonges of ẏ Egiptiās sea, and with a mightie winde shall he lyft vp hys hande ouer Nilus, and shal smite his vii.streames, and make men go ouer dry shod. And thus shall there be a way for his people that remaineth, from the Assi-rians: like as it hapned to the Israelites what tyme they departed out of the land of Egipt.

The.xii.Chapter.

The song of the churche for the obtayning of ẏ victory and ouercomming of the world.

So ẏ then thou shalt say: O A Lord I will thanke thee, for thou wast displeased at me: but refraine thou from thy wrath, and comfort me. Be-holde, God is my saluation in whom I will trust, and not be afrayd. For ẏ Lorde God is my strength and my song, he also is become my saluation. Therfore w ioye shall ye draw water out of the welles of ẏ Sauiour, and then shal ye say: geue thākes vnto the Lord, call vpō his name, de- B clare hys counsailes among the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O syng prayses vnto ẏ Lord, for he hath done great thinges, as it is knowen in all ẏ world. Cry out, and sing thou that dwellest in Sion: for great is ẏ holy one of Israell in the middest of the. sea.

The.xiii.Chapter.

He prophecieth the destruction of Babilon: the captiuitie and the commyng againe of the people.

This

A This is the heauy burthen of Babilon, which Esay ẏ sonne of Amos did see.
Lift vp ẏ banner vpō the hie hil, cal vnto thē, holde vp your hand, ẏ the princes may go in at ẏ dore. I haue sent for my deputies & my giauntes (sayth ẏ Lord) which shal execute wrath.
I wil call for such as triumph in my glory. There is a noise of a multitude in the mountaines, like as of a great people: a rushing as though ẏ kingdomes of ẏ nations came together. (And ẏ Lord of hostes mustereth his army to battaile. They come out of a farre coūtrey, from ẏ ende of heauen: euen ẏ Lord himself wᵗ the ministers of hys wrath, to destroye the whole lande. Mourne ye, for the day of the Lord is at hande, and shall come as a destroyer from the almightie. Therfore shal al han-des be letten down, & al mennes heartes shalt melt away, they shal stande in feare B carefulnesse and sorow shall come vppon them, and they shall haue paine, as a woman that trauaileth with childe. One shalbe abashed of another, and their faces shall burne lyke the flame of fier. Behold, the day of the Lord shal come, terribly, ful of indignation, furoure, & wrath to make the lande waste, & to rote out the sinners therof. For the starres and planets of hea uen shal not geue their lighte: the sunne shalbe darkned in the rising, & the moone shal not shine with hys lyght. And I will punish ẏ wickednesse of ẏ world, and the synnes of ẏ vngodly, sayth ẏ Lord. The hye stomackes of ẏ proude will I take away and wyl lay down ẏ boasting of Ty-rantes I wil make a man dearer thā fine C golde & a man to be more worth than a golden wedge of Ophyr. Therfore I will shake ẏ heauen, and ẏ earth shall remoue out of her place: in ẏ wrath of ẏ lord of hostes, and in ẏ day of hys fearefull indig-natiō. And Babilō shalbe as an hūted or chaced Doe, & as a shepe ẏ no mā taketh vp. Euery mā shal turne to his own people, & flye ech one into his own lād. Whoso is founde alone shalbe shot thorowe.
And whoso gather together shalbe destroyed with the sweard. Their children shalbe slaine before their eyes, their hou-Psalme. ses spoyled, and their wiues rauished. For cxxxvii.a lo, I shall bryng vp the Medes against them, which shall not regarde siluer, nor be desirous of gold. With bowes shal they destroy the yong children and haue no pi-tie vpon wemen with childe and their fa- D ces shall not spare the children. And Ba-bilon (that glory of kingdomes and beau-tie of the Caldees honor) shalbe destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodom & Gomorra. It shall not endure for euer, neyther shal there be any more dwelling ther from generation to generatiō. The Ara-bians shall pitch no tentes there, neyther Ge.xix.a shall the shepeheardes make their foldes there any more: but fearefull wyld beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbe full of great owles. Estriches shall dwell ther and Apes shal daunce there: wilde cattes shall cry in the palaces, and dragōs shal-be in the pleasant houses. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hand, and her dayes shal not be prolonged.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

The returne of the people from captiuitie. The prosperitie of the people of God, and affliction of their enemies. The pride of Babilon.

But the Lord wyll be mercy- A full vnto Iacob, and will yet chose Israell againe, and set them in their owne lande.
Straungers shal cleaue vnto them, and get them to the house of Ia-cob. The people shall take them and cary them home to their own lande. And make them to enherite the house of Israell in the land of the Lord, that they may be seruauntes and handmaydens of the Lorde. They shall take those prisoners B whose captiues they had bene afore, and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lord now shall bryng thee to rest frō the trauaile, feare, and hard bōdage, that thou waste laden withall: then shalt thou vse thys mockage vpon the king of Babilon, and say: How happeneth it that the oppressoure leaueth of. Is the golden tribute come to an ende: The lord hath broken the scepter of the vngodly, and ẏ rod of the Lordly. Which when he is wrothe smiteth the people with cōtinual strokes, and tirannously raigneth ouer the heathen, whom he persecuted without com- C passion. And therfore the whole world is now at rest, and quietnesse: and men syng for ioy. Yea, euen the Fyrre trees and Ceders of Libanus, reioyce at thy fal, saying Now that thou art layd down, ther come no mo vp to hew down vs. Hell also be-neth trembleth to mete thee at thy com-ming, and for thy sake hath raysed his dead, and all mightie men and Princes of the earth. Al kynges of the earth stand vp from their seates, that they may al an= swere, and speake vnto thee. Art thou be= come weake also as we? art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layed down into the pit, and so is the melody of thy instrumentes. Wormes be layed vnder thee, and wormes be thy co= D uering. How art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou faire morning childe? how hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde and art become weaker thã the people? For thou saydest in thyne hearte: I will climb vp into heauen, & exalt my throne aboue, beside the starres of God.

I will sit also vpon ye holy mount toward the North, I wil climb vp aboue the clou= des and wil be like the highest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought down to the depe of hell. They that seke thee shal narowly loke vpon thee, and thinke in themselues saying is thys the man that broughte al landes in feare and made the kingdoms afrayd? Is thys he that made the world in a maner waste, and layed the cities to the grounde, which let not hys pryso= ners go out? The kynges of the nations lye euery one in his own house with wor ship, and thou art cast out of ye graue like a filthy abhominable braunche: like as E dead mennes raiment ye are shot thorow with the sweard, and go down to the sto= nes of ye depe: as a dead corse that is tro= den vnder fete, and are not buried with them. Eue bicause that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generation of the wicked shalbe without honor for euer. Let there a way be sought to destroy their children, that be in their fathers wickednesse, that they come not vp againe to possesse the land, and fil the world full of enemies. I wil stande vp a= gainst them (sayth the lord of hostes) and rote out the name and remnaunt, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babilon (sayth the Lord) and will geue it to the Otters, and will make water puddels of it. And I wil swepe them out with ye besome of destruc= F tion, sayth the Lord of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an othe, saying: It shall come to passe as I haue determined and shall be fulfilled as I haue deuised.
So that Assiria shall I destroy in my lãd and vpon my mountaines will I treade him vnder fote. Where thorowe hys yoke shall come from them, and his burthen shalbe takẽ from their shoulder. This de= uise hath God taken thorowe the whole world: and this is his hande stretched out ouer all people. For if the Lord of hostes determine a thing, who is able to disanul it? And if he stretch forth his hande, who may holde it againe? The same yere that kyng Ahas dyed, God threatened on this G maner: reioyce not (thou whole palestina) bicause the rod of hym that beateth thee is broken, for out of the serpentes rote there shall come an adder, and the fruite shalbe a firy flying worme. But the firste borne of the poore shalbe fed, and the sim ple shall dwell in safetie. Thy roote also will I destroy with hunger, and it shall slay thy remnaunt. Mourne thou port, wepe thou citie, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art layed wast, for there shall come from the north a smoke ye not one alone may abide in his place. Who shall then answere the messengers of the Gentiles? For the Lord hath stablished Sion, and the poore of hys people that be therin, do put their trust in hym.

The.xv.Chapter.

A prophecie against Moab.

This is the heuy burthen vpõ A Moab Ar of Moab was de= stroyed and ouerthrowen in the night season. Kir also in Moab was destroied, and pe rished in the night. They went vp to the ydols house, euẽ to Dibon, to the hie pla= ces to wepe for Nebo, and Moab did mourne for Medba: all their heades wer balde, and all their beardes shauen. In their stretes are they girded about wyth sackecloth. In all the toppes of their hou= ses and strets, shalbe nothing but mour= B ning and weping. Hesbõ and Eleale shall cry, that their voyce shalbe hard vnto Ja= haz. The worthies also of Moab shall bleate out and cry for very sorow of their mindes: Wo shal my heart be for Moabs sake. They shall flye vnto the citie of Zo= ar, which is like a faire younge bullocke of.iii.yere olde, for they shall al go vp to Luith weping. Euen so by the way to= warde Horonaim they shal make lamen= tation for their vtter destruction. For the C waters of Nimrim shalbe dryed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is withered, the herbes destroyed, and the grene thinges gone. For the residue that he hath done.
they

they are fory. As for their substance, y enemies haue caried them to y brooke of the willowes. For y cry went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim, and vnto Beer Elim, was ther nothing but mourning, bicause the waters of Dimon were full of bloud: for I y Lord shal sende more D bloud vpon Dimon, and Lions vpon the remnant of the lande, and on them that are escaped from Moab.

The.xvi.Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

A Sende the Lord of y world a lambe from the rocke y lyeth towarde the desert, vnto the hill of y daughter Sion. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a trebling bird that is put out of haruest for they shal cary them vnto Arnō: gather your counsail, come together in iudgement, couer vs w your shadow in the midday, as the nyght doth hide the chaced, and bewray not thē B that are fled, let my persecuted people dwell among you. Moab, be thou their refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersary is brought to nought, the robber is vndone, the tirant is wasted out of the land. And in mercy shall the seate be prepared, and he shall sit vpon it in the truth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudging and seking iudgement, and making hast vnto righteousnesse. We haue heard of y pryde of Moab, he is very proude, presūpteous, arogant, and ful of indignation, and vain are hys lyes. Therfore shall Moab make lamentation bicause of the Moabites (that shalbe slaine) yea, they shall wayle altogether. Bicause of the foundatiōs of the citie that is made of bryck, shall ye cōplayne: euen ye lame people that are lefte only behynde.

For the vines of Hesbon are cut down: as for the vine of Sibna, the lordes of the C heathen haue broken down her principal braunches: they are come euen vnto Iazer they went on wādryng vnto the wildernesse.
Her goodly braūches wer throwē down as they went ouer y sea. Therfore wil I mourne for Iazer, and for the vine of Sibna. I wil poure my teares vpon thee O Hesbō and Eleale, for the cry of thine enemies is fallen vpon thy sommer fruites and vpon thy haruest. The mirth and there is taken away out of the plentifull fielde, and in the vineyardes, there shalbe no ioy nor gladnesse. The treader shall treade out no wyne in the D presses, the song of their mery there haue I layed down. Wherfore my bowels shall romble like an harpe, for Moabs sake, & myne inwarde partes, for the cities sake that is made of brycke. And it shall come to passe, that when it is seen that Moab shalbe made wery of hys hyl chappels, he shall come to hys temple to pray, but he shal not be able. So then, thys is the saying y the Lord hath spoken concerning Moab since that tyme. But now y Lorde hath spoken, saying: in three yeres, which shalbe as the yeares of an hired seruant, shall the glory of Moab be turned into confusion, thorowout all hys multitude, which is very great. And that whiche remaineth, shalbe very small and feble.

The.xvii.Chapter.

A prophecy against Damascus.

THys is y heauy burthen vpon A Damascus: beholde, Damascꝰ is takē away to be no more a citie, but shalbe an heape of brokē stones. The wast cities of Aroer shalbe foldes for cattell, whiche shall lye there, and there shalbe none to fray them away. Ephraim also shall no more be strong, and Damascus shall no more be a kingdome, and the remnant of Siria shalbe as the glory of the children of Israell, sayth the Lord of hostes. And in that day it shall come to passe that Iacob shalbe made very poore, and the fatnesse of hys flesh shall waxe leane. And he shalbe as one that gathereth vp corne in haruest, euen lyke hym whose arme reapeth the eares of corne. He shalbe also like hym that gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Rephaim. Some gathering in dede shall there be left in it, euen as in the shaking of an oliue tree, there remaine two or three beryes in the top of y vppermost bough, and .iiii. or .v. in y brode fruitfull braunches therof sayth the Lord god of Israell.

Then shall man turne againe to hys B maker, and hys eyes shall haue respect to the holy one of Israell. As for the aulters which are hys own handy worke, he shal not regarde them, and the thinges y hys fyngers haue made (as groues and ymages) those shal he not caste hys eye vnto.

In that day shall their strong cities be as the forsaken shrubbes and braunches, which they left bicause of the children of Israell: and the land shalbe desolate. Bicause thou hast forgotten God thy saluation, & hast not ben mindful of thy strong rock, therfore shalt thou set pleasant plātes, and shalt graffe the braunche of anothers mānes vine. In the day shalt thou make thy plant to grow, and early in the morning shalt thou make thy sede to florish. The haruest shalbe gone in the daye of inheritance, and ther shalbe sorow without hope of comfort.

C Woe shalbe to the multitude of muche people, which shall make a sounde like ȳ noise of the sea. And the violēce of the nations, which shal rage lyke the rushing in of many waters: euen like many waters shall ȳ people rage. God shal rebuke him, and he shall flye farre of. He shalbe chased away like as dry strawe vpon the mountaines before the winde: and like a thing that turneth before the storme. At euen, beholde, there is trouble: and or euer it be morning loe, he is gone. Thys is the portion of them that oppresse vs, and the lot of them that rob vs.

The .xviii. Chapter.

A prophecy against Egipt.

A O That land ȳ trusteth vnder ȳ shadow of winges, ȳ lande which is beyonde ȳ waters of Ethiopia. Sēding messangers by the sea, euen in vessels of reedes ouer the water. Get you hence (ye spedy messāgers) to a nation ȳ is scattered abrode, & robbed of that they had, a fearefull people from their beginning hitherto: a nation troden down by litle and litle, whose landes the flouds haue spoyled. All ye inhabitours of the world and indwellers of ȳ earth, loke vp when he setteth a token in ȳ mountaines and harken when he bloweth with the trompe. For so the Lord sayd vnto me: as for me, I will take my rest, and loke vpon the matter in my habitation, like a fayer
B heate after the raine, and lyke a cloude of dew in the heate of haruest.

For afore the haruest when ȳ braunch is growen, there shal come ripe fruite out of the floure: and he shal cut down the increase with sithes, and the braūches shal he take away w hokes. Thus shall they be left together vnto the foules of ȳ moūtaines, and to the beastes of the earth: for in sommer the birdes shal remaine vpon it and euery beast of the lande shalbe vpō it in the wynter. In that tyme shal there a present be brought vnto the lord of hostes, euē a people that is scatered abrode and robbed of that they had: ȳ same people which haue bene fearefull from their beginning hitherto, a nation trodē down by litle and litle, whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: to the place of the name of ȳ Lord of hostes, euen to the mount Sion.

The .xix. Chapter.

A prophecy against Egipt.

The heauy burthē of Egipt: I Beholde the Lord rideth vpon a swift cloude & shall come into Egipte: and the Idols of Egipt shall tremble at the presence of hym, and the heart of Egipt shall quake in the middest of her. And I wyll set the Egiptians one against another, so that one brother shall fyght against another, and one neighbour against another, citie against citie, and Realme against Realme. The mynde also of Egipt shal be cleane without counsell within it selfe, and the deuice that they take will I destroy, so that they shall seke counsell at Idols, and at sorcerers, at workers with spirites, & at southsayers. And the Egiptians wyll I geue ouer into the hande of a marueilous cruell Lord, and a mightie kyng shall haue dominion ouer them, sayth the Lord God of hostes: the waters of the sea shall fayle, and the ryuer shall decrease, and be dryed vp: the waters shalbe drawen out, the ryuers of Egipte shalbe emptied and dryed vp, the reedes & flagges shalbe cut down B The grasse in the ryuer and by the riuers banke, and all that groweth by the riuer shall wither away, and bee broughte to naught. The fishers also shall mourne, and all they that cast angle into the water, shall make lamentatiō: and they that lay forth their net beside the waters shalbe roted out. Moreouer, they that worke in flax and make fyne workes, shalbe cōfounded: and so shall they that weue open workes. For their open works shalbe euē destroyed: and al they that make pondes and stues for fysh shall come to naughte. But ye folish princes of Zoā ye wyse coūsailers of Pharao, whose wit is turned to folishnesse, howe saye ye vnto Pharao:

I am sonne of wise men, and of auncient kinges. Where are now the wisemen? Let them tell thee (if they can) what the Lord of hostes hath deuised vpon Egipt. The C Princes of Zoan are become foles, the Prynces of Noph ar disceaued, they haue disceaued Egipt, euen they ẏ were taken for the chiefe kinred therof. In ẏ middest of it hath the Lorde poured the spirite of wickednesse, and they haue disceaued Egipt in euery worke therof: euen as a droken man stackereth in his vomite. Neyther shall the head or tayle, the braunche or reede, be able to do any worke in Egipt.
In that day shall Egipt be lyke vnto we-men: it shalbe afrayd and stande in feare at the motion of the hande of the Lord of hostes, which he shaketh ouer it. And Egipt shalbe afrayd of the lande of Juda, so that euery one which maketh mention of it, shalbe afrayd thereat bicause of the counsel of the Lord of hostes which he de-uiseth for it. In that day shall .v. cities in the lande of Egipt speake the language of Canaan, and sweare by the lord of hostes, the citie of desolation, shalbe called one of them. In that day shall the aultare of the Lord be in the middes of the lande of Egipt, and thys title beside it: vnto the Lord. And it shall be a token and a wit-nesse vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egipt. For they shall cry vnto the Lord bicause of such as trouble them, and he shal sende them a Sauioure, and a great man to deliuer them. And the Lord shal-be knowen in Egipt and the Egiptians shall know the Lord in that day, and doe Sacrifice and oblation: yea, they shall vowe a vow vnto the Lord and perfourm it. The Lord also shall smite Egipt sore, & heale them againe: and they shalbe con-uerted vnto the Lord and he shalbe intre-ted of them, and shall heale them. In that D day shall there be a common way out of Egipt into Assyria, and Assiria shall come into Egipt: and Egipt into Assiria: so that the Egiptians and ẏ Assirians shal serue the Lord together. In that day shall the nation of Israell be ẏ thirde with Egipt and Assiria, and they shalbe blessed in the middes of the lande, which lande ẏ Lord of hostes hath blessed, saying: blessed is my people of Egipt: Assur also is ẏ worke of mine handes: and Israell is myne inheritance.

The .xx. Chapter.

Against Egipt and Ethiopia.

In the yere ẏ Tharthā came A vnto Asdod (when Sargon the kyng of Assiria had sent him) and had fought against Asdod, and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lord by the hande of Esay the sonne of Amos, saying: go and take of the sackcloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shoe from thy fote. And he did so, walking naked and bare fote. And the Lord sayd: lyke as my seruant Esay hath walked naked and bare fote for a signe & wonder thre yeares vpon Egipt, & Ethiopia: euen so shall ẏ kyng of Assiria take a way out of Egipt and out of Ethiopia, children and olde men, naked and bare fote, with their loynes vncouered, to the greate shame of Egipte. They shall be brought in feare also, and ashamed one of another: Ethiopia of Egipt, and Egipt of Ethiopia, considering what glory they B were in afore. And they that dwell in the same Ile, shall say in that day: beholde, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we flye for helpe, that we may be deliuered from the king of Assiria: And how shal we escape?

The .xxi. Chapter.

Against Babilon, Idumea, and Arabia.

The burthen of the waste A sea: Euen as the stormy wether that passeth thorowe at the none daye to com from the wildernes, from ẏ horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: let one disceatful offender come against another and one destroyer agaynste another. Up Elam, lay siege thou of Media, al their groning haue I layed downe. Therfore are my loynes filled with sorowe, heauinesse hath taken holde vppon me, as the panges of a woman that is trauailing. It made me stoupe when I heard it, and it vexed B me when I sawe it. My heart panted, fearefulnesse came vpō me. The nyght of my volupteousnesse, hath he turned against me into feare. While they garnished the table, the watchman loked. And whyle I was eating & drinking, it was sayde by ye captaines: take you to youre shylde. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: goe, and sette a watcheman to tell what he seeth. And he saw a cha-ret which two horsemen sat vppon, wyth the cariage of an asse, and the cariage

age of a camel. So he loked and toke diligent hede: and the Lyon cryed, Lord, I stande wayting all the whole day, & am appointed to kepe my watch euery night And behold, here commeth a charet of mē with two horsemē. And he answered, and sayd: Babilon is fallē, it is fallen, and al ÿ ymages of her gods hath he smittē down vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must threshe, & thou belongest to my corne C flore. Thys that I heard of ÿ Lord of hostes the God of Israel haue I shewed vnto you. The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watch man what hast thou espyed by nyght? Watch man what hast ÿ espied by night? The watchman sayd: the morning commeth, and so doth ÿ night. If ye wil ask me any questiō aske it returne and come againe. The burthen concerning Arabia: in the pleasant grounde of Arabia shall ye tary all night euē in the stretes of Dedanim. The inhabitours of ÿ land of Thema brought forth water to hym that was thirsty, they preuēted hym with their bread that was fled away. For bicause of sweardes are they become fugitiue, euen for the drawē sweard, and for the bent bow, and bicause of the greuousnes of war. For thus hath the Lord sayd vnto me: there is yet a yere according to the yeres of an hyred seruāt, and al the glory of Cedar shall fayle. And the number of them that shal escape from the bowes, shalbe minished by the mighty children of Cedar for so the Lord God of Israell hath spoken.

The .xxii. Chapter.

A prophecy against Ierusalem.

A THe burthen of the valley of vision, What hast thou to do here, ÿ thou climest vnto ÿ housetopps? Thou that art ful of occupying, thou seditious and proude citie: thy slaine men are neyther put to death wt sweard, nor dead in battaile. All thy captaines are fugitiue together, the archers haue taken thē prysoners. Al they that are founde in thee, ar in captiuitie together, bicause they fledd Lu. xix. d farr of. Therfore sayd I: let me alone, and Iere. ix. a. I wil make lamentation. Ye shall not be able to comfort me, bicause of the destruction of the daughter of my people. For thys is a day of trouble, of ruyne, and of destruction that the Lorde wyll bryng to passe in ÿ valley of vision breaking down B the citie, and crying vnto the moūtaines Elam bare the quiuer with a charet of fotemen and of horsemen, and the citie of Kir shewed the child open. Thy chief valley also was ful of charets and the horsemen set their faces directly towarde the gate. And in that day did the enemy take away the beauty of Iuda, and thē diddest thou loke towarde the armoure of ÿ house of the forest. Ye haue sene also the broken places of the citie of Dauid, how that they are many, and ye gathered together the waters of the lower poole. As for the houses of Ierusalem, ye haue numbred them, and the houses haue ye broken downe to make the wall strong. A pit also haue ye made betwene the two wals, for the waters of the old poole: and haue not regarded the maker therof, neyther had respect vnto hym that toke it in hande. And in C that day did the Lord God of hostes call mē vnto weping and mourning, to baldnesse, and girding about with sackcloth.
And behold, they haue ioy and gladnesse, slaying oxen and kylling shepe eating flesh and drinking wine. Let vs eate and i. Cor. xv. drynke, for to morow we shal dye. And it c.
came to the eares of the Lord of hostes: Sap. ii. a. thys iniquitie shall not be purged frō you tyl ye dye, sayth the Lord God of hostes.
Thus sayth the Lord God of hostes: goe, get thee vnto yonder treasurer: euen vnto Sebna, which is the ruler of the house What hast thou to do here? and whō hast Esay. xxxvi. c. thou here: that thou shouldest here hewe thee out a sepulchre, as it were one that heweth hym out a sepulchre on high, or that graueth an habitation for hymselfe in an hard rocke. Beholde, O thou man, the Lord shall cary thee away into capti-uitie, and shal surely couer thee with confusion. The Lord shall turne thee ouer D like a ball with hys handes, (& shal sende thee) into a farre coūtrey, there shalt thou dye, and there (in stede of the charettes of thy pompe) shall the house of thy Lorde haue confusion. I wyll dryue thee from thy place, and out of thy dwelling shal he ouerthrowe thee. And in that day shall I call my seruaunte Eliakim the sonne of Helkia. And with thy garmentes wil I clothe hym, and with thy girdle wyll I strength hym: thy power also wyl I committe into hys hande, and he shall be a father of suche as dwell in Ierusalem, and in the house of Iuda. And the Iob. xii. keye of the house of Dauid wyll I laye Apo. iii.
vpon

vpon hys shoulder, so yͭ he shall open and no man shall shut. He shal shut, & no man shall open. And I wyll fasten hym as a nayle in a sure place, and he shalbe yͤ glo-C rious seate of hys fathers house. More-ouer, all generations and posterities shal hang vpon hym all the glory of their fathers house, all vessels both great & smal, and al instrumentes of measure and musike. In that day (sayth yͤ Lord of hostes) shal the nayle that is fastned in the sure place, depart, be broken and fall: and the burthen that was vpon it, shalbe pluckte away: for so the Lord hath spoken.

The .xxiii. Chapter.

A prophecy against Tirus, and a promise that it shalbe restored againe.

A The burthen of Tyre: Mourne ye shippes of Tharsis, for there cometh such destruction, yͭ ye shall not haue an house to enter into: out of the lande of Citim haue they knowlege of this plage.
Be still ye that dwell in the yle: the mar-chauntes of Zidon, and such as passe ouer the sea, haue made thee plenteous. The corne that groweth by the great waters of Nilus, and the fruites of the riuer wer her vitailes, so that it became a common mart of the nations. Be ashamed thou Zidon, for the sea (euen the strēgth of yͤ sea,) hath spoken, saying: I haue not trauailed nor brought forth children, nor nourished vp yong mē or brought vp virgins. Whē tidinges commeth to the Egiptians, they shalbe sory for the rumoure that goeth of Tyre. Get you to Tharsis, mourn ye that B dwel in yͤ yle. Is not thys that glorious citie of yours, which hath ben of olde an-tiquitie? Her own fete shal cary her forth to be a soiourner into a far countrey. Who hath deuised thys against Tyre (that geueth garlandes vnto other cities) whose marchauntes are prynces: and whose captaynes are honorable in the world? Euen the Lord of hostes hath deuised thys, to put down the pryde of al such as be glorious, and to minish all them yͭ be proude vpon earth: get thee out of the lande vnto the daughter of Tharsis: seing thou hast no more strēgth. He that smote the king-domes together, holdeth out hys hand ouer the sea, euen the Lorde hymselfe hath geuen a commaundement against yͤ same C common place of marchaundise, that they shal vtterly destroy yͤ mighty therof. And he said: make no more thy boast (O virgin thou daughter Zidon) yͭ shalt be broughte down: vp, get, the ouer vnto Citim: wher neuerthelesse thou shalt haue no rest. Be-holde thys people come not of yͤ Caldees: but Assur made them strong with greate shippes. They set vp the strong hold ther-of, and destroyed hys places, & he brought it in decay. Mourne ye shippes of Tharsis for your strength is broughte downe.
And in that day shall Tyre be forgotten .lxx. yeares (according to the yeares of one kyng) and after the ende of the .lxx. yeares shal Tyre syng as doth an harlot. Take an harp, and go about the citie (thou harlot thou hast ben forgotten) make swete melody, sing mo songes that thou mayest be had in remembraunce. And after the ende of the .lxx. yeares shall the Lord visit D Tyre, & she shal conuert vnto her reward and shal commit fornication with all the kingdomes of the earth yͭ are in yͤ world.
Their occupying also and their rewarde shalbe holy vnto the Lord. Their gaynes shal not be layd vp nor kept in store, but it shalbe theirs that dwel before the Lorde: that they may eate ynough and haue clothing sufficient.

The .xxiiii. Chapter.

A prophecy of tribulation to come vpon yͤ world because of sinne.

BEhold, the Lord maketh A the earth waste and empty: he turneth it vpsyde down, & scatereth abrode the inhabitours thereof.
And yͤ Priest shalbe as yͤ people: and yͤ master as yͤ seruaunt, the maistres like the mayde, the seller lyke the byer. He that lendeth vpō vsury, lyke hym that boroweth vppon vsury: the creditoure as the dettor: the world shalbe cleane wasted and vtterlye spoyled, for so the Lord hath spoken. The earth is sory, and consumeth away: the world is feble and perisheth, the proude people of the earth are come to naughte. B The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabitours therof, which haue transgressed the lawes, chaunged the ordinaunce, broken the euerlasting coue-naunt. Therfore hath the curse consumed the earth, and they that dwell therin are fallē into trespasse. Wherfore the inhabitours of yͤ earth are perished wͭ drought, and fewe men are lefte behynde. The wyne

wyne fayleth, the vine hath no might:all they that haue ben mery of hart are come to mourning. The mirth of tabrets is layed down, ỷ noise of such as haue made mery, is ceased, the ioy of the Harpe is at an end. They shall drynke no more with mirth, strong drynk shalbe bitter to them that drynke it. The citie of vanitie is bro ken down, euery house is shut vp, that no man may come in. In the stretes is there C a crying bicause of wine, al chere is bani= shed away, the mirth of the world is gone in the citie is left desolation, and the gate is smitten with destruction. For in ỷ mid= des of the world, euen among the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shaking of Oliues: and as the grapes are when the wyne haruest is done: they shall lyfte vp their voyce, and make a mery noyse, and in magnifying of the Lord, shall they cry out of the west. Wherefore prayse ye the Lord in the valleyes, euẽ the name of the Lord God of Israel, in the yles of the sea.
From the vttermost part of ỷ earth haue we heard praises and mirth, bicause of the righteous. And I said: I know a thing in secret: I know a thyng in secret: wo is me the transgressoures haue offended: ỷ trã= gressoures haue greuously offẽded. Feare fulnesse, the pit, and the snare, are vppon D thee, O thou that dwellest on the earth.
It wil come to passe that whosoeuer sca= peth the fearefull noyse, shall fall into the pit. And he that commeth vp out of ỷ pit, shalbe taken with the snare. For the win= dowes from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth are moued. The earth is vtterly broken down, the earth hath a sore ruine, the earth quaketh exce= dingly. The earth shal rele to and fro, like a dronkarde, and shalbe remoued lyke a tent (of one nyght,) and the iniquitie ther of shalbe heauy vpon it. It shall fall and not ryse vp agayne. And in that day shall the Lord visit the host aboue ỷ is on hie, and the kynges of the world that are vpõ the earth. And thei shalbe gathered toge= Lu.xxi c. ther, as they that be in pryson: and they shalbe shut vp in warde and after many dayes shal they be visited. The mone shal be abashed, and the sunne ashamed, whẽ the Lord of hostes shal reigne in mounte Sion and in Jerusalem, with worship, & in the sight of such as shalbe of hys coun= sell.

The.xxv.Chapter.

A thankesgeuing to god for his workes.

Thou art the lord my god, I A will magnifie thee, I will geue thankes vnto thy name. For thou hast brought wonderful thin= ges to passe, according to thyne olde counsels truly and faythfully. Thou hast made of a citie an heape of stones and brought a strong Esa.xv. town into decay. The habitation of strã= b. gers hast thou made to be no city, neither shal it be builded any more. Therfore shal the mightie people geue glory vnto thee, the citie of the valiant heathen shal feare thee. For thou hast bene a strength vnto the poore and a succoure for the nedy in hys trouble: a refuge against euil wether a shadow against the heate. For the blast of raging men is lyke a storme ỷ casteth down a wal. Like as thou bringest heate down out of a dry place: so shalt thou sup= B presse the noyse of aliantes. The heate is in the shadow of the cloude, the branch of the mightie shalbe brought lowe. And in thys mountaine shall the Lord of hostes Luke. make vnto all people a feast of plenteous xiiii.a and delicate things, euen of most pleasãt and deintie dishes. And in thys mõutaine shal the Lord destroy the couering, that all people are wrapped in, and the han= ging that is spred vpõ all nations. As for death he hath destroyed it for euer. And Ose.xiii. the Lord God shall wype away teares frõ c. all faces, and the rebuke of hys people i.Corin. shall he take away out of all ỷ earth. For xv.a. so the Lord hath sayd. And in that daye it Apo.vii.c shall be sayd: loe, this is our god, we haue and.xxi.c wayted for him, and he shal saue vs. This is the Lord in whom we haue hoped, we C will be mery and reioyce in the saluation that commeth of hym. For in thys moun= tayne shall the hande of the Lorde ceasse, and Moab shalbe threshed vnder hym, euen as straw is threshed vpon ỷ groũd.
And he shall stretch out hys hande in the middes of thẽ, (as he that swimmeth ca= steth out his hands to swimme) and with the strength of hys handes shal he bryng down their pryde. The strong holde also and defence of thy walles, hath he ouer= throwen and cast down, and brought thẽ to the grounde, euen vnto dust.

not learned righteousnesse, but doth wic-

Lu.xxvi k. we wyll be mindfull only of thee and thy haue we bene in thy sighte O Lord.* We Ro.viii.d haue bene with childe and suffred paine, as though we had brought forth winde.

For there is no saluatiō in the earth, neither do the inhabiters of ẏ world submitt wt my body shal they rise againe. Awake ii.Cor.v. d.

cōming out of hys place, to visite the wickednesse of such as dwel vpon earth. The earth also shal disclose her own bloud, and Mich.i.a. shall nomore hide them that are slayne in her.

The.xxvii. Chapter.

A prophecy of the comming of Christ, & destruction of Idolatrie.

IN that day, ẏ Lord wyth his A sore great & mightie swearde i.Cor.i.b shal visite Leuiathan the fu- Apo.xii. gitiue serpent, euē Leuiathā that croked serpent, & he shall slay the dragon that is in the sea. In that day, see that ye sing of the cōgregation, whiche is the vineyarde that bryngeth forth the best wyne. Euen J the Lord do kepe it. In due seasōs shal J wa ter it: and least ẏ enemy do it any harme, J wyll both nighte and daye preserue it.
There is no displeasure in me, els (when the vineyarde bryngeth me forth bryers and thornes) J would goe through it by warre, & burne it vp together. Let it take holde of my strength, & it shalbe at one wt me, euē at one shal it be wt me. The dayes are comming that Jacob shall take rote Israel shalbe grene and florish, and the world shalbe fylled with fruite. Hath he smitten hym as sore as he did the other that smote hym? Or is he slayne wyth so sore a slaughter as they that slew him?
In measure doth he smite him, while B he sendeth vnto hym such thinges, wher-by he cōmeth to hys mynde againe. For in the day ẏ the east wynde bloweth sore, it taketh away the fruites. Thus therfore shall the iniquitie of Jacob be recōciled, & here is all ẏ fruite of the takyng away of hys synne, if he make all the stones of the aulters of Idols, as chalke stones, ẏ are beaten in sunder, that their groues and ymages

C ymages rise not vp againe. Eis shall the strong citie be desolate: and the habitatiō forsaken and left like a wildernesse. Ther shall the calfe fede, and there shall he lye, & eate vp the grasses therof. When ÿ braun-the wemē come, and set thē on fier. * For it is a people of no vnderstanding, & therfore he that made them shall not fauoure them, and he that created them shall geue them no grace. And in that day shal the Lord make a threshing from the middes of the riuer Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egipt: and ye childrē of Israel, shalbe gathered together one to an[illegible] In that day shal the great trompe[illegible]owen, so ÿ they which were lost in the lande of Assiria, and they that were banished into the land of Egipt, shal come and worship the Lord in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

The .xxviii. Chapter.

Against the pride of Ephraim, and against false Priestes and preachers.

A Wo be vnto thee crowne of pryde, euen * to ÿ dronkē people of Ephraim, whose that fadeth away vpon ÿ as be in wealth, and are Mat. xvi. f. ouerladē with wine. Beholde * there commeth a vehement and a sore day from the Lord, like an vnmeasurable haile and pe rilous tempest, euen like ÿ force of mightie and horrible waters, that violentlye beareth down al thinges. The crown of pride of the dronkē Ephraemites shalbe Esa. xl. a. troden vnder fote: * so that ÿ floure of his fairenesse and beauty, which is in ÿ head of the valleye of fatnesse, shall fade away as doth an vntimely ripe figg afore haruest. Which when a man spieth, he loketh vpon it, and while it is yet in hys hande, he eateth it vp. In that day shal ÿ Lord of hostes be ÿ crown of glory, and dyamond of beauty vnto ÿ residue of hys people. He B wil be also a spirit of pe[illegible]ct knowlege to him that sitteth in iudgement, & strength vnto them that turne away the battel to the gate of the enemies. But they ar out of ÿ way by reason of wine: yea, farre oute of ÿ way are they through strōg drink. *

Esa. iii. c. The Priest also and ÿ Prophet are gone astray by the meanes of stronge drynke, they are dronken with wine, they goe a-misse through strong drinke: they fayle in prophecying and stumble in iudgement.
For tables are so full of vomite and fil-thinesse, ÿ no place is cleane. Whom then shall such one teach knowlege: And whō shall he make to vnderstande the thyng that he heareth: For they are as ignorāt C as yonge children, that are taken frō the Esa. l. [illegible] iiii. a. milk, & ar wained. For they that be suche must haue after one lesson, another lessō, after one cōmaūdemēte, another cōmaūdemēt, after one rule, another rule, after one instructiō, another instructiō: there a litle & there a litle. For he ÿ speaketh vnto thys people, is euē as one that vseth rude nesse of speache, & a straunge language.
If any man say vnto them: lo, thys is the rest where with ye may ease hym that is wery, thys is the refreshing they will not I. Cor. xiiii. harken. Therfore, the worde of the Lorde (lesson vpon lesson, commaundemēt vpō commaundemēt, rule vpon rule, instruction vpon instructiō, there a litle and ther a litle) shalbe vnto them an occasiō of stū-bling, that they may go on, and fal back-warde, bee brused, tangled and snared.
Wherfore, heare ÿ worde of the Lorde, ye mockers, ye that haue rule of thys people which is at Jerusalem. Bicause ye haue D sayd: we haue made a couenant wt death, and with hel are we at agreemente. And though there goe forth a sore plague, it shal not come vnto vs. For we haue made falsehode oure refuge, and vnder vanitie are we hyd. Therfore thus sayth ÿ Lorde God: beholde, I lay in Sion for a foun-datiō a stone, euē a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation. Whoso be leueth let him not be to hasty. Judgemēt also wil I lay to ÿ rule, & righteousnesse to ÿ balāce, so ÿ the haile shal take away your vaine cōfidence as a brome, and the priuye place of your refuge shall ÿ waters rūn ouer. And thus the couenaunte that ye made with death, shall be disanulled: and your agreement that ye made wyth E hel, shal not stande. Yea whē ÿ sore plage goeth forth, ye shalbe troden down vnder it. From the tyme that it goeth forth, it shal take you awaye. For earelye in the morning euery daye: yea, bothe daye and night, shal it goe thorowe: & when ÿ noise therof is perceiued, it shall gendre vexation. For the bed is narow, and not large, and ÿ couering so small ÿ a man can not Esa. winde himself vnder it. * For ÿ Lord shal xxviii. [illegible] stande as in mount Parazim, and shalbe [illegible] wroth like as in the valley Gibeō: * that Josu. x. he may do hys worke, hys straūge worke, I. Par. xiiii. and bryng to passe hys acte, his straunge act.

ers. Now therefore see that ye be no mockers, lest your punischmente encrease, for I haue heard of the lorde of hostes, that there shall come a short ende vpõ ẏ whole earth. Heare ye then, and hearkẽ vnto my voyce, consyder & ponder my speach. Doth not the husbandman plow al the day, and openeth and breaketh the clottes of hys ground that he may sowe? when he hath made it playne will he not spread abrode ẏ fitches, and sowe comin, & cast in wheat by measure, and the appoynted barley & Rye in theyr place? God wyll instruct him to haue discretion, euen his god wil teach him. For fitches shall not be threashed w an harrow, neyther shal a cart whele bee brought through the comin: but ẏ fitches are beaten out with a staffe, and comine with a rod. But ẏ sede that bread is made of, is threshed, though he it be not alwaye a threshyng. And the carte whele muste be brought ouer it, least he grind it wyth his teeth. This also commeth of the Lorde of hostes, which worketh with wonderfull wisedome, and bringeth excellent works, to passe.

The.xxix. Chapter.

A Prophecye against Jerusalem, and against the vayne traditions of men.

Wo vnto thee, O Ariell Ariell, thou city ẏ *Dauid dwelt in.
Go on from yere to yere, & let ẏ lambes be slayne. I wyll laye siege vnto Ariel, so that there shalbe heauinesse and sorow in it, and it shalbe vnto me, euẽ as an alter of slaughter. I wyll besiege it rounde aboute, and fight against thee through a bulwarke & wyl reare vp ditches against thee. Thou shalt be brought downe, and shalt speake out of the ground, and thy speach shall go lowe out of the duste. Thy voyce also shall come out of the grounde, lyke the voyce of a witche: and thy talkyng shall whisper out of the dust. Moreouer the noyse of thy B straunge enemies shall be lyke thin dust, and the multitude of tyrauntes shalbe as dry straw that cannot tary: euen sodeinly and in hast shal theyr blast go. Thou shalt be visited of the Lorde of hostes with thõ-der, earthquake, and with great noyse: w storme and tempest and with the flame of a consuming fyer. And the multitude of all nations that fyght agaynst Ariel, shal be as a dreame sene by night: euẽ so shal all they be that make warre agaynste it, and strong holdes to ouercom it, and that laye any siege vnto it. In conclusyon it shall be euen as when an hungry manne dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh his soule is empty. Or as when a thirsty manne dreameth that he is drinkyng, and when he awaketh, he is yet faynt and his soule hath appetite. Euẽ so shall be the multitude of all nations that fyght agaynst Sion. Ponder these thyn- Mat.xv.b ges once in your myndes and wonder. C *Blinded ar they themselues and blynd guides of other. They are dronken, but not with wyne: they are vnstable, but not through strong drinke. For the lorde hath couered you with a slomberyng spirite, and hath closed your eyes. Youre Prophetes also and rulers that should see, thẽ hath he couered. And the vision of all the Prophetes is become vnto you, as the Esa.vi.b wordes of a Booke that is sealed vp, which men deliuer to one that is learned saying: Reade thou in it. And he sayeth, I cannot for it is sealed. And the booke is geuen vnto hym that is not learned, saying: Read thou in it, and he sayeth: I am not learned. Therfore thus hath the lord sayde. Forsomuche as this people when Mat.xv.a they be in trouble doe honour me w theyr mar.vii.a mouthe and with their lippes, but theyr harte is farre fro me: and ẏ feare whiche they haue vnto me, procedeth of a commaundement that is taughte of menne: D Therfore wyll I do maruels among this Abdi.i.c people, euen maruellous thynges (I say) i.Cor.i.c and a wonder. For the wysdome of theyr wise men shall perysh, and the vnderstandyng of theyr witty men shal hyde it selfe.
Woe vnto them that keepe secrete theyr Ec.xlvii. thoughtes, to hyde theyr counsel from the b Lord, & do theyr workes in darknes, say- Ec.xxiii.d ing: who seeth vs? and who knoweth vs? Ezec.ix.c Doutlesse, your destruction is (in my hã-des) in reputation as the Potters clay.
And doth the worke say of him that made it, he made not me? And doth an earthen vessell say of hym that fashioned it, he had no vnderstanding? Is it not hard at hand that Libanus shalbe turned into a lowe field, and that the lowe field shalbe taken as the wood? And in that daye shall deafe men heare the wordes of the booke, and ẏ eyes of the blinde shal see euen out of the E cloude & out of darknes. The meke spiry-ted also shall be mery in the Lord, and the poore among them that be lowly, shal re-ioyce in the holy one of Israel. For he that did violence, is brought to nought, and ẏ scornefull man is consumed, & they rooted out that were hasty so soone to vnryghte-ousnesse, making a man to sin in y woord, and that toke him in a snare, which repro ued them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the righteous to nought. Therfore thus saith the lord vnto the house of Jacob, euen thus sayth he Esa. xliii a. that redemed Abraham: *Jacob shal not now be confoūded, nor hys face pale. But when he seeth hys chyldren the worke of my hands in the middes of him, they shal sãctify my name, and prayse the holy lord of Jacob, and feare y god of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erronious spirit shal com to vnderstanding, and they that haue ben scornefull, shal learne doctrine.

The .xxx. Chapter.

Against them that forsake the counsell of God, & cleaue to the counsel of mẽ. The prophet also thret-neth the remnaunt of the people, that after the destruction of Jerusalem went into Egipt.

Es. viii, b Alas for those disobedient that they wyll take counsell without me. Alas, that they wyll take a secret ad-uice, and not out of my they sin vnto sin. Euen thei that walke to go downe into Egipt, and haue asked no question at my mouth, but seke strength in the might of Pharao, and truste in the shadow of Egipt. Therfore shal y strẽgth of Pharao be your confusion, and y trust in the shadow of Egipt your shame. For shall come the yong and olde lyon, the vi-vpon Camels theyr treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For vayne and nothyng worthe shall the helpe of the E-giptians be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Jerusalem. They shall haue strengthe ynough, if they wyll settle theyr mindes in quietnesse. *Now therfore go thy way & Esai. viii a. write this before thẽ in a table, and note it in a booke that it may finally remayne & be kept stil for euer. For this is an obstinate people: * a dissembling childrẽ, childrẽ that refuse to heare the law of y lord.

For they say vnto the seers, See not, C and to them that be cleare of iudgement: looke not out ryght thynges for vs: but speake faire woordes vnto vs, looke oute errours, gette you oute of this waye, depart oute of this pathe, and turne the Ho-lye one of Israell from vs. Wherefore, thus sayeth the Holye one of Israell: By-cause youre heartes ryse agaynste thys woorde, and bycause ye truste in wrong dealing, and peruerse iudgemẽt, and put your confidence therein. Therfore shal ye haue this mischiefe for youre destruction, and fall, lyke as an hye wall, that falleth, bicause of some ryfte or blast, whose breakyng commeth sodeinly. * And the hurt thereof is lyke an earthen vessell, whiche breaketh withoute helpe: so that in the burstyng of it, there is not found one sheuer to fetch fyer in, or to take water with al out of the pit. For thus sayeth the lorde God, euen the Holye one of Israell: In D repentance and in * rest shal ye be safe, in quietnesse and in sure confidence shal be your strengthe. But ye haue hadde no luste therto, for ye haue sayde: Noe, but we will escape through horses. (Therfore shall ye flye) and we wyll get vs vp vpon swift beastes. And therefore shall youre persecutors be swifter. * A thousand shal flye at the rebuke of one, and at the rebuke of fyue shall ye all flye, tyll ye be left as a shipmast vpon the toppe of a mountain, and as a beaken vpõ an hil. * Therfore dothe the Lorde cause you to wayte that he maye haue mercy vppon you: to the intente that he maye haue the preeminence, when he is gratious vnto you.
For the Lorde is the God of iudgemente.
Blessed are al they that hope in hym. If the people remayne in Sion, and at Jerusalem, thou shalt not be in heauinesse: but at the voyce of thy complaynte shal E he haue mercye vppon thee. And when he heareth it he shall geue thee an aunswere. And though the Lorde geue you the breade of trouble, and the water of aduersitye: thy rayne shall be no more so scante, but thine eyes shall see thy rayne.
Yea, and thyne eare shall heare the tal-kyng of hym that doeth speake behinde thee. * This is the waye, walke ye in it.
Tourne not asyde, neyther to the ryghte hande, nor to the lefte. Ye shall destroy also the coueryng of youre syluer ymages, and the deckyng of your golden Idols.

Euen as filthinesse, shall ye put them a= way. And thou shalt say vnto it: Get thee hence.
Then shall God geue rayne vnto thy sede: that thou shalte sowe the grounde withall: and bread of the encrease of the earth, whiche shalbe fatte, and very plen= teous. In that daye also, shall thy cattell be fedde in large pastures. The Oxē like= wyse and the young Asses that eate the grounde, shall eate cleane prouender, which is purged with the wynde and the fanne. Finally, vpon euery hye mountain f and hyll, shal there be riuers and stremes of waters, in the day of the great slaugh= ter, when the towers fall. Moreouer, the light of the Moone shalbe as the light of the Sunne, and the Sunne lyght shal be seuen folde, and haue as muche shyne as in seuen dayes besyde, when the Lorde byndeth vp the sore of hys people, and healeth the stroke of theyr wounde. Be= holde, the fame of the Lorde commeth from farre, and his presence is so hote, that no manne is able to abyde it. Hys lyppes are full of indignation, and hys tong is as a consuming fyer. His breathe is as a vehement floud of water that rea= cheth vp to the necke. That he may syft a= way ẏ heathē in ẏ sive of vanity. And his breath is as a bridle of error in ẏ chawes of the people. And ye shal syng lyke as in G the nyght, when the holy solemnitye be= gynneth. And ye shal haue gladnesse of harte, lyke as when one commeth wyth a Pype vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the moste myghtye one of Israell.
And the Lorde shall cause hys glorious voyce to be hearde, and shall declare his stretched out arme with a terrible coun= tenaunce, and with the flame of a consu= myng fyer, wyth noysome lyghtenyng, with a showre, and with haylestones.
For through the voyce of the Lorde shall Assur be destroyed, whiche smote other menne with the rodde. And it shall come Esay x.a to passe, that whyther soeuer he goeth, the rodde shall cleaue vnto hym, whiche the Lorde shall laye vpon hym: wyth ta= brets and harpes, and with great warre Parhe. shall he fyght agaynst his hoste. For the iiii.b. fier of pain is hidde from the begynnyng yea, euen for kinges is it prepared. Thys hath the Lorde sette in the deepe, & made it wyde: the burnyng whereof is fier, and muche wood. The breathe of the Lorde, which is a riuer of brimstone, doth kidle it.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

He curseth them that forsake God, and seeke for the helpe of menne.

Woe be vnto them that go A down into Egipt for help and trust in horses, & put theyr confidence in char= rets, bicause thei be many and in horsemen, bycause they bee lusty and strong.
But they regarde not the holy one of Is= raell, and they aske no question at ẏ lorde.
Whereas he neuerthelesse (beyng wysest of all) plageth the wycked, and yet go= eth not from his woorde, when he step= peth foorth, and taketh the victorye a= gaynste the housholde of the frowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euyll dooers.
Nowe the Egiptians are menne, and not God, and theyr horses fleshe and not B spirite. And assoone as the Lorde stret= cheth oute his hande, then shall the hel= per fall, and he that should haue bene hel= ped and they shall altogether be destroy= ed. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vn= Apo. v.a. to me: Like as the Lyon or Lyons whelp Ec.xlix.b roareth vpon the praye that he hath got= ten: and is not afrayde though the mul= titude of shepeheardes crye out vpon him neither abashed for all the heape of them.
So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe to fyght for mounte Syon, and defende his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flotter aboute theyr nestes, * so shal the Lord of hostes C kepe, saue, defende, and delyuer Jeru= De.xxxii salem. Therefore, O ye chyldren of Is= d. raell, turne agayne from that infidelitye wherin you drowned your selues. * For Esay.ii.c in that day euery man shall cast oute hys ydols of sylver, and his ydols of golde, whiche ye haue made with youre owne handes vnto youre synne. * Assur also Es.xxxvii shalbe slayne with the swearde, not with c. a mannes sweard, nether shal the sweard D of any manne deuoure hym. And he shall flie from the slaughter, and his seruantes shall bee discomfited in their heartes. He shall goe for feare to his strong holdes, and his Princes shal flie from his badge.
This hath the lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Sion, and his fyer in Jeru= salem.

The conditions of good rulers and officers.

A [B]Eholde a Kyng shal gouerne after the rule of ryghteousnes, & the princes shall rule accordyng to the balance of equitye.
And that man shalbe vnto men as a defence for þ wynde, and as a refuge for the tempest: lyke as a ryuer of water in a thirsty place and the shadowe of a great rock in a drye lande. The eyes of the seyng shall not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare shall take diligent hede. The heart of the vnwyse shall attayne to knowlege, and the vnperfect tong shall speake playnlye and distinctly. Then shall the foolish niggarde be no more called gentle, nor the churle liberall. But the nyggarde wyl be B nygardlye mynded, and hys hearte wyll worke euyll, and playe the Ipocryte, and ymagine abhominations agaynste God, to make the hungrye leane, and to withholde drynke from the thirstye.
These are the perillous weapons of the churlish, these be his shamefull counsels: that he maye beguyle the poore wyth deceytefull wordes: yea, euen there as he should geue sentence wyth the poore.
But the lyberall persone ymagineth ho-Pro. xvii b. nest thinges, and commeth vp for liberalitye vnto promotion. Up (ye ryche C and ydle women) hearken vnto my voice. ye carelesse cities, marke my wordes.
After yeares and dayes shall ye be brou-ghte in feare, O ye carelesse cityes. For haruest shall be oute, and the grape gatherying shall not come. O ye ryche ydle Cityes, ye that feare no peryll. Be abashed, you that liue in aboundaunce: tremble you that lyue carelesse: cast of youre raymente, make your selues bare, putte sacke clothe aboute you. For as the in-fantes wepe when theyr mothers teates are dryed, so shall you weepe for youre fayre fieldes and fruytefull vyneyardes.
My peoples fyeldes shall bryng thornes and thistles: and so shall it be euen in e-uerye house of voluptuousnesse, and in euerye Citye that reioyceth. The Palaces also shal be broken, and the greatly occupyed Cityes desolate. The towres D and bulwarkes shall become dennes for euermore: the pleasures of mules shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spirit be powred vpon vs from aboue. Then shal the wildernes be a fruit-full fielde, and the plenteous fielde shall be reckened for a wood. Then shal equity dwell in the desert, and ryghteousnesse in a fruitful land. * And the reward of righteousnesse shalbe peace, and her fruit rest and quietnesse for euer.
* And my people shal dwel in the Innes of peace, and in sure dwellynges, in safe places of comfort. And whē the hayle falleth, it shall fall in the wood, and the citie shalbe set lowe in the valley. O how happy shall ye be, when ye shall safelye sowe youre sede besyde all waters, and dryue thither the feete of youre oxen and asses.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

Threatning against the Assirians. A descrip-tiou of them that shall see the Lorde.

[W]Oe to thee that destroyeste, A when thou wast not destroyed: thou breakest the league, wheras none hath broken it with the: for when thou shalt leaue destroping, thou thy self shalt be destroyed. And when thou ceasest from brea king the league, thē shall they break it to thee. O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs: we haue put our whole trust in thee. Bee an arme to such early: and * our health, in þ tyme of trouble. At that confuse noyse, the people fled, and at thyne exaltyng, the Heathen wer scattered. And the spoiles shall be gathered (which shalbe yours) as are the gatheryng of Bruchus. And the multitude goyng to it shall bee as Lo-custes runnyng to and fro. The Lord is exalted for it is he that dwelleth on hie he hath filled Sion with iudgement and ryghteousnesse. And a sure stablishyng of thy tymes shalbe strength, health, wyse- B dome and knowledge, and the very feare of the Lorde, shalbe the treasure of it. Be-holde, the messangers shall crye without, and the embassadours of peace shal wepe bitterly. The stretes are wast, there walketh no manne therin. God hath broken the appoyntment, the cities are caste away, and men are nothing regarded, the desolate earth is in heauinesse. Libanus is shamed, and hewen downe. Saron is lyke a wyldernesse: Basan and Charmell are spoyled of theyr fruytes: and therefore sayeth the Lorde: I wyll vp now, nowe wyll I be aduaunced: nowe wyl I be exalted as a myghty God. * Ye shal conceyue stubble, and beare straw, and youre spirite shall be the fyer, that it may consume you, and the people shall bee burnt

burne lyke lyme, and as thornes burne that are hewen of and caste into the fier.
Now hearken to ye that are farre of, how I haue doone: and consyder my power, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are afrayde, a sodeyn fearefulnesse is come vppon the Ipocrytes.
What is he among vs, say they, that C shall dwell by the consumyng fier: which of vs maye abyde that euerlastyng heat: Psal.xv.a Psal.xxiiii.a * He that leadeth a Godlye lyfe saye I, touche no rewarde: whiche stoppeth hys eares, that he heare no counsell agaynst the innocente bloude: whiche holdeth downe hys eyes that he see none euyll.

He it is that shall dwell on hye, whose sauegarde shall bee in a bulwarke of rockes to hym shall be geuen meat, and hys waters shall not fayle. Thyne eyes shall see the kyng in his glorye: euen the kyng of the farre countreys shall they see of the receyuer of oure money: what of him that taxed our fayrest houses: There ceyued. There shall Sion bee seen the Lorde is oure lawe geuer. The Lorde is Sauiour. There are the cordes so layde abrode that they cannot be better. And therefore they haue not fyred their mast nor spred abrode theyr sayle. Then there is dealed great spoyle: yea, lame menne runne after the praye. There lyeth no manne that sayeth: I am sicke: but all euill is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The last destruction of the Sinagoge, in which the kingdom and priesthod of that people was translated to the church and congregation of Christ.

Come ye heathen & heare: A take hede ye people.
Hearken thou earth and all that is therein: thou round compasse and all that groweth therupon, for the Lorde is angry with all people, & his displeasure is kindled against all the multitude of them, he hath destroyed them, and delyuered them to the slaughter: So that theyr slain shall be caste out, and theyr bodies stynke, that euen the very hilles shall be wet with the bloud of them. All the starres of heauen shall waste, and the heauen shall folde together lyke a rolle, and all ye starres ther-of shal fall, lyke as the leaues fal from the vines and figgetrees. For my sweard shal be bathed in heauen, and shal immediatly come downe in iudgement vpon Idumea, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed for my vengeaunce. And ye Lordes B sweard shall be full of bloud, and be rusty with the fatnesse and bloud of Lambes & Goates, with the fatnesse of the kidneys of wethers. For the Lord shall kil a great offryng in Bosra, and a great slaughter in the lande of Idumea. There shall the Unicornes fall with them, and the bulles with the Giauntes, and theyr land shalbe throughly soked with bloude, and theyr grounde corrupt with fatnesse. Unto thee also, O Sion, shall come the daye of vengeaunce of God, and the yeare when thyne owne iudgementes shalbe recompenced.
And his floudes shall be turned to pytch, and his earth to brimstone: and therwith C shal the lande be kindled, so that it shall not be quenched day nor nighte: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye wast. And no manne shall goe throughe it for euer.
But Pellicanes, Storkes, great Oules, and Rauens, shall haue it in possession, and dwell therein.
For God shall spread out the lyne of desolation vppon it, and wey it wyth the stones of Emptinesse. When kynges are called vppon, there shall bee none, and all Princes shall be away. Thornes shal growe in theyr palaces, nettels, and thystels in their strong holdes, that the dragons maye haue theyr pleasure therein, and that thei may be a court for Estriches There shal straunge visours and monsterous beasts mete one another, & the wild kepe company together. There shall the Lamia lye, and haue her lodgyng. There shal the owle make her nest, buyld, be there at home, and bring forth his yong ones.

D There shall the kytes come together, eche one to his lyke. Seke through the Scripture of the Lord and read it. There shall none of these thynges be left out: there shall not one, nor such like faile. For what his mouth commaundeth, the same dothe his spirit gather together, or fulfilleth. He hath cast the lot for them, & to those beasts hath his handes deuided the lyne: therefore those shall possesse the inherytaunce, from generation to generation, & dwell therin for euer.

The.xxxv. Chapter.

Of the tyme and kingdome of Christ.

A But the desert and wyldernesse shal reioyce, ẏ wast grounde shall bee glad and florish as the lillye. She shal florishe pleasantly and be ioyful, and euer be geuing of thankes more and more. No vncleane person shal go through it: for the lord him self shal go with thẽ ẏ way, and the wayfarer, nor ignorant, shal not erre. There shalbe no Lion, & no rauishyng beast shal com therin, nor be there: but mẽ redemed shal go there free & safe. And the redemed of ẏ Lord I say, shal conuert and come to Sion with thankesgeuing. The.xxxvi. Chapter.

Jerusalem is besieged by Senacherib, in the tyme of king Hezekias.

In the.xiiii. yere of kyng A Hezekias came Senna- iiii.kin. cherib king of the Assiriãs xviii.c down, to lay siege vnto al ii.Par. the strong cities of Juda, xxxii.a to conquere them. And the Eclus. king of the Assirians sent xlviii.c Rabsaketh from Lachis toward Jerusalẽ against king Hezekias, with an exceding host: which set him by the conduit of the ouer poole in the way that goeth through the fullers land. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim Helkias sonne the presidẽt, & Sobna the Scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonn the secretary. And Rabsaketh sayd vnto them. Tel Hezekias ẏ the great king of Assiria sayth thus vnto him: what presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto: I sayd: Surely thou trustest in vayne wordes when counsayle and strength ar necessary to battayle: or els wherto trustest thou, that thou castest thy self of from me: loe, thou puttest thy trust in a broken B staffe of rede (I meane Egipt) whiche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth into his hand and shooteth hym through. Euen so is Pharao the kyng of Egipt, vnto al them that trust in hym. But if thou wouldest say to me: We trust in the lord our God. A goodly god in dede: whose hie places and alters Hezekia toke down, and commaũded Juda and Jerusalem to worship onely before the alter. Now therefore deliuer Hostages, that thou rebel no more agaĩst my lord the kyng of Assirians. And I wyl geue thee two thousande horses: If thou be able to set mẽ vpon them. How darest thou resist ẏ power of the smallest prince C that my Lorde hath: howe darest thou trust in the charrets and horsemen of Egipt? Moreouer: thinkest thou that I am come vp hyther to destroy this land without the Lordes wyl: The Lorde sayd vnto me: go vp into the lãd, that thou mayst destroye it. Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna and Joah, vnto Rabsaketh. Speake to vs thy seruants (we pray thee) in the Sirians language, for we vnderstande it well, well. And speake not to vs in the Jewes tong, least the folk heare whiche lyeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsaketh thynke ye that the kyng sent me to speak this onely vnto thy Lorde & thee: hath he not sent me vnto them also that lye vpon the wall: that they maye bee compelled to eat their own dung, and drink their own stale with you? And Rabsaketh stode stif, & cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes D tong, and sayd: now take heede, howe the great kyng of the Assirians geueth you warnyng. Thus sayth the kyng: Let not Hezekias deceiue you: for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Moreouer, let not Hezekias comfort you in the Lorde, when he sayth: the Lorde without doubte, shall defende vs, and shall not geue ouer this city into the hands of the kyng of þ Assirians beleue him not. But thus sayeth the king of Assiria, obtain my fauor, encline to me, so may euery man enioy his vineyardes, and figgetrees, and drynke the water of his cesterne, vnto the time that J com my self and bring you into a land that is like your own, wherin is wheat & wine, which is both sowen with sede, and plāted with vineyardes. Let not Hezekias deceiue you Esay.x.a when he sayth vnto you: the Lord shal deliuer vs. * Myght þ Gods of the gentiles kepe euery mannes lande, from þ power of the kyng of the Assirians: Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad: Wher is the God of Sepharuaim: And who is able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of all the gods of these lands hath deliuered their country out of my power: is the lord in dede able to to deliuer Jerusalem from my hande: Unto this Hezekias messangers helde their tonges, and answered not one worde for the kyng had charged them that they should geue hym no answer. So came Eliakim Elkias son the president, Sobna the Scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the secretary, vnto Hezekias with rent clothes, and tolde him the wordes of Rabsaketh.

The.xxxvii.Chapter.

Hezekias humbleth himself before the Lord. The army of Sennacherib is slaine of the Angell of the Lord, and he himself is killed of his owne sonnes.

iiii.Re.xix.b WHen Hezekias heard that, he rent his clothes, and putte on sackecloth and went into the temple of the lord. But he set Heliakim the president Sobna the Scribe with the eldest priests clothed in sacke, vnto the Prophete Esaye, the sonne of Amos, and they sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth Hezekias, this is þ day Jon.iii.a of trouble, of plague and blasphemy: for þ chyldren are come to the place of byrthe: but there is no power to bring thē foorth. The lord thy god (no dout) hath wel considered the wordes of Rabsaketh, whome his lord the king of þ Assirians hath sent to defye and blaspheme the liuing God, w suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath heard right well. And therefore lift vp thy prayer for the remnaunt that are yet left.
So the seruauntes of the kyng Hezekias B came to Esay. And Esay gaue them thys aunswer. Say thus vnto your Lord: thus sayeth the Lorde: bee not afrayde of the woordes that thou hast heard wherwith the kyng of the Assirians seruantes haue Es.xxxi.b blasphemed me. Beholde, J wyll cause a wynde to go ouer hym: assoone as he heareth the rumour, he shall goe againe into his country, there wil J destroy him with i.Re.xviiii.c the swearde in his owne land. Now whē Rabsaketh returned, he founde the kyng of Assiria laying siege to Libnas, for he had vnderstand that he was departed frō Lachis. For there came a rumoure that Tharhakes king of Ethiopia was come foorth to warre agaynst hym. And when the kyng of Assiria heard that, he sente o- C ther messangers to kyng Hezekias wyth this commaundement. Saye thus to Hezekias kyng of Juda. Let not thy god deceyue thee, in whom thou hopest & sayest: Jerusalem shall not bee geuen into the handes of the kyng of Assiria. For loe, thou knowest well howe the kynges of Assiria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, & hopest thou to escape? Now when Hezekia had receyued the letter of the messangers, and redde it, he wente vp into the house of the Lord, and opened the letter before the Lord on this maner. eyes, O lorde, and see, and ponder all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, which hath D sente his embassage to blaspheme the lyuyng God. It is true, O lord, that the kinges of Assiria haue conquered all kyng-domes and landes, and caste theyr Gods in the fier. Notwithstandyng those were no Gods but the workes of mennes han-des, of wood or stone, therefore haue they destroyed them. Deliuer vs then, O lorde our God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth may know, that thou onely art the lord. Then Esay the sonne of Amos sente vnto Hezekia, saying: thus sayeth the lorde God of Israell. Wheras thou hast made thy praier vnto me, as touching Sennacherib þ kyng of Assiria, this is the aunswere that the Lorde hath geuen, concernyng hym.
Despysed art thou, and mocked (O daugh ter of Sion) he hathe shaken his head at thee, O daughter of Jerusalem. But thou blasphemed? Against whom hast thou lift euẽ against the holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruauntes hast blasphemed the lord, & thus holdest thou of thy self. I wyll couer the hie mountains and sydes of Li-banus with my horsemen. And there wyl I cut down the hye Ceder trees, and the fayrest firre trees. I wil vp into þ heygth of it, & into þ chiefest of his timber woods.

E If there be no water, I wil graue & drink And as for waters of defence, I shall dry them vp with the fete of myne hoste. Yea, hast thou not heard what I haue taken in hand, and brought to passe of old time?
That same will I do now also: and wast, destroy & bring strong cities vnto heapes of stone. For their inhabitors shall be lyke lame men brought in feare & cõfounded.
Thei shalbe like the grasse & grene herbs in the field, like the hay vpon þ house tops that withereth afore it be growen vp. I know thy waies, thy going forth and thy comming home: yea, and thy madnes against me. Therfore thy furiousnes agaist me, & thy pride is come before me. I wyll put my ring in thy nose, and my bridle bit F in the chawes of thee, and tourne thee about, euen þ same way thou cãmest. I wyl geue thee also this token (O Hezekia) this yere shalt thou eate such as groweth of it self, and the second yere, that which sprin-geth agayn of thesame: and in the thyrde yeare, ye shal sowe and reape: yea, ye shal plant vineyardes and enioy the fruytes therof. And suche of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnant shal take roote beneath, & bring forth frute aboue. For the escaped shal go out of Jerusalem, & the remnant from the mount Sion. And this shal the gelousy of þ lord of hostes bring to passe. Therefore G thus saith þ lord, concerning þ kyng of þ Assirians. He shal not com into this city, & shal shote no arrow into it: there shall no shilde hurt it, nether shal they cast ditches about it. Thesame way þ he came, he shal returne, & not com at this citie, sayeth the lorde. And I will kepe and saue the citye, (sayth he) for mine own, & for my seruant Dauids sake. ✠ Thus the angell of þ lord went forth & slue the Assirians host, an. C iiii. Re. xix.

The. xxxviii. Chapter.

Hezekia is sicke vnto death: but is yet reuiued by the Lord, and liueth fiftene yeares after: for which benefite he geueth thankes.

The.xxxix. Chapter.

Hezekia is reproued of Esay, bicause he shewed his treasure vnto the embassadours of Babilon.

AT * ÿ same time Merodach Baladam, Baladamus son kyng of Babilon, set letters and presentes to Hezekia. There was not one thyng in Hezekias B house, and so throughout al his kingdom but he let them see it. Then came Esaye ÿ Prophet to kyng Hezekia, and sayd vnto him: what haue the men sayde, and from whence came they vnto thee? Hezekia answered: they came out of a farre countrye vnto me, out of Babilon. Esay sayd: what haue they loked vpon in thine house? Hezekia answered: all that is in myne house haue they seen: and ther is nothing in my C treasure, but I shewed them. Then sayde iiii. Reg xviii.c Esay vnto Hezekia: vnderstand the word of the Lord of hostes. Beholde, ÿ time wyl come, that euery thyng which is in thyne house, and al that thy progenitours haue layed vp in store vntyll this day, shall bee caryed to Babilon, and nothyng lefte behynde. Thus sayth the Lord: yea, & parte D of thy sonnes, that shall come of thee, and whom thou shalt get, shalbe caryed hence and become gelded chaūberlayns in the kyng of Babilons court. Then said Hezekia to Esay. Now God prosper his owne counsayl which thou hast told me. He said moreouer: so that there be peace & faythfulnesse in my time.

der: who hath made these thynges, which come out by so great heapes? and he can G cal them al by their names. For ther is no Plaine thyng hid vnto yᵉ greatnesse of his power, countreis strength, and might. How maye then Ja-est thou not, or haste thou not heard that yᵉ euerlasting God, the Lord which made al the corners of the earth, is neither we-

The.xli.Chapter.

Of the goodnesse and mercy of god toward the people.

BE still (ye ylandes) and hear- A ken vnto me. Be strong ye people. Come hither & shewe youre cause, we wil go to the law together. Who raysed vp the iuste manne from the rysyng of the sunne, and called hym to goe foorth? Who caste downe the people, and subdued the kynges before hym, that he may throwe

them all to the grounde with the sweard and scatter them lyke stubble with hys bowe. He followeth vpon them, and goeth safely hymselfe. And that in a waye where before his foote had not troden.
Who hath made and created these thigs?
B euen he that called the generations from the beginnyng: ✱ euen I the Lord, which am the fyrst, and with the last. ✱ The yles saw it, and dyd feare, and the endes of the earth were abashed, drew nye, and came hyther. Euery man exhorted hys neygh-bor and brother, and bad him be strong.
The carpenter comforted the goldsmyth, and the goldsmyth ẏ hammar mã, saying glue wyll doe very well in it. It shall bee good that we fasten this cast worke: & thẽ they fastened it with nayles that it should not be moued. But thou Israel art my ser uant, thou Jacob, art elect: thou art ẏ sede of Abraham my beloued, thou arte he whom I led from the endes of the earth by the hande. For I called thee from far, euen from among the glorious men of it, and sayde vnto thee, thou art my seruant.
I haue chosen thee, and not caste thee a-Ca.xliii. b way: ✱ be not afrayde, for I am with thee.
Melt not away as waxe, for I am thy God, to strength thee, helpe thee, and to kepe thee with this ryght hande of myne.
Beholde, all they that resist thee, shal com to confusion and shame and thine aduer-saryes shalbe destroyed and broughte to naught. So that whoso seketh after them D shal not fynde them. Thy destroyers shal perish: & so shal they ẏ vndertake to make battaile against thee, be as it that is not, and as a thyng of nought. For I the lord and god wyl strengthen thy ryght hand.
Euẽ I that say vnto thee: feare not, I wyl help thee. Be not afrayd thou litle worme Jacob, and thou despised Israel: for I wil help thee, saith the lord, and the holy one of Israell thine aduenger. Behold, I wyl make thee a treadyng cart, & a new flayle ẏ thou mayest thresh and grinde ẏ mountayns & bring the hilles to pouder. Thou shalt fan thẽ, and the wind shal carry thẽ away, & the whirlewind shall scatter thẽ.
But thou shalt reioice in ẏ lord, & shalt de-lite in praysyng the holye one of Israell.
Ca.xxx.c When the thirsty & poore seke water and E find none, and when theyr tong is drye of thirst, I geue it them sayeth the Lorde: I Ca.xxxv b the God of Israell forsake them not. I Jo.vi.c.liiii. bring forth floudes in the hilles, & welles in the plaine fieldes: I turne ẏ wildernes to riuers, and the dry land to conduits of water: I plant in the wast grounde trees cedre, boxe, myrre and olyues. And in the dry I set fyrre trees, elmes & hawthorns together. All this do I, that they altogether may see and marke, perceyue wyth their hartes and consider that the hande F of the lord maketh these things, and that the holy one of Israell bringeth them to passe. Stande at youre cause (sayeth the lorde) and bryng foorth youre strongest ground, sayth the kyng of Jacob. Let thẽ bring forth theyr gods, and let their gods tell vs what shall chaunce hereafter: yea, let them shewe vs the thynges that are paste, what they be: let them declare them vnto vs, that we maye take them to hart, and knowe them hereafter. Eyther shew vs thynges for to come, and tell vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shall we know ẏ you are gods: do some thyng eyther good G or bad: so wil we both knowlege the same and tell it out. Beholde, ye are Goddes of naught: yea, abhominable is the mã that hath chosẽ you. Neuerthelesse I haue wa ked you vp one from the north, & he shall Ca.xliiii a come. And another from the East, whiche shal cal vpon my name, and shal tread vppon princes as vpon clay: and as the potter tredeth down the mier. Who declared this from the beginning, & we wyl know hym? Or from the olde times, and we wyl confesse and say that he is righteous? But there is none that sheweth or declareth any thyng: there is none also ẏ heareth your wordes. The fyrst is he that shal say to Sion: Behold, behold, they are present and to Jerusalem it self will I geue an e-uangelist. But when I consider, there is not a man among them, nor any that can geue counsel: nor when I examine them, that can answere one word. Loe, wicked are they and vayn, with the thinges also that they take in hand: yea, their images are but winde and vaine thinges.

al that is therin prayse hym, the Iles and Let them be glad that sit vppon rockes of stone, and let them cry down from the hye mountaynes, ascribing glory vnto ẏ lord, and magnifieng him amōg the gentiles.

The lord shall come forth as a giant, and take a stomake vnto him lyke a fresh man

(say they) as that perfect man, & so blynde as the lordes seruant. Thou vnderstādest much, and kepest nothyng: ẏ eares are o-pē and no man heareth. The lord is merciful vnto thē for his righteousnesse sake, that his worde might be magnified, and praysed: but the people themselues be robbed and troden vnder ẏ foote, chayned in dongeons, and they al (I say) be shut into prison houses. They are caried away cap-tiue, and no man doth lose them. They be troden vnder fote and no man doth labor to bring thē again. But who is he among you ẏ pondreth this, ẏ considereth it, & taketh it for a warning in time to com. Who suffred Iacob to be troden vnder fote and Israel to be spoiled: did not ẏ lord? Bicaus we haue sinned againste him, & haue had no delight to walke in his waies, neyther ben obediēt to his law. Therfore hath he poured vpon him in his wrathful displea-euery side, yet wil he not vnderstande. He burneth him vp yet sinketh it not into his therfore thus sayth ẏ lord. The prisoners shalbe taken from ẏ giaunt: and ẏ spoile deliuered from ẏ violent, for I will maintaine thy cause against thine aduersaries and saue thy sonnes. And will fede thine enemies wt their own flesh, and make the drinke of their owne bloud, as of swete that I am the Lorde the Sauioure, thy noble redemer.

The .l. Chapter.

The Iewes are reproued, and also called.

Thus sayth ẏ Lord: *wher is ẏ bill of your mothers diuorcement ẏ I sent her away? or who is ẏ detter to whõ I sold you? *Behold, for your own offences are ye solde, & bicause of your transgression, is your mother forsaken. For why would no mã receiue me, when I came? and when I called no mã gaue me answere. Is my hãde shortened that it myght not help or haue I not power to deliuer? loe, at a worde I drinke vp the sea, and of water floudes I make drye B lande: so ẏ for wãt of water, ẏ fish corrupt and die for thirst. As for heauen, I clothe it wt darknesse, and put as it were a sacke vpon it. The Lord God hath geuen me a well learned tonge, so ẏ I can comforte them which are troubled, yea, and that in due season. He wakeneth myne eare vp by times in ẏ morning, by times in ẏ mor ning, I say, he wil waken myne eare that I might harkẽ as to ẏ schole maisters.
The Lord God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not say nay, nor withdraw my selfe: *but I offer my backe vnto the smiters, and my chekes to the nippers. I turne not my face frõ shame and spitting and ẏ lord God shall helpe me: therefore C shall I not be confounded, I haue hardened my face like a flint stone, for I am sure ẏ I shall not come to confusion. He is at hande ẏ iustifieth me, who will thẽ go with me to law? Let vs stãde one against another: if there be any ẏ will reason wt me, let him come here forth to me. Behold the lord God standeth by me, what is he then ẏ can condemne me? lo, they shalbe like as an olde cloth: ẏ moth shal eate thẽ vp. Therfore, whoso feareth ẏ lord amõg you, let him heare ẏ voice of his seruaunt.
Whoso walketh in darkenesse, & no lyght shineth vpon him, let him put his trust in the name of ẏ lord, & hold him by his god.
But

but take hede, ye all kindle a fier of the wrath of God, and styrre vp the coles, walke on in the glistering of youre owne fier, and in the coles that ye haue kindled.
Thys commeth vnto you fro my hande, namely that ye shall slepe in sorow.

The.li.Chapter.

Consolation and comfort is promised vnto ÿ faythfull.

A Herken vnto me, ye that hold of righteousnesse, and ye that seke ÿ Lorde. Take hede vn-

He.xi.a. that I called hym alone, and blessed him, Ge.xii.a. and encreased hym. Therefore shall the Lord comfort Sion, and repaire all her decay: making her desert as a paradyse, and her wildernesse as ÿ garde of ÿ lord.
B Mirth and ioy shalbe found there, than-kesgeuing and ÿ voyce of prayse. Haue respect vnto me then, O my people, both high and low, and lay thyne eare to me: Esa.ii.a. * for a law, & an ordinance shall go forth from me, to lighten the Gentiles. It is hard by, ÿ my health & my righteousnesse shall go forth, and the people shall be ordred with myne arme. The ylandes, that is the Gentiles, shall hope in me, and put their trust in mine arme. Lift vp your Arte not thou euen he which haste dryed of the Lord shall turne agayne, & come with ioye vnto Sion, ther to endure for euer. i.Cor.i.b.

That mirth and gladnes might be with ii.Cor.i.c

Yea I, I am euen he, that in all thynges geueth you consolation. What art thou then, ÿ fearest a mortall man, the childe of man, which * goeth away as doth the Esa.xl.a. floure? And forgettest the Lorde that i.Pe.i.d. made the, that spred out the heauens and laid the foundation of ÿ earth. But thou E art euer afraied for the sight of thine oppressoure, whiche is ready to do harme.
Where is the wrath of the oppressoure?
The time cōmeth on fast, when the prisodōgeon, nor yet be consumed by famishe-ment. I am ÿ Lord thy God (that make ÿ ÿ Lord of hostes. I haue put my wordes a. in thy mouth, and haue defended thee in Esay, the shadow of my hand, that I may plant xlviii.a.

the heauens, & laye the foundation of the Esa.xlix.
earth, & say vnto Sion: ÿ art my people. a.
Awake, awake, & stand vp, O Jerusalem, thou that from the hand of the Lord hast dronken out the * cup of his wrath: thou F of his deadly cuppe to the bottome. For a- lxxv.b. mong al the sonnes whom he hath begot Jere.xl.a ten, there is not one that may holde it vp, and not one to lead it by the hande, of all the sonnes that he hath norished. Bothe these things are happened vnto thee, but who is sory for it? Yea destructiō wasting, hunger & sweard: but who will comforte thee? Thy sonnes lie comfortlesse at the head of euery strete, like a taken venison, G and are full of the terrible wrathe of the Lord, and punnishment of thy God. And therfore, thou miserable & dronken (how beit not with wine) heare this: Thus sayeth the Lord, thy Lord and God, ÿ defender of his people. Beholde I will take the slumbring cup out of thy hande euen the cup with the dregges of my wrathe, ÿ frō hencefort the, thou shalt neuer drinke it more: but I will put it into their hande ÿ trouble thee: whiche haue spoken to thy soule, stoupe downe, that we may go ouer thee: and thou laidest thy body euen with the ground, and as the strete to go vpon.

which kepe thēselues, that they vnhalow not the Sabboth, namely, that they fulfill my couenaunt: them will I bryng to my holy mountayne, and make thē ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnt offerin-ges and Sacrifices shalbe accepted vpon mine alter. *For my house shalbe called an house of prayer, for all people. Thus sayth ẏ Lord God which gathereth together ẏ scatered of Israel: I will bryng yet another congregation to hym. Come all ye beastes of the field, that ye may deuour D all ẏ beastes of ẏ wood. *For hys watchmen are all blynde, they haue altogether no vnderstanding, they are all dumme dogges, not beyng able to barke, they are slepy, sluggish are they, and lye snorting: they are shamelesse dogges, that be neuer satisfied. The shepeheardes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstanding, but euery man turneth hys own way, euery one after hys own couetousnesse with all hys

The .lvii. Chapter.

The Jewes are rebuked for their iniuri done to Christe.

The righteous perisheth, and A no man regardeth it in hys hart. Good Godly people are taken away and no man considereth it. Namely, that the righteous is conueied away from the wicked. He commeth into peace, and godly men rest in their chambers, and before the Godly man goeth peace. Come hither therfore ye charmers children, *ye sones of the aduouterer, and the whore: wherin take ye your pleasure: vpon whom gape ye with your mouth, and bleare out your tong: Are ye not children of aduoutrie: And a sede of dissimulation: * Ye make B your fier vnder ẏ okes, & vnder all grene trees and ye offer children in ẏ valleyes & dennes of stones. Thy part shalbe in the stony rockes by the riuer: yea, euen these shalbe thy part. For there thou hast pow-red meate and drinke offring vnto them.
Shuld I delite in that: Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaines, thou we-test vp thither, and there hast thou slayne Sacrifices. *Behinde the dores, and postes, hast thou set vp thy remembraunce.
When thou hadst discouered thy selfe to another than me, when thou wentest vp, and made thy bed wider, and with those ydolles hast thou made a couenaunt, and louedst their couches, where thou sawest them.

Thou

C *Thou wentest streight to kinges, with oile and diuers ointments,(that is)thou hast sent thy Messengers farre of, and yet art thou fallen into the pit thereby.
Thou art wery for the multitude of thine own wayes,yet saydst thou neuer: I will leaue of.Thou hast had the life that thy handes wrought, and therfore thou art carelesse.For when wilt thou be abashed or feare, seing thou hast broken thy promes, and remembrest not me, neyther hast me in thine heart. Thinkest thou, ye I also will hold my peace(as afore tyme) that thou fearest me not:yea,verely I wil declare thy goodnesse and thy works,but they shall not profit thee:when thou criest let thy chosen heape deliuer thee.But the winde shall blow them forth, and vanitie Sap.v.a. shall take them all away. Neuerthelesse they that put their trust in me,shall enherite the lande: and haue my holy hill in possession.

And therefore thus he sayth: *Make Esa.xl.c. plaine,make plaine:and cleanse ye strete,

The.lix. Chapter.

The Lord is mighty to saue, and ready to heare our requestes.

A Esa.l.a. Num.xi.a. Jer.v.b. Esa.i.b.

Behold, * the Lordes hande is not so shortened that it cannot helpe, neyther is hys eare so stopped that it may not heare.
But * your misdedes haue seperated you from your God, & your * sinnes hid his face from you, that he heareth you not. For your handes are defiled wt bloud and your fingers with unrighteousnesse.
Your lippes speake leasinges, and your toung setteth out wickednesse. No man regardeth righteousnesse, & no man iudgeth truly. Euery man hopeth in vayne things, and ymagineth disceate, * concea-

They brede cockeatrice egges, & weaue there commeth up a serpent. Their webb maketh no cloth, and they may not couer Pro.i.a. them with their labours. Their dedes ar Esa.v.d. the dedes of wickednesse and the work of e.xiii.a. robberie is in their handes. * Their fete Ro.iii.b runne to euill, and they make hast to shed B innocent bloud: their counsels are wicked counsels, harme * and destruction are in their wayes. But the way of peace they know not. In their goinges is no equity, their wayes are so croked that whosoeuer goeth therin, knoweth of no peace. And thys is the cause that equitie is so farre Esa.v.a from us, and that ryghteousnesse cōmeth Job.xxv.c not nye us. * We loke for lyght, loe, it is Deuter. darknesse: for the morning shine, see, we xxviii.c. walke in the darke. * We grope lyke the Job.xii.c blinde upon the wall, we grope euen as one that hath no eyes. We stomble at the noone day as though it were towarde night, in the falling places like men that are halfe dead.

We roare all lyke beares, and mourne still like doues. We loke for equitie, but there is none: for health, but it is farre fro us. For our offences are many before the,
and our sinnes testifie against us: yea, we must confesse that we offend, & knowlege that we do amisse: namely, trāsgresse and dissemble against the Lord, and fall away from our God, usingpresumpteous and traiterous ymaginations, & casting false matters in our hearts. And therfore is equitie gone aside, and righteousnesse standeth farr of, * truth is fallen down in Esa.xl.a the strete, and the thing that is plaine and open, may not be shewed. Yet the truth is taken away, & he that refraineth himselfe from euill, must be spoyled. Whe the Lord saw thys, it displeased him sore, that there was no equitie. He saw also, ẏ there was no man righteous: and he wōdred that there was no man to help him.
Wherfore he held hym by hys own power Esa.lxiii. and he sustained him by hys own righte-ousnesse. * He put righteousnesse upō him for a brest plate, and set the helmet of I.Tess.v. health upon hys head.

He put on wrath in steade of clothing, and toke gelousy about hym for a cloke: (lyke as when a man goeth forth wrathfully to recompence hys enemies, and to be auenged of hys aduersaries.) Namely that he might recompence and rewarde C the Ilandes, where thorow the name of ẏ Lord might be feared from the rising of ẏ sunne, and hys maiestie unto the going down of the same. For he shall come as a violent water streame which the wynde of the Lord hath moued. But unto Syon Ps.xiiii. there shall come a redemer, and unto the Ro.xi. in Jacob that turne from wickednesse, sayth the Lord. I wil make thys couenāt with them (sayth the Lord.) My spirit that is upon thee, and the wordes which I haue put in thy mouth, shall neuer goe out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy childers children, frō thys tyme forth for euermore, world without ende, sayth ẏ Lord.

*The Gentiles shal come to thy light, and the Gentiles, shall come vnto thee. The Dromedaries of Madian and Epha: All here lyke the cloudes, and as the doues

Moreouer, those shall come knelyng they that despised thee, shall fall down at thy foote. Thou shalt be called the citie of the Lord, Sion the citie of the holy one of Israell. Bicause thou hast bene forsaken

Violence and robberie shall neuer bee

A For Sions sake therefore

The. lxiii. Chapter.

Of the redemption promised to the people.

What is he thys that com- A redde colored clothes of Bosra: (which is so costly cloth) and commeth in so mightily with all hys strength: I am he that teacheth righteousnesse, and am of power to helpe. Wherefore then is thy clothing redde, and thy raymēt lyke his that tredeth in the wine presse? I haue troden the presse my selfe alone, and of al people ther is not one with me.

Thus will I treade down mine enemies in my wrath, and set my fete vppon them in mine indignation. And their bloud B shall be sprong vppon my clothes, and so Esay. will I stayne all my rayment. *For the xxxiiii. b daye

...of vengeaūce is assigned in my heart and the yeare when my people shalbe deli-uered, is come. I loked about me, and there was no man to shew me any helpe.
I marvayled that no man helde me vp.
Then I held me by myne own arme, and my feruentnesse sustayned me. And thus will I treade down ŷ people in my wrath, and bathe them in my displeasure, and vpō the earth will I lay their strength. I will declare the goodnesse of the Lord, yea, ⁊ the prayse of the Lord for all that he hath geuen vs, for the great good that he hath done for Israel: which he hath geuen thē of hys own fauoure, and according to the multitude of his louing kindenesses. For he sayd: these no dout are my people, and no shrinking children, ⁊ so he was their Sauioure. In their troubles, he was also troubled with them, and the Angell that went forth from his presence deliue-C red thē. Of very loue and kindnesse that he had vnto them, he redemed them. He hath borne them and caryed thē vp, euer since the world began. But after they prouoked hym to wrath, and vexed hys holy mynd, he was their enemy, ⁊ fought against them hymselfe. Yet remembred Israell the olde tyme of Moses and hys people* saying: Where is he that brought them from the water of the sea, *w them that fede hys shepe? where is he that hath geuen hys holy spirit among them? He led them by the right hande of Moses with hys glorious arme: deuiding the wa ter before them (wherby he gate hymselfe an euerlasting name:) he led them in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, that they should not stumble: as a tame beast goeth in the fielde: and the breath geuen of God geueth hym rest. Thus (O God) D hast thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name withall. Loke down thē from heauen, and beholde the dwellynge place of thy Sanctuary, and thy glory.
How is it ŷ thy gelousy, thy strength, the multitude of thy mercies, and thy louing kindnesse, will not be intreated of vs? yet art ŷ * our father. For Abrahā knoweth vs not, neyther is Israell acquainted w vs. But thou Lord art our father and redemer, and thy name is euerlastyng. O Lord, wherefore hast thou led vs out of thy way? * Wherfore hast thou hardened our heartes, that we feare thee not? Be at one with vs againe, for thy seruauntes sake, and for the generatiō of thyne heritage. Thy people haue had but a litle of thy Sanctuarie in possession: for our enemies haue troden down the holy place.
And we were thine from the beginning, when thou wast not their Lord: for they haue not called vpon thy name.

¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Esay.

The booke of the Prophete Jeremy.

The.first.Chapter.

The stocke of Jeremy, & in what tyme he prophecied. He excuseth himselfe: and would refuse ẏ office of a Prophet, bicause he is young & vnexpert. He is taught of the Lord, & becommeth bolde. God openeth vnto him, ẏ the destruction of the Jewes (by ẏ babilonians) is at hand. Jeremy is commaunded to speak: the worde of God vnto the Jewes without feare.

A These are the sermons of Jeremy the sonne of Hel-kiah the Priest, one of thē that dwelt at* Anathoth Jer.xi.a. in the land of Beniamin, when the Lorde had fyrst spokē with him in ẏ time of Josiah ẏ sonne of Amō, King of Juda, in the thirtene yere of his reigne: & so during vnto the time of Jehoakim ẏ sonne of Josiah King of Juda, * and vntill the.
iiii. King xxv.a. xi. yeare of Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah: King of Juda were ended: when Jerusa-Jeremy. lem was taken euen in the fifth moneth. xxxix.a. The worde of the Lord spake thus vnto Esay. me: Before I fashioned thee in thy moxliiii a, thers wombe, I dyd know thee. And or e& xlvi.a. Psa.lxx.a uer thou waste borne, I sanctified thee, and ordeyned thee to be a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayd I: Oh Lorde God, B I cannot speake, for I am yet but young.
Exo.iiii. c. And the Lorde answeared me thus: Say not so I am yoūg. For thou shalt go to al Act.ix.b. that I shal sende thee vnto * and what-Mat.x.c. soeuer I commaund thee, that shalt thou i.Cor.iii. a. speake. Be not afrayde of their faces. For I am with thee, to deliuer thee, sayth the Lorde. * And with that ẏ Lord stretched C out his hande, and touched my mouthe, & Psa.vi.a. thesame lord said vnto me: Behold I put Je.xviii. a. my wordes in thy mouth, & beholde, this day do I set thee ouer the people & kyng-domes, ẏ thou maiest roote out, breake of, destroye & make waste, & that thou maiest builde vp & plante. After this the Lorde spake vnto me, saying: Jeremy, what seest thou. And I said I see a rod of an Almōd tree. Thē sayd ẏ Lord vnto me: thou hast seene righte, for I will make hast spedely vpō my word to performe it. It happened afterward ẏ the Lord spake to me again, and sayd: what seest thou. And I sayde: I do see a seething * pot, loking from out of the North.
* Then said the Lord vnto me: Out of ẏ Northe shall come a plague vpon all the dwellers of ẏ land. For loe, * I wil cal all the kinreddes of the kyngdomes of the Northe (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall come: and euery one shal set his seate in the gates of Jerusalē, & in al their walles rounde about, & in all the cities of Juda.
And thorow thē shal I declare my iudge-ment vpon al the wickednesse of those mē that haue forsaken me: that haue burnte D incence vnto strange Gods, and worshipped the workes of their own handes.
And therfore girde vp thy loynes, arise and tel them all that I geue thee in commaundemēt. Feare thē not, lest I destroy thee before thē. * For behold, this day doe I make thee a stronge fenced towne, an yron piller, & a brasen walle against the whole land, agaynst the Kinges & mighty men of Juda, against the Priestes and people of the lande. They shall fighte against thee, but they shall not be able to ouercome thee: For I am with thee to de-liuer thee, sayth the Lorde.

The.ii.Chapter.

God rehearseth his benefites done vnto ẏ Jewes Against the Priestes & Prophetes, or preachers ẏ continue & despise god. The Jewes are destroyed bicause they forsoke god, and bicause they ranne a whorehunting after Idolles.

Moreouer the woorde of ẏ A go thy way, cry in ẏ eares of Jerusalē, & say: Thus sayeth the Lord: I remē-ber thee for the kindnesse of thy youth, and bicause of thy stedefaste loue, at the tyme of thy despousing: in that thou folowedst me thorowe the wildernesse, in an vntilled lande. Israell was an halowed thing

Jer. l. b. vnto ÿ lord, and so was his first fruites.*
Za. ii. b. All they that deuoure Israel shal offend: misfortune shall fall vpon them, sayth the Lord.
Heare therfore the worde of the Lord, O thou house of Jacob: and all the generations of the house of Israell. Thus sayth the LORDE: What vnfaithfulnesse founde youre fathers in me, that B they went so farre away from me, falling to lightnesse, and being so vaine? They thought not in their heartes: Wher haue we left the Lord, that brought vs oute of Esa. lxiii. the lande of Egipt? that led vs throughe the wildernesse, thorowe a deserte and rough lande, thorowe a dry and a deadly lande: yea a lande that no man had gone Deu. xi. b thorow, and wherin no man had dwelt.
*And when I had broughte you into a pleasaunt well builded lande, ÿ ye might enioye the fruites and al the commodities of the same: ye went forth and defiled my lande, and brought mine heritage to abhomination. The Priestes themselues sayd not. Where is the Lord? They that had the law in their hands, knew me not:
The shepeherdes offended againste me.
The Prophetes did seruice vnto Baall, and followed such thinges as shal bryng C them no profite. Wherfore, I am constrained (sayth the Lord) to make my cōplaint vpon you, and vpon your childers childrē.
Go into the yles of Cethim, and loke wel: sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede: and se whether such thinges be done there, whether the Gentiles themselues deale so falsely and vntruly with their Goddes (which yet are no Goddes in dede.) But my people haue geuen ouer their hie ho-noure, for a thing that may not help thē.
Be astonished, (O ye heauens) be afrayde and abashed at such a thing, sayth ÿ lord.
For my people hath done. ii. euils. They Jere. xvii. haue forsaken me the well of the * water

Joh. iiii. b broken pittes, that can holde no water.
Ex. iiii. d Is Israell a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde? Why then is he so spoiled? Why do they roare and cry then vpon him as a Esa. i. a. Lion? They haue made hys lande waste, D *hys cities are so burnt vp, that there is no mā dwelling in them. Yea, the childrē Jer. xxii. c of Noph and Taphnes haue defiled thy necke. *Cōmeth not thys vnto thee, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he led thee by the waye?
And what hast thou now to do in ÿ strete of Egipte? To drinke the water of Nilus?

Eyther what makest thou in the waye of Assiria? To drinke water of the flod?
*Thine own wickednes shal reproue the Job. xxii. and thy turning away shall condemne a. thee: that thou mayest know and vnderstande, how euill and hurtfull a thyng it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God of hostes. *I haue euer broken thy Esa. lviii.

yoke of olde, and burste thy bondes, yet a. sayest thou: *I will no more offende, but Eze. x. b.

nesse. Kepe thou thy fote from nakednesse and thy throte from thirst: and withoute shame thou answerest. No, for I haue loued straungers, and them will I folow.
Like as a thefe that is taken with ÿ dede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israell come to confusion: the common people, their kinges and rulers, their Priestes and Prophetes.
*For they say to a stocke, thou art my fa- Rom. i. c. ther: and to a stone, thou hast begotten Jer. xxxii me: *yea, they haue turned their back v- b. Za. vii. b are now thy Gods that thou hast made thee? let them stande vp & helpe thee in ÿ tyme of nede, (if they be able.) *For loke how many cities thou hast (O Juda) so Jere. xi. b many Gods hast thou also. Wherfore thē will ye go to law with me, seeing ye al are synners against me, sayth the LORDE.

It is but losse laboure, that I smyte youre children, for they receiue not my correction.

ii. Para. xxxiiii. d. your owne sweard destroyeth your Prophetes, lyke a devouring Lyon. O ye people, loke upon the worde of the Lorde.
Am I the become a wildernesse unto the people of Israell or a lande that hath no G light? Wherfore sayth my people then: we Deut. xviii. g. Jer. vii. b Eze. xx. b. are Lordes, we will come no more unto thee. Doth a mayden forget her raiment, or a bryde her stomacher? But as for my people, they haue forgotten me, dayes innumerable. Why bostest thou thy wayes so highly (to obteine favor ther through) when thou hast yet stained them wt blas-phemies, and teachest thine own wayes?
Upon thy wynges is founde the bloud of the poore and innocent people: and that Psa. cv. c. not in corners and holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darest thou say, I am (* withoute sinne and) giltinesse.
Tush, hys wrath can not come upon me.
Beholde, I condemne thee in iudgement bicause thou darest say: I haue not offended. And why rūnest thou so often to and fro to change thy wayes? For thou shalte be confounded as well of Egipt, as of the Assirians: yea, thou shalt go thy way from them, and smite thine hands together vpon thy head. Bicause the Lord doth abhorre that confidence and hope of thyne, and thou shalt not prosper with all.

The. iii. Chapter.

God being mercifull calleth unto repentāce his people, which he had forsakē for their whordōs with ydols. He exhorteth Israel unto repentāce, promising them shepeheardes that shuld haue true knowlege of God. The returne of Israell unto God confessing their offence.

A Deute. xxiiii. a. Commonly, * whē a man the question is: should he resort unto her any more after ye? Is not thys fielde Ose iii. a. Eze. xvi. b. then defiled and uncleane? But as for thee, ye hast plaied ye harlot wt many louers yet turne againe to me, sayth the Lorde.

Lift up thyne eyes unto the hillaulters, & loke if ye be not defiled wt whordom. Thou B hast wayted for them in ye stretes, and as iii. Kyng. xvi. a. a murtherer in ye wildernes. Through thy whoredom and shameful blasphemies, is the lande defiled. Thys is ye cause that the raine & euening dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten thee an whores forehed, and wilt not be ashamed. Els wouldest thou say unto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me up, and led me from my youth. Wilt thou then put me away, and cast me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdraw thy self cleane from me? Neverthelesse, thou speakest such wordes, but thou art euer doing worse and worse.
* The Lord sayd also unto me, in ye time C of Josiah the kyng: Hast thou sene what Jerem. xxxvi. iiii. Kyng. xxii. that rebellion Israell hath done? how she hath runne up upon all the hilles, and among all thicke trees, and there played ye harlot? hast thou sene also, when she had done all thys, how I sayd unto her: that she should turne againe unto me, and yet she is not returned? * Juda that unfayth- Eze. xxiii. b.

after I had well sene the advoutry of the shrinkig harlot Israel, * I put her away, iiii. Kyng. xvii.

For all thys, her unfaythful syster Juda was not ashamed, but went back, and played the whore also: yea, and the noyse of her whoredome hath defiled the whole lande. For she hath committed fornicatiō with stones, and stockes. Nevertheless, Esa. i. c. her unfaithfull sister Juda, is not turned unto me againe with her whole hart, but faynedly, sayth the Lord. And ye lord sayd unto me. * The backslyder Israel is more D righteous, than the unfaythful Juda: and Eze. xvi. e. therefore goe preache these wordes to-warde the North, and say: thou disobedient Israell, turne again (sayth the Lord) for I am mercifull, (sayeth ye Lord,) and I Psa. cii.

of the Lordes sake, which shall bee set vp they shall folowe no more the ymaginathey that be of the house of Juda, shal go vnto the house of Israel: ✠ and they shal come together out of the North, into the a pleasant land for thyne heritage: yea, & a goodly hoste of the heathen: and how I commaunded thee, that thou shouldest ✠ cal

Lord. ✠ And therfore ye voyce of the chyldren of Israel was heard on hye, weping disobedient chyldren, turne agayne (saying: loe, we are thyne, for thou art ye lorde do we also slepe in our confusion, & shame couereth vs, ✠ for we and our fathers frõ agaynst the lord our god, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the lord our god.

The.iiii, Chapter.

The true repentance or returning to god. He ex-

Thy waies and thy thoughtes, haue broughte thee vnto this, suche is thine own wickednesse and dysobedience: and bycause it is a bytter thing, it hath striken thee to the harte. Ah my belly, ah my belly (shalt thou cry) how is my hart so sore, my hart panteth within me: I cannot be still, for I haue heard the crying of the trompettes, and peales of warre. The. v. Chapter.

In Ierusalem is there no righteous or faithful man found either amongest the people or the rulers, for whose sake the Lord should spare the citie, wherefore Ierusalem is destroyed of the Assirians.

A Loke through Ierusalem, beholde, and see: Seeke through her streetes also within, if ye can fynd one man that doth equal and right, or seketh for y^e truth and I shal spare the citie (saith the lorde.) For though they can say the lord liueth: yet doe they sweare to deceiue. Whereas thou (O lord) lokest onely vpon faith and truthe. Thou haste scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast corrected them for amendment but they refused thy correctio͂. They made their faces harder tha͂ a stone, and would not amende. Therfore I thoughte in my

B selfe, peraduenture they are so simple and foolishe, that they vnderstand nothing of the Lordes waye, and iudgementes of our God. Therfore will I goe vnto theyr heades and rulers, and talke with them if they knowe the waye of the Lorde and the iudgementes of our God. But these (in like maner) haue broke͂ the yoke, and burst the bondes in sunder. Wherefore a Lio͂, out of the wood hath hurt them, and a wolfe in the euenyng shall destroy the͂. The Leopard dothe lye lurking by their cities, to teare in peces all the͂ that come there out. For their offences are multyplied, and their departing awaye is encreased. Should I then for all thys haue mercye vppon thee? Thy children haue forsaken me, and sworne by them that ar no Goddes. And albeit that I fed them to the full, yet they fall to aduoutrye, and haunt harlottes houses. In the desyre of

C vnclenly luste, they are become lyke the stoned horse, & euery man neyeth at his neighbours wife: Shoulde I not correcte this, saith the lord? Should I not be auenged of euery people that is like vnto this? Clime vp vpon their walles beat the͂ down, but destroy them not vtterlye: take away their fortresses, bicause thei are not the lordes. For vnfaithfully hath y^e house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, saith the lord. They haue denied the lord and said: it is not he y^t loketh vpon vs. Tushe, there shal no missfortune com vpon vs we shall see neither sworde nor hunger. As for the warning of the Prophets they take it but

for wynde: yea, there is none of these whiche wyll tell them, that suche thyngs shall happen vnto them. Wherefore thus sayth the lorde God of hostes: bicause ye D speake such woordes: Beholde. The wor-Es.xxxiiii. a des that are in thy mouth wyll I tourne to fyer, and make the people to be woode, that the fyer may consume them. Loe, I De.xxviii. wyll bryng a people vpon you from farre, Bar.iiii. c O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lorde, a mightie people, an olde people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, neyther vnderstandest what they saye. Their arowes are sodain death: yea, they them selues be very giaunts. This people shall eate vp thy fruite and thy meat: yea, they shall deuoure thy sonnes and thy daughters, thy sheepe and thy bullockes. They shall eate vp thy grapes and figges. As for thy strong & well fensed cities, wherein thou diddest trust, they shall bryng to pouerty, and that through the sweard.
Neuerthelesse I will not then haue done with you, sayth the Lorde. But yf they Jer.xvi.b saye, wherefore dothe the Lord our God E all this vnto vs? Then aunswer them: De.xxviii. bicause that like as ye haue forsaken me, f and serued straunge Goddes in your own lande, euen so shall ye serue other Gods also in a straunge lande. Preach this vnto the house of Jacob, and crye it oute in Juda, and saye thus: Heare thys (thou folish and vndiscrete people) ye haue eyes but ye see not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not. Feare ye not me, sayth the lord? Are Esa.vi.b ye not ashamed to looke me in the face?
Job.ix.b, whiche bynde the sea with the sande, so Job.xxxviii.b that it cannot passe his boundes. For and.ii.a. though it rage, yet can it do nothing: and F though the waues thereof doe swell, yet may they not go ouer. But this people hath a false and an obstinate heart: they are departed & gone away fro me. They thinke not in their heartes: O let vs feare the lord our god, that geueth vs rain early and late, when nede is: whiche keepeth Esa.lii.a euer still the haruest for vs yearely. Ne-uerthelesse, youre misdedes haue turned these from you, and youre synnes haue robbed you hereof. For among my people are founde wicked persons that priuilye laye snares and wayt for men, to take thē G and destroy them. And lyke as a net is ful of byrdes, so are theyr houses full of that whiche they haue gotten with fasehode & deceyt. Hereof commeth theyr great substaunce and rychesse, hereof are they fat Esay.i.a and wealthye, and are more mischeuous than another. They minister not ẏ law: they make no end of the fatherlesse cause: yea, and they prosper: yet they iudge not the poore accordyng to equity. Shoulde Jere.v.b I not punish these thynges sayeth ẏ lorde and.ix.a should I not be auenged of all suche people as these bee? Horrible and greuous thynges are done in the lande. The pro- Ose.vii.a phetes teache falsly, and the Priestes re- Rom.i.d ceiue giftes, and my people hath pleasure therin. What wil come therof at the last?

The.vi.Chapter.

The sinnes for which Jerusalem is afflict. Vn-circumcised eares. Couetousnes. Deceit. The lord reiecteth the sacrifices of the Jewes. The cōming of the Babilonians, is prophecied again.

COme out of Jerusalem ye stronge chyldren of A Beniamin: blow vp the trumpets ye Tecuites, set vp a token vnto Be-thearan, for a plage & a great miserye appereth out from the North. I wyl liken ẏ daugh- ii.Re.xiiii ter Sion to a fayre and tender woman, & c. to her shall come the shepeheardes with theyr flockes. Theyr tents shal they pitch rounde about her, and euery one shal fede them that are vnder his hande. Make battell against her (shall they say:) Arise, let vs go vp while it is yet daye. Alas the day goeth away, and the nyght shadowes fall downe. Aryse let vs go vp by nyght, & destroy her strong holdes, for thus hath ẏ lord of hostes commaunded. Hew downe her trees, and set vp bulwarkes agaynst B Jerusalem for the time is come that thys city must be punished, for in her is al ma-licousnesse. Like as a conduite spouteth out waters, so she spouteth out her wicked nesse. Robbery and vnrighteousnesse is heard in her, sorow and woundes are euer there in my sight. Amend thee (O Jerusalem) lest I withdraw my hart from thee, and make thee desolate and thy lande also, that no man dwel in it: For thus sayth the lord of hostes. The residue of Israell shalbe gathered as ẏ remnant of grapes.
And therfore turne thine hand again in- C to the basket like the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shall I speake: whom shall I warne ẏ he may take hede? Their eares Jer.iiii.a are so vncircumcised, that they maye not and.ix.d heare. Beholde, they take the word of god Jere.v.g. but for a scorn, & haue no lust therto. And and.xx.b.

therefore I am so full of thine indignation (O lorde) that I may suffer no longer, but shede it out upon the children that ar without, and upon all yong men. Yea, the man must be taken prisoner with the wife and the aged with the creple. Their houses with their landes and wiues, shall be turned unto straungers, when I stretche out my hand upon the inhabitors of this lande, sayth the lorde. For from the leaste unto the moste, they hang all upon coue-Esa.lvi.c tousnesse: and from the prophete unto the Jer.viii.b priest, they go all about with falsehed and D lyes. And beside that, they heale the hurt Esa.lix.c. of my people with swete wordes, saying: Je.viii.b. peace, peace, when there is no peace at al.
Ez.xiii.b Were they ashamed when they had committed abhomination? Truely naye, they Jere.x.c. be past shame. And therefore they shal fal among the slaine, and in the houre when I shall visite them, they shalbee broughte downe sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde, goe into the stretes, consyder, and make inquisition for the olde way, and yf it be ŷ good and right way, thē go therin, that ye may fynde reste for youre soules.
But they saye, we wyll not walke therin: and I wyll set watchmen ouer you, and therfore take heede unto the voyce of the trumpet.
E But they saye, we wyll not take hede.
Heare therefore ye Gentiles, & thou congregation shalt know, what I haue deuised for them. Hear thou earth also: behold Je.xix.a. I wyll cause a plage to come upon thys people, euen the fruit of theyr owne yma-ginations. For they haue not bene obedient unto my wordes and to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherfore bring ye me in-Esay.i.b cense from Saba, and swete smelling Ca-Jer.vii.c. lamus from farre countryes? Your burnt offringes displease me, and I reioyce not in your sacrifices. And therfore thus saith the lord: Behold, I wyl make this people fal, and there shal fal from among them ŷ father with the chyldren, one neyghbour Jere.i.c. shall perish with an other. Thus saith the and.v.a lord: Behold, there shal com a people from Abacu.i.c F the North, & a great people shall arise frō the endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes shall they be weaponed. It is a rough and fearce people, & an unmer-cifull people: theyr voyce roareth lyke the sea, they ryde upon horses wel appointed to the battaile againste thee. O daughter Sion. The cry of them haue we heard.
Our armes are feble, heauinesse & sorow is come upon us, as a woman trauelyng with chylde. Let no man go foorth into ŷ field, let no man come upon the hye strete: for the swearde and feare of the enemyes is on euery syde. Wherfore girde a sacke-cloth about thee (O thou daughter of my G people) sprinckle thy self wt ashes: mourne Am.viii.b and wepe bitterly, as upon thine owne beloued sonne. For the destroyer shall so-deinly fall upon us. Thee haue I set for a strong towre (O thou prophete) and a wel fenced wall among my people, to seke out Pl.xi.a and to trye theyr waies. For they are all am.viii.b stubborne apostates, and fallē away wal- Rom.ix.c king deceitfullye: they are cleane brasse, & yron, for they hurt and destroy euery mā.
The bellous are brent in the fier, the lead is not molten: the melter melteth in vain, for the euil is not taken away from them.
Therfore do they call them naughtye siluer, bicause the lord hath cast them out.

The.vii, Chapter.

Jeremy is commaunded to shew unto the people the worde of god, whiche trusteth in the outwards seruice of the temple. The euils that shall happen to the Jewes for the despising of their prophets. Sacrifices doth not the Lord chiefly require of the Jewes, but that thei should obey his word.

THese are the wordes that I God spake unto Jeremy, Je.xxvi saying: Stand under the i.xxvi.a gate of the lordes house, and cry out these wordes there with a loude voice, and say: Heare the worde of the lorde all ye of Juda, that goe in at this dore to worship the lord. Thus sayth the lorde of hostes the God of Israell. A- Esay.lv mende your waies and your councels, & Je.xviii I will let you dwell in this place. Truste not in false lying woordes, saying: here is the temple of the lorde, here is the temple of the lorde, here is the temple of the lord.
But rather in dedes amende your wayes B and counsels, and iudge right betwixte a Ez.xviii man and his neighbor: oppresse not the Za.vii straunger, the fatherlesse, and the widow Leu.xix shedde not innocente bloud in this place: Joh.xxii cleaue not to straunge gods to your own a destruction: then will I let you dwell in this place: yea, in the land that I gaue afore tyme unto your fathers for euer. But take hede: ye trust in lying tales that beguile you, and do you no good. For when ye haue stollen, murthered, committed ad uoutry, & periurye: When ye haue offered unto Baal, folowyng straunge and vnknowen gods, shal ye be vnpunished. Yet C then come ye and stand before me in this iii.Ki.viii house (whiche hath my name geuen vn-a to it) and say: Tush, we are absolued quite Mat.xxi.b though we haue done all these abhomy-Esa.lvi.b nations. What think you this house that Job ii b beareth my name, is a den of theues? And mar.xi b yet I see what you thinke, sayth the lord.

Je.xxvi.c Goe to my place in Siloh, whereunto I Jos.xviii.a gaue my name afore tyme, and looke wel Je.xxvi. what I did to the same place, for the wyc-a kednesse of my people of Israel. And now though ye haue done al these dedes (saith the lorde) and I my selfe rose vp euer by tymes to warne you, & to common wyth Prou.i.c you, yet would ye not heare me. I called Esa.lxv.b ye would not answere. And therfore euen Luk.xxi.a as I haue done vnto Siloh, so wyll I do vnto this house, that my name is geuen vnto: (& that ye put your trust in) yea vnto the place that I haue geuen to you, and D your fathers. And I shall thrust you oute i.lxvii.a of my syght, as I haue cast oute all youre brethren y whole sede of Ephraim. Ther-Je.xiiii.b fore thou shalt not pray for this people, Exo.xxxii.c thou shalt neither geue thankes, nor byd i.Joh.v.c praier for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wyse will Je.xliiii.c I heare thee. Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Juda, and in the stretes of Juda, and in the stretes of Jerusalem?
The children gather styckes, the fathers kindle the fier, y women kneade y dough, to bake cakes for the Queene of heauen.
They poure out drinke offerynges vnto strange gods, to prouoke me vnto wrath.
Howbeit they hurt not me (saith y lorde) but rather confounde and shame themselues. And therfore thus saith the Lorde God: beholde my wrath and indignation shalbe poured out vpon this place, vppon men and cattell, vpon the trees in y field, and fruite of the lande, and it shall burne so that no man may quenche it. Thus sai-E eth the lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Esay.i.a Heape vp your burnt offerings with your Deu.x.a sacrifices, and eate the fleshe. For when I Esa.lviii.a brought youre fathers oute of Egipte, I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offerynges and sacrifices: but this I com-Exo.xix.a maunded them, saying: herken & obey my voyce, and I shall be your god, & ye shalbe my people, so that ye walk in al the waies which I haue commaunded you, that ye Zach.vii may prosper. But they wer not obedyente a they enclyned not theyr eares therevnto, but went after theyr own imaginations & after the motions of theyr owne wicked harte, and so turned themselues awaye, & conuerted not vnto me. And thys haue they done, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egipt vnto this daye. Je.xxv.a Neuerthelesse I sent vnto you al my ser- xxix.c.xliiii uauntes the prophetes. I rose vp early & F sent you woorde: yet would they not her-ken nor offer me theyr eares, but wer obstinate, and worse than their fathers. And thou shalt nowe speake all these woordes vnto the, but they shal not heare the, thou shalt cry vpon them, but they shall not an-swere thee. Therefore shalt thou say vnto them: this is the people, that neyther heareth the voyce of the lord theyr God, nor Jer.v.a receiueth his correction. Faithfulnes and G truth is clene rooted out of their mouthe. Ezec.v.a Wherfore cut of thine heare, O Jerusalē, and cast it away, take vp a complainte on hie, for the lorde hath caste away, & scattered the people that he is displeased with-all. For the chyldren of Juda, haue done Je.xxxii.d euyll in my syght, sayth the Lorde. They haue set vp their abhominations in the house that hath my name, & haue defyled it. They haue also builded an aulter at Topheth, whiche is in the valley of the De.xxxii.c children of Hēnom, that they might burn iiii.king, their sonnes & daughters in fyer, whiche xxiii.c I neuer commaunded thē, neither came Psa.cvi.e it euer in mi thought. And therfore behold Je.xlix.a the daies shall come (sayth the lorde) that it shall nomore be called Topheth, or the valley of y childrē of Hēnom, but y valley of slaughter: for in Topheth they shall be Jer.xix.a buried, bicause thei shal els haue no roum Yea the dead bodies of his people shall be Je.viii.b. eaten vp of the foules of the ayre, & wylde and.ix.c beastes of the earth, and no man shal fray them away. And as for the voyce of mirth Jer.xvi.b and gladnesse of the cities of Juda & Je- and.xxv. rusalem, the voyce of the bridegrome, and b, of the bride, I wyll make them ceasse: for Eze.xvi.b the lande shalbe desolate.

The.viii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes. The lord moueth the people to amendement, reckening vp their sinnes. He reprehendeth the lying doctrine of the prophetes and priestes.

AT y same time saith y lord A the bones of the kyng of Juda, the bones of y priestes and prophetes: yea, & the bones of y citizens of Jerusalē shalbe brought De.iiii.c. out of their graues, and layd against y Sunne, y Moone, and all the heauenly host, whom they loued, who they serued, whom they ran after, whome they sought and worshipped. They shall neither be gathered together nor buried, Lu.xxiii.e but shall lye as dong vpon the earthe, to theyr shame and despising. And all they ye remain of this wicked generation, shall desire rather to die than to liue, wheresoe= uer they remaine, and whereas I scatter them, saith the Lord of hostes. Thus shalt thou say vnto them also, thus saith ye lord: B Do me fal so, that thei arise not vp again?

Or if Israel repent, wil not god tourne a= gain to them? Wherfore then is this peo= ple and Jerusalem gone so farre backe, ye they turne not agayne? They are euer the longer the more obstinate, and wil not be Ez.xxii.b conuerted. For I haue looked and consy= dered, but there is no man that speaketh a good woorde: there is no man ye taketh repentaunce for his sin, that wil so muche as saye: wherefore haue I done this? But euery man (assoone as he is turned back) runneth foorth still lyke a wilde horse in a battell. The Storke in the ayre kno=

& yet they be not ashamed: yea they know

Moreouer, I wil consume them in deede (saith the lord) so that there shall not bee E one grape vpon the vine, neyther one fig vpon the figtree, & the leaues shalbe pluckt of. And the thing that I haue geuen them shalbe taken from them: why prolong we the time? Let vs gather oure selues toge= ther, & go into the strong citie: there shall we be in rest. For the lorde our God hath put vs to silence, & geuen vs water myxte with gall to drinke, bycause we haue syn= we fare not the better: we wayted for the F time of helth: and loe here is nothing but Jer.iiii.a trouble. The noyse of his horses is hearde from Dan, the whole land is afraid at the neying of his strong horses, for they are com in, and haue deuoured the land, with al that is in it, ye cities & those ye dwel ther= in. Moreouer I wil sende Cockatrices & serpentes among you, (which wyll not be Lam.ii.b charmed) & they shall byte you, sayeth the lord. I would haue had comfort agaynst sorow: but sorowe is come vppon me, and heuines vexeth my hart: for loe, the voyce G of ye crying of my people is heard, for feare of them that come from a farre countrey.

Is not the lord in Sion? Is not the king in her? Wherefore then haue they greued me (shall the lorde say) with their images, & folish strange fashions of a forein god?
The haruest is gone, the sommer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed bicause of the hurt of my people. I am heauy and abashed: is there no triacle at Gilead? Is there no Phisition there? Why then is not ye helth of my people recouered?

Jer.v.b. Should I not punish them for these thin-the mountayns will I take up a lametation and a sorowfull cry, and a mourning upō the faire plainnes of the wyldernesse: Namely, how they ar so brent up, that no man goeth there any more. Yea a mā shal not heare one beast crye there. Birds and cattell are all gone from thence. I wyll D make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a den of venemous wormes. And I wil make the cities of Juda so waste that no man shal dwel therin. What man is so wise, as to understand this? Or to whom hath the lorde spoken by mouthe, that he may shewe this, and saye: O thou lande, why perishest thou so? Wherefore art thou so brent up, & like a wildernesse ŷ no man goeth through? yea, the lord himself tolde the same unto thē ŷ forsooke his law, and maundement, neither liued therafter: but De.xxix.b folowed the wickednesse of theyr owne fathers taught them. Therfore thus sayeth the lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Behold, I will fede this people wt wormwood, and geue thē gall to drinke: I wyll scatter thē also among the heathen, whō E De.xxviii.b nether thei nor their fathers haue knowē hostes, beware of vengeaunce ŷ hangeth ouer you: and call for mournyng wyues, & send for wisewomen, that they com shortly, and sing a mourning song for you, that the teares may fal out of our eyes, and ŷ our eyelids may gush out of water. For there is a lamentable noise heard of Siō.

O how are we so sore destroyed. O howe are we so piteously confounded. We must F forsake our owne naturall countrye, and we are shut out of our own lodginges.
Yet heare the word of the lord (O ye women) and let your eares regarde ŷ words of his mouthe: that ye may learne youre daughters to mourne, and that euery one may teache her neighbors to make lamētation. Namely thus: Deathe is clymyng our houses, to destroy the chylde before ŷ tell thou plainly, thus sayth the Lord: Let Jer.viii.d.

Edomites, the Ammonites, ŷ Moabites, Jer.iiii.a & the shauen Madianites, that dwell in and,vi.b. the wildernesse. For all the gentiles are Rom.ii.c. vncircūcised in the flesh, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the hart.

The.x.Chapter.

The constellations of the starres are not to bee feared. Of the weaknesse of idols and of the power of God. Of euyll curates.

HEare the word of the lord A ŷ he speaketh unto thee, Ec.xlvii c O thou house of Israell.
Thus saith the lorde: ye shall not learne after the maner of the heathen, & ye shal not be afrayde, for the tokens of heauen: for the heathen are afrayde of suche: yea all the customes and lawes of the Gentiles, are nothyng but Ec.xliiii.c vanitye. They hewe downe a tree in the wood with the handes of the workeman and fashion it with the axe, they couer it ouer wyth golde or sylver, they fasten it wyth nayles and hammers, that it moue not.
It standeth as stiffe as a Palme tree, it can neyther speake nor goe one foote, Bar.vi.c. but muste bee borne. Bee not afrayde of iiii.king, suche, for they can dooe neyther good nor xvii.g euyll. But there is none like unto thee, O Lorde, and greate is the name of thy Apo.xv. power. Who woulde not feare thee, O kyng of the Gentiles, for thyne is the do- B minion. For among all the wyse menne of the Gentyles, and in all theyr kyng-domes, there is none that maye bee likened unto thee. They are altogether vn-learned and vnwyse in this one thyng.

All theyr cunnyng is but vanitie, namely wood, siluer, whiche is broughte oute of Tharsis, and beaten to plates: and golde i.kin. ix.c from Ophir, a woorke that is made wyth the hand of the craftesman, and the caster clothed with yelow silke and scarlet: euen so is the woorke of theyr wisemen altoge-Nau. i.a. ther. But the lord is a true God, a lyuyng God, and an euerlastyng king. If he bee wroth the earth shaketh: all the Gentiles may not abide his indignation. As for theyr Gods thus shall you saye to them: they are Gods that made neither heauen nor earth, therfore shall they perishe from the earth, and from al thyngs vnder hea-Gene. i.a uen. But (as for our God) he made þ earth with his power, & with his wisedom doth he order the whole compasse of the world, with his discretion hath he spreadout the C heauens. At his voyce the waters gather ps.cxliiii a together in the ayre, * he draweth vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of the earth: he turneth lyghtnyng to rayn, and bryngeth foorth the windes oute of theyr Esay .i.d treasures: His wisedome maketh all men e.xliiii. b. fooles. And confounded be all casters of i-Jere. vi.e mayes, for that they cast is but a vayne thyng, and hath no life. The vain craftesmenne with theyr woorkes, that they in theyr vanitye haue made, shall perish one with another, in the tyme of visitation.
Neuerthelesse, Jacobs porcion is none suche: but it is he that hath made al thyn-ges, and Israell is the rod of his inhery-D taunce. The lorde of hostes is his name.
Gather vp thy wares oute of the lande, thou that arte in the strõg place. For thus sayth the lord: Behold, I wyl now throw, as with a stone sling the inhabitours of this land at this once, and I wil bring trouble vpon them, that they shall proue true the woordes that I haue spoken by the prophetes. Alas howe am I hurte. Alas how painefull are my scourges vnto me? For I consider this sorow by my self, and I must suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my coardes are broken.
My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to spread out my tent, or to set vp my hanginges. For the heardmen haue doone foo-E lishly that they haue not sought the lord.
Therefore haue they dealte vnwysely with theyr cattell: and all are scattered abrode. Beholde, the noyse is harde at hande, and greate sedition oute of the North: to make the cityes of Juda a wyl-dernesse, and a dwelling place for Dragons. Nowe I knowe (O Lord) that it is Prou.xvi. not in mannes power to order hys owne wayes, or to rule his owne steps and go-ynges. Therfore chasten thou vs: O lorde Psal.vi.
but with fauoure and not in thy wrathe, xxxviii.

tiles that knowe thee not, and vppon the people that cal not on thy name. And that bicause they haue consumed, deuoured, & destroyed Jacob: and haue made his habitation waste.

The.xi, Chapter.

A curse of them that obey not the worde of gods promysse. The people of Juda folowyng the steps of their fathers, worshippeth straunge Gods. The Lorde saith that he wil not heare the Jewes, and forbiddeth also Jeremy to pray for them.

This is anodher sermon, which the lord commaũ-ded Jeremy for to preach saying: heare the wordes of the couenaunte, and speake vnto the menne of Juda, and to all thẽ that dwell at Jerusalem. And saye thou vnto them: thus saieth the lorde God of Isra- De.xxvii. ell: cursed be euery one that is not obedy- c. ent vnto the wordes of this couenaunte. Gal.iii. which I commaunded vnto your fathers what time as I brought them out of Egipt from the yron fornace, saying: be obedient vnto my voyce, and do according to all that I commaund you, so shal ye be my people, and I wilbe your god, and wyl kepe my promisse, * that I haue sworne vnto your fathers. Namely that I would Gen. geue them a lande whiche floweth wyth mylk and hony, as ye see it is com to passe vnto this day. Then answered I & sayde Amen. Let it be euẽ so lord as thou sayest.
Then the lord said vnto me again: preach B this in the cities of Juda, and roũd about Jerusalem & say: heare þ words of this couenant þ ye may kepe them, for I haue diligently exhorted your fathers: euer since the time þ I brought them out of the lãd of Egipt vnto this daye. I gaue thẽ warning by times, saying: hearken vnto my voyce.
*Neuerthelesse they would not obey Je.vii. me, nor enclyne theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked ymaginations of theyr owne heartes. And therefore, I haue accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue gaue them to kepe which they (not wythstandyng) haue not kept. And the Lorde sayde vnto me, it is founde out that whole Israell, and all the citizens of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned themselues to the blasphemies of theyr forefathers, whiche had no luste to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge gods, and worshypped them. The house of Israell and Juda haue broken my couenaunt which I made with C theyr fathers. Therefore thus sayeth the lorde. Beholde, I wyl sende a plage vpon them, whiche they shall not be able to escape: and though they crye vnto me, I wil not heare them. Then shall ye townes Za.vii.b. of Juda, and the citizẽs of Jerusalem go, and cal vpon their gods, vnto whom they De.xxxii.c made theyr oblations, but thei shal not be able to helpe them in time of theyr trou-Jere.ii.d ble. For as many cities as thou hast, O Juda, so many gods haste thou had also.

And looke how many streetes there be in thee (O Jerusalem) so manye shamefull aulters haue ye set vp: aulters, I saye, to offer vpõ them vnto Baal. Therfore pray Jer.vii.d not thou for this people, and nether praise and.xiiii.a nor prayer for them: for though they crye vnto me in their trouble, yet wyll I not Aggei.ii.b heare thẽ. What part hath my beloued in my house, seyng he hath worked abhomination, seruing many straunge Goddes?
The holy fleshe offerynges in the temple are gone from thee. O Juda, & thou when thou hast done euill, makest thy boaste of Je.xvii.b it: the Lorde called thee a greene Olyue mat.vii.b tree, a faire one, a fruitfull one, a goodlye Rom.xi.c one: but with great clamor hath the enemy set fyer vppon it, and the braunches of it are destroied. For the lord of hostes that planted thee, hath deuised a plage for the (O thou house of Israel & Juda) for ye euil ye ye haue done to prouoke him to wrath, in that ye did seruice vnto Baal. This (O D Lord) haue I learned of thee, & vnderstãd it, for thou hast shewed me their imagina Esa.liii.b. tions. But I am (as meke as a lambe) an Oxe that is caryed away to be slaine, not Je.xviii.d knowing ye thei had deuised such a cõusel against me, saying: we wyll destroye hys meate with wood, & driue him oute of the land of the liuing: ye his name shall neuer Jer.xx.a be thought vpon. Therfore I wil beseche and.xvii.b thee now (O lorde of hostes) thou rightеous iudge, thou that triest the reyns and the hartes, let me see the auenged of them for vnto thee haue I committed my cause.
The lord therfore spake thus of ye citizens of Anathoth, ye sought to slea me, saying: Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Es.xxx.b. lorde, or els thou shalt dye of our handes: Am.vii.d Thus (I saye) spake the lorde of hostes: behold, I wyll visite you: your yong men E shall perish with the swerd, your sonnes & your daughters shall vtterly dye of hunger, so that none shal remaine: for vpon the citizens of Anathoth wil I bring a plage euen the yere of theyr visitation.

The .xii. Chapter.

The Prophet marueleth greatly at the prosperitie of the wicked, although he confesse God to be righteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh against Curates and preachers, that seduce the people. The Lorde threatneth to be auenged on vnto the nations that haue reigned vppon Israell, which troubled and vexed it.

O Lorde thou arte more A ryghteous, than that I shuld dispute with the.
Neuerthelesse, lette me talke with thee in thin-ges reasonable. Howe happeneth it, that the Job.xxi.a way of the vngodly is so prosperous: and Abacu.i.b that it goeth so wel with them which (wi- Ps.lxxiii. out any shame) offende, and liue in wyckednesse. Thou plantest them, they take roote, they growe, and bring forth fruite.
Thei boast muche of thee, yet art thou far from theyr reynes. But thou lord (to whõ Ps.cx.ii.e I am well knowen) thou that hast sene and proued my hart, take thẽ awaye, like as a flocke is caryed to ye slaughter house and appoint them for the daye of slaugh- Je.xliii.b all the herbes of the fyelde perysh, for the wickednesse of them that dwel therin.

The cattell and the birdes are gone: B yet say they: tush, god wyll not destroy vs De.xix.d with the footemen, howe wylt thou then e.xxiii.c.

thou mayest be safe: but howe wylte thou doe in the furious pryde of Jordane? For thy brethren and thy kinred haue altogether despised thee and cryed out vpõ thee in thine absence.
*Beleue them not, though they speake Jer.ix.a. faire wordes to thee. As for me (I say) I haue forsaken mine own dwelling place, Osa.xix.a and left mine heritage. My lyfe also that I loue so wel haue I geuen into ye handes of myne enemies. Mine heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wood. It cryed out vpō me, therfore haue I forsakē it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speck= led bird, a bird of diuerse colours is vpon C it. Come and gather ye together al ẏ bea= Esay.v.a stes of the field. Come that ye may eate it Esa.lvi.e vp: diuerse heardmen haue broken down my vineyarde, and troden vpon my porti= on. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wildernes and desert. They haue layde it waste: and now that it is waste, it sygheth vnto me. Yea, the whole land lyeth waste, and no manne regardeth it.

The destroyers come ouer the heath eue= ry waye, for the sweard of the lord dothe consume from the one ende of the lande, to the other, and no fleshe hath rest. Thei haue sowen wheate, and reaped thorns.
They haue taken heritage in possession, but it dothe them no good. And the Pro= phetes were ashamed of youre fruytes, bi= E cause of the great wrathe of the Lorde.
Thus sayeth the Lorde vppon al myne e= D uyll neyghbours, that laye hande vppon myne heritage, whiche I haue possessed, euen my people of Israell: beholde, I wil plucke them (namely Israell) out of theyr De.iiii.c lande, and put out the house of Iuda frō and.xxx.a among them. And when I haue rooted Esa.liii.b them out, I wilbe at one with thē again: and I wyll haue mercy vppon them: and bring them agayn euery man to his own heritage, and into his lande.

And if they (namely that trouble my i.Esa.i.a people) wyll learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: the Lorde liueth, (like as they learned my people to sweare by Baal,) then shall they be reckened a= mong my people. But yf they wyll not o= Mat.xxii. b, bey, then wyll I roote out thesame folke, and destroy them sayth the lord.

The.xiii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Iewes is prefigured and their sparsing abrode, why Israel was receiued to be the people of god, and why they were forsaken.

A Thus saith the lorde vnto me: go thy way & get thee a linnen breche and gird it about thy loynes, & let it not be wet. Then I got me a breche according to the cōmaundement of the lord, and put it about my loins. After this the second time, the lord spake vnto me a= gain: take the breche that thou hast prepa red and put about thee, and get thee vp, and goe vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the rocke. So wente I and hyd it in Euphrates, as the Lord commaunded me. And it happened long after this, that the Lord spake vnto me. Up and get thee to Euphrates, and fette thy breche from thence, whiche I commaunded thee to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, & dygged vp, and tooke the breche from the place where I had hid it: & behold, ẏ brech was corrupt, so that it was profitable for B nothyng. Then sayde the lord vnto me.
Thus sayth the Lorde: euen so wil I cor= rupt the pride of Iuda, and the hie minde of Ierusalem. This people is a wicked Je.viii.a people, they wyll not heare my word, they b.xviii.a folow the wycked ymaginations of theyr c.xx.c owne hart, and hang vpon strange gods, them they serue and worship, and there= fore they shalbe as this breche, ẏ serueth for nothyng. For as straughtly as a brech lyeth vpon a mannes loynes, so straight= ly dyd I bynde the whole house of Israel and ẏ whole house of Iuda vnto me, saith the Lorde, that they might be my people that they mighte haue a glorious name, De.iiii. that they might be in honoure, but they a.xxvi.a would not obey me. Therefore laye this Jer.xxi ryddle before them, and say: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell. Euery pot shall be filled wt wine. And thei shal saye: thinkest thou we know not, ẏ euery pot shalbe fyl= led wt wine? Then shalt thou say vnto thē.
Thus saith the lord. Behold, I shal fyl all the inhabitors of this land with dronkē= nes, ẏ kings that sit vpon Dauids stoole, the priestes and prophetes, withal ẏ dwell at Ierusalem. And I wyll set them one a= gaynst another: yea, the fathers against ẏ sonnes, sayth ẏ lord. I wil not pardon thē C I wyll not spare thē nor haue pitye vpon them, but destroy thē. Be obediente, geue eare, take not disdain at it, for it is ẏ lorde hymselfe that speaketh. Honour the lorde your God herein, or he take his light from you, & or euer your feete stumble in darke= nesse at the hil, lest whē ye loke for ẏ light he turne it into the shadow & darkenes of death. But yf ye wyll not heare me, that geue you secret warning, I wyll mourne from my whole harte for youre stubbor= nesse. Piteously wil I weepe, & the teares Je.xiiii shal gush out of mine eyes. For the lordes Threno. flocke shalbe caryed away captyue. Tell ẏ king and ẏ Queene: humble your selues, Je.xxii set you downe lowe, for your dignity shal be throwen down, & the crowne of youre glory

glory shall fall from your head. The cities towarde the south shall be shut vp, and no man shal open them. Al Juda shalbe caried away captiue, so that none shal remayne.
Lyft vp youre eyes and beholde thẽ ẏ come D from ẏ north: where is the flocke (O thou land) that was geuen thee? And wher ar thy fat & rich shepe? To whom wylte thou make thy mone, when the enemy shal com vpon thee? for thou hast taught them thy self, & made the maisters ouer thee. Shall not sorow come vppon thee as a woman trauelyng with childe? And if thou woul-C dest say then in thyne hart: Wherfore com Jere. xv. b these thinges vpon me? Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemies, shall thy hyn-der partes & thy fete be discouered. Maye a mã of Inde chaunge his skin, and ẏ cat of ẏ mountain her spots? No more may ye that be exercised in euil, do good. Ther-Ose. ii. b fore wil I scatter them, like as the stubble that is taken away with the south wynd.
This shalbe your porcion, and the porciõ of your measure, wherwith ye shall be rewarded of me, sayth the lorde: bycause ye haue forgotten me, and put your truste in deceytfull thinges. Therfore shall I turn thy clothes ouer thy head, & dyscouer thy thighes, ẏ thy priuities may be seen, thy aduoutry, thy deadly malice, thy beastlynes, & thy shameful whordom. For vpon ẏ fields and hilles I haue seen thine abhominations. Wo be vnto thee (O Jerusalẽ) when wilt thou euer be clensed any more

The. xiiii. Chapter.

Of the dearth that should come in Jewry. The prayer of the people asking mercy of the Lord. The vnfaithful people are not heard. Of prayer, fasting and of false prophetes that seduce the people.

A THe worde of the lord shenyng the dearthe of the fruites. Juda hath mourned, his gates ar desolate they are brought to hea-and the crye of Jerusalem goeth vp. The Lordes sente their seruauntes to fetche water, and when they came to the welles they did finde no water, but caryed theyr vessels home empty. They be ashamed & confounded, and couer their heades. For Je. xxiii. b the ground is dried vp: bicause there commeth no rain vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed and couer their heades. The hinde also forsoke the yong fawne, that she brought forth in the field, bicause ther was no grasse. The wylde asses did stand according to thy name, though our trans- and. xvii. c gressions and synnes be many, & agaynst thee haue we synned. For thou art ẏ comfort and helpe of Israell, in the tyme of trouble: why wylt thou be as a straunger in the lande, and as one that goeth ouer the fielde, and commeth in onelye to re-mayne for a nyght? Why wylt thou make thy selfe a coward, and as it wer a giaunt that yet maye not helpe? For thou (O Lorde) art in the middeste of vs: and thy name is called vpon of vs, forsake vs not.

Thus hath the Lord sayd vnto thys people, seyng they haue had suche a luste to wander abrode, and haue not refrayned theyr fete, and therfore displeased the lord but he wil now bring agayne to remembraunce all theyr mysdedes, and punyshe all theyr synnes. Yea, euen thus sayde the Jer. vii. d lord vnto me: thou shalt not pray to dooe Esa. xi. b this people good. For though they fast, I wyll not heare their prayers, and though they offer burnt offeryngs, and sacrifices yet will not I accept them. For I wyl destroy them with the swearde, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O lord god the prophetes saye vnto them: Tushe, ye shal nede to feare no sweard, and no hun- C ger shal come vpon you, but the lord shall Jere. v. d geue you continual rest in this place. And Soph. i. c the Lorde sayde vnto me: the Prophetes Jer. xii. a. preache lyes in my name, wheras I haue & xxiii. c not sent them, neither gaue I them anye charge, neyther dyd I speake vnto them: yet they preache vnto you false visions, Je. xxiii. d charming, vanitie, and deceitfulnesse of their own hart. Therfore thus sayeth the lord: as for those prophetes that preach in my name (whome I neuerthelesse haue not sent) and that saye: Tushe, there shall Za. xiii. a no sweard nor hunger be in this lande: w sweard and with hunger shall those prophetes perish, and the people to whõ they preache shall be cast out of Jerusalem, die of hunger, and be slaine with the sweard (and there shall be no man to bury them) both thei & theyr wiues, theyr sonnes and theyr daughters. For thus wyll I poure Jer. xvi. a theyr wickednesse vpon them. This shalt D thou say also vnto them. Mine eyes shall Thre. i. d wepe without ceasing day and night. For and. ii. e my people shall be destroyed with greate harme, & shal perish with a great plage.

For if I goe into the feldes, loe, it lyeth all full of slain men. yf I come into the citye: loe, they be all famished of hunger. Yea, their prophets also and priests, shalbe led into an vnknowen lãd. Hast thou thẽ vtterly forsaken Juda? Doest thou so ab-Jer. viii b horre Sion? Or hast thou plaged vs, that we cannot be healed no more? We looked for peace and there commeth no good: for the time of health: & loe, here is nothing but trouble. We knowlege (O lord) al our mis-Es. xlix. d dedes and the sinnes of our fathers, that we haue offended thee. Be not displeased O lord for thy names sake, forget not thy thy louing kindenesse. Remẽber ye throne of thy honor, breake not the couenaunt ye Jere. v. d, thou hast made with vs. Are there any among the gods of the Gentiles, that send rain or geue the showers of heauen? Or may the heauens drop raine without thy commaundement? Doest not thou it, O lorde our god in whom we trust? Yea, lord thou doest all these thinges.

is my delyte therein: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hande, for thou hast filled me with bitternesse. Shall my hea-uinesse endure for euer? Ar my plages thẽ so great that they maye neuer be healed?
Wilt thou be as one that is false, and as a water that falleth, and cannot continue?
Upon these wordes, thus sayd ye lord vnto me. If thou wilte tourne agayne, I shall set the in my seruice: and if thou wilt take out the thynges that are precious frõ the Jer, xvi vile, thou shalte bee euen as myne owne mouthe. They shall conuerte vnto thee, but turne not thou vnto them: and so shal I make thee a strong brasen wal against this people. They shall fight against thee but they shal not preuayle, For I my self Jere. i wil

wilbe with thee, to helpe thee and deliuer thee, sayeth the lorde. And I wyll rid thee out of the handes of the wicked, and deli-uer thee out of the handes of tirantes.

The .xvi. Chapter.

He prophecieth the misery of the Jewes. He sheweth that the worshipping of Idolles and the contempt of gods lawe is the cause of their misery. He prophecieth the captiuitie of Babilon, and their de-liueraunce from thence again. The callyng of the Gentiles.

1 Thus sayde the lorde vnto me: thou shalte take thee no wife, nor begette chyldren in this place. For of the children that ar born in this place, of their mothers þ haue borne them and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this lande, thus sayeth the Lorde Ps.lxxix.a they shal dye an horrible death: no man Jere.xv.a shall wepe for them nor burye them, but Ami.x.b they shall lye as dong vppon the earthe.
Je.xiiii.c They shall perish through the swearde & hunger, and their bodies shalbe meat for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earth. For thus sayth the lord: go not thou in vnto them, nor come to mourne & wepe B for them: for I haue taken my peace from this people (sayth the lorde) yea, my fauor and my mercy. And in this land shal they dye olde and yong, and shall not bee buried: no man shal bewepe them, no mã shal clip or shaue himself for them. There shal not one visit another, to mourne with thẽ for their dead, or to comforte them. One shall not offer another the cup of consolation, to forget their heauinesse for father 1.Cor.xv.b. and mother. Thou shalt not go into their feast house to sit downe, to eate & drynke with them: for thus sayth the Lord of ho-Jer.vii.d stes, the God of Israell. Beholde, I shall e.xxv.b. take awaye out of this place the voyce of mirth and gladnesse, the voyce of þ brydegrome, and of the bryde: yea, and that in your dayes that ye may see it.
C Nowe when thou shewest the people al these wordes, and they say vnto thee: wherefore hath the lorde deuised all thys Jere.v.b great plage for vs? Or what is the offẽce and synne that we haue done agaynste þ Lord our God? Then make thou thẽ this aunswere: bicause your fathers haue forsaken me, sayeth the lorde, and haue wal-De.iiii.b ked after straunge Goddes, whome they Jer.vii.b haue honored & worshipped, but me they haue forsakẽ, and haue not kept my law.
And ye with your shameful blasphemyes Jer.vii.d haue exceded the wickednesse of youre fathers. For euery one of you hath folowed the froward and euill imagination of his own harte: and is not obedient vnto me. Je.xviii.c Therfore will I cast you out of this land, into a lande that ye and youre fathers know not: and there shal ye serue strange goddes day and night, there will I shew you no fauour. Beholde, therfore (sayeth Je.xxiii.b the lorde) the dayes are come that it shall no more be sayde: the Lorde: the lorde lyueth which brought the children of Israell out of the lande of Egipt. But it shall be sayd the lorde liueth, that brought the chyldren of Israell from the North, and from all landes where he had scattered them: for I wyll bryng them agayne into the lande that I gaue vnto their fathers. D Beholde (sayeth the lorde.) I wil send out Mat.iiii.c many fishers to take them, and after that will I sende out many hunters to hunte them out from all mountaines and hilles and out of the caues of stone. For myne eyes beholde al their waies, and they can not be hid fro my face: neyther can theyr wicked dedes be kept close out of my sight But first will I sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blasphemies & sinnes, bicause they haue defiled my lande, namely with their stincking ydols, and with the cariõs of their abhominations, wherewith they Je.xiiii.a haue filled mine heritage. O Lorde my and.xvii.c strength, my power and refuge, in time of trouble. The Gentiles shal com vnto thee from the endes of the world, and saye verily oure fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes, theyr ydols are but vayne and vnprofy-table. Howe can a manne make those his gods which are not able to be gods? And therfore will I once teache them, sayeth þ lorde. I wyll shewe them my hande and my power, that they may knowe that my name is the lorde.

hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: go & stand Jer. xi. t. xix.

from the plain fieldes: from ẏ mountains,

The

The.xviii.Chapter.

God sheweth by the example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroy the despisers of his worde, and to helpe them again when they amende. The conspiracy of the Jewes against Jeremy, his prayer against his aduersaries.

A This is an other cōmunicatiō that God had with Jeremy, saying: Arise, and goe downe into the potters house, and there shall I tel thee more of my minde. Now whē I came to the Potters house, I founde hym makyng hys worke upon a whele. The vessell that the potter made of claye, brake among hys handes. So he began a newe, and made another vessell accordyng to his mynde.
Then sayde the lorde thus unto me: May Eccl.xxxiii.b not I do with you, as this potter doeth. O Jer.xix.c ye house of Israell, sayeth the Lorde. Be-Rom.ix.c holde, ye house of Israel, ye are in my hād euen as the clay in the potters hād. Whē I take in hande to roote out, to destroye, B or to wast away any people or kingdom, Ez.xviii yf that people (againste whome I haue xxxiii.c thus deuised) conuerte from theyr wyc-Jon.iii.b kednesse: I repent of the plage that I de-uised to bring upon them. Agayne, when I take in hande to builde or to plante a people or a kyngdome, if the same people do euyl before me, and heare not my voice I repente of the good that I deuised for them. Speake nowe therefore unto whole Juda, and to them that dwel at Jerusalem. Thus saieth the Lorde: Behold, I am deuysing a plage for you, and am takyng a thyng in hande agaynst you.
Je.xvi.a Therefore let euery man turne from hys Jon.iii.b euil way, take upon you the thyng that is good, and doe ryght. But they sayd: No-more of this: we will folowe oure owne ymaginations, and doe euery man according to the wilfulnesse of his own minde.
Therfore thus saith the lord: aske among C the heathen, if any man hath heard suche horrible thinges, as the daughter of Sion hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth uppon the stonye rockes of Liba-nus) moysten the fieldes? Or maye the springes of waters be so grauen awaye, that they rū nomore, geue moistnes nor make fruitful. But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice unto vayn Gods. And their prophets make them fal in their waies from the aūcient pathes, & to go into a foteway not used to be troden of nōne. Wherthorow thei haue brought their land into an euerlasting wildernes Jere.ix.b and scorne. So that whosoeuer goeth therby, and xlix.c therby, shalbe abashed and wagge theyr heades. With an East wind wyl I scatter them before their enemyes, and when theyr destruction commeth, I wil turne my back upon them, but not my face. Then saide thei, come let us imagine som thing Jere.xi.b against this Jeremy: for the priestes shal not be destitute of the lawe, neyther shall the wise men be destitute of counsel, nor the prophets destitute of the word of god. Com and let us smite him with the tong, & lette Psa.xix.c us marke al his wordes. Consider me, O D Lord, and heare the voice of mine enemies. Jere.x.d Shal they recompence euill for good: for thei haue digged a pit for my soule. Remē-ber that I stode before thee, to speake good for thē, and to turn away thy wrath from them. Therefore let their children dye of Psa.cix.b hunger, & let them be oppressed wyth the Thes.iiii sword. Let their wiues be robbed of their children, & become widowes: let their husbands be slain, let their yong men be kyl-led with the sweard in the field. Let the noise be heard out of their houses, when the mur-therer cōmeth sodeinly upon thē. For thei Jere.xi.b haue digged a pit to take me, & laide snares for my fete. Yet lord thou knowest all their coūsel, that they haue deuised to slep me. Forgeue not their wickednes, and let not their sin be put out of thy sight, but let them be iudged before thee as the giltye.
This shalt thou doe in the tyme of thy indignation.

The.xix.Chapter.

He prophecieth the destruction of Jerusalem, for the contempt and despising of the worde of God.

Thus saieth the lorde: goe A thy way and bye thee an earthen pitcher, & bryng forth the Senators and chiefe Priestes into the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, which lieth before the dore that is made of brick, & shew thē there the wordes that I wil tell thee, and say thus unto them: heare the word of the lord, ye kinges of Juda, and ye citizens of Jerusalem. Thus saith the lord of hostes the God of Israell: beholde, I wyll bryng iii.Re.xxi.c such a plage uppon this place, that the eares Jer.vi.c of all that heare it, shall glowe. And that bycause they haue forsaken me, and un-halowed thys place, and haue offered in

it

B it vnto straunge Goddes: whom neither they, theyr fathers, nor the kynges of Juda haue knowen. They haue filled this place also with the bloude of innoce-Deu.xii d cents. For they haue set vp an alter vnto xxviii. b, Baal, to burne theyr chyldren for a burnt Ps.cvi.e. offeryng vnto Baal, whiche I neyther Ez.xvi.c commaunded nor charged them, ney-and.xx.d. ther thought once thervppon. Beholde Jere.vii d therefore the tyme commeth (saith y lord) that thys place shall no more bee called Topheth, nor the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, but the valley of slaughter.
For in this place wyll I sley the Sena-tours of Juda and Jerusalem, and kyll them downe with the sweard in the sight of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues, and theyr dead carkasses wil iij.Ki.x.b I geue to be meate for the foules of the Je.xviii.b ayre, and the beastes of the fielde. And lxix.c.l.b. I will make this citie so desolate & despy-Threno. sed, y whosoeuer goeth therby, shalbe aiiii.b bashed, and leste vpon her, bicause of al De.xxviii her plages. I will fede the also with the
e. fleshe of theyr sonnes and theyr daughiiii.Ki.vi. ters. Yea, euery one shall eate vp an of. ther, in the besiegyng and straytnesse C wherewith theyr enemies (that seke their liues) shall kepe them in. And the pitcher shalt thou breake in the syght of the men that shal be with thee, and say vnto them: Je.xxviii. thus sayeth the lorde of hostes. Euen so a wyll I destroy this people and citye, as a manne breaketh an earthen vessell that Jer.vii.d cannot be made whole agayn. In Topheth shall they be buryed, for they shall haue none other place: thus will I do vnto this place also, sayeth the lorde, and to them that dwell therein: yea, I wyll do to this city as vnto Topheth: (for the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Juda, shalbe defiled, like as Topheth) bicause of all the houses, in whose parlors they did sacrifice vnto all the hoste of heauen, and powred drynke offerynges vnto strange Gods. And so Jeremy came from Topheth, where the Lorde had sente him to Prophecy, and stoode in the court of y house of the lord, and spake to all the people: thus sayeth the lorde of hostes, y God of Israell: Beholde, I wyll bryng vpon this citye and vpon euery towne about Jer.vii.c it, all the plagues that I haue deuised a-and.xiii b gainst the: for they haue bene obstinate and would not obey my warnynges.

The .xx. Chapter.

Jeremy is smitten and cast into prison for preaching of the worde of God. He prophecieth the cap-tiuitie of Babilon. He cōplaineth that he is a mocking stocke for the worde of god, he is compelled by the spirit to preache the worde.

When Phashur the Priest, the sonne of Emer, chiefe in the house of the Lorde, heard Jeremy preache so stedfastly: he smote Jere- Je.xl.b my, and putte hym in the stockes that are by the hie gate of Beniamin, in the house of y lorde.
The next daye folowyng, Phashur brought Jeremy out of the stockes againe.
Then sayde Jeremy vnto hym: the Lorde shal cal thee no more Phashur (that is excellent and increasyng,) but Magor (that is fearefull and afrayd) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll make thee afrayde, euen thy selfe and all that fauour thee, whiche shall perish with the sweard of their enemyes, euen before thy face. And I wil geue whole Juda vnder the power of y king of Babilon, which shall carye some vnto Babilon prisoners, and sley some with the sweard. More-ouer, all the substaunce of this lande, all their precious and gorgeous workes, all costlinesse, and all the treasure of y kyngs of Juda, will I geue into y hands of their enemies, whiche shal spoyle them and ca-rye them vnto Babilon. But as for thee (O Phashur) thou shalte bee caryed vnto Babilon, with all thyne housholde, and to Babilon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye and be buried: thou and all thy fauourers to whome thou haste preached lyes: O lord: yf I am deceiued, then haste thou deceyued me: thou hast dealt strongly, and haste preuayled, and makest me strong againe. All the day long am I despised and laughed to scorne of euery mā Threno. bicause I haue nowe long preached a- iii.b gaynst malitious tirannye, and shewed the of destruction. For the whiche cause they caste the worde of the Lorde in my teeth and take me euer to the worste. Jere.xii Wherefore I thoughte from henceforth C not to speake of hym, nor to preache anye more in his name.

But the worde of the lord was a very burning fier in my hearte, & in my bones, which whē I shuld haue stopped, I might not. For why? I heard so many derisiōs Ps.xxxi & blasphemies on euery side of me: cōplain vpon hym saye they, and we wyll tell hys tale, yea, euen of mine own companions,
and

[illegible] such as [illegible] conuersaunt with me, [illegible] sayinge: vpon [illegible] shal one way or other begile him [illegible] against hym and be auenged uauntes & thy people that go in and out

Esa.i.c. at this gate. Thus the Lord commaundeth Je.xxi.c. kepe equitie and righteousnesse, deliuer y Za.vii.c oppressed from the power of y violent: do not greue nor oppresse y straunger, y fatherlesse nor the widow: and shed no innocent bloud in thys place. And if ye kepe B these thinges faythfully, then shall there come in at the dore of thys house, kynges to sit vpon Dauids seate, they shalbe cari-ed in charettes, and ryde vpon horses, both Esa.i.e. they and their seruauntes, and their peo-Jer.li.c. ple. But if ye wil not be obedient vnto these Heb.vi.b commaundementes: I sweare by mine own selfe (sayth the Lord) thys house shalbe wast. For thus hath the Lord spoken vpō the kynges house of Juda. Thou Gilead art vnto me y head of Libanus. Shall I not make the so waste (and thy cities also) that no man shall dwell therin? I wyll C prepare a destroyer w hys weapons for Deuter. thee, to hew down thy especiall Cedre xxix.d. trees, & to cast thē in y fier. And all y peoiii.Kin. ple that go by thys citie, shall speake one ix.b. to another: Wherfore hath the Lord done De.xxix. thus vnto this noble citie? Thē shall it be B. answered: bicause they haue broken the iii.Kinges couenaunt of y Lord their God, and haue b. worshipped and serued straunge Gods. iiii.King. Mourne not ouer y dead, and be not wo xxiii.b. for thē, but be sory for hym that departeth ii.Para away: for he commeth not againe, and xxxvi.d. seeth hys natiue countrey no more. For iiii.Kin. thus sayth the Lord: as touching Selum xxiii.c the sonne of Josias kyng of Juda, which ii.pa.iii.c reigned after his father, and is caried out of thys place: he shal neuer come hyther againe, for he shal dye in y place wherunto he is led captiue, and shall see thys lāde D no more. Wo worth him that buildeth his Esa.v.c. house with vnrighteousnesse, & hys par-Agge.i.a lers with y good that he hath gottē by vio lēce: which neuer recompēceth his neighbours labour, nor payeth him hys hire: he thiketh in himself, I wil builde me a wide house and gorgeous parlers. He causeth windowes to be hewen therin, and the silinges and loftes maketh he of Cedre & painteth them with Sinaper: thynkest thou to reigne now, that thou prouokest me to wrath with y Cedre trees? Did not thy father eate and drynke, and prosper well, as long as he dealt with equitie and righteousnesse? yea, whē he helped y oppressed and poore to their right, thē prospered he well. From whēce came this, but only bicause he had me before hys eyes, sayth y Lord. Neuerthelesse, as for thyne eyes and thyne heart, they loke vpō coue-tousnesse to shed innocent bloud, to do wrong and violence. And therfore thus sayth y Lord against Jehoakim y sonne of Josias kyng of Juda. They shall not mourne for hym (as they vse to do:) O my brother, alas sister. Neyther shal they say vnto him: Alas sir: Alas for y noble prince.

But as an Asse shal he be buryed, corrupt and be cast without y gates of Jerusalē.
Clime vp y hil of Libanus (O y daughter Sion) lift vp thy voyce vpō Basan, cry to all partes, for all thy louers are destroyed I gaue thee warning, whyle thou wast yet in prosperitie. But thou saydest, I wil E not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed from thy youth, that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy heardmē shall be driuē with the winde, and thy derlinges shalbe caried away into captiuitie. Then shalt thou be brought to shame and cōfu-sion, bicause of all thy wickednesse, thou that dwellest vpon Libanus, and makest thy nest in the Ceder trees. O how litle F shalt thou be regarded whē thy sorowes Esa.xiii.
and panges come vpon thee, as a womā b. traueling with childe. As truly as I lyue i.xiii.
(sayth the Lord) though Conanias the Jer.xliii sonne of Jehoakim king of Juda were y i.xxv.i signet of my right hande, yet wil I plucke iiii.Kin. hym of. And I will geue thee into the po- xxiiii. wer of thē that seke to slay thee: and into the power of them y thou fearest, into the power of Nabuchodonosor y king of Ba-bilon, & into the power of the Chaldees.
Moreouer I wyl sende thee and thy mother that bare thee, into a straunge lande where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for y lande y ye wyll desire to returne vnto, ye shal neuer come at it a gaine. Thys man Conanias shalbe lyke an ymage robbed & torne in peces, which pleaseth no mā for al hys apparel. Wherfore both he & hys sede shalbe sent away, and cast out into a lande that they know not. O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the wordes of the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord: Write this man among the outlawes, for no prosperitie shall thys man haue al hys lyfe long. Neyther shall any of hys sede be so happy, as to sit vpō the seate of Da-uid and to beare rule in Juda.

The.xxiii.Chapter.

He speaketh against euill curates that make hauocke of the flocke of the Lord. Of the conuersiō of the remnaunt of the Jewes to the faith. The cōming of the true shepheard Christ is prophesied. Against false Prophetes, when a Prophete preacheth the wordes of God, God conuerteth y hearts of y hearers. Against Prophetes y teach lies vnder the name of God. The miracles of false prophetes.

WO be vnto the shepeherdes that destroy and scatter my flocke, sayth the lord. Wherefore thys is the commaundement of the lord god of Israel, vnto the shepeheardes that fede my people: ye scatter and thrust out my flock and loke not vpon them. Therfore now wil I vyset the wickednesse of your ymaginacions sayth the lord: and wil gather together the remnaunt of my flock from all londes that I had driuen them vnto and will bring them againe to their pastures, that they may grow and encrease I will set shepeheardes also ouer them,

B which shal fede them. They shal no more feare and dread, for there shall none of them be lost, sayth the lord. Beholde, the tyme commeth sayth ẏ lord, that I wyll rayse vp the righteous braunch of Dauid which king shall beare rule: and he shall prosper with wisdom, and shal set vp equity and righteousnesse againe in the earth. At thys tyme shall Juda be saued, and Israell shall dwell wout feare. And thys is the name that they shall call hym: eue the Lord our righteousnesse. And therefore beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that it shalbe no more sayd: ẏ Lord lyueth: which brought the childre of Israell out of ẏ lande of Egypt: but ẏ Lord liueth, which brought forth and ledd the sede of the house of Israell, out of the Northlande, and frõ all countreys wher I had scatred them: and they shall dwell in their own lãde again. My hart breaketh in my body bicause of the false prophetes, al my bones shake. I am become lyke a dronken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of

C the Lord and his holy wordes: bicause the lande is full of adouterers, and thorow swearing it mourneth, & the pleasãt pastures of the desert are dryed vp. Yea, the way ẏ men take, is wicked, and their gouernaunce is nothing like the holy worde of the Lord. For the Prophetes & the Priestes themselues ar poluted ypocrites, and their wickednesse haue I founde in my house, sayth the lord. Wherfore their way shalbe slippery in ẏ darknesse, wherin they may stagger and fall. For I wil bryng a plage vpon them, eue the yeare of their visitation sayth ẏ lord. I haue sene folly among the Prophetes of Samaria, ẏ they preached for Baal, & deceiued my people of Israell. I haue sene also among the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule adoutry, and presumptuous lyes. They take ẏ most shameful mẽ by the hand, flattering them, so that they can not returne from their wickednesse. All these with their citizens are vnto me as Sodome and as the inhabitours of Gomorra. Therfore thus sayth the lord of hostes concerning the Prophetes, behold, I wil fede them with wormwood, and make them drynke ẏ water of gall. For from the Prophetes of Jerusalem is ypocrisy come into all the land. And therfore the Lord of hostes geueth you this warnyng: Heare not the wordes of the Prophetes that preach vnto you, & deceiue you, surely they teach you vanity, for they speake the meaning of their own hearte and not out of the mouth of ẏ LORDE. They say vnto them that despise me: the Lord hath spoken it, such, ye shal prosper right well. And vnto all them that walk after the lust of their own heart, they say thus, there shal no misfortune happe you. For who hath sitten in the counsaile of ẏ Lord, that he hath heard and vnderstãd what he is about to do? Who hath marked hys deuise, & heard it? * Behold, the stormy wether of the Lord (that is hys indignation) shal go forth: and a violent whirle winde shall fall down vpon the head of the vngodly. And ẏ wrath of the Lord shal not turne againe, vntil he perfourme and fulfil ẏ thought of hys hart. And in ẏ latter dayes ye shall know hys meaning. I haue not sent these Prophetes (sayth ẏ Lord) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But if they had continued in my counsell, they had opened to my people my wordes: and they had turned my people from their euill wayes, & wycked ymaginations: am I then god that seeth but the thing which is nie at hande, and not that is farr of, saith ẏ Lord? May any man hyde hymselfe so, that I shal not see hym, sayth ẏ Lord? Do not I fulfil heauen and earth, sayth ẏ lord? I haue heard well ynough, what the Prophetes say ẏ preache lyes in my name, saying: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. Howe long wyll thys cõtinue in the Prophetes heart to tell lyes, and to preach ẏ craftie subtiltie of their own heart? Whose purpose is (wt the dreames ẏ euery one tel) to make my people forget my name, as their forefathers did, when Baal came vp. The Prophet that hath a dreame, let hym tell it: and he that vnderstãdeth my what hath chaffe and wheat to do together, sayth the Lord? Is not my worde lyke a fire, sayth the Lord? & like a ham-fore thus sayth the Lord: beholde, I will vpon the Prophetes, that steale my word priuily from euery man: behold, here am I (sayth the Lord) against ẏ Prophetes that make tonges tender to speake, and to say: the Lord hath sayd it. Behold, here am I (sayth ẏ Lord) against those Prophetes ẏ dare prophecy lying dreames, & disceiue my people with their vanities & miracles: whom I neuer sent nor commaunded them. They shall do thys people great harme sayth the Lord. Yf thys people, eyther any Prophet or Priest ask thee, and say: what is the burthen of the Lord? Thou shalt say vnto them: what burthen. Therfore wil I cast you fro me (sayth the Lord) bicause ye your selues are (a burthen.) And the Prophet, priest, or people that vseth thys terme (the burthen of the Lord) him will I visite: and hys house also. But thus shal ye say eue-ry one to another, and euery man to hys brother. What answere hath the Lord geuen? or what is the Lordes commaun-G dement? And as for the burthen of the Lord, ye shall speake no more of it: for euery mannes own word is hys burthē, bicause ye haue altered the words of the liuing god, the Lord of hostes our God.

Thus shall euery mā say to the Prophetes, what answere hath the Lord geuen thee? Or what sayth the Lord? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde.
Therfore thus sayth ẏ Lord. Forsomuch as ye haue vsed thys terme, the burthen of the Lord, wheras I notwithstandyng sent vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen: behold therfore I wil repute you as a burthen, and wil cast you out of my presence: yea, and the citie also that I gaue you, and your fathers: and wil bring you to an euerlasting cō-fusion: and into such a shame as shal neuer be forgotten.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

The visiō of the two paniers of figges. The first vision signifieth that part of the people shuld be brought agayne from captiuitie: The seconde that Zedekias and the rest of the people should be be destroyed.

A The Lord shewed me a vision. Behold, there stode two maundes of figges, before the temple of the Lord, after that Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon had led away captiue Iechonias the sonne of Ieoakim king of Iuda, the mightie men also with the workemaisters, and cunning men of Ierusalē, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good figges, euen like as those that be first ripe. In the other maunde were very naughty figges, which might not be eaten, they were so euill. Then sayd ẏ Lord vnto me: what seest thou Ieremy?
I sayd figges, wherof some be very good and some so euil ẏ no mā may eate them.
Then came the worde of the Lord vnto B me after this maner. Thus saith the lord the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest the good figges, so shal I know the men led away whom I haue sent out of thys place, into the lande of the Chaldees for their profit: and I will set myne eyes vpō them, for the best, for I will bring them againe into thys lande: I will builde thē vp, and not breake them down: I will plant them and not roote thē out. And C I will geue them an heart to know how that I am the Lord: they shalbe my people, and I will be their God, for they shal returne vnto me with their whole heart.
And lyke as thou knowest the naughtie figges which may not be eaten, they are so euill: euen so wil I (sayth the Lord) let Zedekias the kyng of Iuda (yea, and all hys Prynces, and the residue of Ierusalē D that remaine ouer in this lande, and thē also that dwell in Egipt) be vexed and plaged in all kyngdomes and landes.
And wyll make them to be a reprofe, a common bywoorde a laughing stocke and shame, in all places where I shall scatter them. I will sende ẏ sweard, hunger and pestilence, among them: vntil I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

The. xxv. Chapter.

Ieremy prophecieth that they shalbe in captiui-tie. lx. yeares and. x. bicause they contemned and despised the worde of God. He sheweth that after the. lx. and. x. yeares, the Babilonians shoulde be destroyed. The destruction of all nations is pro-phecied. He moueth the Priestes of the nations to wailing.

A Sermon ẏ was geuen vnto A Ieremy, vpon all the people of Iuda. In ẏ fourth yere of Iehoakym ẏ sonn of Iosias king of Iuda, ẏ was in ẏ first yere of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon.

A This Sermon Jeremy the Prophet made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitours of Jerusalem in thys maner. From the thyrtene yeare of Josias the sonne of Amon kyng of Juda, vnto thys present day (that is euen thre and twenty yeare) the word of the Lord hath ben committed vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you, I haue rysen vp early, I haue geuē you warnyng in season, but ye would not heare me. Though the Lord hath sent hys seruauntes, all ye Prophetes vnto you in season, yet would you not obey: ye would not enclyne your eares to heare. He sayd: turne agayne e-uery man from hys euill way, and from your wicked ymaginations, and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande that ye lord promised you, and your forefathers. And go not after straunge Gods, serue them not, worshyp them not, and anger me not with the workes of your handes: the wil B not I punish you. Neuerthelesse, ye would not heare me (sayth the Lord) but haue defied me with the workes of your handes, to your own great harme. Wherfore thus sayth ye Lord of hostes, bicause ye haue not hearkened vnto my word: lo I wyll sende out and call for al the people that dwell in the North (sayth the Jere. l. b. Lord) and will prepare Nabuchodono-Esa. v. b. sor the kyng of Babilon my seruaunt, & wyll bryng them vpon thys lande, and vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon al ye C people that are about them, and will v-terly roote them out. I wil make of them a wildernesse, a mockage, and a continuall desert. Moreouer, I will take frō them the voice of gladnesse and solace, ye Je. vii. b. voyce of the brydegrome and the bryde, the voyce of the annointed, with the cres-sets: and thys whole lande shal become a wildernesse, and these nations shal serue the kyng of Babilon threescore yeares & ii. Para. ten. When the threescore yeares and ten xxxvi. d. are expired I will visite also the wicked-
i. Esd. i. a nesse of the king of Babilō, and hys peo-Je. x. e. ple, sayth the Lord: yea, and the lande of Dan. ix. a the Chaldees, and will make it a perpe-Zac. i. b. tuall wildernesse, and will fulfill all my wordes vpon that lande, which I haue deuised against it: yea, all that is writtē in thys boke which Jeremy hath prophe cied of all people: so that they also shalbe subdued vnto diuers nations and great Job. kinges: for I will recompence them ac-xxxiiii. b. cording to their dedes, and workes of D their own handes.

For thus hath the Lord God of Israell spoken vnto me. Take thys wine cup Esa. li. b. of indignation fro my hande, that thou Apo. xiv. b mayest cause all the people to whom I sende thee, for to drynke of it: that when they haue dronken therof, they may bee mad, and out of their wittes, when the swearde commeth ye I wyll sende among them. Then toke I the cup from the Lordes hande, and made all people to drynke therof, vnto whom the Lord had sent me.

But first, the citie of Jerusalem, and all the cities of Juda, their kinges and Princes, to make them desolate, waste, despised, and hyssed at, and cursed, accor- E ding as it is come to passe thys day. yea, and Pharao the king of Egipt, hys seruauntes, hys Prynces, and hys people altogether, one with another. And all kinges of the lande of Hus: all kinges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Ac-caron, and the remnaunt of Asdod, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Am-monites. All the kinges of Tyrus, and Sydon, the kinges of the Iles, that are beyonde the Sea, Dedan, Thema, Buz, and all them that dwell in the vttermost partes of the world: all ye kynges of Araby, and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the desert: all the kinges of Zamri, all ye kynges of Elam, al the kynges of the Medes, all the kinges toward the North, whether they be farre or nye, eue-ry one against hys neighbour: yea, and all the kingdomes that ar vpon ye whole earth. The kyng of Setach says he, shal drynk wyth them also. Therfore saythou vnto them: thys is the commaundement F of the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: drynke, and be dronken, spewe and fall, that ye neuer arise: and that through the sweard, which I will sende among you.
But if they will not receiue the cuppe of thyne hande and drynke it, then tell them. Thus doeth the Lord of hostes threaten you: drynke it ye shall, and that shortly. For loe, I begin to plague the Je. xlix. b. citie that my name is geuen vnto: think Eze. ix. b. ye then that I will leaue you vnpunished i. Pe. iiii. ye shall not go quite: for why? I cal for a sweard vpō all the inhabiters of ye earth, sayth the Lord of hostes.

Therfore tell them all these wordes, and say vnto them: *The Lord shall cry Joe. iii. c from aboue, and let hys voyce be heard Amo. i. a. from hys holy habitation. With a greate noyse shall he cry from hys court regall.

He shall geue a great voyce, (lyke the grape gatherers,) and the sounde therof shalbe hearde vnto the endes of þ worlde.
For the lord hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, and wyl holde hys court of iustice with all fleshe, and punishe the vngodly sayth the lord. For thus sayeth G the lord of hostes: beholde, a miserable Je.xxx.d. plague shal go frō one people to another, and a great stormy water shall arise frō all the endes of the earth.

And the same day shall the lord hymselfe slay them, frō one ende of the earth to another. There shal no mone be made for any of them, none gathered vp, none buryed: but shall lye as doung vpon the grounde. Mourne (O ye shepeherdes) and cry, sprinckle your selues with asshes. O ye Rammes of the flocke, for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slay one another, and you shalbe scattered & ye shal fal lyke vessels coningly made. The shepeherdes shall haue no Psalme. cxlii.a. way to flye, and the Rammes of þ flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepeherdes cry horribly, and the Rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the lord hath consumed their pasture, and their best fieldes lye dead, bicause of the horrible wrath of the lord. They haue forsaken their foldes like as a lion. For their land is wast, bicause of hys furious crueltie, & of hys fearefull indignation.

The.xxvi.Chapter.

Jeremy moueth the people to amendemente.
He is taken of the Prophetes and Priestes, and brought to iudgement. Uriah the Prophete is killed of Jehoakim contrary to the will of God.

A IN the beginning of the reigne of Jehoakym the sonne of Josiah king of Je.vii.a. c.xvii.d. Juda, came thys worde frō the lord, saying: thus sayth the lord. Stande in the courte of the lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (out of the cities of Juda) come to do worship in the lordes house, all the wordes Deu.iiii. a. that I commaunde thee to saye. Loke and xii. b, that þ kepe not one word back, if (perad-Je.xviii.a uenture) they will hearken, and turne e-Joh.iii.b. uery man from hys wycked way, that I may also repent of the plague whiche I haue determined to bryng vppon them, bicause of their wicked inuentions. And after thys maner shalt thou speake vnto B them. Thus sayth the lord: if ye wyll not obey me, to walke in my lawes which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the Prophetes whom I sent vnto you, rising vp timely, and sti-sending: (If ye will not followe them I Jer.vii. say,) then wyll I do to thys house, as I dyd vnto Syloh, and wyll make thys ci-tie to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the Priestes, the Prophetes, and all the people heard Jeremy preach these wordes in the house of the lord.
Now when he had spokē out al the wor-des that the lord commaunded hym to preach vnto the people: then the Priestes, the Prophetes, and all the people toke holde vpon hym, and sayd: thou shalt dye. How darest thou be so bolde, as to say in the name of the lord, it shall happē to thys house as it did vnto Syloh: and thys citie shalbe so waste, that no man shall dwell therin. And when al the peo- C ple were gathered about Jeremy in the house of the Lord, the Princes of Juda heard of thys rumour, and they came sone out of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lord, and sate them downe before the new dore of the Lorde. Then iiii.Reg. xv.g. spake the Priestes and the Prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people, Je.xxxvi. b. these wordes: this man is worthy to die, Joh.vii.
for he hath preached against this citie, Math. xxvi.g. as ye your selues haue heard with your eares. D

Then sayd Jeremie vnto the rulers, and to all the people: the LORDE hath sent me to preache against thys house, and against this citie, all the wordes that ye haue heard. Therfore amende your wayes, and your aduisemē-tes, and be obedient vnto the voice of the Lord your God: so shal the lord repent of the plague that he hath deuised against you. Now as for me, I am in your hāds, do with me as ye thinke expedient and good. But thys shal ye know: if ye put me Mich.iii.
to death, ye shal make your selues, thys c. citie, and all the inhabitors therof, giltie E of innocent bloud. For thys is of a truth that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayd the rulers and the people vnto the Priestes and Prophetes: thys man may not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lord our God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto al the people:

Mich.i.a. people: Micheas the Morasthite, which was a Prophete vnder Hezekia king of Juda, spake to al yͤ people of Juda: thus Mi.iii.c. sayth the Lord of hostes: Sion shall be plowed like a field: Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of yͤ Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wood. Did F Ezekiah the king of Juda and the peo-Jon.iii.b ple of Juda put hym to death for thys?
No verily: but rather feared the Lorde, & made their prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the Lord repented of yͤ plague, that he had deuised against thē.
Shuld we then do such a shameful dede against our soules? There was a Prophet also that preached stiffly in the name of the Lord, called Uriah yͤ sonne of Semeiah, of Cariathiarim: thys man preached also against thys citie, and against thys lande according to al as Je-iii.king. xxii.d. remy sayth. Now when Jehoakim the kyng, with all the estates, and Princes, had heard hys wordes, the kyng went a iii.Ki.xix. a. bout to slay hym. When Uriah perceiued that, he was afrayd and fled, and depar-Mat.ii.c. ted into Egipt.

Then Jehoakim the kyng sent hys seruauntes into yͤ lande of Egipt: namely Elnathā the sonne of Achbor and certaine men with hym into Egipt, whiche fetched Uriah out of Egipt, and brought hym vnto kyng Jehoakim that slew him with the sweard, and cast hys dead body into the common peoples graue. But A-hicam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremy, that he came not into the handes of the people to be slaine.

The.xxvii.Chapter.

Jeremy at the commaundement of the Lorde, sendeth bondes to the king of Juda, and to the other kinges that were nye, wherby they ar monished to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonozor. He warneth the people and the kinges & rulers, that they beleue not false Prophetes.

A IN the beginning of the raigne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda came thys worde vnto Jeremy from the Lord, which spake thus vnto me: make thee bon-des and cheines, and put them about thy necke, and sende them to the king of Edom, to the kyng of Moab to the kyng of Ammon, to the kyng of Tyrus, and to the king of Sidon: and that by the mes-sangers which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Zedekiah the king of Juda: and bid them say vnto their maisters: thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israell, speake thus vnto your maisters: I am he Deu.x.c. that made the earth, the men and the ca-tell, that are vpon the grounde, wyth my great power, and outstretched arme, and haue geuen it vnto whom it pleased me. B And now will I deliuer all these landes Eccl.x.a. into the power of Nabuchodonozor the Judi.xi.d kyng of Babilon my seruaunt. The bea- Je.xxxii.a stes also of the fielde shall I geue him, to Da.iiii.c do hym seruice. And all people shall Je.xxv.b serue hym, and hys sonne, and hys chil- Je.xxi.b, ders children, vntill the tyme of the same xxxviii.a, lande be come also: yea, many people and xliii.e. great kynges shall serue hym.

Moreouer, that people and kingdom which will not serue Nabuchodonozor, & that will not put their neckes vnder the yoke of the king of Babilō: the same people will I visite with the sweard, w hunger, with pestilence, vntill I haue consumed them in hys handes sayth the Lord.
And therfore folow not your Prophetes Je.xxiii. soothsayers, expoūders of dreames, char c. mers, and wytches, which say vnto you: e.xxix.b. ye shall not serue the kyng of Babilon.
For they preach you lyes, to bryng you farre from your lande: and that I might cast you out, and destroy you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babilon, and serue hym, those will I let remaine stil in their own lande, (sayth the Lord) & they shall occupy it and dwell therin.

All these things tolde I Zedekiah the C kyng of Juda, and sayd: put your neckes Jeremy, vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babilon, & xxxviii.c. serue hym and hys people, that ye maye lyue. Why wilt thou and thy people perish with the sweard, with hunger, with pestilence, lyke as the Lord hath deuised for all people, that wil not serue the king Je.xxiii.c of Babilon? Therfore geue no eare vnto e.xxix.b. those Prophetes (that tel you ye shal not serue yͤ king of Babilon) for they preach you lyes: neither haue I sent them, sayth the Lord: howbeit they are bolde falselye to prophecy in my name, that I might yͤ soner dryue you out, and that ye mighte perish with your preachers. I speake to the Priestes also and to all the people.
Thus sayth the lord: heare not the wor-des of those Prophetes that preach vnto Je.xxviii.
you, and saye: beholde the vessels of the a.

Lordes house shal shortly be brought hither againe from Babilon. For they prophecy lyes vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kyng of Babilon, that ye maye D lyue. Wherfore wyll ye make thys citie to be destroyed. But if they be true Prophe tes in very dede, and if the worde of the Lord be committed vnto them, then let them pray the Lord of hostes, that the rẽ naunt of the ornamentes (which are in ẏ house of the Lord, and remaine yet in the house of the kyng of Juda, and at Jerusalem) be not caryed to Babilon also. For thus hath the Lord of hostes spoken, cõcerning the pillers, the lauer, the seate, & the residue of the ornamentes that yet remaine in thys citie, which Nabuchodo iiii.King. xxiiii.c. nozor the kyng of Babilon toke not, whẽ he caryed away Jeroniah the sonne of Jehoakim kyng of Juda, with al the power of Juda, and Jerusalem, frõ Jerusalem vnto Babilon captiue. Yea thus hath the Lord of hostes the God of Israell spoken, as touching the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house, of the kyng of Judaes house, and of Jerusalem They shalbe caryed vnto Babilon, and iiii.Kin. xxv.c, i. Esd.i.b there they shal remaine vntil I visit thẽ, sayth the Lord. Thẽ wyll I bryng them hither againe. And thys was done in the same yeare euen in the beginning of the reigne of Zedekiah kyng of Juda.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

The false prophecy of Hananiah the Prophet. Jeremy sheweth that the prophecy of Hananiah is false, by the example of the other Prophetes. He being inspired of the Lord, reproueth Hananiah prophecying his death.

A But in the fourth yere of the reigne of Zedekiah kyng of Juda, in the fifth moneth, it happened that Hananiah ẏ sonne of Assur the Prophet of Gibeõ, spake to me in the house of the Lord, in the presence of the Priestes and of all the people and sayd: thus sayth the lord of hostes, the God of Israel: I haue broken the yoke of the kyng of Babilon, and after two yeare will I bring againe into thys place, al the ornamentes of the Je. xxvii. e. lords house, that Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon caryed away from thys place vnto Babilon. Yea, I will bring againe Jechoniah the sonne of Jehoakym the king of Juda himselfe, with al the prisoners of Juda (ẏ are caryed vnto Babilõ) euen into thys place, sayth the Lord. For I wil break the yoke of the kyng of Ba-bilon. Then ẏ Prophet Jeremy gaue answer vnto ẏ Prophet Hananiah before ẏ Priestes & before al ẏ people ẏ were present in ẏ house of ẏ Lord. And ẏ Prophet B Jeremy sayd: Amen, ẏ Lord do ẏ & graũt [illegible] the thing which ẏ hast prophecied: that he may bryng againe al ẏ ornamẽtes of the Lordes house, & restore al ẏ prisoners frõ Babilõ into thys place. Neuerthelesse hearkẽ ẏ also what I wil say, ẏ thou and al ẏ people may heare. The Prophetes ẏ wer before vs in time past, which prophe cied of war or trouble, or pestilẽce, either of peace, vpõ many natiõs, & great king-domes were proued by thys (if God had sent thẽ in very dede) when ẏ thing came Deu. to passe which the Prophet tolde before. xviii.
And Hananiah ẏ Prophet toke ẏ chaine [illegible] from the Prophete Jeremies necke, and C brake it, and with that sayd Hananiah ẏ all the people might heare. Thus hath ẏ Lord spoken: euen so wyll I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon from the neck of all nations: yea, and that within thys two yeare. And so the Prophet Jeremy went hys way. Nowe after that Hananiah the Prophet had takẽ the chaine from the Prophet Jeremies necke, and broken it: the worde of the lord came vnto the Prophet Jeremy saying: go & tell Hananiah these wordes D Thus sayth the Lord: thou hast broken the chaine of wood: but in stede of wood thou shalt make chaynes of yrõ: for thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Isra ell I will put a yoke of Iron vppon the necke of all thys people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Ba-bilon: yea, and so shall they do. And I wil geue hym the beastes in the fielde. Thẽ sayd the Prophet Jeremy vnto the Pro- [illegible] phet Hananiah: heare me Hananiah.
The Lord hath not sent thee, but thou bringest thys people into a false beliefe.
And therfore thus sayth the lord: behold I will sende thee out of the lande, and within a yeare thou shalt dye, bicause thou hast falsly spoken against the lord.
So Hananiah the Prophet dyed the same yeare, in the vii. moneth.

The. xxix. Chapter.

The Epistle of Jeremy sent vnto them that were in captiuitie in Babilõ. He prophecieth their returne frõ ẏ captiuitie after. lxx. yeares. He prophecieth the destructiõ of the king and of the people that remained in Jerusalem. He threateneth two Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehelamite is prophecied.

These

I Hese are the wordes of the boke that Jeremy ẏ Prophet sent from Jerusalem vn-
to the prisoners, the Senatours, priestes, Prophetes, and all ẏ people whom Nabuchodonozor had led fro Jerusalē vnto Babilon: after ẏ tyme that kyng Jeconiah and hys Quene, his chamberlaines, the Princes of Juda, & Jerusalem, the workmasters of Jerusalem, were departed thither. Which booke Elasath the sonne of Saphan, and Ga-mariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whom Zedekia the kyng of Juda sente vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jeremies boke.
B Thus hath the Lord of hostes, the Je.xxv.b God of Israell, spoken vnto all the priso-Eze i.b ners, that were led from Jerusalem vnto Babilō: builde your houses to dwel therin, plant you gardens: that ye may enioy you sonnes and daughters: prouide wiues for your sonnes, and husbandes for your daughters, that ye may get sonnes and daughters, and that ye may multi-

C wherin ye be prisoners, and pray vnto ẏ Je.xxiii. Lord for it. For in the peace therof shall c.a.xxvii. your peace be. For thus sayth the Lord of
b. hostes, the God of Israell: let not these Prophetes and soothsaiers ẏ be among you disceaue you: and beleue not youre own dreames. For why they preach you Je.xiiii.b lyes in my name and J haue not sent thē sayth the Lord.
ii.Para. But thus sayth the Lord: * when ye xxxvi.d. haue fulfilled .lxx. yeares at Babilon, J Je.xxv.b. will bryng you home, and of mine owne i.Esd.i.a goodnesse J will cary you hither againe into thys place. For J knowe what J haue deuised for you, sayth the Lorde: my thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not De.iiii.c. trouble: (which J geue you already) and and.xxx.a that ye might haue hope againe. Ye shal Joh.vii.d cry vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me and J will heare you. Ye shall seke me, & fynde me. Yea, if so be ẏ ye seke me wyth your whole heart, J wyll be founde of you sayth the Lord, and wyll deliuer you out of pryson: and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherin J haue scattered you sayth the Lorde: and wyll bryng you againe to the same place, from whence J caused you to be caryed away captiue.
But wheras ye say, ẏ God hath ray- D sed you vp Prophetes at Babilon: thus iiii.Kin. hath the Lord spoken to the kyng that xxiiii.d. sitteth in the throne of Dauid, and to all the people that dwell in thys citie, youre brethren that are not gone with you in- Je.xxiiii. to captiuitie: thus (J say) speaketh ẏ lord b.
of hostes: beholde, J will sende a swearde, hunger, and pestilence vpon them, & will make them like vntimely figges, ẏ may not be eaten for bitternesse. And J wyll persecute them with the sweard, with hū-ger, and pestilence.
J will deliuer them vp to be vexed of all kingdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of all the people, among whom J haue scattered them: & that bicause they haue not ben obedient vnto my commaundements, sayth the Lord, which J sent vnto them by my seruauntes ẏ Prophetes.
J stode vp early, and sent vnto them: but they would not heare, sayth the Lorde. E Heare therfore the worde of the Lord, all Je.xxv.a, ye prysoners, whom J sent from Jerusa- e.xliiii.a. lem vnto Babilon. Thus hath the Lord of hostes, the God of Israell spoken of Ahab, the sonne of Colaiah, and of Zedekiah the sonne of Maasyah, which prophecy lyes vnto you in my name. Behold J will deliuer them into ẏ hande of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon, ẏ he may slay them before your eyes. And all the prisoners of Juda, that are in Babilon shall take vp thys terme of cursing and say: Now God do vnto thee, as he did vnto Zedekia and Ahab, whom the king of Babilon rosted in the fier, bicause they sinned shamefully in Israell.
For they haue not only defiled their neighbours wiues, but also preached lying wordes in my name, which J haue not commaunded them. Thys J testifie, and assure, sayth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamite, thou shalte speake vnto hym. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: bicause thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the Prieste, yea, and sente them to all the Priestes, wherein thou iiii.Kin. wrytest thus vnto hym: the LORDE xxv. hath ordeined thee to be Priest in the ii.Para. steade of Jehoiada the Priest, that thou xxiii.a. shouldest be the chefe in the house of the Lord, aboue all Prophetes & preachers and that thou mightest set them vpõ the pillery, or in the stockes. How happeneth it thẽ that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, which neuer leaueth of hys prophecying? And beside all thys, he Je.xxix.d hath sent vs worde vnto Babilon, and tolde vs plainly, that our captiuitie shall longe endure: that we should builde vs houses to dwell therin, and to plant vs G gardens that we may enioy the fruites therof. Which letter Sophoniah the Priest read and let Jeremy the Prophet heare it. Then came the word of the lord vnto Jeremy, saying: sende worde to all them that be in captiuitie, on this maner Je.xxviii.a. thus hath the Lord spoken concerning Semeiah the Nehelamite: bicause that Semeiah hath prophecied vnto you w= out my cõmission, & brought you into a false hope, therefore thus the Lord doth certifie you: behold, I wil visit Semeiah the Nehelamite, & hys sede: so ẏ none of hys shall remaine among thys people, & none of them shall see the good that I wyll do for thys people, sayth the Lord.

For he hath preached falsely of the lord.

The.xxx.Chapter.

The returne of the people from Babilon. God by hys chastening sheweth that ẏ people is sinneful. The destruction of the enemies of Israel.

A THese are the wordes, ẏ the lord sheweth vnto Jeremy, saying: Je.xxx.c. thus sayth the Lord god of Israell write vp diligently al the wordes ẏ I haue spoken vnto thee, in a boke. For loe, the tyme commeth, sayth ẏ Lord, ẏ I wil bring againe ẏ prysoners of my people of Israell, and Juda, sayth the Lord. For I will restore them vnto ẏ lande ẏ I gaue to their fathers, and they shall haue it in possession. Againe, these wordes spake the Lord, concerning Israell and Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde: we haue heard a terrible cry, feare and disquietnesse. For what els doth thys sig nifie that I see? Namely that all stronge men smite, euery man hys hande vppon Je.xiii.d. hys loynes as a woman in the payne of her trauaile. Who euer saw a man tra= uayle w childe? Enquier thereafter and see. yea, all their faces are maruelous pale. Alas for thys day, which is so dred= ful ẏ none may be likened vnto it: and a= B las for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from the which he shal yet be deliuered. For in that day sayth the Lord of hostes, I wyll take hys yoke from of thy neck, & breake thy bondes: and straungers shal no more serue hym, but they shall do seruice vnto God their Lord, & to Dauid their kyng whom I will rayse vp vnto them. And as for thee, O my seruaunt Jacob, feare not sayth the Lord, and be not afrayd O Israell. For lo, I wyll helpe thee also fro farre, and thy sede from the land of their captiuitie. And Jacob shall turne again, he shalbe in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no man shal make hym afrayd.
For I am with thee to helpe thee sayth ẏ Lord. And though I shall destroy al the people among whom I haue scattered thee, yet will I not destroy thee, but correct thee, and that with discretion: for I know that thou art in no wise without fault. Therfore thus sayth the Lord. Thy brosinges are perilous: and thy woũdes ready to cast thee into sicknesse. Ther is C no man to medle with thy cause, or to lay playster vpon thee, or to binde vp thy woundes: there may no man helpe thee.
All thy louers haue forgotten thee, and care nothing for thee. For I haue geuen thee a cruell stroke, and chastened thee roughly, and that for ẏ multitude of thy misdedes: for thy synnes haue had the ouerhand. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? in dede, thou art sore wounded & in ieopardie, but for the multitude of thy misdedes and synnes, I haue done thys vnto thee. And therfore all they that deuoure thee, shalbe deuoured, and al thine enemies shalbe led into captiuitie. All they that make the waste, shalbe wasted themselues: and all those that rob thee, will I make also to be robbed. For I wil geue thee thy health againe, and make thy woundes whole, sayth the Lord: bi-cause they reuiled thee, as one cast away and despised. Sion (said they) is she whõ no mã regardeth. For thus sayth ẏ lord: Beholde, I wil bring againe the captiui-tie of Jacobs tentes, & defende his dwelling place. The citie shalbe builded in D her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their right foundation. And out of them shall go thankesgeuing, and the voyce of ioy. I will multiplie them, and they shall not be fewe: I shal endue them with honour, and no man shall subdue them.
Their children shalbe as afore time, and their congregation shall continue in my sight. And al those that vexe them will I visite. A captaine also shal come of them, and a Prince shall spryng out from the middest

myddest of them. yf I challenge to myselfe, and he shal come unto me: For what is he that geueth ouer hys heart to come unto me, sayth the Lorde? ye shalbe my people also, & I wil be your God. Beholde, on the other syde shal the wrath of the Lord breake out as a stormy water, as a mightie whirle winde, and shal fal upon the heades of the ungodly. The terrible displeasure of the Lord shal not leaue of, until he haue done, & performed the intent of hys heart, which in the latter dayes ye shal understande. At the same tyme, sayth the lord, shal I be the god of al the generacions of Israell, & they shalbe my people.

The xxxi. Chapter.

He prophecieth that the people of Israel shalbe brought againe unto their prosperitie. To be delivered from synne is the gift of God. The birth of Christ is prophecied. All the wicked shall dye in their wickednesse. The new testament and couenaunt is prophecied. The Christian are taught and instruct of the Lord. Our synnes shalbe so remitted, that they not once be thought on. God promiseth that he will cast of the Jewes. The buildyng againe of Jerusalem.

A Thus sayth the Lord: the people of Israel, which escaped in the wildernesse fro the swearde, founde grace to come into their rest. Euen so shall the Lord now also appeare unto me from farre, & say: I loue thee w an euerlasting loue, therfore by my mercy I haue drawe thee to me. I will repaire thee againe, O thou daughter of Israel, that thou mayst be fast & sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes againe, & go forth w them that leade the daunce. Thou shalt plant vines agayne upon the hilles of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shal plant, & comonly eate of it. For the dayes shall come when the watchmen upon the mount of Ephraim shal cry: arise, let us go up unto Sion to our Lord God, for thus sayth the Lorde:
B reioyce w gladnesse bicause of Jacob, cry unto the head of the Gentiles, speake out, sing & say: O Lord saue thy people, the remnaunt of Israel, & make them whole. Beholde, I will bring them againe from out of the north lande, & gather them fro the endes of the world, w the blinde and lame that are among them, w the women that be great w childe, & such as be also deliuered: & the copany of the that come again shalbe great. They shal come weping, & with mercifull pitie wil I bring them hither againe. I will leade them to the riuers of water in a straight way, where they shall not stumble. For I am Israels father, and Ephraim is my first borne. Ge. xlviii.
Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye gentiles, preach in the Iles that lye farre of, and saye: he that hath scattered Israel, wil gather hym together againe, and wil kepe
C hym, as a shepherd doth hys flocke. For the Lord hath redemed Jacob, and ryd hym from the hande of the violent. They shal come, and reioyse upon the hil of Sion, and shal haue plenteousnesse of goodes, which the Lord shal geue them: namely, wheate, wine, oyle, young shepe and calues. And their conscience shalbe as a wel watered garden: for they shal no more be hungry. Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yea both young and olde folkes: For I wil turne their sorow into gladnesse, & wil comfort them from their sorowes, & make them ioyful. I wil poure plenteousnesse upon the heartes of the priestes, and my people shalbe satisfied with my goodnesse, sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lorde: the voyce of heauinesse, weping and lamentacion was heard on hye, euen of Rachell mourning for her children, & would not be comforted, bicause they were awaye. Jer. iii. c
But now sayth the Lord: leaue of from weping and crying, withhold thine eyes from teares, for thy labour shalbe rewarded, sayth the Lord. And they shall come againe out of the lande of their enemies, yea, euen thy posteritie shall haue consolation in thys, sayth the Lord, that thy children shall come againe into their own lande. Moreouer, I heard Ephraim, that was led away captiue, complaine on thys maner: O Lord, thou hast correct me, and thy chastening haue I receiued, as an untamed calfe. Conuert thou me, and I shalbe conuerted: for thou art my Lord God. Yea, as sone as thou turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe: and when I understande, I shall smite upon my thygh. For verily I haue committed shameful thinges. For I haue borne the reprofe and confusion of my youth. Upon thys complaint, I thought thus by my D selfe: is not Ephraim my deare sonne? is he not the child with whom I haue had all my myrth and pastime? For since the tyme that I first comoned with hym, I haue hym euer in my remembraunce: therfore my very heart dryueth me unto hym, gladly & louingly wil I haue mercy upon hym sayth the Lorde. Get thee watchmen, prouide teachers for thee: set thyne heart upon the right way that thou shouldest walke, and turne againe, O thou thou daughter of Israel, turne againe to these cities of thine. How longe wilt thau E go astray, O thou shrinking daughter? For the Lord will make a new thing upon D earth. A woman shall compasse a man. For thus sayth ẏ Lord of hostes, ẏ God of Israel: it will come therto, ẏ when I haue brought Juda out of captiuitie, these wordes shalbe heard in ẏ lande, & in hys Esa. xlii. a. cities. The Lord which is ẏ faire brydegrome of ryghtousnesse, make the frute-full, O ẏ holy hyll. And there shall dwell Juda & al her cities, ẏ shepherdes, & hus-Mat. v. b. and. xi. c. bandmẽ. For I shall fede ẏ hungry soule and refresh all faynt heartes. When I heard thys, I came againe to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I had ben waked out of a swete slepe. Behold sayth ẏ Lord ẏ dayes De. xxviii. g. come ẏ I will sow ẏ house of Israel & the house of Juda, wt men and wt catell. Yea, Je. xxxii. g. it shal come therto, ẏ like as I haue gone Zac. viii. c. about in tymes past to rote them out, to scater them, to breake them down, to destroy thẽ, & chasten them: euẽ so wil I also go diligently about, to builde them up Ezechie. xviii. a. againe, & to plãt thẽ, sayth ẏ Lord. * Thẽ shall it no more be sayd: the fathers haue F eaten a sower grape, & the childrẽs teeth He. viii. b are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for hys misdede: so ẏ whoso eateth a sower grape, hys teeth shalbe set on edge.

Behold, ẏ dayes come, sayth ẏ Lord, that I wyl make a new couenãt wt the house of Israel, & with ẏ house of Juda: not af-ther the couenaunt ẏ I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande and led them out of the lande of Egipte, which couenaũt they brake: yea euẽ whẽ I, as an husbande had rule ouer them, Heb x. b. sayth ẏ Lord. But thys shalbe ẏ couenãt that I will make wt the house of Israell Esa li. b. after those dayes, sayth the Lord. I wyll plant my law in ẏ inwarde partes of thẽ Je. xxiiii. b. and wryte it in their harts & wil be their God, & they shalbe my people. And from
e. xxx. d. thẽce forth, shal no man teach his neigh-boure or hys brother, & say: know ẏ lord.
But they shall all know me frõ ẏ lowest unto ẏ hyest sayth ẏ Lord. For I wil for-Gen. i. b. geue their misdedes, & wil neuer remem ber their synnes any more. Thus sayth the Lord, which gaue ẏ sũne to be a light for ẏ day, & the moone & starres to shyne in ẏ nyght: which moueth the sea, so that the floudes therof waue feare: his name is ẏ lord of hostes. Like as this ordinãce shal neuer be takẽ out of my sight, sayth ẏ lord: so shal ẏ sede of Israell neuer ceasse but alway be a people before me. More- G ouer, thus sayth ẏ lord: lyke as the heauẽ aboue can not be measured, & as ẏ foundations of the earth beneth may not be sought out: so will I also not cast out the whole sede of Israell, for ẏ they haue cõmitted sayth ẏ Lord. Beholde, the dayes come, sayth ẏ Lord, ẏ the citie of the Lord shalbe enlarged frõ the tower of Hananeel, unto ẏ gate of ẏ corner wall. From Ne. iii. a. thence shall the right measure be taken before her unto the hyl top of Gareb and Zach. xiiii. shall come about Gaath, and the whole valley of the dead carkasses, and of ãs-shes, and all the fieldes unto the broke of Cedron, & unto the corner of the horse gate toward ẏ east, wheras the Sãctuarie of the Lord also shalbe set. And when it is now builded, & set up of this fashiõ, it shal neuer be broke nor cast down any more.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

Jeremy is cast into prison, bicause he prophecieth that the citie should be taken of the kinges of Babilon. By the fielde that Jeremy bought at the commaundement of the Lord, is signified, that ẏ people should come againe to their own possessiõ. The people of God are his seruauntes, and he is their Lord. To feare God is Gods gift to the entent that synnes may be eschewed.

These wordes spake ẏ Lord un- A to Jeremy, in ẏ tenth yeare of Zedekiah kyng of Juda: which was ẏ eightene yere of Nabuchodonozor, what tyme as ẏ king of Babilons host layd siege unto Jerusalem.
But Jeremy ẏ Prophet lay bounde in the court of ẏ pryson, which was in ẏ king of Judaes house: where Zedekia the kyng of Juda caused hym to be layed, bicause he had prophecied of thys maner: thus sayth ẏ Lord: behold, I will deliuer thys Je. xxiii. a. xxxiii. a. xxxiii. a. citie into ẏ handes of ẏ king of Babilon, which shall take it. As for Zedekia ẏ king of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of ẏ kyng of Babilon, which shall speake wt him mouth to mouth, and none of thẽ shal loke another in the face.
And Zedekiah shalbe caryed unto Babilon, & there shall he be, untill ẏ tyme that I visite hym sayth ẏ Lord. But if thou ta kest in hande to fyght against the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper. And Jeremy B sayd, thus hath ẏ Lord spoken unto me: Leu. xx. a. behold, Hananeel ẏ sonn of Selũ thine uncles sone, shal come unto the, & require Num. xxxiii. a. thee to redeme ẏ lãd ẏ lyeth in Anathoth c. xxvi. a. unto thy selfe for by reason of kinred it is Ruth. iiii. a. thy ryght to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And Hananeel, myne uncles sonne, came to me in ẏ court of ẏ prison, according to the worde of the Lord, and sayd unto me: bye my land, I pray thee, that lieth in A-nathoth in the countrey of Ben Jamin, for by heritage ẏ hast right to lose it oute for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceiued that thys was the commaun-dement of ẏ Lord, and so I bought the lande of Hananeell of Anathoth, myne C uncles sonne, and wayed hym there the money even .vii. sicles, and .x. silver pence.
I caused hym also to make me a writing and to seale it: and called recorde therby, and weyed hym there ẏ mony upon the weyghtes. So I toke the evidence wyth the copy when it was orderly sealed and read over: and I gave ẏ evidẽce unto Ba ruch the sonne of Neriah, ẏ sonn of Ma-asiah in ẏ syght of Hananeell my cosin, & in ẏ presence of ẏ witnesses, ẏ be named in ẏ evidẽce: and before all ẏ Jewes that were therby in the court of the pryson. I charged Baruch also before thẽ, saying: the Lord of hostes ẏ God of Israell, commaundeth thee to take thys sealed evidẽce with ẏ copy: and to lay it in an earthen vessell, that it may long continue.
For ẏ Lord of hostes, the God of Israell, hath determined that houses, feldes and vineyardes, shalbe possessed againe in thys lande. Now whẽ I had delivered ẏ evidẽce unto Baruch ẏ sonne of Neriah Gen. i. a. I besought ẏ Lord, saying: O Lord god, Jere. x. b. it is thou that hast made heaven & earth Ecclus. with thy great power and hie arme, and xviii. a. there is nothing hid frõ thee. Thou she-D wes mercy upon thousandes, thou recõ-pensest ẏ wickednesse of the fathers, into the bosome of ẏ childrẽ that come after them. Thou art ẏ great and mightie god whose name is ẏ Lord of hostes, great in councell, and excellent in worke. Thine Rom. ii. a eyes loke uppon all ẏ wayes of mennes childrẽ, to rewarde every one after hys way: and according to ẏ fruites of hys in vẽtions. Thou hast done great tokens Exod. vii unto the eleuene chapter. and wonders in ẏ land of Egipt, as we see thys day, upon ẏ people of Israel, and upon those mẽ, to make thy name great, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought thy people of Israell out of the lande of Egipt, with tokẽs, with wõders with a mightie hande, with a stretched out arme, and with great terriblenesse, and hast gevẽ thẽ this land, like as thou haddest promised unto their fathers.
Namely, that thou wouldest geve them a lande, that floweth with milke and ho-ny. Now whẽ they came therin, and pos- Jud. ii. iii sessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and iiii. vi. viii walked not in thy lawe, but all that thou Esd. x. b. commaundedst them to do, that have they not done, and therfore come al these plages upõ thẽ. Behold, ther are bulwarks, made now against ẏ citie to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Chaldees that besiege it, with sweard, with hunger, and death: and loke what ẏ hast spokẽ, that E same shall come upon thẽ. For lo, al thin-ges are present unto the, yet sayest thou unto me (O Lord God) and commaundest me, ẏ I shall bye a pece of lande unto my selfe, and take witnesses therto: & yet in ẏ meane season ẏ citie is delivered into the power of the Chaldees. Then came the word of ẏ Lord unto me, saying: beholde, I am ẏ Lord God of al flesh, is there any thing thẽ to hard for me? Therfore thus Je. xxv b. sayth ẏ Lord: behold, I shall deliver thys xxxiv. a. citie into ẏ power of the Chaldees & into the power of Nabuchodonosor ẏ kyng of of Babilon, they shal take it. For ẏ Chaldees shall come and winne this citie, and set fire upon it, and burne it, with ẏ gorgeous houses, in whose parlers they have made sacrifice unto Baal, & pow-red drynke offeringes unto straunge Gods, to provoke me unto wrath. For se-ing the children of Israell, and ẏ childrẽ of Juda, have wrought wickednesse before me ever from their youth up, what have they els done but provoked me wt the workes of their own handes, sayth ẏ Lord. Or what hath thys citie bene els but a provoking of my wrath, ever since ẏ day ẏ they builded it, unto thys houre: wherin I cast it out of my sight bicause of ẏ great blasphemies of ẏ childrẽ of Israel and Juda, which they have done to provoke me: yea they, their kinges, their Princes, their Priestes, their Prophets, the mẽ of Juda, and ẏ citizens of Jerusa-lẽ. Whẽ I rose up early, and taught thẽ F and instructed thẽ, they turned their bac Jer. ii. b. kes to me & not their faces. They would not heare to be reformed & correct, but set their ydols in ẏ house ẏ is halowed unto my name, to defile it. They have builded hye places for Baal, in ẏ valley of ẏ chil- Je. viii. d dren of Hinnom, to bow their sonnes and daughters unto Moloch, which I never cõmaunded thẽ, nether came it ever in my thought to make Juda sinne with such abhominatiõ. And now therfore, thus hath ẏ Lord god of Israel spokẽ, concerning this citie,

citie, which (as ye your selues confesse) shalbe deliuered into ye hand of ye king of Babilon, when it is wone w the sweard, De.xxx.a with hunger & with pestilẽce. Beholde, I will gather them together frõ all lãdes, wherin I haue scattred thẽ in my wrath in my fearefull & great displeasure: & will bryng thẽ againe vnto this place, where G they shall dwell safely. And they shalbe Psalme. my people, & I will be their God. And I a.xx.b. will geue thẽ one heart & one way, that they may feare me all the dayes of theyr lyfe, ye they & their children after thẽ may prosper. And I will set vp an euerlasting Ezechie. couenãt w them: namely, ye I will neuer xxxvi.e. ceasse to do thẽ good: & that I wil put my feare in their heartes, so ye they shall not De.xxxix runn away frõ me. Yea, I wil haue a lust
b. and pleasure to do thẽ good, & faythfully Je.xxxi.e to plant thẽ in thys land with my whole heart and w all my soule. For thus sayth the Lord: lyke as I haue brought al this great plage vpõ this people, euen so wyll I also bryng vpon thẽ all ye good that I haue promised them. And mẽ shall haue their possessions in thys lande: wherof ye say now, ye it shal neyther be inhabited of people, nor of catell, but be deliuered into the hands of the Chaldees, yea lãd shall be bought for mony, and euidẽces made therupon, & sealed before witnesses in ye countrey of Ben Jamin & rounde about Jerusalẽ, in ye cities of Juda, in ye cities ye are vpon ye moũtaines, and in them that lye beneth yea, and in the cities that are in the south. For I will bryng their prysoners hither againe, sayth the Lord.

The .xxxiii. Chapter.

The prophete is monished of the Lord to pray for the delyueraunce of the people, which ye Lorde prompseth: God forgeueth synnes and doth graciously to the people, for his own renowme. Of the birth of Christ. The kyngdome of Christ in the churche shall neuer be ended.

A Moreouer, ye word of the Lord Jer.xx.b. came vnto Jeremy on thys &.xxxii.a. maner when he was yet bounde in ye court of ye prison.
Thus sayth the Lord, which fulfilleth the thing that he speaketh, the Lord which performeth the thyng that he taketh in hande, euen he whose name is the Lord: cry vnto me and I will an-Es.xliii.d swer, and shew thee great and hye thin-l.lxi.vii.b ges, which were vnknowen vnto thee.
Thus (I say) spake the Lord God of Israell, concerning the houses of thys citie, and the houses of the kynges of Juda, ye they are broken thorow the ordinaunce and the sweard: bicause the inhabiters of thys citie haue come to fight against the Chaldees, and they are filled w the dead carkases of men whom I haue slayne in my wrath, and displeasure: when I turned my face from thys citie, bicause of all her wickednesse. Beholde, sayth ye Lord, I will repaire and heale their woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the large treasure of peace and truth.
And I wyll returne the captiuitie of Juda and Israell & will set them vp agayne as they were afore, & from all misdedes wherin they haue offended against me, Eze.xxxvi. b.
I will cleanse them: and all their blas-phemies which they haue done againste me, when they regarded me not, I wyll forgeue them. And thys shall get me a B name, a prayse, and honor among al the people of the earth, which shall heare all the good that I wil shew vnto them: yea they shalbe afrayd, and astonied at all ye good dedes and benefites that I wyl do for them. Moreouer, thus sayth the lord: Jer.vii. in thys place wherof ye say that it shalbe a wildernesse wherin neither people nor catel shal dwel: in lyke maner in the cities of Juda, and without Jerusalem (which also shalbe so voyde, that neyther people nor catell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladnesse be heard againe: the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall sing: praise the lord of hostes, for he is louing:
and his mercy endureth for euer: and the Psal. voyce of them that shall offer vp giftes cxxxi. in the house of the Lord. For I will re- i.Para.
store the captiuitie of thys lande, as it xvi.a. was afore, saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hostes, it shall come yet thereto, that in thys lande, which is voyde from men and catell, and in al the cities of the lande, there shalbe set vp shepheardes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountai-nes, and in the cities that lye vpon the playne, and in the cities of the south. In the land of Ben Jamin, in the fieldes of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda, shall the shepe be numbred againe, vnder ye hande of hym, that telleth thẽ, sayth the Lord: behold, the tyme cõmeth, sayth the Lord, that I wil performe that good C thyng, which I haue promised vnto the Jerem. house of Israell, and to the house of Ju- xxiii.a. da. In those dayes and at the same time, I will bryng forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of righteousnesse, and he shall do equitie and righteousnesse in ye land.

In those dayes shal Juda be helped and Jerusalem shal dwell safe, & he y shal call her is the Lord our ryghteousnes. For thus the Lord promiseth: Dauid shal neuer want one to sit vpon y throne of the house of Israel, nether shal the Priestes and Leuites want one to offer alwaye before me burnt offeringes, to kindle y meat offeringes, and to prepare y sacrifices. And the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremy after thys maner: Thus sayth the Lorde, may the couenaunt which I haue made w day & night be broken, that there should not be day & night in due season? Then may my couenaunt also be broken, which I made w Dauid my seruaunt, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his throne: so shall also y Priestes & Leuites my ministers [faile], but serue me. For lyke as the starres of heauen may not be numbred, neyther y sande of y sea measured: so will I multiply y sede of Dauid my seruaunt, and y Leuites my ministers. Moreouer, the word of y Lord came to Jeremy, saying: consyderest thou not what thys people speake? The two kinreds (say they) had the Lord chose, & those same two hath he cast away. For so they haue despised my people, & they reputed them as though they were no people. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord: if I haue made no couenaunt with day & night, & geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: then wil I also cast away the sede of Jacob and Dauid my seruaunt, so that I wil take no Prince out of his sede to rule y posteritie of Abraham Isaac & Jacob. But yet I wil turne again their captiuitie, and be mercifull vnto them.

The. xxxiiii. Chapter.

He threateneth that the citie, and the king Zedekiah also shalbe geuen into the handes of y king of Babilon. He rebuketh them that broughte such of their brethren into captiuitie, as were pardoned to God at their libertie.

These are the wordes which the Lord spake vnto Jeremy, what tyme as Nabuchodonosor y king of Babilon & al his hostes (out of al y kingdomes that were vnder hys power) and all hys people, fought against Jerusalem, and al the cities therof: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israell: go, and speake to Zedekiah the kyng of Juda, and tell hym: the lord sendeth thee thys worde. Beholde I wil deliuer thys citie into the hand of the king of Babilon: he shal burne it, & thou shalt not escape hys handes, but shalt be taken alyue, and deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the king of Babilon in the face, and he shal speake wyth thee mouth to mouth, and then shalt thou go to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lord, O Zedekiah, thou kyng of Juda. Thus sayth the Lord vnto the: thou shalt not be slaine with the sworde, but shalt dye in peace. Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges thy progenitours were brent, so shalt thou be brent also, and in thy mourning they shal say: oh lord. For thus haue I determined, sayth the lord. Then spake Jeremy the Prophet all these wordes vnto Zedekiah king of Juda in Jerusalem, what tyme as the kyng of Babilons host besieged Jerusalem and the remnaunte of the cities, namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remayned of the strong fenced cities of Juda. These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy y Prophet, when Zedekiah was agreed with all the people in Jerusalem, that there should be proclaimed a libertie, so that euery man should let hys seruaunt and handemayde go fre, beyng an Hebrue and Hebruesse: & no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bondman. Now as they had consented, all the Princes, & all the people which had gathered vnto thys agreement, that euery man shoulde set at libertie his bonde seruaunt, & bond woman, and no longer to holde the bond, euen so they were obedient, and let them go free. But afterwarde they repented and toke againe the seruauntes & handmaidens, whom they had let go free, and so made them bonde againe. For y which cause the word of the Lord came vnto Jeremy from the Lord himself, saying: thus sayth the Lord God of Israell. I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egipt (y they should no more be bondmen) saying: when. vii. yeares are out, euery man shall let hys bought seruaunt an Hebrue go free, if he haue serued him. vi. yeares. But your fathers obeyed me not, and hearkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned and did right before me, in that ye proclaimed, euery man to let hys neighbour go free: & in y ye made a couenaut before me, in y temple y beareth mi name. But yet ye haue turned your selues againe, and blasphemed my name: in thys, that euery man hath requyred hys seruant & handmaide again, whom ye haue let go quite and free, and cōpelled them to serue you again, & to be your bondmē, & bōdwomē.

And

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme fredome vnto hys brother & neyghboure: wherfore I wil call you vnto a fredome, sayth the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence, and to hunger, & will make you to be plaged in all the kingdomes of the earth. Yea, those men that haue broke my couenaunt, and not kept the wordes D of the appointment which they made be-Ge.xv.b. fore me, * when they hewed yͤ calfe in two, and when there wet thorow the two hal ues therof, the Princes of Juda, the Prin ces of Jerusalem the gelded men, the Priestes, and al the people of the lande, which went thorow the two sydes of the calfe.

Those men will I geue into the power of their enemies, and into the handes of Psalme. them that folow vpon their liues, * And lxxix. a. their dead bodies shalbe meate for the fowles of the ayre, and beastes of yͤ fielde.
Jer.vii.d As for Zedekiah the kyng of Juda and hys Princes, I will deliuer them into the power of their enemies, and of them that desier to slay them, and into the hande of Jeremy. the kyng of Babilos host, * which now is xxxvii.c. departed from you: but thorow my commaundement (sayth the Lord) they shall come againe before this citie, they shall fyght against it, winne it, and burne it: moreouer, I will lay the cities of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

He propoundeth the obedience of the Rechabi-tes, and therby confoundeth the pride of the Jewes.
The commaundement of Jonadab, the father of yͤ Rechabites. He threateneth punishmente vnto the rebellious Jewes. He promyseth prosperitie vnto the Rechabites, for their obedience vnto their father.

A THe wordes which yͤ Lord spake vnto Jeremy, in yͤ reigne of Jehoakim the
sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, are these: go vnto iiii.King. the house of yͤ Rechabites x.c. and call them out, bring them to the house of the Lord into some commodious place, and geue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazaniah, yͤ sone of Jeremy, the sonne of Habazimah, and hys brethren, and all hys sonnes, and the whole housholde of the Rechabites: and brought them to the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the childre of Hanan, the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of GOD: which was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, which is the treasurer. B And before the sonnes of the kinred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne and cuppes, and sayd vnto them drynke wine.
But they sayd: we will drynke no wyne, for Jonadab yͤ sone of Rechab our father commaunded vs, saying: ye and your son nes shall neuer drynke wyne, * buylde no houses, sow no sede, plat no vines, yea, ye shall haue no vineyardes but for al your tyme ye shall dwel in tentes that ye may lyue long in the land wherin ye be stragers. Thus haue we obeyed the comaun dement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all that he hath charged vs and so we drynk no wine al our life long, we nor our wyues, our sonnes and oure daughters. Neyther builde we any house to dwell therin: we haue also among vs neither vineyardes, nor corne lãd to sow but we dwell in tẽtes: we obey, and do according vnto al that Jonadab our father cõmaunded vs. But now that Nabucho- C donozor the kyng of Babilon came vp into the lande, we sayd: come, let vs goe to Jerusalem, that we may escape the hoste of the Caldees, and the Assirians, and so we dwell now at Jerusalem. Then came the word of yͤ Lord vnto Jeremy, saying: thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: go and tell the men of Juda, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem: wyl ye not be reformed to obey my wordes, sayth the Lord: The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded hys sones that they should drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kept: for vnto thys daye they drynke no wyne, but obey their fathers commaundement. But as for me, I haue stande vp early, I haue spoken vnto you, and geuen you earnest warning: and yet haue ye not bene obedient vnto me, yea, I haue sent my seruauntes all the Prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, and sente you worde, saying: O turne you nowe euery man from hys wycked waye: amende your lyues, and goe not after straunge Goddes to worshyppe them, that ye may continue in the lande whiche I haue geuen vnto you and your fathers but ye would neyther heare me, nor folow me.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs D sonne, haue stedfastlye kepte theirs fathers commaundemente, that he gaue them: but thys people is not obedyente vnto me. And therefore thus sayeth

the lorde of hostes the God of Israel. Be-holde, I wyll bryng vppon Juda, and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalē, all the trouble, that I haue deuysed against them. For I haue spoken vnto thē, but they would not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuerthelesse they would geue me no aunswer. Jeremy spake also to the householde of the Rechabites. Thus saith the lorde of hostes the God of Israel. For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaū-demēt of Jonadab your father and kepte all his precepts, and done accordyng vnto all that he hath bidden you: Therefore thus sayth the lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Jonadab ÿ sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stock, to stand alway before me.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch writeth, as Jeremy enditeth the boke of the curses against Juda and Israel. He is set with the booke vnto the people, and readeth it before thē al. He is called before the rulers, and readeth it before them also. The rulers shewe vnto the king the wordes of the booke. Jehudi taketh the booke and readeth a litle of it, and casteth it in the fier. There is another written at the commaundement of the Lorde.

A IN the fourth yeare of Je-hoakim the sonne of Josiah ÿ king of Juda, came ÿ worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, saying: Take a boke and write therin all the wordes that I haue spoken to thee agaynste Israell, agaynste Juda, and against all the people, from the tyme that I began for to speake vnto the (in the region of Josiah) vnto thys daye.
That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuysed for them they may peraduenture turne euery man from his wicked waye: that I maye forgeue theyr offences and synnes. Then did Jeremye call Baruch the sonne of Neri-ah, and Baruch wrote in the booke, at the mouthe of Jeremye, all the woordes of the lord, which he had spoken vnto him And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, saying: I am in prison so that I may not com into the house of ÿ lord: therfore goe thou thither and read the boke that thou haste B written at my mouth: Namely, ÿ wordes of the lorde, and reade them in the lordes house vpon the fasting day, that ÿ people whole Juda, and all they that come out of the cities may heare. Paraduenture they wil pray mekely before the face of ÿ lorde, and turne euery one frō his wicked waie.
For great is the wrath and displeasure ÿ the lorde hath taken against thys people.
So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd ac-cordyng vnto al that Jeremy the prophet commaunded hym, readyng the woordes of the lorde out of the booke, in the lordes house. And this was doone in the fyfth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josyah, Josu.iii.a king of Juda in the nynth moneth, when it was commaunded, that all the people of Jerusalem should fast before the lorde, and they also that were come from the C Cityes of Juda vnto Jerusalem. Then read Baruch the wordes of Jeremy oute of the booke within the house of the lord, out of the treasury of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scribe, whiche is besyde Je.xxvi.a the hyer loft of the new doore of the lords house: that all the people myght heare.
Now when Micheah the sonne of Gama-riah, the sonne of Saphan, had heard all the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke, he went downe to the kynges Palace into the Scribes chaumbers, for there all the Princes wer set: Elizama the Scribe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan ÿ sonne of Achbor, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan. Zedekiah, the sonne of Hanani- D ah, with all the Princes. And Mycheah tolde them all the wordes that he heard Baruch reade out of the booke before the people. Then all the Princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, saying: Take in thyne hand ÿ booke whereout thou hast red before al the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah, tooke the booke in his hand, and came vnto them. And they said vnto him: Sit downe and reade the booke, that we may heare also. So Baruch redde that they might heare. Nowe when they had heard all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon an other, and said vnto Baruch We wil certify the kyng of all these wor-des. And they examined Baruch, saying: E tell vs, howe diddest thou write all these wordes out of his mouthe. Then Baruch answered thē. He spake all these woordes vnto me with his mouth, & I wrote them in the booke. Then said the Princes vnto Baruch: Go thy way and hyde thee wyth Jeremy, so that no manne knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kyng to the courte. But they kepte the booke in the chamber of Elizama the Scribe, and told the kyng all the woordes, that he mighte heare. So the king sent Jehudi to fet him the booke, which he brought out of Eliza-ma ye Scribes chamber. And Jehudi red in it, that the kyng and all the Prynces which wer about him might heare. Now the kyng sat in ye winter house, for it was in the nynth moneth, and there was a fyer before him. And when Jehudi hadde red thre or foure leaues thereof, he cut the

i. Ma. iii. c booke in peces with a penknife, and cast F it into the fyre vppon the harth, vntyll the boke was all brent in the fyre vppon the harth. Yet no man was abashed thereof, or rent his clothes, neyther the king hymselfe, nor hys seruauntes, thoughe they heard all these woordes. Neuerthelesse, Elnathan, Dalaiah and Gamaryah besought the kyng that he would not burne the boke: notwithstanding ye kyng would not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmael the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah the sonne of Ezriel, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vppon Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremye the Pro-phete, but the lord kept them out of sight.
After now that the kyng hadde brent the booke, and the sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouthe of Jeremye. The woorde of the lorde came vnto Jeremye, saying: Take another booke and write in it all the foresayd sermons, that wer wri-ten in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakym the kyng of Juda hath brent. And tel Je-G hoakim the kyng of Juda, thus sayth the Lord: thou hast brent the boke, & though-test within thy selfe: Why hast thou wrytten therein, that the king of Babilon shal come and make this lande waste: so that he shall make bothe people and cattell to be oute of it. Therefore thus the Lorde iiii. kyng. sayeth of Jehoakym the kyng of Juda. xxiiii. b There shall none of his generation sytte Jer. xxii. c vpon the throne of Dauid. His dead corse shall be cast out, that the heate of the day and the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym. And I will visit the wyckednesse of him, of his seede, and of his seruauntes.
Moreouer all the euyll that I haue promised them (thoughe they heard me not) wyll I bryng vpon them: vppon the inhabitours of Jerusalem, and vpon al Juda.
Then toke Jeremy another booke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therin oute of the mouthe of Jeremye, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakim the kyng of Juda dyd burne. And then were added vnto them many mo sermons than before.

The. xxxvii, Chapter.

Zedekiah succedeth Conania. He sendeth vnto Jeremy to pray for hym. Jeremye going into the lande of Beniamin is taken. He is beaten and put in prison. He is deliuered by king Zedekiah.

Zedekiah the sonne of Jo- A sias whiche was made iiii. kyng. xxiiii. kyng through Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon reigned in the lande of Juda, in the stede of Co-noniah the sonne of Jeho-akim. But nether he nor his seruants nor the people in ye land, would obey ye wordes of the lord, which he spake by the prophet Jeremy. Neuerthelesse, Zedekiah ye king sent Jehucal ye sonne of Selamiah, & So- Jer. xxi. phoniah the sonne of Maasiah the priest, and xli.
to ye prophet Jeremy, saying: O pray thou vnto the lord our god for vs. Now Jeremy walked free among the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet.
Pharaos host also was com out of Egipt: which when the Chaldees ye besieged Je- Ez. xvii. rusalē perceiued, thei departed frō thence.
Then came the word of the lord vnto the Prophet Jeremy, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell, this aunswer shal B ye geue to the kyng of Juda that sent you Je. xlii. a vnto me for counsayle. Beholde, Pharaos hoste whiche is come foorth to helpe you shall returne to Egipte into his owne lād: but the Chaldees shall come agayne and fight against this citye, win it, and set fire vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lord: deceiue not your owne mindes, thynking on this maner: Tushe, the Chaldees goe nowe theyr way from vs. No, they shall not goe their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Chaldees that besiege you, and euerye one of the slayne lay in his tente, yet shoulde they stande vp and sette fyre vppon this citie. Now when the hoste of the Chaldees was broken vp frō Jerusalem, for feare of the Egiptians armye. Jeremy wente out of Jerusalem, C towarde the lande of Beniamin, to gette hym frō amōg ye people. And whē he came vnder Beniamins porte, there was a porter called Jeriah, the sonne of Sela-miah, the sonne of Hananiah, whiche fell Je. xxxviii. vpon him, & toke him, saying: thy mind is b. to run to ye Chaldees. Then said Jeremy:

It is not so, I goe not to the Chaldees.
Neuerthelesse, Jeriah would not beleue him: but brought Jeremy bounde before the princes. Therefore the princes were angry with Jeremy and smote hym, and layde him in prison in the house of Jona-thas the Scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put into a dongeon and prison, and so laye there Je.xxxviii. c. a long time. Then Zedekiah the king sent for him, & called him, & asked him quietly in his owne house, saying: thinkest thou this busines (that now is in hande) commeth of the lord? Jeremy aunswered: yea, that it doth: and thou (sayd he) shalt be de-liuered into ẏ king of Babilons power.
Moreouer Jeremy sayd vnto king Ze-D dekiah: What haue I offēded against the, against thy seruants, or against this people, that ye haue put me in prison? Where Je.xxviii. c. are your prophetes, whiche haue prophecied vnto you, and said that ẏ king of Ba-bilon should not come against you & thys land? And therfore heare now, O my lord ẏ king: let my prayer be accept before the,
and sende me no more into the house of Jonathas the Scribe, that I die not ther.
Then Zedekiah the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the prison, and daily to bee geuen him a Cake of bread out of the bakers strete, vntyl al the bread in the citie wer eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remained in the fore entrye in the prison.

By the motion of the rulers, Jeremy is put into a dongeō. At the request of Abedmelech the chāberlain, the king commaundeth Jeremye to bee brought forth of the dongeon. Jeremy sheweth the king how he might escape death.

A Saphatiah the sonne of Mathan Godoliah the sonne of Phashur Jucal the sonne of Semelyah, & Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceiued the woordes that Jeremy had Je.xxi.b. xxvii.c. spoken vnto al the people, namely, on this maner. Thus sayth the lorde. Who so remaineth in this citie, shall perishe, eyther with the sweard, with hunger, or with ẏ pestilēce. But who so falleth vnto ẏ Chaldees, shall escape, winning his soule for a Je.xxi. b. pray, and shal liue. For thus saith ẏ lord: This city (no dout) must be deliuered into the power of the king of Babilon, and he also shall win it. Then said ẏ princes vnto the king: Sir we besech you let thys man be put to death. For thus he discourageth the hands of the souldiors that be in this citye, and the handes of al the people, whē he speaketh such words vnto them. Thys manne verely laboureth not for peace of the people, but mischief. Zedekiah ẏ kyng aunswered, and saide: loe he is in youre handes, for the kyng maye deny you nothing.
Then tooke they Jeremy, and cast him B into the dongeon of Melchiah the sonne of Hamelech, that dwelte in the fore entry of the prison: And they let downe Jeremy with cordes into a dongeon, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stacke fast in the mire. Nowe when Abedmelech the Moriā, being a chamber-laine in the kinges court, vnderstode that they had caste Jeremy into the dongeon, he went out of the kings house, & spake to the kyng, (which then sat vnder the porte of Beniamin,) these woordes: my Lorde the kyng, where as these men medle with Jeremy the prophet, they do him wrong.
Namely, in that thei haue put him in prison, there to dye of hunger, for there is no more bread in the citie.
Then the king commaunded Abedmelech the Morian, and said. Take from hence thirty menne whom thou wilt, and drawe vp Jeremy the prophete out of the dongeon before he die. So Abedmelech tooke the men with him, and went to the house of the king: and there vnder ẏ treasurye he gatte olde ragges and worne cloutes, and let them downe by a corde in to the dongeon to Jeremy. And Abedmelech the Morian saide vnto the Prophete Jeremy: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thy arme holes, betwixt them and the cordes: and Jeremye did so, So they drewe vp Jeremy with cordes, and D tooke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entry of the pryson.
Then Zedekiah the kyng sente, and caused Jeremye the Prophete to bee called vnto hym, into the thirde entry that is in Je.xxxviii the house of the lorde. And the kyng sayde c vnto Jeremye: I will aske thee somwhat but hyde nothyng fro me. Then Jeremye aunswered Zedekiah: yf I be plaine vnto thee, thou wilt cause me to suffer death. yf I geue thee counsayle, thou wilt not folow me. So the kyng sware an othe se-cretely vnto Jeremye, saying: As truelye as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyll not slay thee, nor geue thee into the handes of them that seke after thy life. Then saide Jeremye vnto Zedekiah: E Thus saith the lord of hostes ẏ god of Is-Je.xxvii.c rael. If case be that thou wilt go forth vnto ẏ king of Babilons Princes, thou shalt saue thy life, & this citie shall not be brent: yea, both thou and thy housholde shall escape, with your lyues. But if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babilons princes, then shall this citie bee deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, which shal set fier vpon it, & thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Zedekiah said vnto Jeremy: I am afraid for the Jewes that are fled vnto the Chaldees, least I com in their hãds and so they to haue me in derisiõ. But Jeremy answered: No, they shal not betraye F thee: O hearken vnto the voyce of the lord (I beseche thee,) which I speake vnto the so shalt thou be well, & saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not goe forth, ẏ lord hath told me this plainly: Beholde, al the women ẏ are left in the king of Judaes house, shall be led foorth out to the king of Babylons princes. And they shal say, ẏ thou arte de-ceiued: and ẏ the men in whom thou diddest put thy trust haue gotten thee vnder, and set thy fete fast in the mier, and gone theyr way frõ thee. Therfore al thy wiues with their children shall they lead foorth vnto the Chaldees, and thou shalt not escape their hands, but shalt be the king of Babilons prisoner, & this citie shalt thou G cause to be brent. Thẽ said Zedekiah vnto Jeremy: looke that no bodye know of these woordes: & thou shalt not die. But if the princes perceiue ẏ I haue talked with the, & com vnto the, saying: O speak, what saide ẏ king to thee: hide it not from vs, & we wil not put thee to death: Tell vs (we pray the) what said ẏ king to the: Se thou geue them this answere: I haue humblye besought the king that he will let me lye nomore in Jehonathãs house, ẏ I die not there. Then came al the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked hym. And he tolde them after ẏ maner as the king bad him. Then they held theyr peace, & let hym alone: for Je.xxxix.c they perceiued nothing. So Jeremy abode stil in the fore entry of the prison, vntill the day that Jerusalem was wonne.

The.xxxix. Chapter.

Nabuchodonozor besiegeth Jerusalẽ. Zedekiah fleeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slain. His eyes are thrust out. Jeremy is prouided for. Abedmelech is deliuered frõ captiuitie, bicause of the confidence that he hath in god.

Now when the city of Jerusa- A lẽ was takẽ (for in ẏ .ix. yere Je.xxxix of Zedekiah king of Juda in iiii.kyng. ẏ .x. moneth came Nabucho- xxv.a donozor the king of Babilon and al his hoste, & besieged Jerusalem, & fought against it. And in the .xi. yere of Ze-dekiah, in the fourth moneth, the .ix. day of the moneth, he brake into the city.) Then al the princes of the kyng of Babilõ came in, & sat them down vnder the port: Neregel, Sarezer, Sãgarnebo, Sarchachim, Rabsaris, Neregel, Sarezer, Rabmag, wt al other princes of the king of Babilon.
And when Zedekiah the king of Juda wt Je.xxxix his souldiors sawe them, thei fled, and departed out of ẏ city by night, through the kings gardein, and through the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they B wente towarde the wyldernesse. But the Chaldees hoste folowed faste after them and toke Zedekiah in the field of Jericho and brought him prisoner to Nabuchodo nozor the king of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgemẽt vpõ hym. So the king of Babilõ, caused the childrẽ of Zedekiah and all the nobles of Juda, to be slain before his face at Reblath. And made Zede-kias eyes to be put out, and bounde hym with two chaynes, and sente hym to Ba-bilon. Moreouer the Chaldees brente vp C the kinges palace, with the other houses iiii.kyng. of ẏ people, and brake downe the walles xxv.b of Jerusalem. As for the remaunte of the Je.xxxi people that were in the Citye, and such as were come to helpe them (whatsoeuer was left of ẏ common sort) Nabuzaredan the chief captain caried them to Babilon.
But Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayn let the rascall people (and those that had nothing) dwell still in the land of Jude, and gaue them vineyardes and corne fyeldes at the same time. Nabuchodonozor also the king of Babilon, gaue Nabuzaradan the chief captayn a charge cõcernyng Jeremy, saying: take and cherysshe hym, and make muche of hym, see thou doe hym no harme, but entreate hym after hys owne desyre. So Nabuzaradan the chiefe cap- D tain, Nabusazbã, Rabsaris, Nergal, Sarezar, Rabmag, and all the kyng of Babilons Lordes sent for Jeremy, and caused hym to be fet out of the fore entrye of Je.xxxviii the prison, and committed him vnto Go- b. doliah the sonne of Ahicã, ẏ sonne of Saphan, that he should cary hym home: & so he dwelt among the people. Nowe whyle Jer.xl.b.

Jeremy

Jeremy lay yet bound in the fore entry of the prison, the word of the lord came vnto hym, saying: Go & tel Abedmelech ẏ Moran. Thus saith the lord of hostes ẏ God of Israel: behold, ẏ cruell and sharp plage ẏ I haue deuised for this city, wil I bring vpon thē that thou shalt see it: but I wyll deliuer the (saith the lord) & thou shalt not com in the hands of those mē whom thou fearest. For doutlesse, I will saue thee, so ẏ thou shalt not perish with the sweard: but thy life shalbe saued, & that bycause thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the lord.

The.xl.Chapter.

Jeremy hath licence to goe whither he will. He dwelleth with the people that remain at Jerusalē, ouer whome Godoliah ruleth. Johanan prophecieth death vnto Godoliah.

I This is the word that the lorde Je.xliiii.a spake vnto Jeremy, whē Nabuzaradan the chief captaine Ja.xviii.b. had let him go fre frō Ramath whither he had led him bound among al the prisoners that were caryed from Jerusalē & Juda, vnto Babilō. The chief captain called for Jeremy and sayd vnto hym. The lord thy god spake mightily before of ẏ misery of this place. Nowe the lord hath sent it, and perfourmed it, as he hath promysed. For ye haue synned against the lord, and haue not bene obedyent vnto his voice, therfore commeth this plage vpon you: behold I lose the bandes from thy hands this day, if thou wilt now go with me vnto Babilon, vp then: for I wil see to thee, & prouide for thee. But yf thou wilt not go with me vnto Babilon, then remain here. Behold all the lande is B at thy wil, loke where thou thinkest cōue-Ge.xiii.b nient & good for thee to abide, there dwel.
Tobi.i.b. For as yet he was not gone back to Godo liah, therfore he said vnto him: go back to Godoliah, the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan, whome the king of Babilon hath made gouernor ouer ẏ cities of Ju-iiii.Re.xxv.b da, & dwel with him among the people, or remain wheresoeuer it pleaseth thee. So ẏ chief captain gaue him his expences with a rewarde, and let hym goe. Then went Je.xxxix.c Jeremy vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mispa, and dwelt there with him C among the people that wer left in ẏ land.
Now whē the captains of the host of Juda (which with their felowes were scattered abrode on euery syde of the lande) vn-derstode, ẏ the king of Babilon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernor in the land, and that man, wife, & chylde: yea, and the poore men in the lande (that wer not led captiue to Babilon) should be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Go-doliah vnto Mizpa: Namely Ismaell the sōne of Nathaniah, Johanan and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the sonne of Thahometh, ẏ sonnes of Ophai, the Netophatite, Jeseniah the sonne of Maachati, with their companions. And Godoliah ẏ sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan, sware vnto thē & their fellowes in this maner. Be not afrayd to serue the Chaldees, dwell in the lande, and doe the iiii.Re.xxv.b king of Babilon seruice, so shal ye prosper. d Beholde, I dwell at Mispa to be an offycer in the Chaldees behalfe, and to satysfye suche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wine, corne and oyle, and kepe them in youre ware houses, and dwel in youre cities that ye haue in keping. Yea, all the Jewes also that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea, and in al the countries, when they heard that the king D of Babilon had made Godoliah the sōne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, gouer-nour vpon them that wer left in Juda. Al the Jewes (I say) returned out of all places wher they wer fled vnto, and came in to ẏ land of Juda, to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wine and other fruites, and that very much. Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah and al the captayns of the hoste that were scattered on euerye side in the lād, came to Godoliah in Mizpa, & said vnto him: Knowest thou not that Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael ẏ sonne of Nathaniah to sley thee? But Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then sayd Johanan ẏ sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa these wordes secretely: Let me goe I pray thee, & I will sley Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wil he kil thee, ẏ all ẏ Jewes whiche resort vnto thee, might be scattered, and the remnant in Juda perish. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam sayd vnto Johanan the sōne of Careah. Thou shalt not dooe it, for they are but lyes that thou sayest of Ismael.

The.xli.Chapter.

Ismael killeth Godoliah gilefully, and many other with him. Johanan foloweth after Ismael.

A iiii.kyng. xxv.a But in the seuēth moneth it happened ỷ Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Elisama (one of ỷ kings bloud) came with thē ỷ wer greatest about the king, & ten mē ỷ were sworne with hym vnto Godoliah the sōne of Ahicam to Mizpa, & they did eate together. And Ismael the sōne of Nathaniah with those ten men ỷ wer sworne to hym, start vp, & smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam ỷ sonne of Saphan with ỷ sweard, & slew him, whom ỷ king of Babilon had made gouernor of the lande. Ismaell also slew all the Iewes that wer wyth Godoliah at Mizpa, & all the Chaldees that he found there wayting vpon him, and those that wer able to fyght he slew wyth hym.

B The next day after that he had slayn Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) & there came certain men from Sichem, frō Siloh & Samaria, to the number of .lxxx. which had shauen their beards, rent their clothes, & wer all heauy, bryngyng meate offryngs & incence in theyr handes, to offer it in the house of the lord. And Ismael ỷ sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Mizpa

Ecc.xli.c weping to mete them. Nowe when he met them, he sayd: Go your waie to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came into the myddest of the citye, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (wyth them that wer sworne vnto hym) slew them, euen at ỷ myddest of the pit. Among these .lxxx. mē there wer ten that sayd vnto Ismael: Oh, sley vs not, for we haue yet a great tresure in the fyelde, of wheat, barly, oyle, and hony. So he spared them, and slew thē not

C As for the remnaunte of the people, the kynges daughters and all the people ỷ wer left at Mizpa, vpon whō iiii.kyng. xxv c Nabuzaradan the chyef captayne hadde made Godoliah ỷ sonn of Ahicam gouernor: Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah caryed them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Iohanan ỷ sonne of Careah, and all they whiche had bene captaynes ouer the kyngs host wyth hym heard of all the wickednesse that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had doone, they i.kl. xxx.b Ie.xlii.c. toke theyr companions, and went out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and found hym by the great waters that are in Gibeon. Now when al ỷ people whom Ismael had led captyue, sawe Iohanan the sōne of Careah & al ỷ other captayns of the host, they were glad. So al ỷ people that Ismael had caried away frō Mizpa, wer brought again. And whē they returned, they came to Iohanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismaell the sōne of Nathaniah, fled from Iohanan with .viii. D of his sworne cōpanions, & went to ỷ Ammonites. Then Iohanan ỷ sonne of Careah & al the captains of ỷ host, that were wt hym, toke al the remnant of the people whom Ismael ỷ sonne of Nathaniah had led away: (When he had slain Godoliah ỷ sonne of Ahicam) whom thei also had rescued from hym: fighting men, womē, & childrē, & Gelded mē, whom they brought again from Gibeon, & went from thence & sat thē down at Geruth Camaam, whych Ier.xli...

The .xlii. Chapter.

The captaines aske counsell of Ieremy what they ought to doe. Ieremy admonissheth the remnāt of the people not to go into Egipt.

So al the captains, & Iohanan ỷ sonne of Careah, Iezaniah the sonne of Osaiah, came with all the people from the least vnto ỷ A for vs vnto the lorde thy god: namely: for all the remnant wherof there be very fewe of vs left of many, as thou seest vs, that the lorde thy god maye shew vs a way to goe in, & tel vs what we should doe. Then Ieremy the prophet sayde vnto thē: I haue heard you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto god youre lorde, as ye haue required me: and looke what aunswer the lord geueth you, I wyll certifye you thereof, and kepe nothyng backe from you. And

And after ten daies came the worde of the lorde vnto Jeremy. Then called he Joha= nan the sonne of Careah, and all the cap= tains of ye people that were with hym: yea & all the people from the least to the most, and said vnto them. Thus sayth the lorde God of Israell, vnto whom ye sente me to lay foorth your prayers before hym: If ye Jer,xxi.b will dwell in this lande, I shall build you vp, and not breake you down: I shal plāt you, and not roote you out. For I repent as concernyng the trouble that I haue done vnto you. Feare not the king of Ba= bilon, of whome ye stande in awe: O be not afrayde of hym sayeth the Lorde. For I will be with you, to helpe you, and de= liuer you from his hande. I will pardon you, I wyll haue mercy vppon you, and cause hym to pitie you, & bring you again C into your own land. Neuerthelesse, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folow the voice of the lord your god, but wil say thus: we wil not dwel here, but go into Egipt, where we shall neither se war heare the noyse of the trompet, nor suffer hūger, ther wil we dwel. Wherfore heare now the word of the lord. O ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus saith the lord of hostes, the Je.xviii a God of Israel. Yf ye be wholy purposed to go into Egipt, and ye enter there to dwel as straungers: The sweard that ye feared Jer.xli,c shal ouertake you in Egipt: and ye hunger wherof ye be here afraid, shal hang vpon you, and folowe you into Egipt, and ther shal ye die. And al they that of set purpose vndertake to go into Egipte to soiourne there, shall perishe with the sweard, wyth hunger & pestilence, not one of them shall remaine, there shal none escape the plage yt I wil bring vpon thē. For thus saith the lord of hostes, the God of Israell: lyke as my wrathe and indignation is moued a= gainst the inhabitors of Jerusalē: so shall my displeasure be kindled against you al= D so, if ye go into Egipt: & there ye shalbe re= uiled abhorred, brought to shame & confu sion: and as for this place, ye shal neuer se it more. The lord forbiddeth you (O ye rē= nant of Juda) yt ye shal not go into Egipt.
And forget not that I haue warned you Jer.xliii.a earnestly this daye, for ye haue dissēbled with me: For ye sēt me vnto the lord your god, and said: O praye thou the lord oure God for vs, and loke what answer ye lorde our god geueth thee, that bring vs again & we shal do therafter. Now haue I shew= ed & declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed ye voice of the lord your god, for the whiche cause he hath sent me vnto you.
Now therfore, if ye will not folowe it, bee De.xxviii.e sure that ye shal perish with the swearde, with hunger & pestilence: euē in the same place where your lust is to go and dwell.

The.xliii.Chapter.

Johanan carieth the remnaunt of the people in= to Egipt contrary to the mynde of Jeremye. Jere= my prophecyeth the destruction of Egipt.

Now whē Jeremy had ended A all the wordes of the lord his god vnto ye people, whiche to declare ye lorde theyr god had sent him to thē (euen al these wordes, I say:) Azariah the sonne of Ozi= ah, and Johanan the sonne of Careah & Jer,xlii a all the stubborne persones, said vnto Je= remy: Thou lyest. The lord our God hath not sente thee to speake vnto vs, that we should not go into Egipt, and dwel there.
But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouo= keth thee against vs, that he might bring vs into the captiuity of the Chaldees, that they might sley vs, and cary vs away pri= B soners vnto Babilon. So Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captains of the hoste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord: Name= ly, to dwel in the land of Juda. But Joha= nan the sonne of Careah, and all the cap= tains of the host, caryed awaye all the rē= Jere.xli c naunt in Juda, that were come together againe from al the heathen (among whō they had bene scattered) to dwell in ye lād of Juda: men, women, children, the kings daughters, all those that Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had left with Godoli= ah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Sa= phan. They caryed awaye also the Pro= phet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Nery= ah, and so came into Egipt: for they were C not obedyent vnto the commaundement of god. Thus came they to Taphnis. And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, saying: Take great stones in thine hāde, and hide them in the brick wal, vnder ye dore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that al the mē of Juda may see & say vnto them. Thus saieth the lord of hostes, the god of Israell. Beholde I will send & cal for Nabuchodonosor the Jer,xlvi a king of Babilon my seruaunte, and wyll set his seat vpon these stones that I haue hid, and he shall spread his tent ouer thē.
And when he commeth, he shall smite the D land of Egipt, some with slaughter, some with prisonmente, and some wyth the sweard. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egiptians Gods, and burne them vp, & take themselues prisoners. Moreo-uer, he shall aray himself with the land of Egipt, like as a shepeherd putteth on hys coate, and shal depart his way frō thence in peace. The pillers also of the temple of the sunne, that is in Egipt, shal he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the E-giptians gods.

The.xliiii, Chapter.

He reprouech the people for their ydolatry. Thei that set light by the threatning of the lord, are chastened. The destruction of Egipte, and the Jewes therin is prophecied.

A This is the worde ÿ was shewed to Jeremy concernyng all the Jewes which dwelt in Egipt: at Migdol, at Taphnis, at Noph, and in the lande of Patures. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: ye haue seen all the misery that I haue brought vpō Jerusalem, and vpon the cities of Juda: so that this day they are desolate, and no manne dwelling therein: and that bicause of the great blasphemyes whiche they committed, to prouoke me to anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifice and worshippe vnto straunge gods, whom neither ye nor your fathers haue knowen. Howbeit, I Je.xxv.a c.xxix.c. sent vnto them my seruauntes, al the prophetes. I rose vp early, I sente vnto them and gaue them warnyng: O doe no such abhominable thinges, and thynges that I hate. But they woulde not folowe nor B hearken, to turne from theyr wickednesse and to doe no more sacrifyces vnto strāge gods. Wherefore mine indignation and wrath was kindled, & it brent vp ÿ cities of Juda, the fields, with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste & desolate, as it is come to passe this daye.
Nowe therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: How happeneth it, that ye do so great euil vnto your owne soules: thus to destroy the men & women, children and babes of Juda: so that none of you is left, bicause ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the works of your own hādes: When ye offer vnto straunge Gods in the lād of Egipt, wheras ye be gone to dwel.
That ye might vtterly perysh, and that ye might be reuiled and shamefully entrea-ted of all nations. Or haue ye nowe forgotten ÿ wickednesse of your forefathers, the wyckednesse of the kynges of Juda, & theyr wyues, ÿ wyckednesse that ye youre selues and your wyues haue done in the land of Juda, in the citie, and in ÿ stretes C of Jerusalem: yet ar ye not sory vnto this day: ye feare not, neyther walke ye in my law, and in my commaundements that I haue geuen vnto you, & youre forefathers.
Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: I am sted-fastly aduised and determyned to punysh you, and to roote oute all Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purposelye went into Egipte, there to dwell, I wyll Jer.xliii. and.xlvi take them, and they shall all bee destroyed. In the lande of Egipte shall they peryshe, beyng consumed with the swearde and with hunger. For from the least vnto the most, they shal perish with the sweard and with hunger. Moreouer, they shal be reuiled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded: For I wyll visyte them that dwell in Egipt, as I haue visited Jerusalem with the swearde, with hunger, and with pesti- Je.xxiii. lence. So that none of the remnaunte of Juda, whiche are gone to dwel in Egipt, shall be left to come againe into the lande of Juda, although they thynke to come thyther agayne, and to dwell there. For none shall come againe, but suche as are fled away. Then all the men which knew D that their wiues had offred vnto strange Goddes, and a great sorte of wyues that stoode there: yea, and all the people that dwelt there in Egipte, in the citye of Patures, aunswered Jeremye, and sayde: As for the woordes that thou haste spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lorde: we wyll in no wyse heare them: but what soe-uer goeth out of our own mouth, that we wyll doe. We wyll dooe sacryfyce and offer oblations vnto the Queene of heauen lyke as we and oure forefathers, oure Jer.vii. kynges and our heades haue done in the Cities of Juda, and in the streetes and fieldes of Jerusalem. For then hadde we plenteousnesse of vitailles, then were we in prosperitye, and no mysfortune came vpon vs. But since we lefte to burne incense, and to do sacrifice vnto the Queene E of heauen, we haue had scarcenesse of all things, and perish with the swearde and hunger. Laste of all, when we women did sacrifice and offered vnto the Quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and poure vnto her drinke offerynges, euē to that

that image, dyd we sacrifyce and seruyce without our husbands willes. Then said Jeremy vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to al the folke which had geuen hym that aunswere: dyd not ỷ lord remember the sacrifices that ye, your fore fathers, your kinges and rulers, wyth all the people, haue offred in the cities of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem: and hathe he not considered this in hys mynde? Insomuche that the lorde myght no longer suffer the wickednesse of youre inuentions, and the abhominable things ..ap.i.c which ye dyd. Is not your lande desolate and voyde: yea, abhorred and accursed, so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this day. Did not all F this happen vnto you, bicause ye made ..kyng. such sacrifices to ydols & sinned againste
..iiii.b the Lorde: ye haue not folowed his voyce, ..ere.ii.c. to walke in his law, in his ordinaunces &
..c.i.b.c statutes. Yea, this is the cause that al misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer Jeremye spake vnto all the people and to all ỷ women. Heare the woorde of the lord all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egipt. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. ye and your wiues haue spoken with your owne mouth, the thyng that ye haue fulfilled in dede. Yea, thus haue ye sayde: Je.xliiii c we wyll not fayle, but perfourme the vo-wes that we haue vowed. We wyll do sacrifyce, and poure out drinke offerynges to the Queene of heauen. Purposely wyl ye set vp your owne meaninges, and perfourme your vowes. And therefore heare G the wordes of the Lorde all Juda, ye that ..xiii a dwell in the lande of Egipt. Beholde, I haue sworne by my greate name, sayeth the Lorde: that my name shall not bee rehearsed through any mans mouth of Juda, in all the lande of Egipte, to saye: the Lorde God lyueth. For I will watche to Je.xliii c plage them, and not for theyr wealthe.
And all the menne of Juda that bee in the lande of Egipt, shall perishe wyth the swearde and with hunger, vntill they be vtterly destroyed. Neuerthelesse, those that fledde awaye for the swearde shal come againe into the lande of Juda, but there shalbe very fewe of them. And all the remnaunt of Juda, that are gone into Egipte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose wordes shall be found true: theyrs or myne. Take this for a token, that I wyll vysyte you in thys place sayeth the lorde, and that ye may know that I (with out doute) wyll perfourme my purpose vpon you, to punish you: beholde, sayth the lorde, I wyll deliuer Pharao Hophrea kyng of Egipte, into the handes of hys enemies that seke after his life: euen as I gaue Zedekiah the king of Juda into the iiii.kyng. handes of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Ba- xxv.a bilon his enemye, which sought after his Je.xxxix.b lyfe.

The.xlv.Chapter.

Baruch is reproued of Jeremy.

These are the wordes that A Jeremy ỷ prophet spake Je.xxxvi.a vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, after ỷ he had written these sermons in a booke at the meuthe of Jeremy, in the.iiii.yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kyng of Juda, saying: thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell vnto thee, O Baruch: insomuch as thou thoughtest thus, when thou wast wrytyng: Woe is me, the Lorde hath geuen me sorowe vpon sorowe, I haue we-ryed my selfe wyth syghyng, and haue founde no reste. Therefore tell him, O Je- B remy, that the Lord sayeth thus: behold, ỷ thyng that I haue buylded, wil I break downe agayne, and roote out the thyng ỷ I haue planted, yea, this whole land. And seekest thou yet promotion? Looke not for it, and desire it not. For I wil bring a myserable plage vpon all flesche, sayth ỷ lord.
But thy life wyll I geue thee for a praye Jer.xxi.b in all places, wheresoeuer thou goest.

The.xlvi.Chapter.

He prophecieth the destruction of Egipt: delyueraunce is promysed to Israel.

Here folowe the woordes of the lord to the prophete A Jeremy, whiche he spake against all the Gentyles.
These wordes folowyng preached he to the Egip- Esa.xix a of Pharao Necho, kyng of Egipte, when Eze.xxix. he was in Charcamis beside the water of xxx. & xxxi Euphrates, what tyme as Nabuchodo- iiii.kyng.

the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias king of Juda.
Make readye buckeler and shylde: Je.xxxvi a and go foorth to fight, harnesse your horses and set your selues vpō them, set your sallettes faste on, bryng foorth speares, scoure your sweardes, and putte on youre brest plates. But alas how happeneth it that I see you so afraide: why shrynke ye backe? Theyr woorthies are slaine: yea, they runne so fast away, that none of thē loketh behinde him. Fearefulnesse is fallē vpon euery one of them sayeth the Lorde. The lightest of foote shall not flye away, and the woorthyes shall not escape. Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they did stumble and fall. But what B is he this that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaring and raging like the streames of water? It is Egipte that ryseth vp lyke the floud, and casteth out the waters with so great noyse. And he sayde: I wil go vp, and will couer the earth, I wyl destroy the citie with them that are therein. Get ye vp ye horses, roule foorth ye charrets, come foorth ye woorthies, ye Morians, ye Libeans with your buckelers, ye Lideans with youre bowes. This daye of the lorde god of hostes, is a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge hym of his enemyes. The swearde shall deuoure: it C shalbe satisfied and bathed in their bloud for the Lorde God of hostes shall haue a slaine offering towarde the north, by the water of Euphrates. Goe vp, O Gilead and bring triacle vnto the daughter of Egipt. But in vayne shalt thou goe to surgery, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The heathen haue heard of thy shame, & the lande is full of thy confusion: for one strong man did stumble vppon another, and they are fallen bothe together. These D are the woordes that the Lorde spake to Ie,xliii,b the Prophete Jeremy, concerning ẏ comming of Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon, whiche was sente to destroye the land of Egipt. Preache out throughe the lande of Egipt, and cause it to be proclaymed at Migdol, Noph, and Taphnis, and say: Stande still, make thee ready, for the sweard shall consume thee rounde about. Howe happeneth it, that thy myghtye worthies are fallen? Why stoode they not faste? Euen bicause the lorde thruste them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer stil vpon an other. One cried vpon another: vp let vs goe again to oure owne people, & to our own natural countrey from the cruell swearde. They dyd E cry euen there: O Pharao, king of Egipt, thou troublous kyng: the time will bring seditYon. As truelye as I lyue sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, it shall come as the mounte of Tabor and as Libanus, if it stode in the sea. O thou daughter of Egipt, make ready thy geare to flitte. For Noph shalbe voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein.

The lande of Egipte is lyke a goodly faire calfe: but destruction shall come oute of the northe, I saye it commeth. Her waged souldiors that bee with her, are lyke fatte calues: they also shall flye awaye together, and not abide: for the day of theyr slaughter, and the tyme of theyr visitation, shall come vppon them. The crye of them shall make a noyse, as the blast of a trompette. For they shall enter in wyth theyr hostes, and come with axes, as it F were hewers downe of woode. And they shal cut downe her wood, sayeth the lord they shalbe innumerable: for they shalbe moe in number than the grassehoppers so that no man shall bee able to tell them. The daughter of Egipte is confounded and deliuered into the handes of the people of the North. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell. Beholde, I will visite that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao, and Egipt, yea, bothe theyr gods and their kings: euen Pharao, and all them that put theyr trust in him. yea, I will deliuer thē into the hands of those that seeke after theyr liues: namelye into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon, and into the power of hys seruauntes. And after all these thynges, it shall be inhabited as afore tyme, sayeth the Lorde. But bee not thou afrayde (O my seruaunte Jacob,) feare not thou, G O Israell. For loe, I wyll helpe thee from farre, and thy seede from the lande of their captiuitie. Jacob also shall come agayne and bee in reste: he shall prosper and no man shall doe hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunte) sayeth the Lorde, for I am with thee, and wyl destroy al nations, among whom I haue scattered thee. Neuerthelesse, I wyll not consume thee: but chasten thee and correcte thee: yea, and that with discretion, neither will I spare thee as one that wer faultlesse.

The.xlvii.Chapter.

The woorde of the Lorde agaynste the Philistines.

These

A These are ye wordes yt the lord spake unto Jeremy ye prophet against ye Philistines, before ye Pharao smote ye citie of Azah. Thus saith ye lord: behold there shal waters ryse out of the North: & shall grow to a great floud, running over and covering the land, the cities, & them ye dwel therin. And the men shall cry and al they that dwell in the lande shall mourne B at the noyse and stamping of theyr strong barbed horses, at ye shaking of their char-rets, & at the rumbling of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to theyr chyldren, so feble and wery shall theyr handes be at ye same time when he shal be ther, to destroy the whole land of the Philistines. He shal C make waste both Tirus, Sidon, and al other that are sworne unto them. For the Lorde wyll destroy the Philistines, the remnaũt of the Ile of Caphtor. Baldenesse is come uppon Azah, Ascalon wt her other valleys shal kepe her peace. How lẽg wilt thou sley, O thou sweard of the lord? Whẽ wylt thou ceasse? Turne againe into thy swete rest, & leave of. But how cã it cease, when the lord himselfe hath geven him a charge againste Ascalon, and raysed it up against the cities of the Sea coastes?

The.xlviii, Chapter.

The worde of the Lord against the Moabites.

A Thus sayth ye lord of hostes Esa.xv.a xvi.a.and xxv.b Eze.xxv.b Amos ii.b the god of Israel, against Moab: woe be to the citie of Nebo: for it is laid wast brought to confusion and Karithiarim taken. Mis-gab is brought to shame and afrayde: Moab can boast nomore of Hezebon, for thei have devised against it.
Come shall they saye, let us roote thẽ out, that they may be nomore among ye number of the Gentiles, and that the Madmen may no more be thought upon: and the sweard shall persecute thee. A voyce shal crye from Horonaim: with great wa-lyng & destruction, is Moab made desolate. Children could tell of the cry thereof.
For at the going up unto Luith he arose with lamentation & mourning, & downe towarde Horonaim, they heard a cruell and a deadly crye. Get you awaye, save your lyves, and be lyke unto the heath in Esa.ii.b. the wyldernesse. For bycause thou haste Je.xvii.b trusted in thyne owne workes and trea-Ez.xxx.a sure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos wyth his priestes and princes shall goe awaye B into captivitye. The destroyer shall come upon all cities, none shal escape. The valleys shall be destroyed, and the feldes shall be layd waste, lyke as the lorde hath spoken. Geve wynges unto Moab, that she get her awaye spedelye: for her cityes shalbe made so desolate, that no man shal dwel therin.

Cursed bee he that dooeth the woorde of the Lorde negligently, and cursed bee he that keepeth backe hys swearde from sheddyng of bloud. Moab hath ever bene Je.xlviii.b ryche and carelesse from her youth up, she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was never yet put oute of one vessell into an other, (that is) she never wente awaye into captivity: therfore her taste remayneth, and her savor is not yet chaunged. But loe, the tyme commeth sayeth the Lorde, that I shal C sende her trussers, to trusse her up, which shall remove her from her dwellyng, and to emptye her vesselles, and breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israell was ashamed of Bethell, wherein she put her truste. Wherefore dooe ye thynke thus? iii.Re.xii.a we are myghtye and strong men of war, Moab is destroyed, and her cities brent up: her chosen yong menne bee slayne, sayeth the kyng, whose name is the lord of hostes. The destruction of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fal is at hand.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name shall saye: O howe happeneth it, that the strong staffe, and the goodlye rod is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe from thy glory, and syt in thyrst.
For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come up to thee also & breake downe thy strong holdes. And thou that dwelleste in Aroer, D get thee to the strete, and loke about thee, aske them that are fled and escaped, and say what thyng is happened? Oh Moab is confounded and overcome.

Mourne and crye, tell it oute at Ar-non, that Moab is destroyed. For iudge-ment shall come uppon the playne land, namely, uppon Holon, and Jahazah, up-pon Mephaath and Dibon: upon Nabo and the house of Deblathaim uppon Ca-riathiarim, and uppon the house Gamul, uppon the house of Maon, and Carioth uppon Bozrah, and all the cityes in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or nere.

The

The horne of Moab is smitten downe, and her arme broken sayeth the Lorde.
Make her dronken , for she magnifyed her selfe aboue the Lorde,that men maie clap their handes at her vomite,and that she also may bee laughed to scorne.O Is= and the pryde of her stomake, sayeth the Lorde:I know(sayth the lord)her indyg= are lyes ,and they haue not dealte truely.

Therfore shall their mournyng be made for Moab,and euery manne shall crye for Moabs sake:a lamentation shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall.So will I mourne for thee also,O Jazer,and for thee,O thou vineyard of Sabamath.
Thy vine braunches shall come ouer the sea,and the braunches of Jazer, but vn= to the sea, the destroyer shall breake into thy haruest and grape gathering:mirthe and chere shall bee taken awaye from the timbry fielde, and from the whole lande of Moab. There shall bee no swete wyne make to crye : yea, there shall be none to crye : vnto hym whiche afore tyme were heard from Hezebon to Eleale and Ja= haz, whiche lyfted vp theyr voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim , that bullocke of three yeare olde shall goe mournyng.

The waters also of Memrim shall be dryed vp. Moreouer, I wyll make Mo= ab cease,sayeth the Lorde,from the offe= rynges and censyng, that she hath made vnto her Goddes in high places. Where= F fore my harte mourneth for Moab lyke a croude, playing an heauy song, and for mennes sake of the brickewall my harte mourneth also , euen as a Pipe that Pi= shauen, and all beardes clypped of, all handes bounde, and loines girded about with sackcloth.Upon all the housetoppes and stretes of Moab there shalbe lamen= table mourning.For I will breake Mo= ab like an vnprofitable vessell, sayeth the Lorde:O howe is she destroyed ? O howe mourneth she?O how doeth Moab hang downe her head,and is ashamed ? Thus shall Moab bee a laughyng stocke, and had in derision of all them that be rounde Deu... about her. For thus sayeth the Lorde:be= holde,the enemye shall come flying as an Je.xlix...

Eagle,and spread his winges vpon Mo= ab.They shall clime ouer the walles,and winne ỹ strong holdes.Then the mighty mennes hartes in Moab shall be like the harte of a woman trauelling with childe.
And Moab shall bee made so desolate, G that she shall no more be a people:bicause she hath set vp her self against the Lorde.
Feare,pyt,and snare shal come vpon thee O Moab,sayeth the Lorde. Whoso esca= Es... peth the feare shal fal in the pit,and who= so getteth out of the pit,shall bee taken in the snare.For I will bring a yere of visi= tation vpon Moab,saye th the lord.They that are able to flye,shal stande vnder the shadowe of Hezebon:for there shall goe a fyre oute of Hezebon, and a flame from Sion,and shall burne vp that proud peo= ple of Moab,and the toppe of those sediti= ous chyldren. Woe bee vnto thee,O Mo= ab, for thou people of Chamos shalt pe= rishe:yea,thy sonnes and daughters shall be led away captiue.yet at the laste,wyll I bryng Moab out of captiuitye agayne, sayeth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

against Idumea,Damascus,Cedar,and Elam.

AS concerning ỹ Ammo= A nites:thus the Lord say= Eze.xxi eth:hath Israell no chyl= and.xxv dren,or is he without an Amos.i. heire?Why hath your king then take Gad in?Wher= fore doth this peple dwel in his cities?Behold therfore the time co= meth sayth the lorde, that I will bryng a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammo= nites:and it shall bee layde on a desolate heape,and her cities brent vp:and the Is= raelites shalbe lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore,saieth the Lorde.
Hezebon shal mourne:for Ay shalbee roo= ted out of the grounde, sayeth the Lorde.
The cities of Rabah shall crye oute, and girde themselues with sackclothe, they shal mourne and runne about the walles for theyr king shall be led away prysoner: yea,his priestes and princes with hym.

B Therefore triumphest thou in the valley? thy valley hath flowed awaye, O thou fearce daughter, and thinkest thou that thou arte so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shall come to thee? Behold, I wyl bryng a feare vpon thee: sayth the Lorde God of hostes, from all those that bee about thee: so that ye shalbe scattered eue-ry man from another, and no manne shal gather them together agayn that be fled.
But after that, I wyll bryng the Ammo-nites also out of captiuitie agayne. Upon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hostes spoken on this maner: is there no more wisdome in Theman? Is there no more good councel among his people? Is their wisdome then tourned cleane to nought? get you hence, tourne your backes, creepe downe into the depe, O ye citizens of De-dan. For I wyll bryng destruction vppon Esau: yea, and the daye of his visitation.
If the grape gatherers came vppon thee should they not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon thee, should they not take so muche as they thoughte C were ynoughe. But I wyll make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His sede shall be wasted awaye: yea, his brethrē and his neighbours, and he hymselfe shal not be left behynde. Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chyldren behind thee, and I will kepe them, and thy widdowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken. Beholde, they that menne thought were vnmete to drink of the cup haue dronken with the first and thinkest thou them to be free? No no, thou shalte neyther be quite nor free: but thou muste drynke also: for why? I haue sworne by my selfe sayeth the Lorde: that Bozrah shal becom a wildernesse, an open shame, a laughing stock, and cursing: and al her cities shalbe a continuall deserte. For I D am perfectly informed of the lorde, that he hath sent a messāge alreadye vnto the Heathen. Gather you together and goe foorth agaynst them, make you ready to the battaile: for loe, I will make thee but smal among the heathen and litle regarded among them. The hie stomake and the pryde of thy harte haue deceiued thee bycause thou wylte dwell in the holes of stonye rockes, and haue the hye moun-taines in possession. Neuertheles though thy neste were as hye as the Eagles, yet wyll I cast thee downe, sayeth the lorde.
Moreouer, Idumea shall bee a wyldernesse, whoso goeth by it, shall bee abashed Je.xxvi.e / xix b.e.l a / Ez.xv.e.
and wonder at all her miserable plages, lyke as Sodom and Gomor, and the cities that laye there aboute were tourned vpsyde downe, sayeth the Lorde, so that no bodye dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habytation there: beholde, lyke as the Lyon, so shal a destroyer com vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordan vnto the strong dwellyng place: and when I haue made hym quyete, I wyll make hym to flye from her: and all chosen menne wyll I sette in araye agaynst her. Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyll stryue with me? What shepeheard maye stande in my handes. Therefore Ps.xxxviii heare the councell of ye Lord that he hath E taken vpon Idumea: and hys purpose that he hath deuised vppon the Citizens of Theman. The leaste of the flocke shall teare them in peces, and looke what faire thyng they haue, they shal make it waste: and themselues also. At the noyse of their fall the earth shall quake: the crye of theyr voyce shall be heard vnto the red sea. Be- Je.xlviii holde, the enemye shall come and flye vp hither, lyke as it wer an Eagle, and spred his winges vpon Bozrah. Then shal the heartes of the worthyes in Edom, bee as the hearte of a woman trauellyng with chylde. Upon Damascus, Hemath, and Es. xvii.a Arphad, shall come confusion: for they Amos.i.a shall heare euill tidyngs, they shalbe tossed to and fro lyke the sea that cannot stande styll. Damascus shal be sore afraid and shall flye, tremblyng shall come vppon her.

Sorowe and payne shall ouertake her, as a woman trauellyng with child.
But how should so worshipfull and glorious a citie bee forsaken? Heare therefore: her yong men shal fal in the stretes, and all her menne of warre shalbe taken awaye in that time, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I will kindle a fyer in the walles of Damascus whiche shall consume the Palace of Benhadad. As for Cedar and the kingdom of Hasor whome Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon smote down Esa. xxi.c the lorde hath spoken thus vppon them: aryse, and gette you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people towarde the East.
Theyr tentes and theyr flockes shall they take awaye: yea, theyr hangynges and theyr vessels: theyr Cammels also shall they carye awaye wyth them. They shall crye to them: feare is on euerye syde.

Flee, get you soone awaye, creepe into caues, that ye maye dwell there, O ye in-habitors of Hasor saieth the lord: for Na-buchodonosor the kyng of Babilon hath holdē a councel concerning you, and concluded his deuice against you. Aryse, and get you vp against yonder riche & careles people (saieth the lorde) whiche hath neyther gates nor dore barres, but dwell alone. Their Camels shall be stollen, and the drones of their cattel driuen away.
Moreouer those will I scatter toward al ÿ windes, & bring them to destruction: yea and that through their owne familiars sayth the lorde. Hasor also shalbe a dwelling for dragons, and an euerlasting wil-dernesse: so that no body shall dwell there: & no man shal haue there his habitation.
G These are the wordes that the lord spake Ez. xxxii. d to the Prophete Jeremy, concernyng E-Da. viii. a lam, in the beginning of the reigne of Ze-dekiah, king of Juda. Thus saieth the lorde of hostes: beholde, I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wil I bryng the foure windes, from the foure quarters of heauen, & wil scatter them against the same foure windes. And there shall be no people, but som of Elam shal flie vnto thē.
For I wil cause Elam to be afraid of their enemies, and of thē that seke their liues: & wyll bring thē vpon the indignation of my wrath, saith the lorde: and I wyll persecute them, with the sweard, so long, tyll I haue brought them to naught. I wil set my throne in Elam, I will destroy bothe the king and the princes from thence, saieth the lord. But in processe of time I wil bring Elam out of captiuitie agayn, saith the lorde.

The. l. Chapter.

He prophecieth the destruction of Babilon, & the deliuerance of Israell, whiche was in captiuitie.

A THe wordes that the lorde spake vnto ÿ prophet Jeremy concerning Babilō and the land of the Chaldees: preache among the Esa. xiii. a Gentiles, let youre voyce & xlvii. a be heard, make a tokē, cry Je. xxv. b out, kepe no silēce, but say: Babilō is won.
and. li. a Bell is confounded, & Merodach is ouer-Esa. xlvi. a com. Yea, their gods be brought to shame Dan. v. a and theyr images burste in peces. For out of the North there doeth come a people agaynst her, whiche make her land so waste, that no body dwell therin, neither man, nor beast: for they flye and departe from thence. In those dayes and at that time, saith the Lord: the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Juda, weping and making haste, and shal I. Chro. seke the Lord their God. They shal aske the way to Sion, thither shal they turne their faces, saying: come and we wil cleue to the Lorde, in a couenaunt that neuer shalbe broken. My people hath been a B lost flocke, my shepeheardes haue deceyued them, and haue made them go a-straye vppon the hylles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the lytle hyll, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vppon them, haue deuoured them: and their enemies said: we haue made no fault agaynst them, for they haue dyspleased the Lorde: yea, euen the lorde, whiche is the beautie of their righteousnesse, & that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flye from Babilon, and departe oute of the lande of the Chaldees, and bee as the rammes that goe before the flocke. For Jer. li. lo, I will wake vp an hoste of people from the Northen lande, and bring them vnto Babilon: these shal lay siege to it & winne it. Their arrowes shall not mysse, lyke as a cunnyng archer shooteth not wrong.
And the Chaldees shall be spoiled and al they that spoyle them, shalbe satisfyed saieth the lorde, althoughe ye were so cherefull and gladde, to treade down mine heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calues in the grasse, and trymphed ouer them like the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorye. Youre mothers shall bee sore confounded, and they that bare you shall come to shame. She shalbee the least sette by among the nations: voyde, wasted, and dryed vp. No man shall be able to dwel there, for the feare of the lorde but she shalbe whole desolate. All thei that goe by Babilon, shall stand still and be abashed, and shall wonder at al her plages goe forth in your araye against Babilon rounde about, all ye that can handle bo- C wes, shoote at her, spare no arrowes: for she hath sinned against the Lord Cry out vpon her, vpon her, against her round about, she shall yelde her selfe, her foundations shall fall, and her walles shall come down: for it shalbe the vengeaunce of the Lorde: yea, vengeaunce shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye with her. Roote out the sower from Babilon,
and

and hym that handleth ÿ sicle in haruest.
For feare of the swearde of the enemy, eue-ry manne shall get hym to his owne people and euery man shall flee to hys owne lande. Israell is a scattered flocke, the Lyons haue dispersed them. First, the kyng of the Assirians deuoured them, laste of all, this Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon hath brused all theyr bones. Therefore D thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: beholde, I will visite the kyng of Babilon and his kyngdom, as I haue vy-syted the kyng of the Assirians: and wyll bryng Israell agayne to his pleasant pasture, that he may fede vppon Charmell & Basan and be satisfyed vpon the mounte of Ephraim and Galaad. In those dayes Jere. l.c and at the same tyme, sayeth the Lorde: if the offence of Israell be soughte for, there shall none be founde. If men enquyre for the synne of Juda, there shall be none: for I wyll be mercifull vnto them, whom I suffer to remayne ouer. Go down, O thou auenger, into the enemyes land, and vy-site them that dwell therein: downe with them, and smite them vpon ÿ backes, sayeth the Lord: doe accordyng to all that I haue commaunded thee. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of slaughter and great murther, namelye on this maner: howe happeneth it, that the hammer of ÿ whole world is thus brooken and brosed in sunder? How chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wyldernesse among the heathen, on this maner? I my self haue layed waite for thee, and thou arte taken vnawares arte thou trapped and snared, for why: thou haste prouoked the Lorde vnto anger. The Lorde hath opened hys house of ordinaunce, and brought foorth the weapons of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Chaldees E it is the Lorde of hostes woorke. Come a-gaynst her, for this is her ende: breake vp her chestes: threshe her as ye thresh corne destroy her that nothyng shall be left.
Slay all theyr mighty souldiors and put them to death. Woe be vnto them, for the day and time of theyr visitation is at hãd.
Me think I heare already the cry of them that be fled and escaped out of the lande Babilon, which shewe in Sion the vengeaunce of the Lord our God, the venge-aunce of his temple: yea, a voyce of them that crye agaynst Babilon. Call vp al the archers agaynste Babylon, pytche youre tentes rounde aboute her, that none escape. Recompence her as she hath deser-ued: and accordyng as she hath doone, so Jerem. l.c deale with her agayne: for she hath set vp Ex. xviii.c her selfe against the lorde, against the ho- iiii. Es. ii.a ly one of Israell. Therfore shall her yong men fall downe in the streetes, and all her men of warre shalbe rooted out in ÿ daye sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I speake vnto thee, O thou proude, sayth the Lord God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitation. And the proud shall stumble & fall, and no man shall help him vp. I wyll burne vp his cities wyth fyer, and it shal consume all ÿ is rounde about hym. Thus sayeth the lorde of hostes: the children of Israel & Juda, suffer vyolence F together. All they that haue them in cap-tiuitie, kepe them fast, and wyll not lette them goe: but theyr auenger and Redemer is mightie, whose name is the Lord of hostes: he shall mainteyne theyr cause, he shall make the lande shake, and iudge them that dwel therin, one with another.
The sweard shall come vppon the Chaldees sayth the lord, vpon them that dwell in Babilon, vpon their princes, and vpon theyr wisemen. The sweard vppon theyr sothsayers: as for those, they shal become fooles. The sweard vpon theyr worthyes so ÿ they shall stand in feare. The swearde vpon their horsemen and charets, & vpon al ÿ common people ÿ dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become like women.
The sweard vpon their treasure, so that it shalbe stollen awaye. A drought vppon theyr waters, so that thei shalbe dried vp.
For the lande worshyppeth ymages, and delyteth in straunge wonderful thynges.
Therfore shall wyld beastes, Lamia, and Catte of mountaynes, and Estryches, dwell therein, for there shall neuer man dwell there, neither shall any man haue his habitation there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomor, Gen. xix.f with the cities that lay there aboute, sayeth the lord: so shal no man dwel there also, neyther shall any man haue there hys Jerem. l.d habitation. Beholde, there shall come a De. xxviii people from the North with a great bond e. of men, and many kynges shall stand vp from the endes of the earthe. They beare bowes and bucklers, cruell are they and vnmerciful. Theyr voyce roareth like the raging sea, they ryde vpon horses, & come weaponed to fight agaynst thee, O Babilon. Assoone as the kyng of Babilon heareth tell of them, his handes shall ware G feble. Sorowe and heauinesse shall come vppon him, as a woman trauelyng wyth chylde

Je.xlix.c. childe. Beholde like as the lion commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordā vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I driue them foorth, and make them run Job.xli.d against her. But whom shal I chose out & ordein to such a thing? For who is like me or who wil striue with me? or what shepheard may stande against me? Therefore heare the counsell that the lord hath geuē vpon Babilon, and the deuice ẏ he hathe taken vpon the lande of the Chaldees. The least among ẏ people shal teare them in peces, & loke what pleasant thyng they haue, they shall lay it waste. The noyse at ẏ winning of Babilon shal moue ẏ earth, & the cry shalbe heard among ẏ Gentiles.

The .li. Chapter.

How Babilon should be ouerthrowen. Jeremy geueth his booke to Saraias.

A Jer.xxv.b and.l.a Thus hath ẏ lord said: behold, I wyll raise vppe a perylous winde against Babilon, and her citizens that beare euyll wyll agaynst me. I wyll also send into Babilon fanners to fan her out, and to destroy her lande, for in the day of her trouble they shalbe about her on euery syde. Moreouer, the Lord hath said vnto the bowmen, and to them that clime ouer the wals in brest plates, ye shall not spare her yong men: kil down al her host. Thus the slain shal fal down in the land Jere.l.d. of the Chaldees, and the wounded in the stretes. As for Israel and Juda, they shal not be forsaken of theyr God, of the Lord of hostes, for the holy one of Israels sake no, though they haue fylled al their lande Esa.lxviii.b full of synne. Flye away from Babilon, euery man saue his lyfe, ẏ ye be not rooted out with her wickednesse: for the time of ẏ lordes vengeance is com: yea, he shall reward her again. Babilon hath ben in the Je.xxv.c lordes hand, a golden cup that maketh al lands dronken. Of her wine haue al people dronken: therfore are they out of their wittes: but sodainly is Babilon fallen, & Esa.xxi.b Apo.xviii.a destroyed. Mourn for her, bring plaisters for her woundes, if she maye peraduenture be healed againe. We woulde haue made Babilon whole, saye they: but she is not B recouered. Therfore wyll we let her alone and goe euery man to his owne country. For her iudgement is come into heauen and is gone vp to the cloudes. The lorde hath brought forth our ryghteousnesse: & therefore come on, we wyll shewe Syon ẏ worke of the lorde oure god, make sharpe the arowes, and multiply youre shieldes: for the lorde shall rayse vp the spirit of the king of the Medes, which hath alreadye a desyre to destroy Babilon. This shalbe the vengeaunce of his temple. Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babilon, make your watche strong, set your men in array yea, holde priuy watches: and yet for all ẏ shal the lord go forth with ẏ deuice which he hath taken vppon them that dwell in Babilon. O thou that dwellest by ẏ great waters, O thou ẏ hast so great treasure & riches, thyne ende is come, and the reckening of thy winninges. The Lorde of hostes hath sworn by himself, that he wil ouerwhelme thee with men, like grasshoppers in number: which with a corage shal cry, alarum, alarum, against thee, yea euen the lorde of hostes that with his power made the earth, with his wisdom prepared the round world, and with his discretion spreade out the heauens. Assoone as he letteth his voyce be heard, the waters in the ayre ware fearce. He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of ẏ earth. He turneth the lyghtnynges to rayne, he bringeth ẏ windes out of theyr secret places: if they be estemed by theyr wysedom, all menne are become fooles. Confoūded be al casters of images, for the thing that they make is but disceit, & hath no breath. Vayne is it, and an erronious worke: and in the time of visitation it shal perish. Neuerthelesse, the porcion of Jacob is none suche, but he that made all thinges, C whose name is the lorde of hostes, he is ẏ rodde of his enheritaunce. Thou hast ben myne hammer, and weapons for warre: for with thee haue I broken the people in peces, and with thee haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Through thee I haue beaten to pouder horse and horseman: yea, the charrettes and suche as satte vppon them. Through thee haue I broken man and woman, olde and yonge, batcheler and mayden. Through thee I haue destroyed the shepeheard and his flocke, the husbandman and his cattel, the Princes and the rulers. Therfore will I rewarde the citie of Babilon, and all her Citizens the Chaldees, with all the euil which thei haue done vnto Syon: yea, that ye youre selues shall see it, sayth the Lord. Behold I come vpon thee, thou noysome hyll, sayeth the lord, thou that destroyest al lands I wyll stretche out my hande ouer thee, and caste thee downe from the stonye rocks: & wil make thee a brent hil, so ẏ nether corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foundations dations of stones shalbe taken any more out of thee: but waste and desolate shalt thou lye for euermore, sayth the Lorde.

Set vp a token in the lande, blowe the trompets among the heathen, prouoke the nations against her, calÿ kingdomes of Ararat, Menni, and Ascanes against her. Set the Prynce agaist her, bring as great a sort of terrible horses against her as if they were grashoppers. Prepare against them the people of the Me-des with their kynges, princes, & al their chiefe rulers: yea, and the whole lande ÿ is vnder hym. The lande also shall shake and be afrayd when the deuice of ÿ Lord shall come forth against Babilō: to make the lande of Babilō so waste, that no mā shall dwell any more therin. The worthies of Babilon shall leaue the battaile and kepe themselues in strong holdes, their strength hath fayled them, they shalbe lyke wemē. Their dwelling places shalbe brent vp, their barres shall be broken. One pursenaunt shall mete another: yea, one post shall come by another to bryng the kyng of Babilon tidinges: D that hys citie is taken in on euery syde, ÿ fordes occupyed, the fennes brēt vp, and the souldiors sore afrayd. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: the daughter of Babilon hath bene in her tyme, like as a threshing flore, but shortly shal her haruest come. Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and filled hys belly with my delicates: he hath cast me out, he hath takē my substance away, and the thyng that was left me hath he caryed vnto Babilō, saith E the daughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea Esa.xii.e. and my bloud also vnto the Chaldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayth ÿ Lord: behold, I wil defende thy cause, & auenge thee: I will drynke vp her Sea, and dry vp her water sprynges. Babilon shall become an heape of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearefulnesse & wondring, bicause no mā dwelleth ther.
They shall roare together lyke Lyons, & as the young Lions when they be an-Jer.ii.b. gry, so shall they bende themselues. In their heat I shal geue them a diner, and they shalbe dronken for ioy. Then shall they slepe an euerlasting slepe, & neuer wake, sayth ÿ lord. I shal cary thē down to be slain like shepe like wethers & goates. O, how was Sesach wonne? O, how was the glory of the whole lande takē? how happeneth it, ÿ Babilon is so wondred at among the heathen? The sea is risen ouer Babilō, and hath couered her with his great waues. Her cities ar laid waste, the lande lyeth vnbuilded & voide: it is a lande where no mā dwelleth and where no mā trauaileth through. More Jere.l.d. ouer, I wil visit Bel at Babilon: and the Esa.xlvi.a. thing that he hath swalowed vp, ÿ same Da.xiiii.d shal I pluck out of hys mouth. The Gētiles also shal run no more vnto him: yea and the walles of Babilō shall fall. O my Esa.lii.b people, come out of Babilon, ÿ euery mā ii.Cor.vi.c. may saue hys lyfe from ÿ fearefull wrath of the lord. Be not faynt harted, and fear not at euery rumor that shalbe heard in the lande: for euery yere bryngeth newe tidinges, and in the yere folowing newe tidinges, and robbing in the lande, and lord vpon lord. And lo, ÿ tyme commeth that I wil visit the Images of babilon, & the whole lande shalbe cōfounded: yea, & her slaine shal lye in the middest of her.
Heauen & earth wt al ÿ is therin, shall re-ioyce ouer Babilon, when the destroyers shall come vpō her frō ÿ north, sayth the lord. Like as Babilon hath beatē down & slaine many out of Israell, so shal there F fal many, & be slain in all her kingdome. Jere.l.f.
Ye ÿ haue escaped the sweard, hast you, stand not stil, remēber ÿ Lord a farre of,
and thinke vpon Jerusalem: for we wer ashamed to heare ÿ blasphemies, our faces wer couered with shame, bicause the straūge aleaūtes came into ÿ sanctuary of ÿ lord. Wherfore behold, (sayth ÿ lord) the tyme cōmeth ÿ I wil visit ÿ images of Babilō, & through the whole lāde they Je.xlix.d. shal mourne & fal. Though Babilon cli-med vp into heauē & kept her power on hye: yet shal I send her destroyers, sayth the lord, a piteous cry shalbe heard from Babilō, and a great misery from ÿ lande of ÿ Chaldees, when ÿ Lord destroyeth thē, & when he driueth out ÿ hie stomake and proude boasting, wherwt they haue bene as furious as ÿ waues of great waterfloudes, & made great crakes wt their wordes. For ÿ destroiers shal come vpon her (euē vpō babilō) which shal take their worthies, & break their bowes: for god is disposed to auēge himself vpō thē, & sufficiently to recompēce them. Yea (sayth ÿ lord) I wil make their princes, their wise mē, their chefe rulers, & al their worthies drōkē: so ÿ they shal slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake. Thus sayth the kyng, whose name is the lord of hostes, Moreouer, thus sayth the lord of hostes, The thicke wall of Babilon shalbe brokē and her hye gates shalbe brent vp. And ye thing that ye Gētiles and ye people haue wrought wt great trauaile & labor, shall come to naught, & be consumed in ye fire.

Thys is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah, whē he went toward Babilon wt Zedekiah the kyng of Juda, in ye fourth yeare of his reigne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable Prynce. Jeremy wrote in a boke, all the misery that should come vpon Babilon: yea, and all these sermons that be written against Babilō, and gaue Saraiah thys charge.
When thou commest vnto Babilon, see ye thou reade all these wordes, and say. O Lord, thou art determined to roote oute thys place, so that neyther people nor ca-tell shall dwell there any more, but to lie waste for euer: and when thou hast read out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the middest of Euphrates, and saye: euen thus shall Babilon sinke, and be thrust down wt the burthen of trouble, ye I wyl bryng vpō her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachinges of Jeremy.

The.lii.Chapter.

He repeateth ye taking of Zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees, Zedekias sōnes are killed before his face, and his eyes put out. The citie is burned. The temple is spoiled & robbed. They that were left in Jerusalem, are caried to Babilō: king Jehoakim is brought forth of prison, and fed like a king.

iiii. Kin. xxiiii. d. ii. Para. xxxvi. b. Zedekiah was one & twenty yere olde, whē he was made king, and he reigned eleuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremies daughter of Libna. He liued wickedly before ye lord euē as Jehoakym did. For ye Lord was angry at Jerusalem and Juda, so long, til he had cast thē out of hys presēce. And Zedekiah fel from the kyng of Babilon. But in the ninth yeare of hys reigne, in ye tenth moneth, ye tenth Je. xxxix. a. day of the moneth: it happened ye Nabu-chodonosor the king of Babilon wt al his iiii. Kin. xxv. a. host came before Jerusalem, & beseged it and made them bulwarkes roūde about B it. And thys beseging of the city endured iiii. Kin. xxv. a. vnto the eleuēth yere of kyng Zedekiah.
Jeremy. xxxviii. b And in the fourth moneth, the ninth day of the moneth, there was so great hūger & xxxix. a. in the citie, ye there were no more vitailes for ye people of ye land. So all ye souldiers brake away, and fled out of the citie by night through the way of ye port, betwene the two walles by the kynges garden.
Now the Chaldees had compassed the ci-tie rounde about, yet wēt these mē their way towarde ye wildernesse. And so the Chaldees folowed vpon thē, and toke Zedekiah ye kyng in the fielde of Jericho, whē hys host was rūn frō hym. So they caryed ye kyng away prisoner to Reblath Jere. xxxix. b. vnto ye kyng of Babilon in ye land of He-math, where he gaue iudgement vppon C hym. The kyng of Babilon also caused Zedekiahs sōnes to be slaine before hys face: yea, & put al the Princes of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer, he put out the eyes of Zedekiah, & caused hym to be bounde wt two cheines, to be caried vnto babilon: and let hym lye in prison, till he dyed. Now ye tenth day of ye fift moneth, in ye ninth yere of Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, Nabuzaradan ye chiefe captaine, and ye kyng of Babilons seruaūts came to Jerusalem, and brent vp ye house of the Lord. He brent vp also the kynges palace, al the houses, and all ye gorgeous buildinges in Jerusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees ye were wt the chiefe D captaine, brake down all the walles of Jerusalem rounde about. As for ye poore people and such folke as yet was left in the citie: which also were fallen to ye kyng of Babilon, yea, & what people as yet remained, Nabuzaradan the chief captain caryed them away prisoners. But ye pore people of the countrey, did Nabuzaradā the chiefe captaine leaue in the lande, to occupy the vineyardes and fieldes. The Chaldees also brake the brasen pillers ye were in the house of the Lord: yea, ye sea e and the brasen lauer that was in ye house of the Lord: and caryed all the metall of E them vnto Babilon. They toke away also the caldrōs, shouels, fleshhokes, sprink lers, spones, & al the brasen vessel ye was occupyed in ye seruice: wt the basens, cole-pānes, sprincklers, pottes, candlestickes, spones, & cups, wherof some wer of gold, and some of siluer. The chiefe captayne toke also the two pillers, ye lauer, ye twelue brasen bullockes ye stode vnder ye seate, which kyng Salomon made in ye house of the Lord: and all the vessell conteined so much metal, ye it might not be weyed. iii. King. vii. a.
For euery piller was. xviii. cubites hye: & the rope that went about it, was twelue cubites, and foure fingers thicke & roūd.
Now

Now vpon the rope were brasen knops, and euery knop was fiue cubites hie: and ye vpō ye knoppes wer whopes, & pomegra= nates rounde about of cleane brasse. Af= ter thys maner were both ye pillers fashi= oned with ye pomegranates, wherof ther wer an hundred and. xcvi. which hanged vpon ye whopes rounde about. The chiefe captaine also toke Sariah ye hye Priest, & Sophoniah that was chiefe next hym, & the. iii. kepers of ye treasury. He toke out of the citie a chāberlaine which was a cap= taine of the souldiers, and. vii. men yt were the kynges seruauntes which wer found in the citie: and Sepher, a captayne that vsed to muster ye men of warre, with thre= score men of the countrey that wer taken in the citie. These Nabuzaradan ye chiefe captaine toke and caryed them to ye king of Babilon vnto Reblath, and the kyng of Babilon caused thē to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was led away captiue, out of hys own land. Thys is ye summe of ye peo= ple, whom Nabuchodonozor led away captyue. In the. vii. yeare of hys raigne, he caryed away of the Jewes, iii. thousād and. iii. and twēty. In the. xviii. yere, Na= G buchodonozor caried away from Jerusa= lem. viii. hūdred thirty and two persons.
In ye. xxiii. yere of Nabuchodonozor, Na= buzaradan the chiefe captain, toke away vii. hundred xl. and. v. Jewishe prisoners.
The whole summe of all the prysoners, is iiii. thousand and. vi. hūdred. In ye. xxxvii. yere after that Jehoachyn ye kyng of Ju= da was caryed away, in the. xxv. day of ye xii. moneth, Euilmerodach kyng of Babi= lon (the same yeare that he reigned) gaue Jehoachyn ye kyng of Juda hys pardō, & let hym out of prison, and spake louingly to hym. And set hys trone aboue ye trones of ye other kynges that were with hym in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of hys pryson, yea, and he did eate with hym all hys lyfe long. And he had a continual liuing geuen hym of the king of Babilon euery day a certaine thyng allowed hym, all the dayes of hys lyfe vntill he dyed.

¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Jeremy.

The Lamentations of Jeremy.

The first Chapter.

It happened after Israel was brought into cap= tiuitie, and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremy the Prophet sat weping, and sorowfully bewayled Je= rusalem, and sighing and houling with an heauye and wofull heart, sayd.

Alas, how sitteth the citie A so desolate, that somtyme was full of people? How is she become like a wid= dow which was ye lady of all nations? Howe is she ii. King. iiii. d. brought vnder tribute, ye iiii. Kin. ruled all landes? She wepeth sore in the xv. a. night, so that the teares runne down her chekes: for among all her louers, there is none that geueth her any cōfort: yea, her Job. vi. b next frendes transgresse against her, and are become her enemies. Juda is taken prisoner, bicause she was defiled: and for seruing so many straunge Goddes, she dwelleth now among the heathen. She findeth no rest, al they that persecuted her toke her in straite places, where she could B not escape. The stretes of Sion mourne, bicause no man commeth no more to the solemne feastes. All her gates ar desolate her Priestes make lamentation, her mai= dens are carefull: and she her selfe is in great heauinesse. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemies haue prospered, bicause the Lord hath chaste= ned her for her great wickednesse: her childre are led away captiue before their enemy. Al ye beuty of ye daughter of Sion, is away: her Prynces are become lyke Je. iii. a. hartes that fynde no pasture. They are driuen away before their enemy, so that they haue no more power. Now doth Je= rusalem remember ye tyme of her miserie and disobedience: yea, ye ioy and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past, seing her people is brought down through the po= C wer of their enemy, and there is no man for to helpe her. Her enemies stand loking at her and laugh her Sabboth dayes to scorne. Jerusalē hath sinned euer more & more, therfore is she come in decay. All they yt had her in honor, despise her: for they haue sene her filthines, yea, she sigh eth, & is ashamed of her self. Her skirtes ar defiled, she remēbred not what would fo= D low, therfore is her fal so wonderful, and there is no mā to cōfort her. O lord, consi= der my trouble, for myne enemy hath the vpper hande: the enemy hath put hys hād to all the precious thinges ȳ she had, yea, euen before her eyes came the heathen in and out of ȳ Sanctuary: whom ȳ (neuer-thelesse) hast forbiddē to come wtin thy cō Deute, xxiii.c. gregaciō. *Al her people seke their bread iiii.King, with heauinesse, and loke what precious vi,c. thing euery man hath, that geueth he for Thre.ii.c meate, to saue hys lyfe. Consider O Lord, and see how vyle I am become. Haue ye no regard, O all ye that go foreby: behold and see, if there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me, in the day of hys fearefull wrath. Frō aboue hath he sent down a fier into my bones, & it burneth them cruelly: he hath layd a net for my fete, and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate so that I must euer be mourning. The yoke of my transgression is come at the last, wt hys hande hath he taken it vp, and put it about my neck. My strength is gone: the C Lord hath deliuered me into those han-des, whereout I can not quite my selfe.

The Lord hath destroyed all the mightie men, that were in me: he hath proclamed a feast, to slaughter all my best men. The Lord hath troden down the daughter of Juda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse.
Jer,iiii.c Therfore do I wepe, and mine eyes gush Thre.ii,c out of water: for the comfort that shoulde quicken me, is farre from me. My childrē are dryuen away: for why: ȳ enemy hath gotten ȳ vpperhande. Sion casteth out her handes, & there is no man to comfort F her. The Lord hath layd ȳ enemies roūd about Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abhominacion in ȳ middest of them. The Lord is righteous, for I haue prouoked Da. ix.a. hys coūtenaūce vnto anger. O take hede all ye people, & cōsider my heauinesse. My maidens and my yong men are led away into captiuitie. I called for my louers (but they begiled me,) for my Priestes & counselers, but they perished: euen while they sought for meate to saue their liues.
Cōsider (O lord) how I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my hart turneth about in me, (and I am full of heauinesse) bicause I rebelled stubburnely. The G sweard hurteth me wt out, and wt in I am Tre. ii. e like vnto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none ȳ wil cōfort me. Al mine enemies haue heard of my trouble and ar glad therof bicause thou hast done it: and ȳ hast brought forth ȳ tyme which thou calledst, whē they also shalbe like vn to me. Frō thee shal come al their aduersitie, thou shalt plucke them away euen as thou hast plucked me, bicause of all my wickednesse. For my sorow is very great, and my heart is heauy.

The.ii.Chapter.

Alas, how hath ȳ Lord darkened the daughter of Siō so sore in his wrath A As for the honor of Israell, he hath Th.iii.c. cast it down from heauen vnto the earth.
How happeneth it, that he remēbred not hys own fote stoole when he was angry. i. Par. xxv.i. Psalm. xcviii.i.
The Lord hath cast down all ȳ habitations of Jacob without any fauor: all the strōg places of ȳ daughter Juda hath he broken in hys wrath, and throwen them down to the grounde: her kingdome and her Princes hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignation he hath broken B all ȳ horne of Israell: he hath wdrawen hys right hande frō ȳ enemy, yea, a flame of fier is kindled in Jacob, & hath consumed vp all rounde about. He hath bēt hys bow like an enemy: he hath fastened hys right hāde as an aduersary: & euery thing that was pleasāt to see, he hath smitten it down. He hath poured out hys wrath like a fier, into ȳ tabernacle of ȳ daughter of Sion. The Lord is become like as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and all hys palaces: yea, all hys strōg hol-des hath he destroyed, & filled ȳ daughter of Juda wt much sorow and heauinesse.
Her tabernacle (which was like a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye so- Jer.vii. lēne feastes, hath he put down. The Lord hath brought it so to passe, ȳ the hye solemne feastes & Sabbothes in Sion, are cleane forgottē. In his heauy displeasure hath he made kinges & priestes to be despised. The Lord hath forsaken hys owne aultar, & hath abhorred hys own Sanctuary: & hath geuen ȳ walles of their tow ers into ȳ handes of ȳ enemy. Their ene- C mies made a noyse in ȳ house of ȳ Lorde, as it had ben in a solemne feast day. The Lord thought to breake, down ȳ walles of ȳ daughter of Sion he spread out hys line, & drew not in his hande, tyll he had destroyed thē. Therfore mourne ȳ turrets and ȳ broken walles together. Her gates are sonke down to ȳ grounde, her barres Jer.iii. are broken, and smitten in sonder, her kynges and Prynces are caryed away to the Gentiles. They haue neither law nor Prophetes, nor yet any vision from the Lord. The senatours of ȳ daughter of Si on sit vpon ȳ ground in silence: they haue strawed asshes vpon their heades, and girded themselues with sackloth.

The maydens of Jerusalem hang down their heades to the grounde. Myne eyes D begin to fayle me thorow weping, my bo-Lam. i. a. dy is disquieted, my liuer is poured vpon the earth, for the great hurt of my people: seing the children and babes did swoune in the stretes of the citie. Euen whē they speake to their mothers: where is meate and drynke: for whyle they so sayd, they fell down in the stretes of the citie, like as they had ben wounded, and some dyed in their mothers bosome. What shal I say of E thee, O thou daughter Jerusalem, to whō shall I lyken thee? To whom shal I compare the, O thou daughter Sion, to comfort thee wall? Thy hurt is lyke a mayne Jere. v. b see: who may heale thee? Thy Prophetes xiiii. b haue loked out vain and foolish thinges xxiii. c. for the they haue not shewed thee of thy xxvii. b. wickednesse, to kepe thee from captiuitie.
xxx. b. but haue ouerladen thee, and thorow fal-shed scatered thee abrode. All they that go by thee, clap their handes at thee: hissyng and wagging their heades vpō ẏ daughter Jerusalem, and say: is thys the citie ẏ men call so faire, wherin the whole lande reioyceth? All thyne enemies gape vpon F thee, whispering and biting their teeth, saying: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we loked for, is come: we haue found and sene it. The Lord hath fulfilled the thing that he was purposed to do and perfourmed that he had deuised long agoe: he hath destroyed, and not spared: he hath caused thyne aduersary to triumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne enemy.
De. xiii. c Let thyne heart cry vnto the lord, O thou
c. xx. a. citie of ẏ daughter Sion: let thy teares Je. xiii. c runn down lyke a riuer, day & night, reste not, & let not ẏ apple of thyne eie leaue of.
Stand vp, and make thy prayer in ẏ first watch of ẏ night, poure out thyne heart lyke water before the Lord: lift vp thyne handes for ẏ lyues of thy yong children, ẏ dye of hunger in the stretes. Beholde, O Lord, & consider, why hast ẏ gathered me G vp so cleane? Shall ẏ wemē thē eate their own fruite, euen children of a span long.
Shall ẏ Priestes & Prophetes be slaine thus in ẏ Sanctuary of ẏ lord? Yong and old lye behynde ẏ stretes vpon ẏ ground: my maydēs & yong men are slaine wt the sweard: whom thou in ẏ day of thy wrath full indignatiō hast put to death, yea, euē thou hast put them to death, and not spared them. My neighbours that ar round about me, hast thou called as it were to a feast day: so that in the day of the Lordes wrath none escaped, nether was any left behynde. Those that I haue brought vp and nourished, hath my enemy destroied.

The. iii. Chapter.

I Am ẏ man, ẏ (thorow the rod A of hys wrath) haue experiēce of miserie. He droue me forth and led me, yea into darke-nesse, but not into light. Against me only he turneth hys hand, and layeth it euer vpō me. My flesh & my skyn hath he made old, and my bones hath he brused. He hath builded round about me, and closed me in wt gal and trauayle. He hath set me in darkenesse, as they that be dead for euer. He hath so hedged me in, ẏ I can not get out and hath layed heauy lynkes vpon me. Though I cry and call B piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer.
He hath stopped vp my wayes wt fouresquared stones, and made my pathes cro-ked. He layeth wayte for me like a beare, and as a Lion in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, & broken me in peces, he hath layd me waste altogether. He hath bente hys bow, and made me as it were a mark to shote at. The arowes of hys quiuer hath he shot euen into my reynes. I am Jer. xx. b. laughed to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all ẏ day long. He hath filled me with bitternesse, and geuē me wormwood to drynk. He hath smitten my teeth in peces wt stones, and rolled me in ẏ dust. He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget al good things. I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, ther is no hope for me in ẏ Lord. O remēber yet my misery, and my trouble, ẏ wormwood and ẏ gal. yea, thou shalt remēber thē, for my soule mel- C teth away in me. While I consider these things in my heart, I get a hope againe, Namely, it is of the Lordes mercies ẏ we are not vtterly consumed. For truly hys Ps. cvi. a pitiful compassion hath not ceassed. New mercies shal ẏ Lord shew vpon the early, yea, in ẏ day spryngyng, (O Lord) great is thy faithfulnesse. The Lord is my portion, sayth my soule, therfore will I hope in hym. O how good is ẏ Lord vnto them that put their trust in hym, and to ẏ soule that seketh after hym. The good man wt stilnesse and patience, tarieth for ẏ health of the Lord.

O how good is it for a mā to take the yoke vpō hym from hys youth vp? He sit- D teth alone, he holdeth him still, and dwelleth quietly by hym self. He laieth his face vpon ẏ earth, if (percase) there happen to ii. Kinge. ii.b. be any hope. He offreth hys cheke to the smiter. He wil be content with reproues, for the Lord will not forsake for euer, but though he punish hym, yet according to the multitude of hys mercies, he receiueth to grace againe: for he doth not plague, & cast out the childrē of mē from hys heart.

To treade al the prysoners of ÿ earth vn-E der hys fete. To moue ÿ iudgemēt of man before ÿ most highest. To condēne a man in hys cause: the Lord hath not pleasure in such things. What is he thē that sayth: there should some thyng be done without the Lordes commaundemēt. Out of the mouth of ÿ most highest goeth not euill and good. Wherfore thē murmureth the liuing mā: let hym murmure at his own sinn. Let vs loke wel vpō our own waies, Job.xxxi. b. and remēber our selues, and turne again Ps.xliiii.a to ÿ Lord. Let vs lift vp our hearts w our hands vnto ÿ lord ÿ is in heauē. We haue ben dissemblers, and haue offended, wilt thou therfore not be intreated: Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted Ecc.xxxv. b. vs, ÿ hast slain vs without any fauour. Thou hast hid thy selfe in a cloude, ÿ our prayer should not go thorow. Thou hast made vs outcastes, and to be despised among ÿ people. All our enemies gape vpon vs.
Feare and pitie is come vpon vs, yea, de-Tre.i.d. ceit and destruction. Whole riuers of wa-F ter gush out of mine eyes, for ÿ great hurt of my people. Myne eyes runne, & cannot cease, for ther is no rest. O Lord, whē wilt thou loke down from heauen, and consider: Mine eie breketh my heart, bicause of al ÿ daughters of my [illegible]. Myne enemies hunted me out sharply, [illegible] a birde: yea, and ÿ without a cause. They haue put down my life into a pit, and they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my head, thē thought I: now am I vndone, I called vpon thy name, O Lord, out of ÿ depe pit. Thou hast hard my voice and hast not turned away thyne eares fro my sighing and crying. Thou hast enclyned thy selfe vnto me, whē I called vpon thee, & hast sayd: feare not. Thou (O lord) hast mainteined ÿ cause of my soule, and hast redemed my lyfe. O Lord ÿ hast sene my blasphemers, take ÿ my cause vpō the.
Thou hast wel considered how they go about to do me harme, and ÿ al their counsels are agaist me. Thou hast heard their despiteful wordes (O Lord) yea, & all their ymaginations against me. The lippes of mine enemies, and their deuises ÿ they take against me, al ÿ day long. Thou seest also their sitting down, and their rising vp: they make their songes of nothing but of me. Reward thē (O Lord) according to the workes of their hands. Geue them an obstinate heart, euen thy curse. Persecute thē (O Lord) in thyne indignation, and roote them out from vnder the heauen.

The .iiii. Chapter.

OHow is the golde become A so dimme: How is ÿ goodly colour of it so sore chāged: and ÿ stones of the Sanctuary thus scattered in the corner of euery strete: The childrē of Sion ÿ wer alway in honor, and clothed w the most precious gold: how ar they now become like the earthen vessels, which be made with ÿ potters hand: The dragons geue their yōg ones sucke with bare bre-stes: but ÿ daughter of my people is cruel, and dwelleth in ÿ wildernesse lyke ÿ Es-triches. The tonges of ÿ sucking children cleaue to ÿ rose of their mouthes for very thirst. The yong childrē aske bread, but there is no man that geueth it thē. They that wer wōt to fare delicately, perish in the stretes: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make now much of dong.
The sinn of ÿ daughter of my people is be come greater thā the wickednesse of So-dome that sodainly was destroyed, & not B taken with hands. Her absteiners (or Ca.xi.a Nazarees) were whiter than the snow or milk: their colour was fresh, red as Coral, their beauty like ÿ Saphire. But now their faces be very blacke: insomuch that Ps.cii. thou shouldest not know them in ÿ stretes Their skinn cleaueth to their bones: it is withered, and become like a dry stocke.
They that be slain with ÿ sweard ar hap-away, famisshing for ÿ fruites of the field. Deut. xxviii.

The womē (which of nature are pitifull) iiii.Reg. haue soddē their own childrē with their vi.f. hands, that they might be their meate in the miserable destruction of the daugh- Tren.ii. ter of my people. The Lord hath perfourmed his heauy wrath, he hath poured out the furiousnesse of his displeasure, he hath kindled a fier in Sion, which hath consumed the foundations therof.

Neither the kinges of the earth, nor all the inhabitours of the world, would haue beleued that the enemy and aduersarie should shuld haue come in at the gates of the ci-tie of Ierusalem: which neuerthelesse is C come to passe for the synne of her Prophe-Gen.ii.a tes, and for ye wickednesse of her Priestes Ier.ii.a that haue shed innocentes bloud within her. So that the blind mẽ wẽt stombling in ye stretes, & stained thẽselues wt bloud.

They would in no wise touch their garmentes. But they cryed vnto euery man: flye the staynyng, away, get you hence, touch it not. Yea they fled, and remoued from thẽ: yea, they haue sayd among the heathẽ, they shall no more dwell in thys citie. The countenaunce of the Lord hath banished thẽ, and shal neuer loke more vpon thẽ. For they thẽselues nether regarded the Priestes, nor pitied their elders.
Wherfore yet our eyes fayle vs, while we loke for vain help, seing we be euer waiting vpõ a people, that cã do vs no good.
They lay so sharp wait for vs that we can not go safe vpon the stretes, for our ende is come, our dayes are fulfilled, our ende D is here. Our persecuters are swifter, than he shall not suffer the to be caryed away any more. But thy wickednes (O daughter Edom) shal he visit, and for thy synnes sake he shall leade the into captiuity.

The .v. Chapter.

The prayer of Jeremy.

A Call to remembraunce (O lord) what we haue suffred, cõsider and se our confusion. Our enheritaunce is turned to the straungers, & our houses to the aleauntes.
We are become carefull and fatherlesse, and our mothers are as ye widdowes. We are fayne to drinke our own water for mony, and our own wood B must we by with mony. Our neckes are vnder persecution, we are weary, & haue no rest. Afore tyme we yelded our selues Ieremy. xxxi.b. to the Egiptians, and now to ye Assirians Eze. xviii. a. only that we might haue bread ynough.
Our fathers (which now are gone) haue synned and we must beare their wickednesse. Seruaũts haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs out of their handes.
We must get our liuing with the perill of our lyues, bicause of the drouth of the wildernesse. Our skinn is as it had bene brent in an ouẽ for very sore hũger. The C wyues are rauished in Sion, and ye may-des in the cities of Iuda. The Prynces are hanged vp with the hand of the enemies, they haue not spared the olde sage men, they haue takẽ yong mennes lyues from them, and the boyes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders sit no more vnder the gates, and the yong mẽ vse no more playing of musike. The ioy of our heart is gone, our mery queer is turned into mourning. The garland of our head is fallen: alas that we euer sinned so sore.

Therfore our heart is ful of heauinesse, D and our eyes dimme: bicause of the hyll of Io.xxxi.c Sion that is destroyed. Insomuch that ye foxes runn vpon it. But thou, O lord, that remainest for euermore; and thy seate world without end: wherfore wilt thou still forget vs, and forsake vs so long? O Lord, turne thou vs vnto the, and so shall we be turned. Renue our dayes as in old tymes, for thou hast banished vs now lõg ynough, and hast ben sore displeased at vs.

The ende of the Lamentations of Jeremy.

The booke of the Prophet Ezechiell.

The first Chapter.

The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophecied, and in what place. His offspryng and office. The vision of the foure beastes. The vision of the wheles. The vision of the throne and of the ymage aboue the throne.

A It chaunced in the thirty yere, the fifth day of the fourth moneth, ẏ I was among the prysoners by the ryuer of Cobar: wher the heauens opened, and I saw a vision of GOD:
Now the fifth day of ẏ moneth, made out the fifth yere of kyng Joachins captiuity.
At thesame tyme came the word of the Lord vnto Ezechiel the sonn of Buzi the Priest, in the land of the Chaldees, by the Eze.x.a. water of Cobar, wher the hand of ẏ Lord came vpon hym. And I loked, and behold a stormy wynd came out of the North wt a great cloude full of fier, which with hys glistre lightned all rounde about.

And in the middest of the fier it was B all cleare lyke the face of an Angell, and as it wer the likenesse of foure beastes, & thys was their lykenesse. They wer fashioned lyke a man: sauing ẏ euery one had foure faces, and foure wynges. Their legges were streyght but their fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glistred, as it had ben faire scoured metal. Under their wynges, vpon all the foure corners, they had mennes handes. Their faces & theyr wynges wer toward the foure corners: yet wer the wynges so ẏ one euer touched another. When they went, they turned thẽ not about: but ech one went streyght forward.
Furthermore thys was the simili-C tude of their faces. Upon the right syde of these foure, their faces wer like the face Eze.x.b. of a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the left syde they had ẏ face of an oxe, and the face of an Eagle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so ẏ two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it went, it went straight forward. Wher-as the spirit led them, thither they wente, and turned not about in their going. The Eze.x.c. fashion and countenaunce of the beastes D was lyke hote coales of fier, euen as though burning cressets had ben among the beastes: (thys was the vision) and the fier gaue a glistre, and out of the fier there went lightning. When the beastes went forward and backward, one would haue thought it had lightned. Now when I had well considered the beastes, I sawe a work of wheles vpon the earth, wt foure faces also ny vnto the beastes. The fashion and work of the wheles was lyke the Sea. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpõ) as it had bẽ one whele in another. When one went forward, they wẽt al foure, and turned thẽ not about in their goinges. They were large, great & horrible to loke vpon. Their backes were full of eyes rounde about them all foure.
When the beastes went, the wheles went E also wt them. And when the beastes lyfte themselues vp from the earth, the wheles were lift vp also. Whithersoeuer the spirit went, thither wẽt they also, and the wheles wer lift vp, and folowed them: for the spirit of lyfe was in the wheles. Whẽ the beastes went forth, stode styll, or lyft them selues from ẏ earth, then the wheles also went, stode styll, and wer lyft vp, for the breath of lyfe was in the wheles. Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes, there was a firmament, which was fashioned as it had ben of ẏ most pure Cristall, and that was spread out aboue vpon their heades vnder ẏ same firmamẽt wer their wings layed abrode, one toward another, & two F wynges couered the body of euery beast.
And when they went forth, I heard the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of great waters, as it had ben the voyce of ẏ great God, & a rushing together, as it wer of an host of men. And when they stode styll, they let down their wynges. Now when they stode still, and had lettẽ down their wynges, it thũdred in ẏ firmament that was aboue their heades. Aboue the firmament ẏ was ouer their heades, ther was

was the fashion of a seate, as it had ben made of Saphir. Upon yͤ seate there satt God lyke a man. I beheld hym, & he was Eze.viii.a. lyke an Angell, as it had ben all of fire w in from hys loynes vpward. And beneth, when I loked vpon hym vnder the loines me thought he was lyke a shining fire, yͤ geueth lyght on euery syde. Yea, the shine and glystre that lightned rounde about, was lyke a rainbow, which in a rainy day appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherin the glory of yͤ Lord appeared. When I saw it, I fel vpō my face, and hearkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The.ii.Chapter.

The Prophet is sent to call the people from their erroure.

A Eze.iii.b. AND then sayd he vnto me stand vp vpon thy fete (O thou sonn of man) and I wyll talk with the. And as he was commoning with me, the spirit came into me, and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I marked the thing that he sayd vnto me. And he sayd: behold thou sonn of man: I will send thee to the children of Israel, to those runnagates & obstinate people: for they haue takē part against me, and are runn away fro me, both they and their forefathers vnto this B day. Yea, I will sende the vnto a people Eze.iii.a. that haue rough visages, and stiffe sto-mackes; vnto whō thou shalt say on thys maner: Thys yͤ Lord God himselfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde houshoulde) they may know yet yͤ ther hath ben a Prophet Jere.i.c. among them. Therfore (thou sonn of mā) C feare them not, neither be afrayd of their wordes: for prouokers and thornes are with the, yea, thou dost dwel among scorpions: but feare not their words, be not abashed at their lokes, for it is a froward houshold. Se that thou speake my words vnto them, whether they be obedient or not for they are obstinate. Therfore, thou sonn of man, obey thou al things that I say vnto the: and be not thou stifnecked, lyke as they are a stifnecked housholde.
Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue D the. So as I was loking vp, behold, ther was sent vnto me a hand wherin was closed a boke, and the hand opened it before me, and it was written within and Apo.v.b. without ful of carefull mourning: alas, & woe.

The.iii.Chapter.

The Prophet being fed with the worde of God and with the constant boldnesse of the spirit, is sent vnto the people that wer in captiuitie. The punishment of a curate that sheweth not the people their synnes.

AFter this said he vnto me A thou sonn of man, eate yͤ, Jer.xv.c. whatsoeuer it be: yea eate Apo.x.c.
that boke & go thy way, & iiii.Esd. speake vnto the children xiiii.c. of Israell. So, I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate, and sayd vnto me thou sonn of man, thy belly shall eate, and thy bowls shalbe fylled with yͤ boke, that I geue the. Thē dyd I eate yͤ boke, and it was in my mouth swetter thā hony. And Ps.xix.b. he sayd vnto me: thou sonn of mā, get the & cxix.d. sone vnto yͤ house of Israel, and shew thē Apo.x.a.
the words that I commaunde the: for I Jere.i.c. send the not to the people yͤ hath a straūg B vnknowen or hard speach, but vnto the house of Israell: not to many nations, which haue diuers speaches and hard languages, whose words thou vnderstādest not. Neuertheleste if I sent thee to Jon.iii.a. those people, they would folow the. But the house of Israell wyl not folow the, for they will not folow me: yea all the house of Israell haue stif foreheades, and hard heartes. Behold, therfore I wil make thy Mic.iii.b. face preuaile against their faces, and hardē thy forehead against their foreheades so that thy forehead shalbe harder thā an Adamant or flint stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayd of Esa.l.b. them, for they are a froward houshold. He sayd moreouer vnto me: thou sonn of mā, C take diligent hede with thyne eare to the words that I speake vnto the, fasten thē in thine heart: and go to the prisoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and say on thys maner. Thus yͤ Lord God hath spoken, whether ye heare or heare not. Wyth that the spirit toke me vp. And I heard yͤ noyse of a great rushing and remouing of the most blessed glory of the Lord out of hys place. I heard also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushed one against another: yea, and the ratling of the wheles that were by thē, which rushing and noyse was very great. Now when yͤ Eze.viii.a. spirite toke me vp, and caryed me away, and.xi.d.
I wente wyth an heauy and a sorow-full mynde, but the hande of the Lordes

D Lord comforted me right soone. And so in Psalme. the beginning of ẏ moneth Abib, I came cxxvii. a. to the prisoners that dwelt by the water of Cobar and remained in ẏ place where they wer:and so continued I among thẽ vii.dayes,being very sory. And whẽ ẏ.vii. dayes wer expired, ẏ Lord sayd vnto me: thou sõn of mã, I haue made the a watch= man vnto the house of Israell, therefore take good hede to ẏ wordes of my mouth, Ezechie. and geue thẽ warning at my commaun= xxxiii. b. E dement. If I say vnto the concerning the vngodly man, ẏ (without doubt) he must dye, and thou geuest hym not warning, nor speakest vnto hym that he may turne from hys euil way, and so to lyue:thẽ shal the same vngodly mã dy in hys own vn= righteousnesse:but hys bloud will I re= quire of thyne hand. Neuerthelesse, if thou geue warning vnto the wicked, and yet he forsake not hys vngodlinesse: thẽ shall he dye in hys own wickednesse, but thou Eze. xviii. hast discharged thy soule. Now, if a righ=
a. teous man go from hys righteousnesse, & F do the thing that is euil: I wil lai a stum= bling blocke before hym, and he shal dye, bicause thou hast not geuẽ hym warning yea, dye shal he in hys own synn, so that ẏ vertue which he did before, shall not be thought vpõ: but hys bloud wil I require of thyne hand. Neuerthelesse, if thou ex= hortest the righteous that he synn not, & so the righteous do not sinn: thẽ shall he lyue, bicause he hath receiued thy warnig and thou hast discharged thy soule. And ther came the hand of the Lord vpon me and he sayd vnto me:stand vp, and go in= to the field, that I may there talke wyth the. So whẽ I had risẽ vp, and gone forth into the field:behold, the glory of the lord stode there, like as I saw it afore, by the Ezec. i. a. water of Cobar. Thẽ fel I down vpõ my Ezec. ii. a. face and the spirit came into me, which set G me vp vpon my fete, and sayd thus vnto me:go thy way and shut thy self in thyne house. Behold, (O thou sonn of man) ther shall chaynes be brought forth to bynde the withall, so ẏ thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wil make thy tong cleaue so to ẏ roofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumm, and not be as a chider w them: for it is an obstinate housholde. But whẽ I speake vnto the, thẽ opẽ thy mouth, and say: thus sayth the Lord God: whoso hea= reth, let hym heare: whoso wyl not, let him leaue, for it is an obstinate housholde.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The besiege of the citie of Jerusalem is signifi= ed. The long continuaunce of the captiuity of Isra= ell. An hunger is prophecied to come in ẏ captiuity.

THou sonn of man, take A a tyle stone and lay it before the, and describe vpon it ẏ city of Jeru= salẽ, how it is besieged how bulwarkes and strong diches are gra= uẽ on euery syde of it:
describe also tẽtes, and an host of mẽ roũd about it with engins of warr. Moreouer, take an yron pann, & set it betwixt the and ẏ city, in stede of an yron wall. Thẽ set thy face toward it, be= siege it, and lay ordinaunce against it to winn it. Thys shalbe a tokẽ vnto ẏ house of Israell. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and lay the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appoin= ted, thou shalt slepe vpõ that syde, & beare their sinnes. Neuerthelesse, I wil appoint Da. ti the tyme (to put of their sinnes) and ẏ nũ= B ber of the dayes: the hundred & xc. dayes must thou beare ẏ wickednesse of ẏ house of Israell: whẽ thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye down again, and slepe vpõ thy ryght syde. xl. dayes, and beare the sinnes of the house of Juda. A day for a yere, a Num day (I say) for a yere wil I euer lay vpon c.
the. Therfore set now thy face against ẏ besieged Jerusalẽ, and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayst prophecy agaist it.
Behold, I wil lay chaynes vpon the, that thou shalt not turne the from one syde to another till thou hast ended ẏ dayes of thy besieging. Wherfore take vnto thee wheate, barly, beanes, growell sede, Mil= C lium, and fitches, and put these together in a vessell, and make the loues of bread therof, according to ẏ number of ẏ dayes that ẏ must lye vpon thy syde: that ẏ maist haue bread to eate for. iii. hundred and. xc dayes. And ẏ meat ẏ thou eatest shal haue a certaine wayght appointed: namely, xx. sicles euery day. Thys appointed meate shalt ẏ eate daily, from ẏ beginning to the ende. Thou shalt drynk also a certayne measure of water: namely, ẏ sixt part of an Hin shalt ẏ drynk dayly, frõ ẏ beginning vnto the end. Barly cakes shalt ẏ eate, yet shalt ẏ first tost them at a fier made with mannes dong, that they may se it. And w that sayd the Lord: euen thus shal ẏ chil= dren

dre of Israell eate their defiled bread in yͤ myddest of the Gentiles, among whom I D wil scatter thē. Thē sayd I: Oh lord god: behold, my soule was yet neuer stayned, for fro my youth vp vnto this houre, I did neuer eate of a dead carkasse, or of that which was slain of wyld beastes, neyther came ther euer any vncleane flesh in my mouth. Wherunto he answered me, and sayd: well thē, I wyll graunt the to take cowes dong for the dong of man, and to Eze. v. b. roste the bread withall before them. And
e. xiiii. b. he sayd vnto me: beholde, thou sonn of mā, iiii. Kin. I wil minish al the prouision of bread in xxv. a. Ierusalē, so that they shall weigh their bread, and eate it with scarcenesse: but as for water, they shal haue a very litle measure therof to drinke. And whē they haue no more bread, nor water, one shalbe destroyed with an other, and famish awaye for their wickednesse.

The. v. Chapter.

The rydole of the heares, by which is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of the anger of God towarde the people.

A O Thou sonn of man, take thē thē a sharpe knyfe: namely, a rasour.
Take that and shaue the heere of thy head and beard. Thē take the scales and yͤ weight, and deuide the heere a sonder. And after thou hast accōplished the dayes of yͤ siege: burne yͤ third part therof in yͤ fier in yͤ middest of yͤ city, and cut the other third part in peces with Ie. vii. b. a knife. As for yͤ third part that remaineth cast it in yͤ winde, and I wil draw out the sweard after them. Yet afterwarde take a litle of the same, and bynde it in thy coote lapp. Thē take a curtesie of it and cast it in yͤ middest of the fier, and burn it in the fier: out of the same fier shall there goe a flame vppon the whole house of Israell.
Moreouer thus sayth the Lord god: thys same is Ierusalē. I set her in the middest of the heathē, and nations that ar round B about her: but she hath despised my iudge mentes more thā the Gētiles themselues and broken my commaundements more thā yͤ nations that lye round about her.
For they haue cast out myne ordinaun-ces, and not walked in mi lawes: therfore Le. xviii. thus saith the Lord God: forsomuch as ye
b. haue bene more augmented in numbre of people, thā the heathē that dwel round about you: and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kepte myne ordinaunces, & ye haue not liued so righteously as the heathen that are rounde about you. Therfore thus sayth the Lord.
I will also come vpō the, I my self, I say: for in yͤ middest of thee wil I sit in iudge- C ment in yͤ sight of yͤ heathē, and wil handle the of such a fashion as I neuer did before, and as I neuer will do frō that tyme forth, and that bicause of all thyne abominatiōs. For in the, fathers shalbe faine Deuter. to eate their own sonnes and the sonnes xxviii. e. their own fathers. Such a court wyll I Tre. iiii. kepe in thee, and yͤ whole rēnaunt of thee b. will I scatter into all the wyndes. Wher- iiii Kin. fore, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord xvi. f.
God) seing thou hast defiled my Sanctuary, with al maner of abhominatiōs, and with all thy shamefull offences: for thys cause wil I also destroy the. Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neither will I spare the.
One third part within the shal dye of the Ier. xv. a pestilence and of hunger: another third part shalbe slain down, round about the.
with the sweard: the other third part, that remaineth, wil I scatter abrode towarde al the wyndes, and draw out the sweard after thē. Thus I will perfourme my indignation, and set my wrath against thē, D and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger against them, they shall know that I am the Lord, which w a feruent gelousy haue spoken it. Moreo-uer, I wil make the waste and abhorred, before al the heathē that dwel about the;
and in the sight of al them that go by the,
so that when I punish the in my wrath, in mine anger, and with the plague of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a very ab homination, shame, a gasyng and won-dryng stocke, among the heathē that lye about thee. Euen I the Lord haue spokē it, and it shal come to passe, when I shote among them the perilous dartes of hūger which shalbe but death. Yea, therfore shal Ez. xiiii. e.
I shote them, bicause I wil destroy you: I will encreace hunger, minish al the proui-sion of bread amōg you. Plages and misery will I send you: yea, and wylde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloudshedding shall come vpon you, and the sweard will I bryng ouer you. Euen I the Lord haue sayd it.

The. vi. Chapter.

He sheweth that the people shalbe plaged for the sinne of idolatrie. He prophecieth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, & their deliueraūce. The destruction of the frowarde is prophecyed.

A And ẏ word of ẏ lord came vnto me, saying: thou sõn of mã, turne thy face to ẏ mountai-Ezechiel. xxxvi.a. nes of Israell, ẏ thou mayest prophecy vnto thẽ, and say: heare ẏ worde of ẏ Lord god. O ye moun taines of Israell: thus hath ẏ Lorde God spoken to the mountaines, hilles, valleies and dales. Behold I, I my selfe I say, wil bring a sweard ouer you, & destroy your hye places: I wil cast down your aulters, and breake down your ymages. Your slain mẽ wil I lay before your goddes, & the dead carcasses of ẏ children of Israell wil I cast before their ydols: your bones wil I destroy rounde about your aulters and dwelling places. The cities shalbe de solate, ẏ hyl chapels layed waste: your aul ters destroyed & brokẽ, your goddes cast down, & taken away, your temples layed euen with the grounde, your one workes cleane rooted out. Your slain men shal lie B amõg you, ẏ ye may learne to know, how that I am ẏ Lord. Those ẏ be among you and haue escaped ẏ sweard wil I leaue among ẏ Gentiles, for I wil scater you among ẏ nations. And they that escape of you shal thinke vpon me among the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. As for ẏ whorish & vnfaythful heart of theirs wherwith they runn away fro me, I wyl breake it, yea and put out those eyes of theirs, ẏ commit fornication with their ydols. Thẽ shal they be ashamed & displesed w their selues, for ẏ wickednesses and abhominations which they haue done: & shal learne to know ẏ I am ẏ Lord how C that it is not in vaine, ẏ I ẏ Lord spake, to bryng such misery vpon thẽ. The Lord sayd moreouer vnto me: smite thine han-des together, and stampe with thy fete, and say. Wo worth al ẏ abhominations & wickednesses of ẏ house of Israel, for bi-cause of thẽ they shalperish with ẏ sweard with hunger, and with pestilence. Whoso is farr of shal dye of ẏ pestilẽce, he that is nye at hande, shal perish with ẏ sweard: & the other that remaine and that ar besieged shal dye of hunger. Thus wil I satis-D fie my wrathfull displeasure vpon them.
And so shal ye learne to know that I am the Lord, whẽ your slain men lye among your ydols, and about your aulters, vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaines, among al grene trees, among all thicke okes, euen in the places where they dyd sacrifice to al their ydols. I wil stretche myne hand out vpon them, and wil make the land wast. So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wildernesse of Deb-lothah forth, thorow all their habitations to learne them for to know, ẏ I am ẏ lord.

The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israell shal sodainly come. The cause of the destructiõ therof. The Prophet is commaunded to shew the summe of ẏ euils that are at hande.

The worde of ẏ Lord came A vnto me on thys maner: thee I call, O thou sonne of man. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israell: the ende commeth vpon ẏ lande of Israell: yea, verely the ende commeth vpon all the foure corners of ẏ lande. But now shall the ende come vpon thee, for I wyll sende my wrath vpon the, and wil punish thee according to thy wayes, and reward thee after al thyne abhominatiõs. Myne Eze.viii eye shal not ouerse thee, neyther wyll I and.ix.c spare thee, but rewarde thee according to thy wayes, & declare thine abhominatiõs Then shal ye know that I am the Lord.
Thus sayth ẏ Lord God: Behold, one miserie and plague shal come after another, the ende is here. The end (I say) is come, it watched for thee: behold, it is come al- B ready, thy destructiõ is earely come agaist thee, that dwellest in the lande. The time is at hande, ẏ day of sedition is hard by, & the cry shal not be as ẏ sounding againe of ẏ mountaines. Therfore I will shortly poure out my sore displeasure ouer thee, & fulfil my wrath vpõ thee. I wil iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence thee all thy abhominations. Myne eye shall not ouerse thee, nether wil I spare thee, but Eze.viii rewarde thee after thy wayes: and thyne and.ix.c. abhominatiõs shalbe punished in ẏ mid- C des of thee, to learne you for to know how that I am ẏ Lord ẏ smiteth. Behold, the day is here, ẏ day is come, ẏ houre is rũne out, ẏ rod florisheth, pride wareth grene, malitious violẽce is growen vp, & the vngodly warẽ to a staffe. None of them shall remain ouer, none of their riches, not one of their sede, & no lamẽtatiõ shalbe made for thẽ. The tyme cõmeth, ẏ day draweth D nye. Whoso byeth, let him not reioyce: he ẏ i.Cor.vii selleth, let him not be sory: for why? Trou- b. ble shall come in ẏ middest of them all: so Ier.xx.i. that ẏ seller shal not come againe to the i.Thess thyng ẏ he solde: although their life be v.a. yet with the liuing. For whẽ the prophecie was preached vnto all ẏ people, none turned turned from their sinne, and no man toke strength to hym against his wickednesse E to saue hys own lyfe. The trompets shall ye blow, & make you already, but no man shall go to ẏ battail, for I am wroth wyth all ẏ whole multitude. The sweard shalbe without, pestilẽce and hunger within: so that whoso is in the fielde shalbe slayne with the sweard: and he that is in ẏ citie* shall perish with hunger and pestilence.

And such as escape, and flee from among them, shalbe vpon the hilles, lyke as the doues in ẏ fielde: euery one shalbe afrayd, bicause of his own wickednesse. All hãdes shalbe let down, & al knees shalbe weake as the water, they shall girde themselues with sackecloth, feare shall fall vpon thẽ, their faces shalbe confounded, and their F heades balde: their siluer shall they caste forth in the stretes, and their golde shalbe despised: yea, their siluer and golde maye not deliuer them, in the day of the fearefull wrath of the Lord: They shall not satisfye their hungry soules, neither fil their empty bellies therwith: For it is become their own decay thorow their wickednes. And their beautiful costly ornament that god had ordeined to be their great glory, in it they haue set vp abhominatiõ vnto their ydols. For thys cause will I make them and it to be abhorred. Moreouer, I wyll geue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked for to be robbed, and they shall destroy it. My face wyll I turne from them, my treasury shal be defiled: for the theues shall go into it, & suspende it. Make a chaine for the lande is whole defiled with vnrighteous iudge ment of innocent bloud, and the city is ful G of violent oppression. Wherefore I wyll bryng the most cruell tiraunttes from among the heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make ẏ pompe of the proude to ceasse, and their Sanctuary shalbe defiled. When thys trouble cõmeth they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One mischiefe & sorow shall folow another, & one rumoure shall come after another. Then shall they seke visions in vayne at their Prophetes. The law shal-Jeremy. xxviii. c. be gone from the Priestes, and wysdome from ẏ elders. The kyng shall mourne, ẏ prynces shalbe clothed wt heauinesse, and the hands of ẏ people in ẏ lande shall treble for feare. I will do vnto them after their own wayes, according to their own iudgementes wil I iudge them: to learne them for to know that I am the Lord.

The.viii.Chapter.

An apperaunce of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought to Jerusalem in the spirite. The Lord sheweth the Prophete the ydolatries of the house of Israell, and the sely of the priestes.

IT happened, that in ẏ sixt yere, A the fifth day of ẏ sixt moneth, I sat in my house, and the lordes, of the counsaill of Juda wt me. and the hande of the Lord God fell euen Eze.i.c.d there vpon me. And as I loked vp, I saw as it wer a lykenesse of fier frõ hys loynes downward: and from hys loines vpward, it shined maruelous cleare, and lyke an angel to loke vpon. This similitude stretched out an hand and toke me by the hee- B ry lockes of my head, & the spirit lift me vp Eze.iii.d and.xii.d betwixt heauẽ and earth: & brought me in a vision to Jerusalẽ, into the entry of ẏ inner port ẏ lyeth toward ẏ North: there stode an ymage wt whom he that hath all thynges in hys power, was very wroth.
And behold, ẏ glory of the God of Israell was in ẏ same place: euen as I had sene Eze.i.a. it afore in ẏ fielde. And he sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man, O lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke toward the North. Then lyft I C vp myne eyes toward the North: and behold, beside the port northward, ther was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouo-cation in the very entring in. And he sayd furthermore vnto me: thou sonne of man, seest thou what these do. Seest thou the great abhominations that the house of Israell committeth in thys place, to driue me frõ my Sãctuary? But turne thee about, & thou shalt se yet great abhominations. And wt that brought he me to the court gate: & when I loked, beholde, there D was an hole in ẏ wall. Then sayd he vnto me: thou sonne of man, digge thorow the wall. And whẽ I digged thorowe ẏ wall: behold, there was a dore. And he sayd vnto me: go thy way in & loke what wycked abhominations they do here. So I went in & saw: and behold, there wer al maner ymages of wormes and beastes, all ydols and abhominations of the house of Israell, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: there stode also before the ymages, lxx. Lordes of ẏ counsell of ẏ house of Is- Ex.xxiiii. raell: & in ẏ middest of them stode Jaaza- a. nia, ẏ sonne of Saphan. And euery one of Nu.xi.d.
the had a censour in hys hande, & out of E the insence there went a smoke, as it had Iob.xxii. bene a cloude. Then sayd he vnto me: thou b. sonne of man, hast ẏ sene what the sena- Esa.xxix tours of ẏ house of Israel do secretly, euery c. one in hys chamber? For they saye: Tush, Je.xxiii.b Eze.ix.c.

the Lord seeth vs not, the lord regardeth not ẏ world. And he sayd vnto me: turne thee yet again, and ẏ shalt see yet greater abhominations that they do. And wt that he brought me to the dore of the port of ẏ lordes house toward ẏ north. And behold there sat women mourning for Tamus.
Thē sayd he vnto me: hast thou sene this F thou sonne of man? Turne thee about, & thou shalt see yet greater abhominatiōs than these are. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: and behold, at ẏ port of the Lordes house betwixt the fore entry and ẏ aultar, there were .xxv. men, that turned their backes vpon the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward ẏ East, and these worshipped the Sunne. And he sayd vnto me: haste thou sene thys, thou sōne of mā? thinketh the house of Juda that it is but a trifle, to do these abhominations here? Should G they fill the lande ful of wickednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me to anger? yea, and purposely to cast vp their noses vpon me? Therfore will I also do some thing in (Pro.i.c.) my wrathful displeasure, so that mine eye (Jer.xi.b,) shal not ouer see thē, neither will I spare (e,xxiiii,b) them. Yea and though they cry in myne (Mic.iii.a) eares with a loude voyce yet will I not heare them.

The .ix. Chapter.

The destruction of ydolaters, and the conuersion of the righteous. They that shalbe saued are marked. They that are vnmarked are slayne. A complaynt of the Prophete for the destruction of the people.

A He cryed also wt a loude voyce in myne eares, saying: come here ye rulers of ẏ citie, euery mā wt hys weaponed hande to the slaughter. Then came there .vi. men out of the strete of ẏ vpper port toward ẏ north and euery mā a weapō in his hād to ẏ slaughter. There was one amongest them ẏ had on him a linnē raymēt, & a wryters inck-horne by hys side. These wēt in, and stode beside ẏ brasē aulter: for ẏ glory of ẏ Lord was gone away from the Cherub which was vpon hym, & was come down to the B threshold of ẏ house: & he called ẏ mā that (Exo.xl.c.) had ẏ lynnen raymēt vpon hym, and the (Nu.ix.c.) writers ynckhorne by his syde, and ẏ lord (iii. King.) sayd vnto hym: go thy way thorow ẏ citie (viii.b.) of Jerusalē, and set a marke vpon ẏ foreheades of thē that mourne & are sory for all ẏ abhominations that be done therin.
And to ẏ other he sayd, ẏ I might heare.
Go ye after hym thorow ẏ citie, slay, ouersee none, spare none: kil and destroy both olde men and yong, maydēs, childrē and wyues. But as for those, ẏ haue ẏ marke vpon thē, see ẏ ye touch thē not: and begin at my Sanctuary. Thē they began at the elders, which wer in ẏ temple, for he had C sayd vnto thē: When ye haue defiled ẏ tē- (Jud.i.) ple, and filled ẏ court with ẏ slayne, then (Je.xxv.) go your wayforth. So they went out, and (i.Pe.iiii.c.) slue down thorow ẏ citie. Now whē they had done ẏ slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fell down vpon my face, & cryed saying: O lord god, wilt ẏ thē destroy al ẏ residue of Israell, in thy sore displeasure ẏ thou hast poured vpō Jerusalē? Then sayd he vnto me: the wickednesse of ẏ house of Is- D rael & Juda is very great, so that ẏ lande is ful of bloud, & ẏ city ful of vnfaithfulnes For they say: tush, ẏ lord regardeth not the (Ez.viii.c.) earth, he seeth vs not. Therfore will I vpō thē, myne eye shal not ouersee thē: nether (Eza.vii.c.) will I spare thē, but will recompēce their (Ez.viii.) wickednes vpō their heades. And behold the man ẏ had ẏ lynnē rayment vpō hym, (Ez.xi.) and ẏ writers ynckhorne by his syde, told al ẏ matter how it happened, & sayd: lord, as ẏ hast cōmaunded me, so I haue done.

The .x. Chapter.

Of the man that toke hote burning coles out of the middle of the wheles and of the Cherubins, in token of the burning of Jerusalem. A rehearsal of the vision of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubins.

And as I loked, behold, in the I firmament that was aboue ẏ Cherubins there appeared ẏ similitude of a stoole of Sa-phir vpon them: then sayd he (Ez.i.d.) that sat therin, to hym that had the linnē rayment vpon hym: crepe in betwene the wheles ẏ are vnder ẏ Cherubins, & take thyne hande full of hote coales out from betwene ẏ Cherubins, and cast thē ouer the citie. And he crept in, ẏ I myghte see.
Now ẏ Cherubins stode vpon the ryght syde of ẏ house when ẏ man went in, and the cloude fylled ẏ inner court. But ẏ glo- (ii. Par.) ry of ẏ Lord remoued from ẏ Cherubins, (vii.a.) and came vpon ẏ threscholde of the house: so that ẏ temple was full of cloudes, & the court was full of ẏ shyne of ẏ Lordes glory: Yea, and ẏ sounde of ẏ Cherubins win-ges was heard into the forecourt, like as it had bene the voice of the almightie god when he speaketh. Now whē he had bidden the man that was clothed in lynnen to go and take ẏ hote coles from ẏ middst

of the wheles which were vnder the Che rubins:he went and stode besyde ÿ whe-B les. Then the one Cherub reached forth hys hand from vnder ÿ Cherubins, vnto the fire that was betwene the Cheru-bins,and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on ÿ linnen raymēt,in hys hande:which toke it,and went out. And vnder the wynges of ÿ Cherubins,there appeared ÿ likenesse of a mannes hand.
I saw also foure wheles beside the Che-rubins,so ÿ by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were(to loke vpon)after ÿ fashion of the precious stone of Tharsis:yet,(vnto the sight)they wer all foure of one fashion , as if one whele had bene in another. When they went forth, they went all foure together, not turning about in their going. But wher the first went,thither went they after al C so,so ÿ they turned not about in their go ing. Their whole bodyes,their backes, their hands & wynges,yea and ÿ wheles also,were al ful of eyes rounde about thē all foure. And I heard hym cal ÿ wheles Euery one of them had foure faces, so ÿ Eze.i.b. the one face was the face of a Cherub, the second of a man,ÿ third of a Lion,the fourth of an eagle, and they were lifted vp aboue. Thys is the beast that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubins went,the wheles went wyth them:and whē ÿ Cherubins shoke their winges to lift themselues vpward ,the wheles remained not behynde,but were with thē also. Shortly when they stode, these stode also. And whē they wer lifted D vp,the wheles were lift vp also w them: Eze.xi.d. for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles. xliii.b. Then the glory of the Lord was lift vp from the threshoulde of the temple, and remained vpon the Cherubins: And the Cherubins flackered with their winges and lift themselues vp from the earth: so that I saw when they went,& the wheles with them. And they stode at the east side of the port that is in the house of the lord.
So the glory of the Lord was vpon thē.
Thys is the beast that I saw vnder the God of Israell, by the water of Cobar.
And I perceiued that it was the Cheru-bins. Euery one had foure faces, & euery one foure winges,and vnder their wyn-ges,as it wer mennes handes. Now thē figure of their faces was euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of thē. Euery one in hys going went straight forwarde.

The .xi. Chapter.

Who they were that seduced the people of Israell,against these he prophecieth, shewing them how they shalbe dispersed abrode. The renuing of the heart commeth of God,otherwise can we not walke in hys commaundementes. He threateneth them that leane vnto their own counsels.

MOreouer, the spirit of the Lord A lift me vp, and brought me vnto the east port of the Lordes house And beholde, there were .xxv. mē vnder the dore, amōg whom I saw Iaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then sayd the Lord vnto me.
Thou sonne of man,these men ymagine mischiefe , and a wicked counsaile take they in thys citie, saying: Tush: there is no destruction at hand,let vs builde houses: thys Ierusalē is ÿ cauldron, and we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecy vnto them:yea, prophecy shalt thou vnto them,O sonne of man. And with that fell the spirit of the Lord vpon me, and sayd vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lord: B On thys maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israell)and I know the ymaginations of your hartes. Many one haue ye murthered in thys citie, and filled the stretes full of the slaine. Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: the slaine men that ye haue layd on the grounde in thys citie, Eze.xxiiii.a. are the flesh,and thys citie is ÿ cauldron: but I wil bring you out of it:ye haue fea- Mat.xxvi. red ÿ sweard,and I wyll bryng a sweard ouer you sayth ÿ Lord God. I wyll driue you out of thys citie,and deliuer you into your enemies hande,and wyl condemne you. Ye shalbe slaine in all the coastes of Israell. I wyl be auēged of you:to learne you to know that I am ÿ Lord. Thys ci-tie shal not be your cauldron,nether shall ye be the flesh therin:but in the coastes of Israell wyll I punish you, that ye may know that I am ÿ Lord: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walked,nor kept hys lawes:but haue done after ÿ customes of ÿ heathē, that lye rounde about Le.xviii.a.
you. Now whē I preached,Pheltiah the sonn of Bananiah dyed. Thē fel I down De.xii.b. vpon my face and cryed w a loude voyce, C saying: O Lord God, wilt thou thē vtterly destroy all ÿ remnaunt in Israell: And so ÿ word of ÿ lord came vnto me on this maner:thou sonn of man,thy brethrē,thy kinsfolke, and the whole house of Iuda which dwel at Ierusalem,say: Withdraw ye farre from ÿ Lord,for ÿ lande is geuē vs in possession. Therfore tell them: thus sayth saythe the lord god: I wil sende you far of among the gentiles, & scater you among the nations, & I will halow you but a litle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tel them also, thus sayth ye Lord God: I will gather you againe out of ye nations, and bryng you from the cōtries wher ye be scatred, and wil geue you the land of Is-D raell again. And they shall come thither: Ie.xxxi.f. and they shall take away al their ydols, Ezechie. and all their abhominations frō thence.

xxxvi.f. And I will geue you one heart, & I wyll plant a new spirit within your bowels.
That stony heart wil I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshly heart, that ye may walke in my commaundementes, & kepe mine ordinaunces, & do thē: that ye may be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hartes are disposed to follow their abhominations & wicked liuinges those mennes dedes will I bryng vppon their own heades, sayth ye Lord God. After thys dyd the Cherubins lift vp their winges, & the wheles went wt them, and Eze.x.c. the glory of the lord was vpon them. So e.xliii.a, the glory of the lord wēt vp frō ye middest of the citie, and stode vpon the mount of Eze.iii.b. the citie, towarde the East. But ye wynde e,viii,a. toke me vp, and in a vision (which came by the spirit of god) it brought me again into Chaldea among ye prysoners. Then the vision yt I had sene, vanisshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prysoners all the wordes of the lord, which he had shewed me.

The.xii.Psalme.

The parable of the vessels of ye captiuitie. The exposition of the parable, by which the taking of king zedekiah is signified Another parable wherby the distresse of hunger and thirst is signified.

A The word of ye lord came vnto Esa.vi.b. me, saying: thou sonn of mā, Mat.xiii thou dwellest in the midst of
b. a froward houshold: whiche Mar.iiii. haue eyes to see, & yet se not:
a.
Lu.viii,b eares haue they to heare, & yet heare they Act.xviii, not, for they are an obstinate housholde.
d. Therfore (O thou sonne of mā) make thy Ro.xi.b. geare ready to flit, & go forth by faire day light, yt they may see. Yea, euen in their sight shalt yu go frō thy place, to another place: if peraducture they will consider, yt they be a disobediēt houshold. Thy geare that yu hast made ready to flyt wall, shalt thou beare out by faire day light, yt they may see: & thou thy self shalt go forth also at euē in their sight as a mā doth whē he flyteth. Dig thorow the wal, that they may see, & beare thorow it ye same thyng that yu tokest vp in their sighte. In their sight shalte thou beare vpon thy shoulders, and cary it forth in the darke. Hyde thy face yt thou see not ye earth, for I haue made thee a shewtoken vnto ye house of Israell. Now as ye lord cōmaūded me, so I did: the geare that I had made ready, brought I out by day, At euen I brake down an hole thorow ye wal wt my hand: and whē it was darke, I toke the geare C vpō my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight. And in ye morning came the word of ye lord vnto me, saying, thou sōne of man, if Israell ye frowarde housholde aske thee, and say: what dost thou there?
Thē tell them. Thus sayth the lord god: Thys punishmēt toucheth ye chief rulers at Jerusalem, and al ye house of Israell yt dwel among them. Tel them: I am your shewtoken: like as I haue done, so shal it happen vnto you. Flit shal you also, & go into captiuitie. The chiefest yt is among you shal lade his shoulders in the darke, and get hym away. He shal break down D the wall, to cary stuffe there thorowe: he shal couer hys face yt he see not ye ground with hys eyes: My line will I sprede out vpon hym & catch hym in my net, & carye hym to Babilon in the lande of ye Chaldees, which he shall not see, and yet shall he dye there. As for all hys helpers and al hys hostes yt be about hym, I wil scatter, them toward al the windes & drawe out a sweard after thē. So whē I haue scatered them among ye heathen, & stra-wed them in ye landes, they shall know, that I am ye lord. But I wil leaue a litle number of them frō the sweard, hunger and pestilence, to tell al their abhominations amōg the heathē, wher they come: that they may know, how that I am the lord. Moreouer, ye word of the lord came E vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, wt a fearefull trembling shalt thou eate thy bread, wt carefulnesse & sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto ye people of the lande speake yu on thys maner: thus sayth the Lord God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to ye lande of Israel: ye shall eate your bread wt sorow, and drink your water wt heauinesse. Yea the lande with ye fulnesse therof shalbe layd waste, for ye wickednesse of them yt dwell therin.
And ye cities that now be well occupyed shalbe voyde, and ye land desolate: that ye may know, how that I am the Lord. Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me againe, gayne,saying:Thou sonne of man, what maner of bywordeis that,which ye vse in F the lãd of Israel, saying:Tush,seing that Psal. the dayes are so slacke in comming,al the visions are of none effect.Tel them therfore,thus saith the lord god:I wyll make that bywoorde to ceasse, so that it shal no more be commonly vsed in Israel.But say this vnto them:the daies ar at hand that euery thing which hath bene prophecyed shall be fulfilled.There shall no vision be in vaine, neyther any Prophecye false among the children of Israel:For it is I ye lord that speake it:and whatsoeuer I the lord speake,it shalbe perfourmed,and not G be slacke in comming. yea,euen in youre daies(O ye frowarde houshold)wil I de-uise some thyng,& bryng it to passe sayth the lorde God.And the worde of the lorde came vnto me,saying:Beholde,thou sõne of manne.The house of Israel sayeth on this maner.Tush,as for the vision that he hath sene,it will be many a day or it come to passe.It is farr of yet,the thing that he prophecieth.Therfore say vnto thẽ:Thus saith the lord God.All my wordes shal no more be slacke.Loke what I speake,that same shall come to passe,saith the lorde.

The.xiii.Chapter.

The word of the lorde against false Prophetes, which teache the people the counsailes of their own hartes.

A THe word of the lord came vnto me,saying:Thou sonne of man:Speake, prophecye against those Prophetes that preache in Israell: and saye thou vnto them that prophecy out of their Ezek.xiiii. own hartes: Heare the worde of the lord: thus saith the lord god:Woe be vnto those foolysh prophetes that folowe theyr own spirit,and speake where they see nothing.
O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the dry fielde:For they stand not in the gaps,neyther make they an hedge for the house of Israell,that men myghte abide the battel in the day of the Lorde.
Iere.xxiii. Vaine thynges they see,and tell lies, to maintain their preachinges withal.The Lord(say thei)hath spoken it,when in very dede the lord hath not sent them.Vain visions haue ye seen,and spokẽ false prophecies,when ye say:the lorde hath spokẽ it,wheras I neuer sayd it.Therfore thus sayeth the lordeGod:Bicause your words B be vaine,and ye seke out lyes.Beholde,I wyll vpon you,sayth the lorde.

Mine handes shall come vpon the prophetes that looke out vayne thinges,and preache lyes:they shal not be in the counsell of my people,nor written in the booke of the house of Israell,neyther shall they come in the lande of Israell:that ye maye Iere.viii.b. know how that I am the lorde god.And that for bicause they haue deceyued my people,and tolde them of peace,where no peace was.One setteth vp a wal,and thei daube it with loose clay.
Therfore tel them which daube it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall.For there shall come a great showre of rayne Mat.vii. great hayle stones shall fall vpon it,and a sore storme of winde shal breake it,so shal the wall come downe. Shall it not then be sayd vnto you:where is now your mor-ter ye ye daubed it withal:Therfore thus sayeth the lorde god.I will breake out in my wrathfull displeasure with a stormye wynde,so that in myne anger there shall come a mighty showre of rayne,and hailstones in my wrathe to destroye withall.
As for the wall that ye haue daubed with C vntempered morter,I will break it down make it euen with the ground:so that the foundation therof shal remoue,and it shal fall:yea,and ye your selues shall perish in the middest thereof: to learne you for to know,that I am the Lorde. Thus wil I perfourme my wrath vpon this wall,and vpon them that haue daubed it wyth vntempered morter,and then wyl I say vnto you:the wall is gone, and the daubers are away. These are the prophetes of Israel,which prophecy vnto the citie of Ie-rusalem,and loke out visions of peace for them,where as no peace is,sayth the lord god.Wherfore,(O thou sonne of man)set thy face against the daughters of thy peo ple,whiche prophecye oute of theyr owne hartes, & speake thou,prophecy agaynste thẽ,& say:Thus sayth the lorde god.Woe D bee vnto you , that sowe pillowes vnder armeholes,and bolsters vnder the heads Esay.v.c bothe of yong and olde, to catche soules Mich.iii.b withal.For when ye haue gotten ye soules the soules go that ye catch in flying, your bolsters also wil I teare in peces, and deliuer my people out of your hands, so that they shall come no more in your hands to be spoyled, and ye shal know that I am ẏ lord. Seing that with youre lies ye discomfort the hart of the righteous, whō I haue Ose iiii. b not discomforted: Again, forsomuch as ye corage ẏ hand of the wicked, so ẏ he maye not turne from his wicked way and liue, therefore shall ye spye out no more vanity nor prophecy your owne gessinges: for I wyl deliuer my people out of your hand, ẏ ye may know how that I am the lord.

The. xiiii, Chapter.

The lorde denieth his woorde to the people for their sinnes sake. The despisers of the woorde doth the lord sometime deceiue by false prophets. A cōfort of them that fled vnto Babilon.

A Eze. xx. a. THere resorted vnto me certaine of the elders of Israell, and sat downe by me. Then came the word of ẏ lord vnto me, saying: thou sonne of mā these men beare their vnclennes in theyr harts, and go purposely vpon ẏ stumbling block of their own wickednesse: should I then answere at theyr request? Therfore speake vnto them and say: thus sayth the lorde God: Euerye manne of the house of Israell, that beareth his vncleane ydols in his harte, purposyng to stumble in hys owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a Prophete, to enquire anye thyng at me by him: vnto that manne will I the lorde my selfe geue aunswere, accordyng to the multitude of his Idols: that the house of Israel may be snared in their own harts, bicause they be cleane gone from me, for their abhominations sakes. Wherfore tel
B the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lord ẏ Eze. xx. c. god: Be couerted, forsake your ydols, and turne your wayes from your filthinesse, & turne your faces from al your abhominations. For euery man (whether he be of ẏ house of Israel or a straunger) that soiorneth in Israel, whiche departeth fro me, & caryeth Idols in his harte, purposyng to go stil stumbling in his own wickednesse & commeth to a prophet, for to aske counsell at me through hym, vnto ẏ man wil I the lorde geue aunswere, by mine owne C self. I wil set my face against that man, & will make him to be an example for other yea, and a common bywordd, and will rote him out of my people, that he may knowe iii. Re. xxii howe that I am the Lorde. And yf that Prophete bee deceiued, when he telleth Iob. xii. c. him a woorde, then I the Lorde my selfe haue deceyued that Prophete: and wyll stretche out myne hande vppon hym, to roote hym oute of my people of Israell, and they bothe shalbee punished for theyr wickednesse. According to the sinne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophete bee: that the house of Israell be ledde from me throughe erroure, and D bee no more defyled in theyr wickednesse: but that they maye bee my people, and I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God. And the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, when the land sinneth againste me, and goeth foorth in wyckednesse: I will stretche oute myne hande vpon it, and destroy all the prouysion of theyr bread, and send dearth vpon them, to destroye manne and beast in the Eze. iii.
land. And though Noe, Daniel, and Iob, and. vii. these thre menne were among them, yet Iere. xv. a shall they in their righteousnesse delyuer E but theyr owne soules, sayeth the Lorde God. Yf I bring noysome beastes into the lande to waste it vp, and it bee so desolate, that no man maye goe therein for beastes: if these thre men also were in the land, as truely as I liue (saith ẏ lord god) they shal saue neither sonnes nor daughters, but be onely deliuered themselues: & as for the lande, it shall be waste. Or yf I bring a sweard into the land, and charge it to goe through the lande, so that I sley downe man & beast in it, and if these thre men wer therin: As truely as I liue (saith the lorde God) they shall deliuer neyther F sonnes nor daughters, but onely to be saued themselues. Yf I send a pestilēce into the lād, & poure out e my sore indignation vpō it in bloud, so ẏ I roote out of it, bothe man & beast: And if Noe, Daniel, and Iob wer therein, as truely as I liue (saith the lord god) they shall deliuer neyther sōnes nor daughters, but saue theyr owne soules in theyr righteousnesse. Moreouer G thus saith ẏ lord god: Muche more when Ie. xv. b I send my. iiii. troublous plages vpō Ierusalem, the sweard, hūger, perilous beastes & pestilence, to destroy man and beast out of it. Beholde, there shalbe a remnant saued therin, which shal bring forth theyr sonnes & daughters. Beholde, they shall com forth vnto you, and ye shall see theyr way, & what they take in hād, & ye shalbee comforted, as touching all the plages ẏ I haue haue brought vpon Ierusalem. Thei shal comfort you, whē ye se their way & works & ye shal knowe, howe ẏ it is not without a cause ẏ I haue done so against Ierusalem, as I did saith the lord god.

The.xv. Chapter.

As the vnprofitable wood of the vine tree is cast into the fier, so saith he that Ierusalem shalbe brēt.

THe word of the lord came A vnto me saying: thou son of man: what commeth of the vine among all other trees, and of ẏ wilde vine stock among al other tim ber of the groue? Do men take wood of it, to make any worke with-all? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hang any thyng vpon? beholde, it is cast in the fier to bee brente, the fier consumeth both the endes of it, the middest is brente B to ashes. Is it mete then for any worke?
No: Seing then that it was mete for no worke, being whole: much lesse may there any thing be made of it, when ẏ fyre hath consumed & brente it. And therefore thus sayeth the lord God. Like as I cast ẏ vine into ẏ fire for to be brent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so will I doe with them ẏ dwel in Ierusalem, & set my face against them: they shall go out frō the fire, and yet the fire shal consume them. Then shall ye know that I am the lord, when I set my face against them, & make the land waste: bicause they haue so sore offended sayeth the lord god.

The.xvi. Chapter.

The prophete entendyng to speake of the abhominations of Ierusalem, doth first shew the benefites of god towarde it. Ierusalem is reproued of vnkyndenesse, for her fornication with Idols. He iustifieth the wickednesse of other people, in cōparison of the sinnes of Ierusalem. The cause of the abhominations, into which the Sodomites fel. Mercy is promised to the repentaunt.

AGaine the worde of the lord spake vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man shew the citie of Ierusalem their abhominatiōs, and say: thus sayth ẏ lord God vnto Ierusalē: The progeny and kynred came out of the land of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethite, thus was the maner of thy byrth. In the day of thy byrth, when thou wast borne, the string of thy nauel was not cutte of: thou wast not bathed in water to make thee cleane. Thou wast neither rubbed with salt, nor swad-led in cloutes. No man regarded thee so muche, as to doe any of these thynges for thee, or to shewe thee suche fauoure, but thou wast vtterly cast out vpon the fielde: yea, despised wast thou in the daye of thy birth. Thē came I by the, & saw the trodē downe in thine owne bloude, & sayd vnto the, liue: although thou be defiled in thine owne bloud, euen I (I tell thee) sayd vnto thee, lyue, although thou be defyled in thine own bloud. So I planted thee as ẏ blossome of the field, thou art growen vp Esay. v. a and waren great: thou hast gottē a mar- Iere. xi. c. ueilous pleasaunt beauty, thy brestes are com vp, thy heare is goodly growē, wher as thou wast naked and bare afore. Now when I went by thee, and looked vppon B thee: beholde, thy tyme was come, yea, euen the tyme to wowe thee. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonesty: yea, I made an othe vnto the, and ma- Ier. iii. a.

and so thou becamest mine own.

Then washed I thee with water, & purged thy bloud frō thee. I anointed thee w oyle, I gaue thee chaunge of rayments, I made the shoes of Tarus lether: I girded thee about with white silk. I clothed thee with kerchiefes, I decked thee with costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers, a chayne about thy necke, spanges vppon thy forheade, earerynges vppon thyne eares, and set a beautifull crowne vppon thyne head. Thus wast thou deckte with siluer & golde, and thy raymēt was of fine white silke of nedle worke, and of diuers coulours. Thou diddest eate nothing but simnels, hony & oyle: marueylous goodly wast thou and beautifull, yea euen a very quene wast thou. Insomuch ẏ thy beauty was spoken of among ẏ heathen, for thou wast excellent in my beauty, which I put vpon thee, saith ẏ lord god. But thou hast put confidence in thine owne beauty, and playd the harlot, when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast cōmitted whoredō with all that went by thee, & hast fulfilled their desires: yea, thou hast takē thy garmentes of diuers colours, and dect thine Ier. i. iii

Jer, vii, d geuest them ouer to be brent vnto them:
Eze. xx, d And yet in all thy abhominations and Psa.cv, a whoredome thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, howe naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden down in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesses woe woe vnto thee, saith ye lord (thou haste builded thy stewes & bordell houses in euerye place.) Thou haste built hye places: yea, at the head of euery D strete, hast thou builded thee an altare.
Ez.xxiii.d Thou hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, thou hast laide out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thine whoredome. Thou hast commytted fornication with the Egiptians thy neyghbours, whiche had muche fleshe: and thus hast thou encreased thine whoredom, to Eze.iiii.d anger me. Behold, I dyd stretch out mine v.d.&.14.c hand ouer thee, and dyd mynish thy store of foode, and delyuered thee ouer into the wylles of the Philistines thine enemyes, whiche are ashamed of thy abhominable way. Thou hast playde ye whore also with Ez.xxiii.a the Assirians, bicause thou waste insatiable: yea, thou hast (I say) with them plaid the harlot, & yet haddest not thou inough. Thus hast thou furthermore committed thy fornication from the lande of Canaan, vnto the Chaldees, & yet thy luste not satisfied. How obstinate is thy hart (sayth the lord God) seyng thou dooest all these workes of an errant whore: buyldyng thy stewes at the head of euery strete, and thy bordel houses in al places: Thou hast not ben as another whore, that holdeth scorn of a smal reward, but a wyfe that breketh wedlocke, and taketh other in stede of her husbande. Gyftes are geuen to all other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offrest them gyftes, to come vnto thee out of all places, & to commit fornication with thee. It is come to passe with thee in thy whordoms, cõtrary to ye vse of other women: yea, ther hath no such fornicatiõ ben committed after thee seyng ye thou proferest giftes vnto other, & no reward is geuen thee: this is a contrary thing. Therfore heare the word of the lord, O thou harlot: thus saith ye lord god: Forsomuch as thou hast set forth ye youth to whordem, & discouered thy shame, thorow thy whordom, with al thy louers, and with all thy idols of thy abhominations in the bloud of thy chyldren, whome thou hast geuen thẽ: Behold, therfore I wil gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy self common: yea, & all them whom thou fauorest, and euery one ye thou hatest: I wil (I say) gather thẽ together round about the, and wil discouer thy shame before them, that they may see al thy filthinesse. Moreouer, I will iudge thee as a breaker of wedlock, and a murtherer, & recompence the thine own bloud in wrath and gelousy. I will geue thee ouer into theyr power, ye shal break downe E thy stewes, and destroy thy bordel houses: they shall strip thee out of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beautifull iewels shal they take from thee, and so let thee sit naked & bare: yea, they shall bryng the cõmon people vpon thee, which shall stone thee, and sley thee down with theyr sweards. They shall burne vp thy houses, and punyshe thee in the syght of many women. Thus will I make thy whoredome to cease, so ye thou shalt geue out no moe rewardes. Should I make my wrath to be stil, take my gelousy from thee, be cõtent & nomore to be displeased: seing thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but haste prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges: Behold therefore, I wyl bring thine own waies vpon thine head, sayth the Lorde God: howbeit I neuer did it vnto thee accordyng to thy wickednes, and al thy abhominations. Behold, al they that vse cõmon prouerbs, shall vse this prouerb also against the: such a mother, such a daughter. Thou arte euen thy mothers owne daughter, that hath cast of her husband and her chyldren: yea, thou art the sister of thy systers, which forsooke theyr husbandes and theyr chyldren. Your mother is a Cethite, and your father an Amorite. Thyne eldest sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell vppon my left hand. But thy yongest syster that dwel- F leth on thy ryght hand, is Sodoma and her daughters. yet hast thou not walked after theyr wayes, nor doone after theyr abhoabhominations, but thou stodest a lyttle and very small tyme, and in all thy waies thou hast bene more corrupt than they.

As truely as I lyue, sayth the Lord God: Sodoma thy syster with her daughters, hath not done so euyll; as thou and thy daughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meat, aboundaunce, and ydlenes: these thynges had she and her daughters. Besydes that they reched not theyr hand to the poore and nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhominable things before me: therfore I toke them awaye, as pleased me.
Neyther hath Samaria done half of thy synnes: yea, thou haste exceded them in wyckednesse: Insomuche that in comparison of all the abhominatiōs which thou hast done, thou hast made thy sisters good women. Therefore thou (whiche dyddest condemne thy syster) beare thyne owne shame for thine owne offences, that thou E haste committed, more abhomynable than they did, whyche in deede are more ryghteous than thou art: be thou (I say) ashamed, and beare thy shameful rebuke: seyng that thou hast proued thy sisters in comparison of the, ryghtwise. As for their captiuity, namely the captiuitie of Sodoma & her daughters, the captiuity of Samaria & her daughters, I wil bring them agayne: so wyl I also bryng again ỳ cap-tiuitie among them: that thou mayst take thine owne confusion vpon thee, and be ashamed of all that thou haste done, and to comfort them. Thus thy sisters (namelye) Sodoma and her daughters; Samaria and her daughters, with thy self and thy daughters, shalbe brought again to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pride, and before thy wickednesse came to light, ỳ wouldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntyll the tyme that the Siryans with all theyr townes, and the Phylistines with al that lye round about thē, brought the to shame and confusion: that thou mightest beare thine owne filthines and abhomination, sayeth the Lorde. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I would by ryght deale with thee as thou hast done.
Thou hast despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunt. Neuerthelesse, I wyll remember the couenaunte, that I made with thee in thy youthe, in so muche that it shall be an euerlastyng couenaunte, so that thou also remember thy wayes, and be ashamed of the: then shalt thou receiue of me thy elder and yonger sisters, whom I wyll make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenant. And so wyll I renue my couenant with thee, that thou mayest knowe that I am ỳ lord, that thou mayst thynke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusion no more: when I haue forgeuē thee, all that thou hast done sayth the lord god.

The.xvii.Chapter.

The Parable of the two Eagles.

THe worde of ỳ Lord came A vnto me, saying: Thou Ez.xxiiii.a sonne of man, put forth a darke speaking & a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and say: thus sayeth the lord god. There came a great Eagle with great wynges: yea, wt Da.vii.a a mighty long body, and full of fethers of diuers colours, vpon the mount of Liba-nus, and toke the hiest braunche frō a Cedre tree, and brake of the top of his twyg, and caryed it into the lande of Canaan, & set it in a citie of marchaunts. He toke also of the sede of the lande, and planted it in a fruitfull ground, he brought it vnto great waters, and set it as a willowe tree therby. Then did it growe, & was a great vyne stocke, but low vp the ground, whose braunches turned into it self, & the rootes of it wer fastned vnder it: thus there came of it a vine, and it brought forth blossoms and spredde oute braunches. But there was another Eagle, a greate one, which B hadde great wynges and many fethers: and beholde, the rootes of this vine had an hunger after hym, and spredde out his braunches towarde hym, that he myghte water yet with the orchyard that he had planted. Neuerthelesse, it was planted vpon a good grounde besyde great waters so that (by reason) it should haue brought out braunches and fruit, and haue bene a goodly vine. Speake thou therfore, thus saith ỳ lorde god: Shal this vine prosper: C shal not his rotes be plucked out, his fruit be broken of, his grene braunches wither & fade away: yea, wout eyther strong armie, or many people, shal it be plucked vp by ỳ rootes. Behold, it was plāted: shal it prosper therfore? Shal it not be dried vp & withered: yea, euē in ỳ sprīg out of his blossomes, assone as the East winde bleweth.
Moreouer, ỳ word of ỳ lord came vnto me saying: Speake to ỳ froward houshold: know ye not what these things do signi- D fy? Tel them: behold, the kyng of Babilon iiii king.

 came xxiiii.c

came to Jerusalem, and tooke the kyng and his Princes, and led them to Babylon. He toke of the kynges sede, and made a couenaunt with him, and tooke an othe of hym: The Princes of the land tooke he with him also, that the land might be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunt and fulfill it. But he fell from hym, and sent his embassadours into Egipt, that he might haue horses & much people.
E Should that prosper? Should he be kept safe that dothe suche thynges? Or should he escape, that breaketh his coue-naunt? As truely as I lyue, sayeth ye lord God. He shall dye at Babilon, in ye place, where the kyng dwelleth, that made him kyng, whose othe he hath despysed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neyther shal Pharao with his great host and multitude of people, maintayn hym in the warre, when they cast vp ditches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroy muche people.
For seyng he hath despised the othe, and broken the couenaunt (whereas he yet gaue his hande theruppon) and done al these thynges he shall not escape: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: as truely F as I lyue, I will bring mine othe that he Eze. xii. b hath despysed, and my couenaunt that he & xxxii. a hath broken, vppon his owne head. I wyl cast my nette about him, and catch him in my yarne. To Babilon will I cary hym, there will I punishe hym bicause of the greate offence that he made me. As for those that flye from hym out of the hoste, they shall be slayne with the sweard. The residue shall be scattered towarde all the G wyndes: and ye shall knowe that I the Lorde haue spoken it. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will also take a braunche from an hie Ceder tree, and wil set it, and take the vppermost twig, that yet is but tender, and plante it vppon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hie hil of Israell wil I plant it, that it may bring foorth twigges and grene fruite, and be a great Ceder tree, so that al maner of foules may build in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadow of his braunches.
And all the trees of the field shal know that I the Lorde haue brought down the hye tree, and set the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the drye tree to florishe. Euen I the Lord that spake it, haue also broughte it to passe.

The. xviii, Chapter.

He sheweth that euery man shal beare his owne sinne. To him that amendeth, is saluation promised. Death is prophecied to the righteous, which turneth backe from the right way.

The woorde of the lorde came A vnto me on this maner: what meane ye by this comon pro-uerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, saying: The fathers haue eaten sowre grapes, and ye childrens teeth are set on edge. As truely as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God, ye shal vse this bywoorde no more in Israell. Beholde, all soules are mine. Like as ye father is mine, so is the sonne mine also. The soule that sinneth, shall die. Yf a man be godly, and do the thing that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpon the hilles: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the foule ydols of Israell, he defileth not his neighbours wyfe: he B medleth with no menstruous woman, he greueth no body: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mannes good by violence: he parteth hys meate with the hungry: he clotheth ye naked: he lendeth nothyng vppon vsurye, he taketh nothing ouer: he withdraweth his hand from doing wrong: he dealeth faithfully betwene man and manne, and walketh in my commandements, and kepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth them fayth-fully: This is a righteous man, he shall surely liue saieth the Lorde God. If he now get a son, that is a murtherer, a she-der of bloud: if he doe one of these thinges (though he doe not al) he eateth vpon the hilles: he defileth his neighbours wyfe: he greueth the poore and nedy: he robbeth and spoyleth, he geueth not the detter his pledge agayne: he lifteth vp his eyes vnto ydols, and medleth with abhominable things: he lendeth vpon vsury, and taketh more ouer. Shall this man liue? He shall C not liue. Seing he hath done al these ab-hominations, he shal dye, his bloud shall be vpō him. Nowe if this man get a sonne also, ye seeth al his fathers sinnes, whiche he hath done, & feareth neither doth suche like: Namely, he eateth not vpon ye mountains: he lifteth not his eyes vppe to the ydols of Israel: he defileth not his neygh-bors wife: he vexeth no mā: he kepeth no mans pledge, he neither spoileth nor rob-beth any mā, he dealeth his meate with ye hūgry, he clotheth ye naked: he oppresseth not ye poore, he receiueth no vsury, nor ani thyng

thing ouer:he kepeth my lawes,and walketh in my commaundements. This man shal not die in his fathers sin,but shal liue without faile. As for his father,bicause he oppressed & spoiled his brother,& did wickedly among his people:lo, he is dead in his own sin. And yet say ye: Wherfore the should not this sonne beare his fathers sin? Therfore bicause the sonn hath done equity and right,hath kept al my comaũ-D dements & done thẽ,therfore shall he liue in dede. The same soule that sinneth shall die. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence,neyther shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the ryghteous,shall be vpon hym,and ye wyckednesse of the wicked shalbe vpon hymself also. But if the vngodly will turne away from al his sinnes that he hath done and kepe all my commaundements,& doe the thing that is equal and ryght,doutles he shal liue and not dye? As for al his sin-nes that he did before,they shall not bee thought vpon, but in his ryghteousnesse that he hath done,he shall liue. For haue I any pleasure in ye death of a sinner,saieth the Lorde God,but rather that he cõ-uert and lyue? Againe,if the ryghteous turne away from his ryghteousnesse,and do iniquitie,according to all the abhomi-nations that the wicked man doth, shall he lyue? All the righteousnes that he hath done shal not be thought vpon,but in the E fault that he hath offended withal,and in the sin that he hath done,he shal die. And yet ye say: Tush the way of the lord is not indifferent. Heare therfore ye house of Israel:is not my way ryght? Or at not your wayes rather wicked? When a ryghteous man tourneth away from his ryghteous-Esai.lv.b nesse,and medleth with vngodlinesse, he must die therin. Yea,for the ryghteousnes that he hath done,must he dye. Againe, when the wycked man turneth away frõ his wickednesse,that he hath doone, and dothe the thing which is equal and right: he shal saue his soule aliue. For insomuch as he remembreth hymself,and tourneth him from al the vngodlinesse that he hath vsed,he shal liue and not die? And yet saieth the house of Israel. Tush, the way of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnright,O ye house of Israell? As for me F I will iudge euery man according to his waies,O ye house of Israel,saith the lord Esa.lv.b god. Wherfore be conuerted and turn you cleane from all your wickednesse,so shall there no sin do you harme. Cast away frõ you all your vngodlinesse, that ye haue done:make you new hartes and a newe spirit. Wherfore will ye dye,O ye house of Ezr.xi.d, Israell? seing I haue no pleasure in the e.xxxvi.c death of him that dieth,saith the lord god Turne you then,and ye shall liue.

The.xix.Chapter.

The captiuitie of Jeohahaz and of Jehoachin is signified by the Lions whelpes,and by the Liõ. He setteth out the prosperitie of the citie of Jerusalem that is past,and the miserye thereof that is present.

But thou sonne of manne A mourn thou for ye princes of Israel,and say. Wherefore lay thy mother ye Lionesse among the Lions, & norished her yongones among ye Lions whelpes?
One of her whelpes she broughte vp,& it became a Lion:it learned to spoyle,and to deuoure folke. The heathẽ heard of hym, & toke him in their nets,& brought him in chaines vnto the lãd of Egipt. Now whẽ the damme saw,that al her hope and com B fort was awaye,she tooke another of her whelpes,and made a Lion of him:whiche went among the Lions,& became a fierce Lion:learned to spoyle and deuoure folk, he destroyd their palaces,and made their cities waste. Insomuch that ye whole lãd & euery thing therin,wer vtterly desolate thorow ye very voice of his roaring. Then C came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countries against him,laid their nettes for him,& toke him in their pit. So thei bound him with cheines, & brought him to the king of Babilõ,which put him iiii,ki.xxv in prison, that his voyce should no more a, be heard vpon the mountains of Israell. Je.xxxix a As for thy mother,she is like a vine in thy and,lii,a, bloud,plãted by the water syde:her fruits and braunches are growen oute of many waters, her stalkes wer so strong that men might haue made staues thereof for officers:she grewe so hye in her stalkes.
So when men saw that she exceded the heighth and multitude of her braunches she was roted out in displeasure,and cast downe to the grounde. The East wynde dried vp her fruit,her strong stalkes were broken of,withered and brent in the fyer.
But nowe she is planted in the wyl-dernesse,in a drye thirsty grounde. And there is a fyer gone oute of her stalkes, which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute:so that she hath no moe strong stalkes,to be staues for officers. This is a piteous and miserable thyng.

The.xx Chapter.

The lorde denieth that he will aunswere them which he here obiecteth. He promiseth that his peo into a lãd ẏ J had prouided for thẽ,which flowed with milk & hony,and is a pleasãt them. Cast away euery man ẏ abhomina= agaynst me, and would not folow me, to cast away euery man ẏabhominations of

But J would not do it for my names sake that it should be vnhalowed before ẏ hea= whom J shewed my selfe vnto them,that J would bring them out of the land of E=

J had caryed them awaye. But J swore vnto them in the wildernesse,ẏ J woulde Sabboth dayes. Then J made me again to poure out my indignation ouer them, and to satisfy my wrathe vppon them in the wyldernesse.

Neuerthelesse, J withdrew my hand for my names sake, leaste it shoulde bee D vnhallowed among the heathen, before whome J hadde brought them foorth. J lyfte vp myne hand ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that J woulde scatter them among the Heathen, and strawe them among the nations, bicause they hadde not kepte my lawes, but caste asyde my commaundementes, vnhallowed my Sabbothes,and lyfte vppe theyr eyes to theyr fathers Jdolles. Wherefore J gaue them also commaundementes not good, owne giftes (when I appoynted for my Exo.rrii.a selfe, all theyr first borne) to make thẽ desolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the lord.

Therefore (O thou sonne of manne,) tell the house of Israel, thus saith ẏ lorde E god. Beside al this, your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended against me. For after I had brought them into ẏ lande, ẏ I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euery hye hyl, and all the thycke trees: they made there their offerynges, and prouoked me with their oblations, makyng swete sauours there, and poured out theyr drynke offerynges.
Then I asked them, what is the hyll altare, that ye goe to it? And therefore is it called the hye place vnto this day. Wherfore speake vnto the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God: ye are euen as vncleane as youre forefathers, and commyt whoredome also wyth theyr abhominations. In all youre Idolles, whereun-nations and landes, wherein ye are scamyghtye hande, with a stretched oute vpon you: and wyll bryng you into the wyldernesse of the people, and ther I wil reason with you face to face.

Lyke as I punished youre forefathers in the wyldernesse of Egipt, so wyll I pu-nyshe you also, sayeth the Lorde God. I wyl bryng you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunte. The and rrr.d out of the land of your habitation: as for ẏ you may know how that I am the lorde.

Goe to now then (sayeth the Lorde God) ye house of Israell. Euerye one of you follow your ydols, and serue them, seyng ye refuse to obey me. And my holy name shal De.rvi,a vpon the hye hil of Israel sayth the Lorde God, shal al the house of Israell, and all ẏ is in the land, worship me: and in the same place wil I fauor them, and there wyll I require your heueoffringes and the firstlynges of your oblations, with all youre holy things. I wil accept your swete sauor when I bryng you from the nations, and gather you together oute of the landes, wherin ye be scattered, that I may be halowed in you before the heathen, and ẏ ye may know that I am the lord which haue brought you into the land of Israell: yea, into the same lande that I sware to geue vnto your forefathers. There shall ye call to remembraunce your owne wayes and al youre imaginations, wherein ye haue ben defiled: and ye shal iudge your selues worthy to be destroied for al your wickednes ẏ ye haue done. And ye shal knowe ẏ G I am the lorde, when I entreate you af- Jer.viii,a ter my name, not after your wicked wais, rviii, and nor accordyng to your corrupt workes, O rrii. c, ye house of Israel saith the lorde. Moreo-uer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man: sette thy face towarde the Southe, and speake to the South wynde, and say to ẏ wood toward the South: heare the worde of the Lord, thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde I wil kindle a fier in thee, that shall cõsume the grene trees with ẏ drie. No man shalbe able to quench his flame, but al that loketh from the South to ẏ North, shalbe brent therin: & al flesh shal see, ẏ I the lord haue kindled it, so that no man may quench it.

Then said I: O Lord, they wil saye of me: Jere, ii,b tushe, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The.xxi.Chapter.

He threatneth the sweard, that is to say, destruction to the citie of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of king Zedekiah. He is commaunded to prophecy the destruction of the children of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lord threate-neth death vnto Nabuchodonozor himself.

THE woorde of the Lorde came to me, saying: thou sonne of manne A sette thy face towarde Jerusalem, speake agaynst the sanctuary, and prophecy agaynst the land of Israell, say to the land of Israell. Thus sayth the Lord: Behold, I wyll vpon the, and wyll draw my sweard out of the sheath, and roote out of thee, bothe the ryghteous and the wycked. Seyng then that I wyll rote out of thee both the ryghteous and wycked, therfore shall my sweard goe out of hys sheath agaynst all fleshe, from the North to the South: that all flesh may knowe how that I the Lorde haue drawen my sweard out of the sheath, and it shall not be put in agayn. Mourne therfore (O B thou sonne of man) that thy loines cracke withall: yea, mourne bitterly for them in their presence.

And yf they say: wherefore mournest thou? Then tell them: for the tydinges that commeth, at the whiche all hearts shall melt, all handes shall be lettē down all stomackes shall faynt, and all knees shall ware feble. Behold it commeth and shall be fulfilled sayth the Lorde God. A-gayn, the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophecy and speake. Thus sayth the Lord god: speake. The sweard, the sweard is sharp-ned and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it may be bryght? Shal we then make mirth? A-gaynst the trybe of my sonne it is gone C foorth, destroying all trees. He hath put Esay.x.a hys sweard to the dyghtyng, that good holde may be taken of it.

This sweard is sharpened and dight, that it may bee geuen into the hande of the manslayer. Crye, (O thou sonne of manne and houle, for this swearde shall smite my people, and all the rulers in Israell,) my people shall be feared through this sweard. Smite therfore thou vppon thy thigh, for it is gone foorth to make a tryall. And what a tryall shall this be, euen when my Scepter shalbe reproued?
It shall not bee sayeth the Lorde God.
Prophecy thou sonne of man, and smyte thyne handes together: make the sweard two edged, yea, make it thre edged, that manslayars sweard, that sweard of the greate slaughter, whiche shall smyte D them, euen in theyr priuye chambers, to make them abashed and faynte at the heartes, and in all gates to make some of them fall. I haue geuen that fearefull sweard. O how bryght and sharpe is it, howe well dyght and mete for the slaughter? Get thee some place alone, ey-ther vppon the right hand or on the left whythersoeuer thy face turneth. I wyll smyte my handes together also, and satisfy my wrathfull indignation: euen I y Lord haue sayd it. The worde of the lord came yet vnto me egayn, saying: thou sonne of manne, make thee two stretes that the sweard of the kyng of Babylon may come, both these stretes shall go out of one kinges land. And choose the a place E at the head of the strete choose out a corner. Make thee a strete, that the sweard may come toward Rabath of the Ammo-nites, and to the strong citie of Jerusalem.

For the kyng of Babilon shal stand in the turning of the way, at the head of the Leui.i. two stretes: to aske counsel at the sothsay- and.xx.a ers, castyng the lottes with his arrowes, be ydols to aske counsell at the ydol, and to looke in the liuer. But the sothsaying shal point to the ryght side vpon Jerusalem, that he may set menne of warre to smite it with a great noyse, to cry out alarum, to set battelrammes agaynste the gates to graue vp ditches, and to make bulwarkes. Ne-uerthelesse, as for the sothsaying, thei shal hold it but for vanitie. And esteme them as those to whom they haue often sworn, notwithstanding he shal remember their wickednesse, so that by right they must be taken and wonne. Therefore sayeth the Lord God. Forsomuche as ye your selues shew your offence, and haue opened your wickednes, so that in all your workes mē may see your synnes: therfore are ye com to remembraunce, and ye shalbe taken by violence. O thou shamefull wicked guyde F of Israell, whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an end.
Thus sayeth the Lord God, take away the garland, and put of the crowne, and so is it away: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought low. Punish, punish yea, punish them wyll I, and destroy thē, and that shal not be fulfilled vntil he com to whome iudgement belongeth, and to whom I haue geuen it. And thou (O Je.xlix. sonne of man) prophecy, and speake: thus Eze.xxv. sayth the lord God to the chyldren of Am- Amos.i. mon, and to their blasphemy, speak thou: G the sweard, the sweard is drawen foorth already to the slaughter, and scoured to consume, that it glistereth (bycause thou hast looked thee out vanities, and pro-phecied lyes) that it may come vppon thy necke, like as vppon the other vngodlye whiche be slayne, whose daye came when theyr their wickednesse was full. Should I put it vp againe? Nay I wyl punish thee in the land where thou wast norished & borne, & poure mine indignation vpon thee, & wyl blow vpon thee in the fire of my wrath, & delyuer thee vnto cruel people, which are learned to destroy. Thou shalt fede ŷ fyre, and thy bloud shall be shed in the lande, ŷ thou mayst be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the lord haue spoken it.

The.xxii. Chapter.

The word of the lord against Jerusalem for manslaughter, for denying due honor vnto their fathers and mothers, and other wickednesses. Of the wicked doctrine of the false prophetes and priestes, and of their vnsatiable couetousnesse. The tyrannye of rulers. The wickednesse of the people.

A Moreouer the worde of ŷ lorde came vnto me, and sayd: thou sonn of mā, wilt thou not reproue this bloudthirsty citye? Shew thē their abhominations, & tel thē: thus saith the Lord god: O thou citie, that sheddest bloud in the middest of thee, that thy tyme may com also: & makest thee ydols to defile thee withall. Thou hast made thy self gilty in the bloud that thou hast shed: and defiled thee in ydols, which thou hast made. Thou haste caused thy dayes to draw nie, & made the

Therfore will I make thee to bee confounded among ŷ heathen, and to be despysed in al ŷ landes whether they be nie or farre from thee: thei shal laugh thee to scorne, thou that haste gotten thee so foule a name, and art ful of mischief. I haue smitten my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vsed, and vpon the bloude which hath ben shed in thee. Is thy hart able to endure it, or may thy handes defende themselues, in the tyme that I shall bryng vpon thee? Euen I ŷ lorde D

I wyll scatter thee among the heathen, & and.xx.b.
straw thee about in the landes, and wyll cause thy filthinesse to cease out of thee. Yea, and thou shalt be thyne owne inheritaunce and not mine, in the sight of the heathen: that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord. And the word of the Lord came vnto me saying: thou sonne of manne, the house of Israel is turned to drosse. Al they Esay.i.c. that should be brasse, tin, yron, and leade, sayth the lord god. Forsomuch as ye al are turned into drosse: Beholde, I wyll bryng you together vnto Jerusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tin and leade, are put together in the fornace, and the fyer blowe there vnder to melt them. Euen so wyl I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath and indignation. I wil bryng you together, and kyndle the fier of my cruel displesure vnder you, that you may be melted therin. Lyke as the sylner is melted in the fier, so shal ye also be melted therin, that ye may know how that I the Lorde haue poured my wrath vppon you. And the worde of the lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, tell her, F Thou art an vncleane land, which is not Mic.iii.c.

but I could fynde none. Therfore wyll I

The .xxiii. Chapter.

Of the fornication, that is to say, of the idolatry of Samaria and Jerusalem, vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibah. In comparison of Samaria he sheweth that the fornication of Jerusalem is the filthier. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophecied. The aduoutry of both the whores is found out. Their destruction.

A The word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying:
thou sonne of mā, ther wer two women, that had one mother: these (when they wer yōg) began to play the har-Eze. xx, a lots in Egipte. There wer their brestes brused, and the paps of theyr maydēhead did ÿ Egiptiās destroy.
The eldest of them was called Oholah, & her yongest sister Oholibah. These two wer my wiues, and bare sonnes & daughters. Theyr names wer Samaria, and ÿ was Oholah: and Jerusalē that was O-holibah. As for Oholah she began to goe a whoring when I had taken her to me.
She was set on fier vppon her louers the iiii. Ki. xvii. d Assirians as her neighbors which had to doe with her, euen the princes and lordes that wer deckt in costly aray, faire yong mē lusty ryders of horses. Thus through her B whordome she cleaued vnto all the yong men of Assiria. yea, she was madde vpon them, & defiled her self with al theyr idols.
Neyther ceassed she from the fornica-tyon that she vsed with the Egyptians: for in her youth they laye with her, they broosed the brestes of her maydenheade, and poured theyr whoredome vppon her.
Wherefore I delyuered her into the han-des of her louers: euen the Assirians, iiii. king. whom she so loued. These discouered her xvii. a. shame, toke her sonnes and daughters, and slue her with ÿ swearde: an euill name gat she of all ÿ people: and they punished her. Her syster Oholibah sawe thys, and Jer. iii. b destroyed her self in inordinate loue more than she, & exceded her sister in whordom:

she loued the Assirians (whiche also laye iiii. K. xvi. with her) namely the Princes and great b lordes, that wer clothed with all maner of Ez. xvi. c gorgeous apparell, al lusty horsemen and fayre yong persones. Then I sawe that they both were defiled alyke. But she increased styll in whoredome, for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wal, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with freshe C colours, with fayre girdels about thē, and goodly bonettes vpon theyr heades, looking all lyke Princes (after the maner of the Babilonians, and Chaldees in her owne land where they wer borne) immediately assone as she saw them, she brent in loue vpon them, and sente messengers for thē into the land of ÿ Chaldees. Now when the Babilonians came to her, they laye with her, and defyled her with theyr whordome, and so was she polluted with thē. And when her lust was abated from Ez. xvi. thē, her whordome & shame was discouered and sene: then my harte forsoke her, like as my hart was gone from her sister also. Neuertheles, she vsed her whoredom euer the lōger the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she hadde playd the harlot in the land of Egipte: she Ez. xvi. brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the fleshe of Asses, and theyr sede like ÿ sede of horses. Thus thou hast renued ÿ filthinesse of thy youth, when thy louers brosed thy paps, and marred thy brestes D in Egipt. Therefore (O Oholibah) thus sayth the Lord god: I wil raise vp thy lo-uers (wt whō thou hast satisfied thy luste) agaynst thee, and gather them together round about thee: namely ÿ Babilonians and al the Chaldees, rulers, mighty men, and tirauntes, with al ÿ Assirians: al yong & fayre louers, princes & lordes, knyghtes & gentle men, which be all good horsemē.
These shall com vpon thee wt horses, charets, & a great multitude of people: which shalbe harnessed about thee on euery side with brestplates, shieldes, and helmettes.
I will punishe thee before them; yea, they themselues shall punishe thee accordyng to their owne iudgemēt. I wil put my gelousy vpon thee, so ÿ they shal deale cruelly with thee. They shal cut of thy nose and thine eares, & the remnaunt shall fall tho-rowe the swearde. They shall cary awaye thy sonnes and daughters, and the rest E due shalbe brent in ÿ fier. They shal strip the out of thy clothes, & cary thy costly Ie-wels awaye wt thē. Thus wil I make an end of thy filthines and whordom, which

thou hast brought out of ỹ land of Egipt: so that thou shalt tourne thyne eyes nomore after thẽ, and cast thy mind nomore vpon Egipt. For thus saith the Lord: Beholde, I wyll delyuer thee into the handes of thẽ whom thou hatest: yea, euen into ỹ handes of thẽ whõ thou hast fulfilled thi lust which shal deale cruelly with thee. Al thy labor shal they take with thẽ, & leaue thee naked & bare: & thus ỹ shame of thy filthy whoredome shall com to lyght. All these thynges shall happen vnto thee bycause of thy whoredõ which thou haste vsed amõg ỹ gẽtiles, with whose idols thou hast defiled thy self. Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister, therefore wil I geue thee her cup in thy hand. Thus sayth the lord god: thou shalt drink of thy sisters cup how depe and farre soeuer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorn, and had as greatly in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dronkennesse and sorow, for the cup of thy syster Samaria, is a cup of destruction and wastyng: ỹ same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it out to the dregges: yea, thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it, & so teare thine owne brestes. For euen I haue spoken it, sayth the lord F god. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God. Forsomuch as thou haste forgotten me & cast me aside behind thee, so beare nowe thine own filthynesse & whoredome. The lord said moreouer vnto me: thou sõne of man, wilt thou not repreue Oholah & Oholibah? Shew them their abhominations, namely, that they haue broken theyr wedlock and stayned theyr handes with bloud: yea, euẽ with theyr idols haue they committed aduoutry and offred them by iii, b, xvi, b, Eze, xvi, c the fire their owne children, to be deuoured whom they had borne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my sanctuarye in that same day, and haue vnhallowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne theyr children for theyr ydols, they came the same day in to my sanctuary to defile it. Lo, thys haue they done in my house: beside al this thou hast sent thy messengers for mẽ out of far countries: & whẽ they came thou hast bathed & painted thine eyes with colours, trimmed and set forth thy self of ỹ best fashion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed and a table spred before thee wherupon thou hast set mine incence and mine oyle. Thẽ Eze, xxv, b. was there great chere with her to obtain G peace, & though with those men many mẽ came, yet were there also brought men of Saba from ỹ wildernes, which gaue thẽ braceletes vpon their handes, and set glorious crownes vpon their heades: & I sayde vnto her: that seing she was strikẽ in age in her whoredoms, now shall her fornications com to an ende with her. And they went into her as vnto a common harlot. Euen so went they (I say) to Oholah and Oholibah those filthy women. O all ye ỹ loue vertue & righteousnesse, iudge them, punish thẽ, as aduouterers & murtherers, Leu, xx, b ought to be iudged & punished. For they Eze, xvi, b are breakers of wedlock, and the bloud is in their handes. Wherfore thus saieth the lord god: I will bring a multitude of people vpon them, and make them to be scattered and spoyled: these shall stone them & gore them with their sweards. They shal sley their sonnes and daughters & burne vp their houses with fier. Thus wil I destroy al such filthines out of the land: that al women may learn, not to do after your vnclennes. And so they shall lay your fylthinesse vpon your owne selues, & ye shall be punished for the sinnes ỹ ye haue committed with your idols: and ye shal know that I am the lord god.

The .xxiiii. Chapter.

He proueth the fyring of Ierusalem, by a parable of a sething pot. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe being dead, which he after expoundeth.

IN the ninth yere, in the tẽth moneth, the .x. day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lord, vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of manne, write vp the name of this daye: yea, euen the houre of this present daie, when the king of Babilon set himself against Ierusalem. Shew A that obstinate housholde a Parable, and Ez, xvii, a speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lord Ez, xi, b God: get thee a pot, sette it on, and poure water into it: putte all the peces together in it, all the good peces: the loyne and the shoulder, and fill it with the beste bones. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones withall: let it boyle well, and let B the bones seethe well therein. With that Nau, iii, b sayd the lord God on this maner. Wo be Abac, ii, b vnto the bloudy city of the pot, wherupon the rustines hangeth, and is not yet scoured away. Take out the peces that are in it one after another: there nede not lottes be cast therefore, for the bloud is yet in it. Vppon a plaine drie stone, hath she poured red it, and not vppon the grounde, that it might be couered with dust. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a plaine dry stony rocke, bicause it should not be hyd, and that I myght bryng my wrathfull indignation and vengeaunce vpon her. Wherfore thus sayeth the lorde C God: O woe be vnto the bloudthirstye ci-tie, for whom euen I my selfe wyll make a great fier, and set much wood, and kindle the fyer, and seeth the flesh, and spyce the pot, so that the very bones shalbe brẽt Moreouer, I will set the pot empty vpon the coles, so that his metall shall be brent and molten also for heate, and the filthy-nes of it shalbe moltẽ in it, and the drosse of it shalbe consumed. Thou tokest great payne thus to defyle thy selfe. And it wyll D not be purged from the exceding drosse in it: but through fier shall the drosse of it be purifyed. In thy filthinesse euen in thy mischeuous dedes thou doest continue, & bycause thy filthynes is abhominable, for I haue clensed thee, but thou art not clẽ-sed: thou shalt not be purged frõ thine vn-clennesse, tyl I haue poured my wrathful indignation vpon thee. Euen I the lorde haue so deuised. Yea, it is come therto already that I will dooe it: I wyll not gooe backe, I wyll not spare, I wil not be entreated: but according to thy wayes and E imaginations thou shalt be punished, saieth the lord god. And the word of the lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man beholde, I wyll take away the pleasure of thine eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou nether mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes therefore: thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone, but vse a deadly lamentation. Holde on thy bonet and put on thy shooes vppon thy fete, couer not thy face, F and eat no mourners bread. So I spake vnto yͤ people betymes in the mornyng, & at euen my wyfe died: therupon the nexte morow, I did as I was commaunded, & the people sayd vnto me: wilt thou not tel vs what this signifieth towardes vs? for this thou doest for our sake. I aunswered them, the word of the lord came vnto me, saying: tell the house of Israell, thus saieth the lord god: beholde, I wyll suspend my sanctuary, euen the glory of youre power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes & daughters whom ye haue left shall fall through the sweard. Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye doe also: ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners bread: youre bonets shall ye haue vpõ your heads, and shooes vppon your fete. Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye G shalbe sorowful and one repẽt with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shewe token.

For looke as he hath done, so (when this commeth) ye shall do also: yͭ ye may learne to know that I am the lord god. But behold. O thou sonne of man: in yͤ day when I take from them their power, their ioy, & honor, the lust of their eyes, the burthẽ of their liues, namely their sonnes & daugh ters, shal not this be knowen? Then shall there one escape, & come vnto thee, for to shew thee. In that day shal thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, that thou mayst speake, and be no more dum. Yea, & thou shalt be their shew token yͭ they may know how that I am the lord.

The.xxv.Chapter.

The word of the lord vpon the sonnes of Ammõ which reioyced at the fal of Jerusalẽ. Against Moab & Seir, against Idumea, against the Philistines.

THe word of the lord came vn- A
to me, saying: thou sonne of man, set thy face against the Ammonites, prophecy vpon them, & say vnto the Ammo-nites: heare the woord of the Lorde God.
Thus saith yͤ lord god: forsomuch as thou speakest ouer my sanctuary: A ha, I trow it be now supended: and ouer the land of Israel: I trow it be now desolate: yea, and ouer yͤ house of Juda, I trow they be now led away prisoners: behold, I wil deliuer thee to the people of the East, yͭ they may haue thee in possession: these shal set theyr castels & houses in thee. They shal eat thy fruit, & drinke vp thy milk. As for Rabath I wil make of it a stal for Camels, and of Ammon a shepefold, and ye shall know yͭ I am the lord. For thus saieth yͤ lord god: B insomuch as thou hast clapped with thine hands, & stamped with thy fete: yea, reioy-ced in thine hart ouer the land of Israell w despite: behold, I wil stretch out mine hand ouer thee also, and deliuer the to be spoiled of yͤ heathen, & roote thee out from among the people, & cause thee to bee destroyed out of all landes: yea, I wyl make thee to be layd waste, yͭ thou mayst know that I am the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord god: forsomuche as Moab and Seir doe saye: as for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be. Therfore behold, I wyll open the syde of Moab

th, and take away theyr strength, their cities, and chiefe coastes of their lande, whiche are the pleasures of the countrye.
As namely, Bethiesimoth, Baalmon, and Cariathaim, these wyll I open vnto them of the East, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites, and will geue them in possession, so that the Ammonites shal no more be hadde in remembraunce among the heathen. Euen thus wyll I punyshe C Moab also, that they may knowe howe that I am the lorde. Moreouer thus sayeth the lord god. Bicause that Edom hath auenged and eased hymselfe vppon the house of Iuda, and hath done greate offence and auenged hymself vppon them, therefore thus saith the lorde: I wil reach out my hande vpon Edom, and take away man and beast out of it. From The-man vnto Dedan wyll I make it desolate they shall be slayne with the swearde: tho-row my people of Israell wyll I auenge me agayn vppon Edom: they shal handle him according to my wrath and indignation, so that they shall knowe my venge-aunce sayth the Lorde God. Thus sayth D the Lord god: forsomuch as the Philysty-nes haue done this: namely taken vengeance with despitefull stomackes, and of an olde euil wil set themselues to destroy, therfore thus sayeth the lord god: behold, I wil stretch out my hande ouer the Philistines, and destroy the destroyer, & cause al the remnaunt of the sea coast to perish.
A great vengeaunce wyll I take vppon them, and punish them cruelly: that they may know how that I am the lord which haue auenged me of them.

The .xxvi. Chapter.

He prophecieth that Tirus shalbe ouerthrowen bicause it reioyced at the destruction of Ierusalem The wondring and astonishmēt of the marchaūts for the desolation of Tirus.

A IT happened that in the .xi. yeare, the first daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of manne, bicause that Tire hathe spoken vpon Ierusalem: Aha, nowe I trow the portes of the people be broken, and she tourned vnto me: for now that she is destroyed, I shall be fylled. Yea, therefore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyll vppon thee, I wyll bryng a greate multytude of people agaynst thee, lyke as when the sea aryseth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre: and cast down her towres. I wil scrape the ground from her, and make her a bare stone: yea, as the drying place where the fyshers hang vp theyr nettes by the sea syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayth the lorde God. The Gentiles shall spoile her: her daughters vppon the field shal perish with ẏ swearde, that they may know howe that I am the lord.
For thus saith the lord god: Beholde, B I wyll bryng hither Nabuchodonozor, (which is the king of Babilō, and a king of kinges) from the North, vppon Tyre: with horses, charrettes, horsemen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the lande shall he sley with the swearde, but agaynst thee he shall make bulwarkes, and graue vp ditches about thee, and lift vp his shielde against thee. His slynges and Battelrammes shall he prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake down thy towers.
The duste of his horses shall couer thee, they shal be so many, thy walles shal C shake at the noyse of the horsemen, char-rettes and wheles, when he commeth to thy portes, as men doe into an open citie.
With the houes of his horse fete shall he treade downe al thy stretes. He shall sley thy people with the swearde, and breake downe the pillers of thy strength.
They shal waste away thy riches, and spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure, Thy stones, thy tymber and foundations shall they cast in the water. Thus will I bryng the melodye Ie. vii.b. of thy songes, and the voyce of thy myn-strelsye to an ende, so that they shall no-more be heard. I will make a bare stone of thee: yea, a drying place for nettes, and thou shalt neuer be builded agayne: for euen I the lorde haue spoken it, saieth the lord God. Thus hath the Lorde god spoken concerning Tyre. The yles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the crye of the slaine that shall be murthered in thee. All kynges of the sea shall come downe from their seates regall: they shal lay away their robes, and put of their costly clothing. Yea, with trembling shal thei be clothed, they shall sit vpon the ground, they shalbe afraid at thy sodain fall, and be abashed at thee.
They shall mourne for thee, & say vnto D thee:

thee: O thou noble citie, that haste bene so greatly occupied of olde, thou that haste Thre.i.a. Ap.xviii.c ben the strongest upon the sea, with thine inhabitors, of whome all menne stoode in feare: howe art thou nowe so utterlye destroyed? Now at the time of thy fall, ÿ in-habitors of the yles, yea, and the yles themselues, shall stande in feare at thy ende. For thus sayeth the lord God, when I make thee a desolate citye (as other cities be, that no manne dwell in) and whē I bryng the depe uppon thee, that greate waters maye couer thee, then wyll I cast thee downe unto them that discende into the pit, unto a people that hath bene long dead, and set thee in a lād that is beneth, like the olde wildernesse, with thē whiche go downe to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in thee. And I will make thee to be no more in honoure in the land of the liuing. I will make an ende of thee and thou shalt be gone. Though thou he sought for, yet shalt thou not be found for euermore: saith the lord god.

The.xxvii.Chapter.

The prophete is moued to bewaile the desolaciō of Tirus. He setteth out the prayse of Tirus, for the haunting of marchauntes therto.

A The worde of the Lord came unto me saying:
O thou sonne of man Eze.xxi.a c.xxviii.c make a lamentable cō plaint upon Tire, and saye uppon Tire: thou which art a port of the sea, that occupieth so much people, and many yles: thus speaketh the Lorde God. O Tire, thou haste sayde: what, I am a noble citie: thy borders are in the middest of the sea, and thy builders haue made thee maruellous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cipers trees of the mounte Sanir. From Libanus haue they taken Ceder trees, to make the mastes, and the Okes of Basan to make the rowers. Thy B bordes haue they made of yuory, and of costly wood out of the yle of Cethim. Thy saile was of diuers colours: small nedle worke out of the lande of Egipt, to hang uppon thy maste, and thy hangynges of yelowe silke, purple, oute of the yles of Elisah. They of Sydon and Arnad were thy Marryners, and the wysest in Tyre were thy shippemaysters. The eldest and wysest at Geball were they that amended and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the Sea with theyr shipmen occupied theyr marchaundies in thee. The Perses Lideans and Phutens, were in thyne hoste, and helped thee to fyght, these han- C ged up their shieldes and helmettes with thee, these set foorth thy beautye. They of Arnad were with thine host round about thy walles: and the Pigmenians wer thy watchemen upon thy towers: these hanged up their quiuers, rounde about thy walles, and made thee maruellous goodly. Tharsis occupied with thee in all maner of wares, in siluer, yron, tin and lead, and made thy market great. Iauan, Tu-ball, and Mesech were thy marchauntes, whiche brought the men and ornaments of metall for thy occupying. They of the house of Thogarma, brought unto the at the tyme of thy Marte, horse, horsemen, and Mules. They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other yles that occupyed with the, brought the wethers, Elephant bones and Pecockes, for a present.
The Sitians occupyed wyth thee, by-cause of thy diuerse workes, and increased thy marchaundise, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worke, with white linnen cloth, with silke, and with christall.
Iuda and the lande of Israell occupyed D with thee and brought unto thy markets wheat of Minnith, and Paneg, balme, hony, oyle and triacle. Damascus also used marchaundise with thee, in the beste wyne of Helbon, and with wolle, bicause thy occupying was so great, & thy wares so many.
Dan, Iauan, and Meusall, haue brought unto thy markettes, yron ready made, with Cassia and Calamus, accor-dyng to thyne occupying. Dedan occupy-ed with thee in fayre tapestry worke, and Cushins. Arabia, and all the Prynces of Cedar haue occupyed with thee, in shepe, C wethers, and goates. The marchauntes of Seba and Rema, haue occupyed also with thee, in all costly spices, in all precyous Stones, and golde, whiche they brought unto thy markettes. Haram, Chene, and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assiria, and Chelmad were all doers with thee, and occupyed wyth thee in costly rayment of yelowe sylke, and nedle worke (verye precious, and therefore packt and bounde together with ropes.) Yea, and in Cedar wood, at the tyme of thy thy markettes. The shippes of Tharsis were the chefe of thy occupying. Thus F thou art full, and in great worship, euẽ in the middest of the Sea. Thy robbers shal bring the into great waters, ÿ east wind shal ouerbeare the into the middest of the sea, so that thy wares, thy marchaundise, thy riches, thy mariners, thy shipmasters thy builders of thy brokẽ places, thy occu pyers (that brought the thinges necessa= ry) the mẽ of warr ÿ are in the, yea and all thy commens shal perish in ÿ middest of ÿ Sea, in ÿ day of thy fal: the suburbes shal shake at ÿ loude cry of thy shipmẽ. All whi rymen: and all mariners vpon the Sea, shal leape out of their boates, and set thẽ= selues vpon the land. They shall lift vp their voice bicause of the, and make a la= mẽtable cry. They shal cast dust vpõ their heades, and ly down in the asshes. They shal shaue themselues, and put sackcloth vpon thẽ for thy sake. They shall mourne for the with hearteful sorow, and heauy lamẽtation: yea, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what city hath so ben destroyed G in the Sea, as Tire is? Whẽ thy wares & marchaundise came from ÿ Seas: thou gauest all people ynough. The kynges of the earth hast thou made rich, thorow the multitude of thy wares and occupying.

But thou art now cast down into ÿ depe of the Sea, al thy resort of people is peri= shed with thẽ. All they that dwell in the yles are abasshed at the, & al their kinges are afrayd: yea, their faces haue chaũged colour. The marchauntes of the nations wonder at thee: in that thou art so cleane brought to nought, and cõmest no more vp.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of God against the king of Tyrus, for hys pryde. Daniel the Prophet is moued to bewaile the king of Tyrus. The woorde of God against Sidon. The Lord promyseth that he wyll gather together the children of Israell.

A The word of ÿ Lord came Ez. xxvi. c, t, xvii. a. Esa. xxiii. c. vnto me saying: thou son of man, tell the Prince of Tire. Thus sayth ÿ Lord God: bicause thou hast a proude heart, & hast sayd I am a God, I haue my seate in ÿ middest of ÿ sea like a god, wher as thou art but a man and not God, and yet standest in thyne own conceit, ÿ thou Dan. ii. b art God: behold, thou thinkest thy self wi= ser than Daniel, that there is no secretes hid from the. With thy wisdom and thy vnderstanding thou hast gottẽ the great welthynesse, and gathered treasure of sil= uer and gold. With thy great wisdom and occupying hast thou increased thy power & bicause of thy great richesse thine heart is proude. Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: for somuch as thou hast lift vp thine B heart as though thou wer God: behold, I will bring enemies vpon the, euen the ti= rauntes of the heathen: these shal drawe out their sweardes vpon thy beautie and wisdom, and shall defile thy glory. They shal cast the down to the pit, so that thou shalt dye in the middest of ÿ Sea, as they that be slain. Let se, if thou wilt say then, (before them ÿ slay thee) I am god, wher= as thou art but a man and not God, in ÿ hands of them ÿ slay the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcised in the handes of the enemies, for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God.
Moreouer the word of the Lord came C vnto me, saying: thou sonn of man, make a lamẽtable complaint ouer the kyng of Tyre, and tell hym: thus sayth the Lord God: thou art a seale of a likenesse, full of wisdom and excellent beautie. Thou hast ben in the pleasaunt garden of God: thou art deckt with all maner of precious stones with Ruby, Topas, Cristall, Jacint, O= nix, Jaspis, Saphir, Smaradge, Carbũ= cle, and gold. The beauty and ÿ holes that be in the, wer set forth in ÿ day of thy crea= tion. Thou art a faire Cherub, exalted by the annointing, stretched wyde out for to couer. I haue set the in thys dignity vpon the holy mount of God, ther hast thou ben and walked among ÿ faire glistering sto= nes. From ÿ tyme of thy creatiõ thou hast ben right excellẽt, till wickednesse was founde in the. Bicause of thy great mar= D chaũdise, thine heart is ful of wickednesse and thou hast offẽded. Therefore wyll I cast the from ÿ mount of God (O thou co= uering Cherub) and destroy thee among ÿ glistring stones. Thy heart was proude in thy faire beautye, & through thy beau= ty thou hast destroyed thy wisdom: I will Esa. ii. b. cast the down to ÿ ground, and that in the sight of kynges. Thou hast defyled thy Sanctuary with ÿ great wickednesse of thy vnrighteous occupying. I will bring a fier from ÿ middest of thee, to consume thee: and will make thee to asshes, in the sight of all them that loke vpon thee. All E they that haue ben acquainted with thee among the heathen shalbe abashed at the seing þ art so cleane brought to nought, & commest no more vp. And the word of the F Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of Iere.lii.a. Zac.ix.a. man set thy face against Sidon: prophecy vpon it, and speake. Thus sayth þ Lord God. Beholde, O Sidon, I will vpon thee, and get me honor in thee: that it may be knowen, how that I am the Lord: when I punish her, and get me honor in her. For I will sende pestilence and bloudsheding into her stretes so that those whiche be slaine with the sweard, shall lye round about in the myddest of her: and they shal know that I am the Lord. She shall no more be a prycking thorne, and an hurting bryer vnto the house of Israell, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her, and hate her: and they shall know that I am þ G Lord.

Thus sayth the Lord God: when I gather þ houshold of Israell together again from the nations, among whom they be scattered, then shall I be sanctified in thẽ in the sight of the Gentiles: and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my seruaũt Iacob. They shal dwell safely therin, builde houses, and plant vyneyardes: yea, safely shall they dwell therin, when I haue punished all those that despyse them rounde about, and then shall they knowe that I am the Lord their God. (Deute. xxviii.c. Esa.lxv.d.)

The.xxix. Chapter.

He prophecieth against Pharao. He prophecieth the desolation of Egipt, and the sparkeling abrode of the Egiptians. The Lord promyseth that he wil restore Egipt againe after.xl. yeares. Egipt is the rewarde of king Nabuchodonozor for the laboure which he toke against Tirus.

A IN the tenth yeare vppon the twelueth day of the tenth moneth, the word of þ lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonn of man (set now thy face against Pharao the kyng of Egipt: Prophecy against him and against the whole land of Egipt. Speake and tel hym: thus sayth the Lord God: behold, O Pharao þ kyng of Egipt, I wyll vppon thee, thou great Dragon that lyest in the waters, þ that sayest: the water is myne, I haue made it my self, I wil put an hooke in thy chawes, and hang all the fish in thy waters vpon the scales: after þ, I will drawe thee out of thy waters, yea, and al the fish of thy waters that hang vpon thy scales. (Esa.xix. and.xx.a. Ie.xlvi.a. Eze.xxx. xxxi. and xxxii.a.)

I will cast thee out vppon the dry lande, with the fish of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the fielde. Thou shalt not B be gathered nor taken vp, but shalt be meate for the beastes of the field, and for the foules of the ayre, that all they which dwell in Egipt, may know that I am the Lorde: bicause thou haste bene a staffe of reede to the house of Israell. When they toke holde of thee with their hande, thou brakest and prickedst them on euery syde and if they leaned vpon thee, thou brakest and hurtedst the reynes of their backes. (iiii.Reg. xviii.c. Esa.xxxvi.a.) Therfore thus sayth the lord god: beholde, I wil bryng a sweard vpon thee, and rote out of thee both man and beast: yea, the lande of Egipt shalbe desolate and wast, and they shal know, that I am the Lord. Bicause he sayd: the water is myne, I my selfe haue made it. Beholde therfore I wil vpon thee, and vppon thy waters, I wyll make the lande of Egipt wast and desolate, and in abashment, from the towre of Syenes, vnto the borders of the Morians C lande: so that in forty yeares there shal no fote of man walke there, neyther foote of cattell go there, neyther shall it be inhabited. I wil make the lande of Egipt to bee desolate among other wast countreyes, & her cities to lye voyde fourty yeres amõg other voyde cities. And I wil scatter the Egiptians among the heathen and nations, and strow them in the lands about. Againe, thus sayth the Lord God: when the fourty yeres are expired: I wil gather (Ie.xlvi.) the Egiptians together againe, out of the nations among whom they were scattered, and wyll bryng the prysoners of Egipt againe into the lande of Pathures, their own natiue country, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea, they shalbe þ smallest among other kingdomes, least they exalt themselues aboue the heathen, for I wyll so minishe them that they shall no more rule the heathen. They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israell, neyther prouoke them any more to wickednesse, to cause them to turne backe, and to folowe them, and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

In the seuen and twenty yeare, þ firste D daye of the first moneth, came the word of the LORD vnto me, saying: thou sonn of mã. Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon, hath made hys hoste, with great trauaill and labour to come before Tyre, that euery head may be balde, and euery shoulder shoulder bare, yet hath Tyre geuen neyther hym nor hys host any rewarde, for ẏ great trauaill that he hath taken there.

Therfore thus sayth the lord god: behold, I wyll geue the lande of Egipt vnto Na-buchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, that he may take away all her substaunce, rob her robbryes, & spoile her spoiles, to pay hys host their wages with al. I wil geue hym the lande of Egipt, for hys laboure ẏ he toke for me before Tire. At ẏ same time wyll I cause the horne of the house of Israell to grow forth and open thy mouth againe among them: that they may know how that I am the Lord.

The. xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egipt and of hys cities, is bewayled.

1 The word of ẏ Lord came moreouer vnto me, saying: thou sonn of mā, prophecy and speake: thus
sayth the LORD God.
Mourne, wo worth thys day, for the day is here, ẏ day of the Lord is come, the dark day of ẏ heathen: the houre is at hand, the sweard commeth vpon Egipt. When ẏ wounded men fall down in Egipt, when her people are taken away, and when her foundations are destroyed, ẏ Morians lande shalbe afrayd: yea, the Morians lande, Libia and Lidia, al their common people and Chub, and all ẏ be confederate vnto them, shall fal wt them through ẏ sweard.
B Thus sayth the Lord: the maynteyners of the land of Egipt shall fal, the pryde of her power shal come down, euen vnto the towre of Syens shal they be slain down with ẏ sweard, sayth ẏ Lord God: among other desolate cōtries they shalbe made desolate, and among other waste cities they shalbe wasted. And they shall know that I am ẏ Lord, whē I kyndle a fire in Egipt, & whē all her helpers are destroyed. At ẏ tyme shall her messēgers go forth C from me in shippes, to make the carelesse Morians afrayd, and sorow shall come vpon them, according to ẏ day of Egipt, for doutlesse it shall come: thus sayth ẏ Lord God: I wyl make an ende of the people of Egipt through ẏ hand of Nabuchodonosor ẏ kyng of Babylon. He and his people with hym, yea, and ẏ cruell tirauntes of ẏ heathen, shalbe broughte to destroye the land. They shal draw out their sweardes vpon Egipt, and fyll the land full of slayn men. I wyl dry vp their floudes of water and sell ẏ lande into ẏ handes of wicked people. The lande and all ẏ is therin, wil I destroy through ẏ enemies. Euen I the Lord haue sayd it. And thus sayth ẏ Lord D God: I wyll destroy the ydols, and bryng Zac. xiii. a. the ymages of Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a Prynce of Egipt, and a fearefulnesse wyll I sende into the Egiptians lande. As for Pathures, I wyll make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zo-an the city, No, I wyll punish and powre my wrathfull indignation vppon Syn, which is the strēgth of Egipt. Al the substaunce of Alexandria wyl I destroy, and kyndle a fyer in Egipt. Sin shal be in great heauinesse. Alexādria shalbe roted out, and Noph shall haue dayly sorowe.
The best men of Heliopolis and Bubasto shalbe slaine with the sweard, and caryed away captiue. At Taphnis the day shall be dark, when I breake there the scepter of the lande of Egipt, and when the pōpe E of her power shal haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her daughters shalbe led away into captiuity. Thus wyll I punish Egipt, that they may know howthat I am the Lord. It happened in ẏ eleuēth yere vpon ẏ seuenth day of ẏ first moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, saying: behold, thou sōn of man, I wil break the arme of Pharao kyng of Egipt: and and lo, it shal not be bounde vp to be healed: neyther shall any playster be laid vpō it, for to ease it, or to make it so strong, as to holde a sweard. Therfore thus sayth the Lord God, behold, I wyll vpon Pharao the king of Egipt, and bruse his strōg arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyl smyte the sweard out of hys handes.
As for the Egiptians, I wyll scatter F them among the heathen, and strow thē in the landes about. Again, I wyl strēgth the arme of the kyng of Babilō, and geue hym a sweard in hys hande, but I wyll breake Pharaos arme, so ẏ he shall holde it before hym pyteously, lyke a wounded man: yea, I will stablish the king of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharao shall fall down, that it may be knowen ẏ I am the Lord, which geue the kyng of Babilon my sweard in hys hande, that he may draw it out vpon the lande of Egipt: and that when I scatter the Egiptians a- G mong the Gentiles, and strow them in the landes about, they may know, that I am am the Lord.

The.xxxi.Chapter.

A comparison of the prosperitie of Pharao with the prosperitie of the Assirians. He prophecyeth a lyke destruction vnto them both.

A Moreouer it happened in the eleuenth yere, ye first day of the third moneth, that the word of ye Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonn of man, speake vnto Pharao ye kyng of Egipt, and to all his people. Whom art thou lyke in thy great-nesse? Beholde, Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon ye mount of Libanus, with fayre braunches so thick, yt he gaue shadowes, & shotte out very hye. Hys top reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him great and ye depe set hym vp on hye. Rounde about ye rotes of hym, rann their floudes of water: he sent out hys litle riuers vnto al B the trees of ye field. Therfore was he hyer thā all the trees of ye field, and thorow the multitude of waters that he sent frō hym, he obteyned many long braunches. Al foules of the ayre made their nestes in his braūches: vnder hys boughes gēdred all the beastes of the field, and vnder hys sha dow dwelt al people. Fayre and beautiful was he in hys greatnesse and in ye length of hys braūches, for hys rote stode beside great waters, no Cedre tree might hyde C hym. In ye pleasaunt gardē of God, ther was no Fyrre tree lyke hys braunches, ye playn trees were not lyke the boughes of hym, All ye trees in ye gardē of God, might not be compared vnto hym in hys beauty so fayre and goodly had I made him with the multitude of hys braunches. In so much that all ye trees in ye pleasaunt gar-dē of god, had enuy at him. Therfore thus sayth ye Lord God: forsomuch as he hath lift vp hymself so hye, & stretched hys topp into the cloudes, and seing hys heart is proude in hys hyghnesse, I will deliuer D him into ye hands of the mightiest among the heathē, which shall rote hym out. According to hys wyckednesse wyll I cast, hym away, the enemy shall destroy hym, and the mightie men of the heathen shall so scatter hym, that hys braūches shal lye vpon all mountaynes, and in all valleys: hys boughes shalbe broken down to the E grounde, throughout the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from hys shadow, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall sit vpon hym, and all the wylde beastes of the field shal go about among hys braunches, so that from hence forth, no tree in the water shall attayne to hys highnesse, nor reach his top vnto the cloudes, neyther shall any tree of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shal they all be deliuered vnder the earth, and goe down to the graue lyke other men.
Moreouer thus sayth the Lord God.
In the day when he goeth down to the graue, I wyll cause a lamentation to be made: I wyll couer the depe vpon hym, F I wyl staunch hys floudes, and the great waters shalbe restrained. I shal cause Li-banus to be sorowfull for hys sake, and all the trees of the field shalbe smitten. I wyll make the heathen shake at ye sounde of hys fall, when I cast hym down to hel, with them that descende into the pit. All the trees of Eden, with all the chosen and best trees of Libanus: yea, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shall mourne with hym also in the lower habitations: for they shall goe down to hell with hym, vnto them that be slayne with the sweard, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of hys arme among the G heathen.
To whom shalt thou be likened, that art so gloryous and great among ye trees of Eden? yet art thou cast down vnder the earth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lie among vncircumcised, with them that be slayn with the sweard. Euē thus is it with Pharao and all hys people, sayth the Lord God.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

The Prophete is cōmaunded to bewayle Pharao the kyng of Egipt. He prophecyeth that destruction shall come vnto Egipt through the kyng of Babilon.

In the eleuenth yeare, the A first day of ye.xii.moneth, ye worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: ye sonne of man, take vp a lamentation vpon Pharao the kyng of Egipte, and say vnto hym, thou art reputed as a Lyon of the heathen, and as a whalefyshe in the Sea. Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete, and stāpest in their floudes. Thus sayth

the Lord God: I will sprede my net ouer thee namely, a great multitude of people, these shall dryue the into my yearne. For I wyl cast thee vpon the lande and let thee lye vpon the fielde, that al the foules of the ayre may sit vpon thee. I wil geue all the beastes of the fielde ynough of thee. Thy B flesh wil I cast vppon the hilles, and fill the valleies with thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloud, euen to the mountaines, and the riuers shalbe ful of thy bloud. When thou art put out, I will couer the heathen Esa.xiii.b and make hys starres dimme, I wil spred a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the moone shal not geue her light. All the lightes of heauen wil I put out ouer thee, & bryng darkenesse vpon thy lande, sayth the lord God. I wil trouble the heartes of many people, when I bryng thy destruction among the heathen and countries, whom thou knowest not. Yea, I wil make many people wt their kynges, so afrayd thorow thee, that their heere shal stande vp, when C I shake my sweard at their faces. Sodainly shall they be astonyed, euery man in hymselfe, at the day of thy fall. For thus sayth the Lord God: the kyng of Babilons sweard shall come vppon thee: with the sweardes of the worthyes wyll I smyte down thy people. All they that be mighty among the gentiles shal waste the proud pompe of Egipt, and bryng down all her people. All the cattell also of Egipt wyll I destroy, y they shall come no more vpo the waters, so y neyther mannes fote, nor beastes clawe, shall stirre them any more. Then wil I make their waters depe, and cause their floudes to run lyke oyle, sayth the Lord God. Whe I make y land of Egipt desolate, and when y country wt all that is therin shalbe layd waste, and whe I smite all them which dwell in it, y they may know y I am the Lord. Thys is the mourning that y daughters of y heathen D shal make. Yea, a sorow and lamentation shal they take vp vpon Egipt, and all her people, sayth y lord God. In y twelfth yere the fiftene day of y moneth, came y worde of y Lord vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentation vpon y people Esa.xiiii.c of Egipt, and cast them down: yea, them I say, and the mightie people of y heathen Eze.xxxi.c also, euen with them y dwell beneth: and with them that go down into y graue. Where is thy fayre (sorer thou be) and lye thee with y vncircumcised. Among them that be slain with y sweard, shal they lye.

To y sweard is she already delyuered: therfore pluck down to y grounde, her and all her multitude. The mightie worthies shal speake to hym out of y hell, and to his helpers y be gone down and lye vncircumcised, and wt the y be slain with y sweard. Assur is there also wt hys company, and E their graues rounde about, which were slain and fell all with the sweard, whose graues lye beside hym in y low pyt. Hys commons are buryed rounde about hys graue, altogether wounded & slayn wyth the sweard, which me afore tyme brought feare into y land of y liuing. There is Elam Ier.xlix.f also wt al hys people, and their graues Dan.viii.a. round about: which al being wounded & slayn with y sweard, are gone down vncircumcised vnder y earth, which neuerthelesse somtyme brought feare into y lad of y liuing. For y which they beare their shame, with the other y be gone down to the graue. Their buriall is geue them, & F all their people, among the that be slaine. Their graues are rounde about all them which be vncircumcised, and wt them y be slayne thorow y sweard: for seying that in tymes past, they made y lande of y liuing afrayd, they must now beare their owne shame, with them that go down to the pit and lye among them, that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tuball, and their people, and their graues rounde about. These al are among y vncircumcised, and the y be slayn with y sweard, bicause afore tyme they made y land of y liuing afrayd. Should not they the lye also amog the worthies and vncircumcised giauntes which wt their weapons are gone downe to hell, whose sweardes are layd vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vppon their bones: bicause y as worthies they haue brought feare into y land of y liuing. yea, among y vncircumcised shalt thou be destroyed, and slepe wt them that perished through y sweard. There is y land of Edom wt her kynges and Prynces also, G Ier.xlix.b which wt their stregth are layd by them y Ez.xxv.b were slayne wt the sweard, yea, amog the c.xxxv.a. vncircumcised, and them which are gone down into y pit. Moreouer, there be all the Prynces of y north, wt all y Sydonians, which are gone down to be slayne: which their feare & stregth they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircumcised among those y be slayne wt the sweard, and beare their own shame, wt the y be gone down to y pit. Now whe Pharao seeth thes, he shalbe comforted ouer all hys people that is slaine with ẏ sweard, both Pharao and al hys host, sayth ẏ Lord God. For I haue geuē my feare into ẏ land of ẏ liuing. But Pharao and al hys people shall lye amōg the vncircumcised, and among them that be slain wt the sweard, sayth ẏ Lord God.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

He setteth out the office of a curate ẏ preacheth the gospell. He strengtheneth them that dispayre, & boldneth them with the promise of mercye. The worde of the Lorde againste the remnaunte of the people. Against the mockers of the wordes of the Prophete.

A Againe ẏ word of ẏ lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man. Speake to ẏ childrē of thy people, & tel thē: When I sende a sweard vpon a lād iii. King. ix. d. if ẏ people of ẏ lande take a man of their countrey and set hym to be their *watchman, ẏ same man (whē he seeth ẏ sweard come vpon ẏ land) shal blow ẏ trompet, & warne ẏ people. If a man now heare the noyse of ẏ trompet and wyll not be warned, and ẏ sweard come and take hym away, hys bloud shalbe vpō hys own head for he heard ẏ sounde of ẏ trōpet, & would not take hede, therfore hys bloud be vpon B hym. But if he wil receiue warning, he shal saue hys lyfe. Againe, if ẏ watchman see ẏ sweard come, and shew it not wt the trompet, so that ẏ people is not warned: if the sweard come then, and take any man from among thē, the same shalbe takē away in hys own synne, but hys bloud wil I require of ẏ watchmannes hād. *And Eze. iii. c. now (O ẏ sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto ẏ house of Israell, that wheras ẏ hearest any thyng out of my mouth, ẏ mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I say vnto the wicked: ẏ wicked, thou shalt surely dye, and ẏ geuest hym not warning, ẏ he may beware of his vngodly way: then shall ẏ wicked dye in hys own synne, but hys bloud will I require C of thy hand. Neuerthelesse, if ẏ warne the wicked of hys way, to turne from it, wher as he yet wil not be turned from it, then shal he dye bicause of hys synne, but thou hast deliuered thy soule. Therfore (O thou Ezechiel. xviii. c. sonn of man) speake vnto ẏ house of Israell. Yea, say thus: Our offences and synnes lye vpon us, and we be corrupt in them, how should we then be restored vnto lyfe?
Tell them: as truly as I lyue sayth ẏ lord God, I haue no pleasure in ẏ death of the wycked, but much rather that the wicked turnē from hys way, and liue. Turne you turne you, from your vngodly wayes, O ye of ẏ house of Israell. Oh, wherfore will ye dye? Thou sonn of man, tell ẏ children of thy people. The righteousnesse of the righteous shal not saue hym, whensoeuer Ezechi. xviii. a. he turneth away vnfaythfully. Againe, ẏ wickednesse of ẏ wicked shal not hurt him whensoeuer he converteth from hys vngodlinesse. And ẏ righteousnesse of ẏ righ teous shall not saue hys lyfe, whensoeuer he sinneth. If I say vnto ẏ righteous ẏ he shal surely liue, and so he trust to his own righteousnesse, and do synn, thē shall hys righteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in ẏ wickednesse ẏ he hath done, he shal dye. Againe if I say vnto ẏ wicked: ẏ D shalt surely dy & so he turne frō his sinnes, Esa. lv.
and do ẏ thing ẏ is lawfull and ryght: in- Je. xviii.
somuch ẏ the same wicked man geueth ẏ a. pledge againe, restoreth ẏ he had takē away by robbery, walketh in ẏ commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wrong: thē shal he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea, the synnes that he hath done, shall neuer be thought vpon. For insomuch as he doth now ẏ thing ẏ is lawful and right, he shal liue. And yet ẏ children of thy people say: tush ẏ way of ẏ Lord is not right, but they lye, wheras their own way is rather vnright. When ẏ righteous turneth frō hys righteousnesse and doth ẏ thing ẏ is wicked, he shal dye therfore. But if ẏ wycked turne frō hys wickednesse, doing ẏ thing Ezechi. xviii. that is lawful and right, he shal liue therfore. Yet ye say: the way of the Lord is not equall: O ye house of Israell, I wyl iudge Ro. ii. b. euery one of you after hys wayes. In the E twelft yeare, ẏ fift day of ẏ tenth moneth of our captiuity, it happened ẏ one which was fled out of Jerusalem, came vnto me and sayd: the city is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had ben vppon me, the euening afore thys mā (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntill ẏ morning ẏ he came to me: yea, he opened my mouth, so ẏ I was no more dumm. Then came ẏ worde of the Lord vnto me, and sayd. Thou sonne of man, these ẏ dwel in ẏ wasted land of Israel, say: Abraham was but one man, and he had ẏ lande in possession: now are we many, and ẏ land is geuē vs to possesse al so. And therfore tel them: thus sayth the Lord God. In ẏ bloud haue ye eatē, your eyes haue ye lift vp to ydols, and haue shed

F shed bloud, shall ye thē haue the lande in Deu.xviii. b. possession? Ye leane vpon your sweardes, ye worke abhominations, euery one de-Deu.iii.c fileth hys neighbours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the land? Say ŷ these wordes vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord God. As truly as I lyue, al ye ŷ dwell in thys wyl-dernesse, shalbe slain wt the sweard: whatsoeuer is vpon the field, wyl I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those ŷ be in strong holdes and dennes, shal dye of the pestilence. For I wyl make the land so de solate & wast, and ŷ pompe of her strēgth shal come to an end. The mountaines of Israel shal be so wast, ŷ no man shall tra-uayll thereby. Then shall they learne to G know, ŷ I am the lord, when I make the Ez.xxv.c land wast and desolate, bicause of al their abhominatiōs, that they haue wrought.
And thou sonne of man, the childrē of the people that talke of thee by ŷ walles, and in the dores of their houses, saying one to another. Come, let vs heare what worde is gone forth from ŷ lord. These come vnto thee, after the maner of a great people: yea, as who sayth they were my people: they sit down before thee, and heare thy Esay. wordes, but they do not thereafter*for in xxix.c. their mouthes they make a iest of them, & Mat.xv. their heart goeth after their own coue-
b. tous lucre: and as a balet ŷ hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunt to syng so shalt ŷ be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare but they will not do therafter. When this cōmeth to passe (for loe, it cōmeth in dede) then shall they know that there hath ben a Prophet among them.

The. xxxiiii. Chapter.

Against Bishops and Curates that despise the flocke of Christ, and seke their own. The Lorde sayth that he will visit his dispersed flocke, and gather them together. He reproueth the malice of certaine of the flocke. He promiseth ŷ true shepeheard Christ, and with hym peace.

A And ŷ word of ŷ Lord came vnto me, saying: ŷ sonne of man, prophecy against the shepeheardes of Israel, pro phecy and speake vnto thē.
Ez.xiii.a Thus sayth the Lord God.
Je.xxiii.b Woe be vnto ŷ shepeheardes of Israell, ŷ i xxiii.a. fede themselues. Should not the shepe-heardes fede ŷ flockes? ye haue eaten vp the fat, ye haue clothed you wt the wol: the best fed haue ye slain, but ŷ flocke haue ye Za.iiii,b not nourished. The weake haue ye not holdē vp, ŷ sicke haue ye not healed: ŷ bro-kē haue ye not bounde together, ŷ outca-stes haue ye not brought againe: the lost haue ye not sought but churlishly and cru elly haue ye ruled thē. Thus at they scattered here and there wtout a shepeheard, i.Pe.v.a yea al ŷ beastes of ŷ field deuoure them, & they go astray. My shepe goe wandring B vpon all mountaines, and vpon euery hie hill: yea they be scattered abroade in all fieldes, and there is no man ŷ careth for thē, or seketh after them. Therefore O ye shepeheardes, heare ŷ worde of the Lord.
Thus sayth ŷ Lord God. As truely as I lyue, forsomuch as my shepe are robbed & deuoured, of al ŷ wilde beastes of ŷ field, hauing no shepeheard: and seing that my shepeheardes take no regard of my shepe but fede thēselues only, and not my shepe therfore heare ŷ word of the Lorde (O ye shepeheardes.) Thus sayth ŷ Lorde God: behold, I my selfe will vpō ŷ shepeheards and require my shepe frō their hands, and C make them cease frō feding of my sheepe: yea ŷ shepeheardes shal fede thēselues no more. For I will deliuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so ŷ they shall not deuoure thē after thys: for thus sayth the lord god: behold, I wil loke to my shepe my self and seke thē. Lyke as a shepeheard amōg the Iohn.x.a flocke, seketh after ŷ shepe ŷ are scattered Heb.xiii. abroade, euē so wil I seke after my shepe, d.
and gather thē together out of all places, i Pet.ii.e where they haue ben scattered in ŷ clou- b.a. dy and darke day. I wyl bryng them out from al people, and gather them together out of all lādes. I wil bring thē into their own land, and fede thē vpon ŷ mountay- D nes of Israel, by ŷ riuers, and in al places of ŷ countrey, I wil fede thē in right good pastures, and vpon ŷ hye mountaines of Israell shal their foldes be. There shall they lye in a good fielde, and in a fat pasture shall they fede, euē vpon ŷ mountaynes of Israell. I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, and bryng thē to their rest, sayth the Lord god. Such as be lost, wil I seke: such Lu.xiiii,d as go astray, wil I bryng againe: such as Iohn,x,a be wounded, wil I bynde vp: suche as be weake, wyl I make strong: such as be fat and strong, those wil I rote out, and fede them wt the thyng ŷ is lawful. And as for E you (O my shepe) sayth ŷ Lord God, I wil Mat.xxv. put a differēce among ŷ shepe, among the c. wethers and ŷ goates. Was it notinough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade down ŷ residue of youre pasture wt your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynk cleare water, but ye must trouble ỹ residue also wͭ your fete: Thus my shepe must be faine to eate the thing, that ye haue trodē down wͭ your fete, and to drinke it, ỹ ye wͭ your fete haue defiled.

Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God vnto them: behold, I wyll seuer ỹ fat shepe frō the leane: forsomuch as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon ỹ sydes and shoulders and runn vppon them wͭ your hornes, so long tyl ye haue vtterly scattered them abroade. I wil helpe my shepe, so that they shal no more be spoiled: yea, I wyl discern one shepe from another. I will rayse vp vnto them one only shepeheard, euen my Je.xxx.b. seruaunt * Dauid, he shal fede them, & he Acte.ii.c. shalbe their shepeheard. I the lord wil be Mic. v.a. their God, and my seruaunt Dauid shall be their Prince. Euen I the Lord haue F spokē it. Moreouer, I will make a coue-nāt of peace with thē, and driue all euill beastes out of ỹ land: so ỹ they may dwell safely in ỹ wildernesse, and sleape in the woodes. Good fortune and prosperity wil I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde about my hill. * A prosperous showre and De.xi.b. rayne, wyll I sende thē in due season, that & .xxviii, b the trees in ỹ wood may bring forth their fruites, and the grounde her encrease.
They shalbe safe in their land, and shall know, that I am ỹ Lord, which haue bro ken their yoke and deliuered thē out of ỹ hands of those ỹ held them in subiection.
They shall no more be spoyled of the hea-G thē, nor deuoured wͭ the beastes of ỹ lāde, but safely shall they dwel, and no mā shal fray them. I will set vp an excellēt plant for thē, so ỹ they shall suffer no more hunger in ỹ land, neyther beare ỹ reprofe of ỹ heathē any more. Thus shal they vnder-stand, ỹ I ỹ Lord their God am with thē, Ps. xcv.b and ỹ they (euē ỹ house of Israell) are my & .xcix.d. people, sayth ỹ Lord God. Ye mē are my flocke, ye are ỹ shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, sayth the Lord God.

The.xxxv.Chapter.

The destruction that shal come on the hyl Seyr that is on the Idumeans, bicause they troubled the people of the Lord.

Esay. MOreouer ỹ word of the Lord xxxiiii.a. came vnto me, saying: thou Jer.xlix b sonn of man, turne thy face to Ez.xxxv, b ward ỹ mount Seir, prophe-& ,xxxii, f. cy vpon it, & say vnto it. Thus xxv. a &. sayth ỹ Lord God: beholde (O thou mount xxxvi. a, Seir) I will vpon thee. I will reache out my hand ouer the, yea, waste and desolate wil I make thee. Thy cities wil I breake down, and ỹ shalt lye voide: ỹ thou mayst Ge.xx.a know how ỹ I am ỹ Lord. Forsomuch as De.ii.c thou bearest an olde enemity against the childrē of Israell, and hast drawen ỹ children of Israell vpon ỹ sweard, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne. Therefore as truly as I lyue sayth ỹ Lord God: I wil prepare thee vnto bloud, yea, bloud shal folow vpō thee: * seing ỹ layest wayt for bloud, therfore shal B bloud persecute thee. Thus wyll I make i.Mat. the mount Seir desolate and waste, and bryng to passe, ỹ ther shal no man go thy-ther, nor come frō thēce. Hys mountaines wil I fil wͭ hys slain mē: thy hils, valleies and riuers shal lye full of thē ỹ are slaine with ỹ sweard. I wil make the a perpetuall wildernesse so ỹ thy cities shal not returne to their former estate, that ye may know how ỹ I am ỹ Lord. And bicause thou hast sayd: what, both these nations C and both these landes, must be myne, and Ez.xx.
I wil haue thē in possession, whereas the Lord was ther: therfore, thus sayth the Lord God: as truly as I lyue, I wil hādle the according to thy wrath & gelousy, like as ỹ hast dealt cruelly wͭ thē, that I may be knowen among them, howe I haue punished thee. Yea, and ỹ thou also mayst be sure, ỹ I ỹ Lord haue heard al thy dyspiteful words, which ỹ hast spokē against the moūtaines of Israel, saying: Lo, they are made wast, and geuen vs to deuoure. D Thus wyth your mouthes ye haue made your boast against me: yea, and multiply-ed your proude words against me, which I haue heard altogether. Wherunto thus sayth ỹ Lord god: to ỹ ioy of al ỹ world wil Ez.xxx I make the waste. And lyke as ỹ (O moūt & .xxxi.
Seir) wast glad, bicause ỹ heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euē so will I do vnto thee also, ỹ thou & whole Edom shalbe destroyed, & know ỹ I am ỹ Lord.

The.xxxvi.Chapter. E

He promyseth deliueraunce from the Gentiles vnto Israell. The benefites done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercy of God, not vnto their deseruinges. God reneweth oure heartes that we may walke in his commaundementes.

THou sonn of man, prophecy vpō A the mountaines of Israell, and Ez.xix speake: heare ỹ worde of ỹ lord: O ye mountaines of Israell.
Thus

Thus sayth ẏ lord God: bicause your enemy hath sayd vpon you: Aha, the hie euerlasting places are now become ours: prophecy therfore, and speake: thus sayth the lord God. Seing ye be wasted and trodē down on euery syde, and become a possession vnto ẏ residue of the Gentiles: which haue brought you into mennes mouthes and vnto an euil name amōg the people: therfore heare ẏ worde of the lord God, O ye mountaines of Israel. Thus sayth the lord God vnto ẏ mountaines and hilles, valleys, and dales, to ẏ voyde wildernesse and desolate cities, which are spoiled, and had in derision on euery syde, among the residue of ẏ heathē: yea euē thus sayth the lord God. In ẏ fire of my gelousy haue I B takē a deuise against ẏ residue of the gē-Ezechiel. xxv.a. tiles, & against al * Edō: which haue ta-kē in my land vnto themselues for a possession: which also reioyced frō their whole heart w a despitefull stomack, to waste it, and to spoyle it. Prophecy therfore vppon the land of Israell, speake vnto the moūtaines and hilles, to valleis and dales, thus sayth the lord god: behold, thys haue I deuised in my gelousye and terrible wrath. Forsomuch as ye haue suffered re profe of ẏ heathē, therfore thus sayth the lord God: I haue sworne ẏ the Gentiles which lye about you, shal beare their confusion thēselues. And as for you (O moun taynes of Israell) ye shall shote out youre braunches, and bring forth your fruite to my people of Israell, for it is hard by ẏ it wyll come. Behold, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I turne me, that ye may be C tylled and sowē. I wyll sende you muche people which shalbe al of ẏ house of Israel, ẏ cities shalbe inhabited, and ẏ decayed places shalbe repaired againe: I wyll prouide you with much people and cattel which shal encrease and bryng fruite: I wil restore you also to your old estate, and shew you more kindnesse thā euer ye had before, wherby ye shall know ẏ I am the Lord: yea, people wil I send vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue thee in possession, and ẏ shalt be their inheritaūce, so ẏ thou shalt no more be without them. Againe, thus sayth the Lorde God: forsomuch as they say vnto you: thou art an eater vp of mē, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo mē, ney ther destroy thy people any more, sayth D the LORDE God. And I wyll not suffer thee for to heare thyne own confusion, among ẏ Gentiles from henceforth.

Thou shalt not beare ẏ reprofe of ẏ nations, nor cast out thyne owne people any more, sayth ẏ Lord God. Moreouer, the worde of ẏ Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonn of man, whē the house of Israell dwelt vpon their own grounde, they defiled themselues with their own wayes and ymaginations: so ẏ in my sight their way was lyke the vnclennesse of a men-strous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrathful displeasure vpon them, bicause of the bloud that they had shed in ẏ lande and bicause of their ydols, wherwyth they had defyled themselues.

I scattered them also among the heathen, so that they were strowed about in the landes. According to their waies and E after their own inuentions, so dyd I pu- Esa. lii.b nish them. Now whē they were gone vn- Rom. ii.e to the heathē, and come in among them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayd of them: are these the people of God, and must go out of their own lande?
Then spared I my holy name which the house of Israel had dishonoured among the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therefore tell the house of Israell.

Thus sayth ẏ Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israell) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonou-red among ẏ heathē, whē ye came to thē.
Therfore, I wil halow my great name againe, which among ẏ Gētiles is euilspo-kē of: for ye your selues haue dishonoured it among thē. And the Gētiles shal know that I am the Lord, whē I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayth ẏ lord god.
As for you, I wyll take you from among the heathē, and gather you together oute of all countries, and bryng you againe in to your own land. * Then wyll I poure F cleane water vpō you, & ye shalbe cleane: Esa. xliiii yea, from al your vnclennesse, and from al & your ydols shal I clense you. A new heart Je. xvii.c also wyl I geue you, & a newe spirite will I put into you. As for that stony heart, I wil take it out of your body, and geue you a fleshly heart. I wyl geue my spirite among you and cause you to walke in my commaundementes, to kepe my lawes, & to fulfyll them. And so ye shall dwel in the De. viii.d land that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shalbe my people, and I wyll be youre God, I will helpe you out of all youre vn-clennesse. I will call for the corne, and wil encrease it, and let you haue no hunger. I wyll multiplie the fruites of the trees, and the increase of the fielde for you, so that ye shal beare no more reprofe of hunger among the heathen. Then shal ye remember your own wycked wayes & your ymaginations, which were not good: so that ye shall thynke that ye were worthy to be destroied, for your sinnes and abhominations.

G But I wyll not do this for your sakes (sayth ẏ Lord God) ye be sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreouer thus sayth ẏ lord God: what tyme as I shall cleanse you frõ all your offẽces, thẽ wyll I make ẏ cities, to be occupyed againe, and wyll repayre F the places that be decayed. The desolate land shalbe builded againe, whiche afore tyme lay waste in ẏ sight of all them that went by. Then shal it be sayd: thys waste land is become lyke a garden of pleasure and ẏ voyde, desolate, and brokẽ down cities, are now strong and defẽced agayne.
Thẽ the residue of ẏ heathẽ ẏ lye rounde about you, shall know ẏ I am the Lorde, which repaire that ẏ was brokẽ down, & plant againe ẏ that was made wast. Euẽ I ẏ Lord haue spokẽ it, and wyll do it in dede. Thus sayth ẏ Lord God: I wyll yet once be founde agayn of ẏ house of Isra-Jere.l,a. ell, and do thys for thẽ: I shal encrease thẽ as a flock of mẽ: lyke as ẏ holy flocke and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the hye solemne feastes: so shal also ẏ wylde wasted cities be filled with flockes of men: and they shall know that I am the Lord.

The. xxxvii. Chapter.

He prophecieth the bryngyng againe of the people being in captiuitie. He sheweth the vnion of ẏ ten tribes with the two.

A The hande of the Lord came vpon me, and ca-ryed me out in ẏ spirit of ẏ Lord, and lett me down in a plain fielde that lay full of bones, and he led me rounde about by thẽ: & behold the bones ẏ lay vpon the field were very many and maruelous dry also. Thẽ sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones may liue againe? I answered: O Lord God, ẏ knowest. And he sayd vnto me. Prophecy ẏ vpon these bones, and speake vnto them. Ye dry bones heare ẏ word of ẏ Lord. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto these bones: behold, I wil put breath into you, ẏ ye may lyue: I wyl B geue you sinowes and make fleshe grow Gen.ij. vpon you, and couer you ouer wt skin: and so geue you breath, that ye may lyue, and know ẏ I am ẏ Lord. So I prophecied, as he had cõmaunded me. And as I was prophecying, ther came a noyse & a great motion, so ẏ the bones rann euery one to another. Now whẽ I had loked, beholde, they had sinewes, and flesh grew vppon thẽ: and aboue they were couered wt skin, but there was no breath in thẽ. Thẽ sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man prophecy thou towarde ẏ wynde: prophecy & speake to ẏ wynde. Thus sayth ẏ lord god. Come C (O ẏ ayre) from ẏ foure wyndes, & blowe vpon these slayne, ẏ they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied as he had commaunded me: thẽ came ẏ breath into thẽ, and they receiued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruellous great sort. More ouer, he sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Behold, they say: Our bones are dry-ed vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut D of. Therfore prophecy ẏ, and speake vnto thẽ thus sayth ẏ Lord God. Behold, I wil opẽ your graues (O my people) and take you out of your sepulchres, & bryng you into ẏ land of Israell againe. So shall ye know ẏ I am ẏ lord, whẽ I opẽ your graues and bryng you out of thẽ. My spirite also wil I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wil set you againe in your own land, and ye shall know that I am the Lord whych haue sayd it, and fulfilled it in dede.
The word of ẏ Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, take a sticke, and wryte vpon it: vnto Juda and to ẏ childre of Israel hys companions. Thẽ take ano ther sticke and wryte vpõ it: vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to al the houshold of Israell hys companions. And thẽ take both these together in thyne hande, E so shall there be one sticke therof. Now if the children of the people say vnto thee: wylt thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then geue them thys an-swere: thus sayth the Lord: behold, I wyll take the stocke of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and of ẏ tribes of Israell hys fellowes, and wyll put them to the Osee.i,b. stocke of Juda, and make them one stocke and they shall be one in my hande. And ẏ two stickes wherupon thou wrytest, shalt thou haue in thyne hande, that they may see, and shalt say vnto them.
Thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde,
I wil

F I wil take awaye ŷ childrẽ of Israell from among ŷ heathen, unto whõ they be gone and will gather them together on euery syde and bring thẽ againe into their own lande: yea, I wyl make one people of them in ŷ lande, vpon ŷ mountaines of Israell, and they al shal haue but one king. They shal no more be two people from henceforth, neyther be deuided into two king-domes, they shall also defile themselues no more wt their abhominations, Idols, and all their wicked doinges. I wil helpe thẽ out of al their dwelling places, wher-in they haue synned: and wil so clense thẽ, that they shall be my people, and I their God.
G Dauid my seruaunt shalbe their kyng, and they all shal haue one shepeheard only. They shal walke in my lawes, and my commaundementes shall they both kepe and fulfill. They shal dwel in ŷ land that I gaue unto Iacob my seruaunt, wheras your fathers also haue dwelt: yea, euen in the same lande shal they, their children, & their childres childrẽ dwel for euermore, and my seruaũt Dauid shalbe their euerlasting Prince. Moreouer, I wyl make a bonde of peace wt them, which shalbe vnto them an euerlasting couenaunt. I wyll settle them also and multiplye them, my Sanctuary wil I set among thẽ for euer more. My dwelling shalbe wt them: yea, I wil be their god, and they shalbe my people. Thus ŷ heathen also shal knowe, ŷ I the Lord am ŷ holy maker of Israell, whẽ my Sanctuary shalbe among them for euermore.

The .xxxviii. Chapter.

He prophecieth that Gog and Magog shall come with an appointed hoste into the land of promyse. Their entent. He rehearseth that the commyng of Gog was before prophecied of the Prophetes. The destruction of him.

A AND the worde of ŷ Lorde came unto me, saying: ŷ sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog ŷ lande of Magog, which is the chiefe prince at Mesech & Tubal, prophecy against hym, and say: thus sayth ŷ Lord God: O Gog thou chiefe Prince of Mesech and Tubal, beholde, I wyll vpõ thee, & wyll turne thee about and put a bit in thy chawes. I wil bring thee forth wt all thy hoost, both horse & horsemẽ, which be al weapẽned of ŷ best fashion: a great people, ŷ ha-dle altogether speares, shildes, & sweardes the Perses, Morians, and wt them ŷ Libyans, which al beare shildes and helmets: Gomer and al hys hostes: ŷ house of Thogorma out of ŷ northquarters, and all hys hostes: yea, & much people wt thee. Ther- B fore prepare thee, set thy selfe in aray wt al thy people, ŷ are come unto thee by heapes, and be ŷ their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in ŷ latter yeres thou shalt come into ŷ land ŷ hath ben destroied wt the sweard, and now is replenished again wt diuerse people vpon ŷ moũ-taines of Israell, which haue long lyen waste: yea, they be brought out of ŷ natyons, and dwel al safe. Thou shalt come vp lyke a stormy wethr, to couer ŷ land, and as it were a darke cloude, thou wt al thine hostes, and a great multitude of people wt thee. Moreouer, thus sayth ŷ Lorde God: C at the same tyme shal many things come into thy minde, so ŷ thou shalt ymagyne mischiefe, and say: I wyll vp to yonder plaine lande, seing they sit at ease, & dwel so safely (for they dwel al without any wals they haue neither barres nor dores) to spoyle them, to robb them, to lay hand vpõ their so well inhabited wildernesses: against ŷ people, ŷ is gathered together from among ŷ heathẽ, which haue gottẽ cattel and good and dwel in ŷ middest of the land. Thẽ shal Saba, and Dedã, and D the marchauntes of Tharsis wt all their worthies, say vnto thee: art ŷ come to robbe?
Hast ŷ gathered thy people together, bi-cause ŷ wilt spoile, to take siluer and gold to cary awaye catel and good, and to haue a great pray? Therfore, O ŷ sonne of mã, thou shalt prophecy, and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayth the Lord God: in that day ŷ shalte knowe that my people of Israell E dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place out of the north partes: thou and much people with thee, which ride vppon horses, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sort. Yea, thou shalt come vpõ my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lande. Thys shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyl bryng the vp into my lande, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon thee (O Gog) before their eyes. Thus F sayth the Lorde GOD: thou art he of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruauntes the Prophetes of Israel which prophecied in those dayes and yeres.

yeres, that I should brynge thee vpon thē. At ẏ same tyme, whē Gog commeth vp in to ẏ land of Israell (sayth the Lord God) shal my indignatiō go forth in my wrath For in my gelousy and hote displeasure, I haue deuised that there shalbe a great trouble in ẏ lande of Israel at that tyme.
Os. rii. a Mathew. rriiii. b. Lu. rri. c. The very fishes in ẏ sea, ẏ foules of ẏ ayre, the beastes of ẏ field, and all ẏ mē that are vppon ẏ earth, shal trēble for feare of me.
G The hylles also shall be turned vpsyde down, ẏ staires of stone shall fall, and all walles shall synke to ẏ grounde. I wil cal for a sweard vpō thē in al my moūtaines sayth the lord God: so that euery mannes sweard shalbe vpon another. With pestylēce and bloud wyll I punish hym: for my rayne, and hayle stones, fyer and brymstone wyll I cause to rayne vpō hym, and al his heape: yea, and vpon all that great people that is wyth hym. Thus wyll I be magnified, honored, and knowen among the heathen: that they may be sure how that I am the Lord.

The. rrrir. Chapter.

He sheweth the destructiō of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of hys hoste. He prophecyeth that Gog and hys company shalbe deuoured of birdes and beastes: wherfore the house of Israell is wasted: Their bringing agayne from captiuitie, is promysed.

A Therfore, O thou sonne of man, prophecy againste Gog, and speake. Thus sayth the Lord God: beholde, O Gog, thou chiefe Prince at Mesech & Tubal, I wil vpon thee, and Ezechiel. rrrviii. c. punish thee with. vi. plagues, and leade thee from ẏ north partes, and bryng thee vp to ẏ mountaines of Israell. As for thy bow I wil smite it out of thy left hād, and cast thyne arowes out of thy right hand. Thou wt all thyne heape, and all ẏ people that is wt thee, must fal vpon ẏ mountaynes of Israell. Thē wyll I geue thee vnto foules and wilde beastes of ẏ field, to be deuoured: there must ẏ lye vpon the field, for euē I ẏ Lord haue spokē it, sayth the Lord God. In to Magog, and among those ẏ dwel so carelesse in ẏ yles, wil I send B a fier and they shal knowe, ẏ I am ẏ lord. I wil make also the name of my holynes to be knowen among my people of Israell: and I wyll not let my holy name be euil spokē of any more: but the very heathē also shal know, ẏ I am the Lorde the holy one of Israell. Beholde, it commeth, & shalbe fulfilled in dede, sayth ẏ Lord God. This is ẏ day wherof I haue spokē. They that dwell in ẏ cities of Israell, shall go forth and set fier vppon ẏ weapons, and burne thē: shieldes and speares bowes, & arowes, billes and clubbes: vii. yeres shal they be burning therof so ẏ they shall els bryng no styckes frō ẏ field, neyther haue nede to hew down any out of the wood.
For they shal haue weapons inoughe to C burne. They shal robb those ẏ robbed thē, and spoyle those ẏ spoyled them, sayth the Lord God. At ẏ same tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buryed in Israel, euen ẏ valley, wher thorow men go from the East to the Sea warde. Those ẏ trauaile therby, shall stopp their noses for stench. There shal Gog and al hys people be buryed: and it shalbe called ẏ valley of the people of Gog. vii. monethes long shal the house of Israell be burying of them, that they may cleanse ẏ land: yea, all the people of ẏ land shal bury them. O it shall D be a glorious day whē I get me that honoure, sayth ẏ Lord God. They shall ordeine men also to be dead buriers, euer going thorow ẏ land: and appoint them certaine places to bury those in, which remaine vppon the field, that the land may be cleansed. From ende to ende shall they seke, and that. vii. monethes long. Now those that go thorow the lāde, where they see a mannes bone, they shall set vp a token by it, til the dead buriers haue buried it also in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of ẏ city shalbe called Hamonah (that is, a multitude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonn of man, thus sayth the E Lord God. Speake vnto all the foules and euery birde, yea and to al the wylde beastes of the field: heape you together & come gather you rounde about vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you, euē a great slaughter vpon the mountaines of Israell: eate flesh and drinke bloud. ye shal eate ẏ flesh of the worthies, and drink the bloud of the Princes of ẏ lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of oxen that be all slain at Basan. Eate Apo. rir. the fat till ye be full, and drinke bloud, till ye be dronken, of the slaughter which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyl you at my table with horses and strong horsemenne, with captaynes, and menne of warre,

F sayth the Lord God. I wil bryng my glory also among the Gentiles; that all the heathē may se my iudgemēt,that I haue kept,and my hande which I haue layed vpon them:that ẏ house of Israell maye know,how that I am the Lord their god from that day forth. And the heathē shall know,that wheras ẏ house of Israel wer led into captiuitye:it was for their wickednesse sake,bicause they offended me. For the which cause I hyd my face from them and delyuered them into ẏ hands of their enemies,that they might all be slaine wt the sweard. According to their vnclēnesse and vnfaythfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them,and hid my face from them.
Therfore thus sayth ẏ lord God: now wil I bring againe ẏ captiues of Jacob and G haue mercy vpon ẏ whole house of Israel and be gelous for mi holy names sake. Al their cōfusiō and offēce ẏ they haue done against me,shalbē takē away and so safe ly shal they dwel in their land that no mā shal make thē afrayd. And when I haue brought them agayne from among the people,whē I haue gathered them together out of their enemies landes and am praised in them before many heathen:thē shal they know,that I am the Lord their God, which suffred thē to be led into captiuity among the heathē. But now haue I brought them agayne into their owne land,and haue not left one of thē yonder.
After that, will I hyde my face no more Ezech.xxxvi. b. from them, but wyll poure out my spirite vpon ẏ house of Israell,sayth ẏ Lord god.

The.xl.Chapter.

The restoring of the cities and of the tēple that was to come,is shewed vnto the Prophet.

I IN the.xxv.yeare of our captiuity,in ẏ beginning of ẏ yere the tenth day of the moneth: that is,the.xiiii yeare after ẏ the citie was smittē down, ẏ same day came ẏ hande of ẏ lord vpon me and caryed me forth:euen into ẏ lande of Israell brought he me in the visions of God: and set me down vpō a merueilous hye mountayne,whereupon there was a building(as it had ben of a citie)towarde the north. Thyther he caryed me,and behold,there was a man,whose similitude, was like brasse,which had a threde of flax in hys hand and a meterod also. He stode in the dore,and sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man,mark wel with thine eyes,hearke to with thyne eares, and fastē it in thyne heart,whatsoeuer I shall shew the:for to that intēt that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hyther. And whatsoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certifie the house of Israell therof. B Behold,there was a wall on the out-syde rounde about ẏ house,ẏ meterodde ẏ he had in hys hande,was.vi.cubites long and a span. So he measured the breadth of ẏ building, which was a meterod, and the heygth also a meterod. Then came he vnto ẏ East dore, and wēt vp the stayres, and measured ẏ postes of ẏ dore, wherof euery one was a meterod thick. Euery chaumber was a meterod long & broade: betwene ẏ chaūbers were.v.cubites. The post of ẏ dore wtin ẏ porch,was one mete-rod. He measured also ẏ porch of ẏ inner-mer dore,which contayned a meterodde.
Thē measured he ẏ entry of the dore,that contayned.viii.cubites, and hys pyllers two cubites,and this entry stode inward The chambers of the dore eastward, wer three on euery syde: a like broade and long.
The pyllers also that stode of bothe the sydes,were of one measure. After, thys he measured the wydenesse of the doore, which was.x.cubites, and the heyght of the doore thirtene cubites. The edge before ẏ chaumbers was one cubite broade vpon both the sydes, and the chaumbers vi.cubites wyde of eyther syde. He measured the dore from the ridge of one chaum ber to another,whose widenesse,was.xxv cubites, and one dore stode against another. He made pillers also.lx.cubites hye, rounde about the court dore. Before the inward part vnto the fore entrey of the in nermer dore,wer.l.cubites. C The chaumbers and their pillers within rounde about vnto the doore had syde wyndowes. So had the fore entryes also whose wyndowes went rounde about wt in. And vpon the pyllers there stode date trees. Then brought he me into the fore courte, whereas were chaumbers and paued workes, made in the fore courte rounde aboute.xxx.chaumbers vpon one paued work. Now the paued work was along besyde the dores and that was the lower paued worke. After thys he measured the bredth from the lower dore,vnto ẏ innermer court of the outsyde, which had an hundreth cubites vpon ẏ east and the north

northpart. And the dore in the vttermost court towarde ŷ north, measured he after the length and bredth: hys thre chaumbers also on eyther syde wt his pillers and fore entries, which had euen the measure of ŷ first dore. Hys heigth was .l. cubites, the bredth .xxv. cubites, hys wyndowes & porches wt hys date trees, had euen lyke measure as ŷ dore towarde ŷ easte: there were .vii. steppes to go vp vpon, and their porch before them. Now ŷ dore of ŷ innermer court stode straight ouer against the dore, ŷ was towarde ŷ northeast. Frō one dore to another he measured an .C. cubites.

D After ŷ, he brought me to ŷ south syde where there stode a dore towarde ŷ south whose pillers and porches he measured: these had ŷ first measure: and wt their porches they had wyndowes rounde about, lyke ŷ first wyndowes. The height was .l cubites, ŷ breadth .xxv. wt steps to goe vp vpon: hys porch stode before wt his pillers and date trees on eyther syde. And ŷ dore of ŷ innermer court stode toward ŷ south and he measured frō one dore to another, an .C. cubites. So he brought me into the innermer court, thorowe the dore of the south syde which he measured: and it had the measure aforesaid. In like maner his chaumbers, pillers, and fore entries, had euē the forsayd measure also. And he had with hys porches roūd about wyndowes of .l. cubites heigth, and .xxv. cubites brod. The porches rounde about were .xxv. cubites long, and .v. cubites brode: and hys porche reached vnto ŷ vttermost court: vpon hys pillers, there wer date trees, and viii. steps to go vp vpon.

E He brought me also into ŷ inmost court vpon ŷ east syde, and measured ŷ dore according to ŷ measure afore sayd, hys chābers, pillers and porches had euen ŷ same measure, as ŷ first had: and wt his porches he had wyndowes rounde about. The heigth was .l. cubites, the bread. xxv. cubites: hys porch reached vnto ŷ vttermoste court: hys pyllers also had date trees on eyther syde and .viii. steps to go vp vpon. And he brought me to ŷ north dore, and measured it, which also had the foresayd measure. Hys chambers, pyllers, and porches had wyndowes round about: whose heygth was .l. cubites, and ŷ breadth .xxv. Hys pyllers stode toward ŷ vtmost court, and vpon them both were date trees, and viii. steps to go vp vpon.

There stode a chamber also, whose entraunce was at the dore pyllers, and ther the burnt offringes wer washed. In the dore porch, ther stode on eyther syde, two tables for ŷ slaughting, to slay ŷ burnt offringes, synnoffringes, and trespasseofferynges therupon. And on ŷ outside as mē go forth to ŷ north dore, ther stode two tables. Foure tables stode on eyther syde of the dore, ŷ is .viii. tables: wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for ŷ burnt offrings, of a cubite and a halfe long and brode, and one cubyte hye: wherupon were laied the vessels and ornamentes which wer vsed to ŷ burnt & slayn offringes, when they were slaughted. And wtin there were hokes, foure fingers brode, fastned rounde about to hang flesh vpon, and vpon the tables was layd the offring flesh. On ŷ outsyde of ŷ innermer doore, were the syngers chaumbers, in the inwarde court besyde ŷ north dore ouer against ŷ south. There stode one also besyde ŷ east dore northwarde. And he sayd vnto me: thys chaumber on ŷ southsyde belongeth to the Priestes ŷ kepe the habitation: and thys towarde the north, G is the Priestes that wayte vpon the aultare, which be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do seruice before the Lord in steade of the children of Leui. i.Pa.vi a. iii.Reg. ii.f.

So he measured the fore court, which had in length an .C. cubites, and asmuch in breadth by the foure corners. Now the aultare stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entry of the house, and measured the walles by the entery dore, which were .v. cubites long on euery syde. The thyckenesse also of the dore on eyther syde, was thre cubites. The lēgth of the porch was .xx. cubites: the breadth .xi. cubites, and vpon steps went men vpto it: by the walles also were pyllers, on eyther syde one.

The disposition and deuise of building againe ŷ temple, and of the other thinges therto belonging.

A After thys he brought me to ŷ tēple, and measured ŷ postes which wer of both sydes .vi. cubytes thycke, according to ŷ wydenesse of ŷ tabernacle. The breadth of ŷ dore was .x. cubites, & ŷ walles of ŷ dore on eyther syde .v. cubites. He measured ŷ lēgth therof, which conteined .xl. cubites, & the breadth .xx. Thē wēt he in and measured ŷ dore postes, which wer .ii. cubites thick: but ŷ dore it self was vi. cubites, and the breadth of the doore was .vii. cubites. He measured the length and

and bredth therof, which were euery one xx. cubites, before the temple. And he sayd vnto me: thys is the holyest of al. He mea= sured also ẏ wall of the house, which was vi. cubites. The chaumbers that stode rounde about the house, were euery one foure cubites wide: and one stode hard v= pon another, wherof there were. xxxiii.
There stode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare thē vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastned. The syde chaumbers wer the hi= er the wider, and had steppes thorow thē rounde about the house. Thus was it B wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men myght go to the hyest by the myd chaum= bers. I saw also that the house was very hye rounde about. The foundation of the syde chaumbers was a meterod, that is.
vi. cubites brode. The thicknesse of ẏ syde wall without, conteyned. v. cubites, and so did ẏ outwal of ẏ chaumbers in ẏ house.
Betwene the chaumbers was ẏ wides nesse. xx. cubites, rounde about the house.
The chamber dores stode ouer against ẏ outwall, the one dore was towarde the north, the other towarde the South: and the thicknesse of the outwall was. v. cubi= tes rounde about. Now the building that was separated toward the west, was. lxx. cubites wyde: ẏ wal of the building was.
v. cubites thicke, rounde about, and the length, foure score cubites and ten. So he measured the house, which was an. C. cu= bites lōg: & the separated building wt the wal, wer an. C. cubites lōg also. The wide nesse before ẏ house, and of it ẏ was sepa= rated toward the east, was an. C. cubites.
C And he measured the length of ẏ buil= ding before and behynde, with the chām= bers vpon both the sydes, and it contey= ned an. C. cubites. The innermer temple the porch of the fore court, the syde postes, these three had syde wyndowes, and pyl= lers rounde about ouer against ẏ postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes.
The wyndowes themselues wer syled o= uer with bordes: and thus was it aboue the dore vnto the inmost house, and with= out also. Yea, the whole wal on euery side both wtin and without, was syled ouer wt great bordes: There wer Cherubins and date trees made also, so ẏ one date tree stode ouer betwixt two Cherubins. One D Cherub had two faces the face of a man loking aside towarde the date tree, and a Lyons face on ẏ other syde. Thus was it made rounde about in al ẏ house. Yea the Cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue ẏ dore, and so stode they also vpon the wal of the temple. The Ezech. i. e byg postes of the temple wer. iiii. squared, Ex. xxv. b and the fashion of ẏ Sanctuary was euē as it appeared vnto me afore in the visiō.
The table was of wood, iii. cubites hye, & ii. cubites long: hys corners, the length, & the walles were of wood. And he sayd vn= to me: Thys is the table that shall stande before the Lord. The temple, and the ho= lyest of all had eyther of them two dores, and euery dore had two litle wickettes which were folden in, one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dores of the temple, there were made Cherubins and date trees, like as vpon the walles: & a great thicke balke of wood was before on the outsyde of the porch. Vpon both ẏ sydes of the walles of the porch, ther wer made depe wyndowes and date trees, ha uig beames & balkes lyke as ẏ house had.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambers of the temple for the Priestes and the holy thinges.

THē caryed he me out into ẏ fore A court towarde the north, and brought me into the chamber ẏ stode ouer against ẏ backebuil= ding northwarde, which had ẏ length of an hundred cubites, whose doore turned toward ẏ north. The widenesse cōteined.
l. cubites ouer against ẏ. xx. cubites of ẏ in nermer court & against the paued work ẏ was in the court, beside all these thre, ther stode pillers, one ouer against another.
And before thys chaumber there was a walking place of. x. cubites wyde, and wt= in was a way of one cubite wyde, & their dores towarde the north. Thus the hiest chaumbers wer alway narrower thā the lowest and middlemost of the buildyng, for they bare chaumber vpon chaumber, and stode thre together one vpō another, not hauing pillers lyke ẏ fore court ther= B fore were they smaller than those beneth, and in the middest to reken frō the groūd vpwarde. The wall wtout ẏ stoode by the chaumbers towarde the vttermost courte vpō the foresyde of the chaumbers was. l. cubites lōg, for the length of the vttermost chaumbers in ẏ fore court was. l. cubites also: but ẏ length therof before the temple, was an. c. cubites. The chaūbers had vn= der them an entraūce of ẏ eastside, where by a man myght goe into them out of the fore court thorowe the thicke wall of the courte towarde the East, ryghte ouer a= gainst gainst the separated buyldinge. Before the same buylding vpon thys syde, ther wer C chambers also, which had a way vnto the like as the chamber on the north syde, of the same legth and widenesse. Their entraunce, fashion, and dores, wer also of the same maner. Yea, euen like as the other chamber dores wer, so wer those also of ye southsyde. And before the way towarde ye way toward the singers steppes on the eastsyde, ther stode a dore to go in at. The sayd he vnto me: the chambers towarde the north and the south which stande before the backe buylding: those be holy habitations, wherin the Priests that do seruice before the Lord, must eate the most holy offeringes: and ther must they lay ye most holy offringes: meate offringes, sinofferinges, and trespasse offeringes, for it is an holy place. When the Priestes come therin, they shall not go out into the forecourt: but (seing they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministratiō, and put on other garmentes when they haue any thing to do with the people.

D Now when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth tho-row the east port, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east syde with the meterod, which round about cōtained .v.c. meterroddes: and the northside measured he, which conteined rounde about euen so much. The other two sydes also toward the south and ye west, which he measured, conteined either of them .v. hundred meterroddes. So he measured al the .iiii. sydes, where there went a wall round about .v. hūdred meterroddes long, and as broade also, which seperated the holy from the vnholy.

The .xliii. Chapter.

He seeth the glory of God going into the Temple from whence it had before departed. He mencioneth the ydolatry of the children of Israell, for the which they wer consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them againe to repentaunce.

A SO he brought me to ye dore that turneth toward ye East. Behold thē came the glory of ye God of Israell, frō out of ye East, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters, & Eze.x.b. and.xi. the earth was lightned with hys glory Hys sight to loke vpon was lyke ye first ye I saw, whē I went in, what tyme as the Ezec.i.a, x.c.&.xi.d citie should haue ben destroyed: and lyke the vision ye I saw by the water of Cobar.
Thē fel I vpon my face: but ye glory of the Lord came into ye house, through the east B dore. So a winde toke me vp, & brought me into the innermer court: & behold, the house was ful of ye glory of ye Lord. I heard one speaking vnto me out of ye house, and ther stode one by me, ye sayd vnto me: O sonn of man, thys roume is my seate, and the place of my fote steps wheras I will dwel among ye childrē of Israel for euermore: so ye the house of Israel shal nomore defyle my holy name: neither they, nor their kynges through their whoredome, through their hye places, & through the dead bodyes of their kynges: which haue builded their threscholdes in maner hard vpō my threscholdes, & their postes almost at my postes, & a wal betwixt me & them.
Thus haue they defiled my holy name w their abhominations, ye they haue cōmit-ted. Wherfore I haue destroyed thē in my wrath. But now they shal put away their whoredom, & the dead bodyes of their kinges out of my sight, ye I may dwell amōg thē for euermore. Therfore O thou sōn of C mā, shew ye the houshold of Israell a temple ye they may be ashamed of their wickednesse, & measure thēselues an exāple therat. And whē they be ashamed of all their workes, thē shew them ye fourme & fashion of ye temple, ye comming in, the going out, all ye maner and descriptiō therof, yea al the vses and ordinaunces of it, ye they may kepe and fulfil al ye fashions and customes therof. Thys is the description of ye house. Aboue vpon ye mount round about al ye corners, it shalbe ye holyest of al.
Behold, ye is ye description & fashion of the house. Thys is ye measure of ye alter, after ye true cubite, which is a span longer thā an other cubite his bottom in ye middest was a cubite lōg & wide, & the ledge that went roūd about it, was a span broade. This is the heyght of ye altare. From ye groūd to ye lower steps, ye legth is two cubites, and ye bredth one cubite: and from ye lower steps to ye higher, are .iiii. cubites, and ye bredth but on cubite. The alter was .iiii. cubites hye, & frō the alter vpwarde stode .iiii. hor-nes & it was .xii. cubites long, & .xii. cubits brode vpon ye .iiii. corners: ye couering of ye alter was .xiiii. cubites long, & brode vpon the .iiii. corners, and ye ledge ye went roūd about, had halfe a cubite, and the bottom therof roūd about one cubite: hys steppes stode toward ye east. And he sayd vnto me: E thou sonn of man, thus sayth ye Lord god these are ye ordinaunces & lawes of ye altar in ye day whē it is made to offer burnt offrinofferynges, and to sprynckle bloud therupon. To the Priestes, to the Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch, and tread before me to do me seruice, sayth the Lorde God: Unto these geue thou a yong bullock for a sin offring: & take the bloud of hym: and sprinckle his foure hornes withall, and y^e foure corners of the altare couering, with the ledge y^t goeth round about, therwyth shalt thou clense it, and reconcile it. Thou shalt take the bullock also of y^e sin offring, F & burne hym in a seueral place without y^e sanctuary. The next day, take a goat buck without blemish, for a sin offeryng, to reconcyle the altare withall, lyke as it was reconciled with the bullock. Now when thou haste made it cleane, then offer a yong bullocke without blemysh, & a ramme out of the flocke without blemish also. Offer them before the lord, and let the priest cast salt therupon, and geue them so vnto the lord for a burnt offryng. Seuē dayes shalt thou bryng euery day a goate buck, for synne. A yong bullocke and a ramme of the flocke, both without blemishe shall they offer. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle and clense the altare, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyred, then vpon the eyght day and so forth, the priests shall offer theyr burnte offerynges, and helthoffrynges vpon the altare, so I wyll be merciful vnto you, saith the lorde god.

G

The.xliiii. Chapter.

He sheweth what dore of the temple is shut. He is commaunded to vpbraide the people with theyr offence. The vncircumcised in hart, and in the flesh. Who are to bee admitted to the seruice of the teple and who be to be refused. He sheweth what priests he would haue to be admitted into the holye place, and also their offices.

After this he brought me agayn to y^e outward dore of the sanctuary on y^e east side & that was shut. Thē said y^e lord vnto me: thys dore shalbe styl shut, and not opened for any man to go through it, but only for the lord God of Israel: yea, he shal go thorow it, els shal it be shut styl. The prince himself shal com through it, y^t he may eate bread before the lord. At the porche shall he com in, & there shal he go out agayn. Thē brought he me to the dore vpon the north syde of y^e house. And as I loked about me, behold, y^e glory of y^e lord filled y^e house, & I fel downe vpon my face. So y^e lord spake vnto me: O thou sonne of mā, fasten this to thine harte, behold, & take dyligent heede to al y^t I wyll say vnto the cōcernyng al the ordinances of y^e lord: & all his lawes: ponder well with thine hart y^e commyng in of the house, & B the going forth of the sanctuary, and tel y^e obstinate houshold of Israel. Thus sayth y^e lord god: O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynough with al your abhominatiōs seyng that ye haue brought into my sanctuary straungers, hauyng vncircumcised hartes & flesh, where through my sanctuary is defyled when ye offer me bread, fat and bloud. Thus with al your abhomynations ye haue broken my couenaunt & not kept the holy ordinaunces of my sāctuary: but set kepers of my sanctuary, euē after your own minde. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: of all the straungers y^t dwel among the childrē of Israel no strāger whose hart & flesh is not circumcised, C shal com within my sanctuary: No, nor y^e Leuites, y^t be gone back fro me, & haue deceiued the people of Israel with al errors goyng after theyr ydols: therfore shal thei beare theyr own wickednes. Shuld they be set and ordained to minister vnder the dores of y^e house of my sanctuary: And to do seruice in the house, to slay burnt offerynges & sacrifices for the people, to stand before thē, & to serue thē, seing y^e seruyce y^t they do them, is before theyr idols, & cause the house of Israel to stūble thorow theyr wyckednes: for the whych cause I haue pluckt out mine own hand ouer thē, saith D y^e lord god, so y^t now they must beare their own iniquity, & not to com nie me to serue me with theyr priesthode in my sanctuary, & most holiest of al: that thei may beare theyr own shame & abhominatiōs, which they haue done. Should I vse them to be porters of y^e house, & to all y^e seruice that is done therin. But y^e Priestes, y^e Leuites, y^e sonne of Sadoch, y^t kept the holy ordinaūces of my sāctuary, when y^e children of Israel wer gone frō me, shal com to me to do E me seruice, to stād before me, & to offer me y^e fat & the bloud, saith the lord god. They shal go into my sāctuary and tread before my table: to do me seruice, & to wayt vpon mine ordinances. Now when they go in at y^e dores of the innermer court: they shal put on linnen clothes so y^t no wollen com vpō the while they doe seruice vnder the dores of y^e innermer court, & within. Thei shal haue faire linnē bonets vpon theyr heades, & linnē breches vpō theyr loynes, Israell shall be theyrs. The fyrstlinges of al the first fruites, and al frewil offringes

The xlv, Chapter.

Out of all the land of promise are there seperate iiii portions. of which the first is geuen to ẏ priests and to the temple, the second to the Leuites, ẏ third to the citie, the fourth to the prince. An exhortation vnto the heads of Israell: Of iust weightes & measures. Of fruites. &c.

Ez xlviii When ye deuide the lande by ẏ lot ye shal put a syde one part for the lord, to be holy from other landes, namely .xxv. M. meterodes long, & .x. thousãd brode. This shall be holy, as wyde as it is round about. Of this parte there shall belong vnto the sanctuary .v. C. meterodes, in all the .iiii. corners, and .l. cubites wyde rounde about to the suburbes. And from this measure, namelye of .xxv. M. mete-rodes long, & .x. M. brode, thou shalt measure, wherin the sanctuary and the holiest of all may stand. The residue of that holy ground shalbe the priestes which doe seruice in ẏ sanctuary of the lord, and goe in before the Lorde to serue hym, that they B maye haue rowme to dwell in. As for the sanctuarye, it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in ẏ house there shall bee geuen twentye habytations, of the fiue and twentye thousande length, and ten thousande bredth: ye shal geue also vnto the citie a possession of fiue thousand merodes brode, & fiue & twenty thousãd long, beside ẏ part of ẏ sanctuary: ẏ shalbe for ẏ whole house of Israel. Upõ both ẏ sides of the sanctuaryes part, & by C the city: there shalbe geuen vnto ẏ prynce Ez. xlviii whatsoeuer lieth ouer agaist ẏ city: as far b, as reacheth Westward & Eastward, which shalbe as long as one part, from the West to the East. This shalbe his own lande in Israel, ẏ my princes be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And such as remaineth yet ouer in ẏ land, shalbe geuen to ẏ house of Israel, according to their tribes.
Thus saith the lord god: O ye prynces ye haue now oppressed & destroyed ynough: now leaue of, handle now accordyng to ẏ thyng ẏ is equal and lawfull: and thruste out my people nomore saith the lord god.
Ye shal haue a true weyght, a true Ephah Le, xix, g. and a true bath. The Ephah and the bath De. xxv c shalbe alyke. One bath shall contayn the Pro. xi. a tenth parte of an homer, and so shall one D Ephah doe: their measure shalbe after the homer. One sicle maketh .xx. geras. So Ex. xxx. b .xx. sicles, & .xxv. & .xv. sicles, make a pound. Le. xxvii. d.
This is the heueoffring that ye shal geue Nu. iii. g, to be heaued: namely the .xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an homer of wheate, and ẏ .xvi. part of an Ephah, oute of an homer of barly. The oyle shalbe measured with the bath: euen the tenth parte of one bath out of a Cor. Ten bathes make one homer: for one homer filleth .x. bathes. And one lambe from two .C. shepe oute of the E pasture of Israel, for a meatoffring: burnt offryng, and helthoffring, to reconcile thẽ sayth the Lord God: All the people of the land shall geue this heueofferyng with a freewyl, for the people of Israell. Agayn, it shalbe the princes parte to offer burnte offerynges,

ofrynges, meateoffrynges, & drinke offeryngs vnto the lord, in ẏ holy dayes, new moones, Sabbothes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The sinoffe-ring, meatoffring, burnt offring, & helth-F offring, shal he geue to recocile the house of Israel. Thus saith the lord God. The first day of ẏ firste moneth, thou shalt take a yong bullocke without blemish, & clense the sanctuary. So the priest shall take of the bloud of the synoffryng, and sprynkle it vnto the postes of the house, & vpon the foure corners of ẏ altare, with ẏ dore postes of the innermer court. And thus shalt thou do also the vii. day of the moneth (for Leui.iiii.c. such as haue synned of ignoraunce, or being deceyued) to reconcile the house with Exo.xii.a all. Upon the .xiiii. day of the first moneth Le.xxiii.a ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shal ẏ Nu.xxviii.a feast continue wherin there shall no sow-G er nor leauened bread bee eaten. Uppon thesame day, shall the prince geue for him self & all the people of the lãd, a bullock for a sinoffryng. And in the feast of the seuen daies, he shall offer euery day a bullocke & a ramme that are without blemishe, for a burnt offring vnto the lord: & an hee goat daily for a sin offring. For the meate offe-ringes he shall geue euer an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah to a ramme, and an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the .xv. day of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe ẏ .vii. dayes holy, one after another, euen as the other seuen dayes, with the sinneoffring, burntoffring, meatoffring, and with oile.

The .xlvi. Chapter.

The sacrifices of the Sabboth and of the newe moones. Through whiche doores they must go in, or come out of the temple. &c.

A Thus saith the lorde God: the doore of the innermer courte toward the East, shalbe shut, the .vi. working dayes: but in the Sabboth, and in the day of the new moone, it shalbe opened. Then shal the prince com vnder the dore porch, and stand stil without the doore cheeke.
So the priest shall offer vp his burnt and helthofferyngs. And he shall woorshyppe at the doore post, and go his waye foorth again. but the doore shal no more be shut, til the euening. On the same maner shall the people of the lande also do their woor-ship before the Lorde without this doore, B vpon the Sabbothes and newe moones.
This is now the burnt offeryng that the prynce shall bryng vnto the Lord vpon ẏ Sabboth: sixe lambes without blemyshe, and a ramme without blemish, and an Ephah for a meateoffring with the ramme.
As for the lambes he may geue as many meate offeryngẽs to them as he wyll: and an hyn of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shall bee a yong bullocke without blemish: sixe lambes, & a ramme also without blemishe. With the bullock he shal geue an Ephah, and with the ramme an Ephah also for a meate offring, but to the lambs what he may com by. And euer an hyn of oyle to an Ephah.
When the prince commeth, he shall go vn- C der the doore portche, and euen there depart forth again. But when ẏ people of ẏ lãd com before ẏ lord in ẏ hie solẽne feast, as many as come in by the north dore to do worship, shal go out again at ẏ southe dore. And they ẏ com in at ẏ south doore, shal go forth again at ẏ north dore. Ther shal none go out at ẏ dore, where he came in, but shal go right forth ouer on ẏ other syde, & the prince shall go in & out among them. Upon ẏ solemne and hie feast daies this shalbe the meatoffring. An Ephah to D a bullock, and an Ephah to a ramme, & to the lambes as many as he will: but euer an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Now when ẏ prince bringeth a burnt offrĩg, or an helth offring with a frewil vnto the lord, ẏ East dore shalbe opened vnto him, ẏ he may do with his burnt & helth offrĩgs, as he doth vpon ẏ Sabboth: & whẽ he goeth forth ẏ dore shalbe shut after him agayn. He shal daily bring vnto the lord a lamb of a yere olde without blemish for a burnt offryng: this shal he do euery mornyng. And for a meatoffring, he shal geue ẏ .vi. parte of an E Ephah, & the third part of an hin of oyle, to mingle with ẏ cakes euery morning. yea, this shalbe a daily meatoffring vnto ẏ lord, for an euerlasting ordinãce: & thus shal ẏ lambe, ẏ meatoffring, & oyle be geuẽ euery morning, for a daily burnt offryng.
Moreouer thus saith ẏ lord god, yf ẏ prince geue a gift vnto anye of his sonnes, then shal it be his sõnes heritage perpetuall, ẏ he may possesse it. But if he will geue one of his seruants som of his heritage, it shal Le.xxv.a be his to ẏ fre yere, & thẽ to returne again nu.xxxvi. vnto ẏ prince: for his heritage shal be hys c. sõnes only. The prince also shal take none F of ẏ peoples inheritãce, nor put them from iii.Re.xxi. their possessiõ: but to his owne sõnes, shal a. he geue his possession, ẏ my people be not ii.Re.v.b scattered abrode, but ẏ euerye man maye haue his own. And he brought me thorow ẏ entrance at ẏ side of ẏ dore, to the habytation

tation of the sanctuary that belongeth to the priestes and stode toward the north: and behold, ther was a place vpon ẏ west side, then said he vnto me. This is ẏ place where ẏ priestes shal dight ẏ trespas & sin offringes, & bake the meat offringes, that they nede not beare them into ẏ outward court, & so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost court rounde about al ẏ foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the court, ther was a litle court. yea, in al ẏ foure corners of ẏ court, there was made a litle court of.xl.cubites long, & xxx.cubits brode: these foure litle courts wer of one like measure, & there wente a ridge wal round about them al.iiii.vnder ẏ which there wer harthes made rounde about. Then said he vnto me. This is the kitchen where ẏ ministers of ẏ house shal dight ẏ slain offringes of the people.

The.xlvii.Chapter.

The visions of the waters that came out of the temple. The coastes of the lande of promysse, and the deuision thereof by tribes.

A After this he broughte me again before ẏ dore of ẏ house: & behold, ther gushed out wa ters from vnder the postes of ẏ house eastward, for ẏ house stode toward the East, ẏ ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lieth to the altare southward. Then caried he me out to ẏ north dore, & broughte me forth ther round about by ẏ vtmost dore ẏ tur-Za,xiiii.a neth Eastward. Beholde, there came forth e,xiiii.b ẏ water vpon ẏ right syde. Now when the man ẏ had the meterod in his hande wẽt vnto ẏ East dore, he measured a thousand cubites, & then he brought me throughe ẏ water, euẽ to ẏ ancles: so he measured yet but a thousand and brought me through B the water agayne vnto ẏ knees: yet measured he a thousãd, & brought me through the water vnto ẏ loins. After this he measured a thousand again, then was it such a riuer, ẏ I mighte not wade throughe it.
The water was so depe, ẏ it was nedeful to haue swimmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he said vnto me: haste thou sene this, O thou sonne of mã & with ẏ he brought me to ẏ riuer bank again. Now when I came ther, ther stode many trees vpon eyther side of ẏ riuer bank. Thẽ said he vnto me. This water ẏ floweth out toward the East, and runneth downe into ẏ plain field, commeth into the sea: and from the sea runneth out, and maketh the waters whole. yea all ẏ liue & moue, where-vnto this riuer cõmeth, shal recouer. And where this water commeth there shall be Mat.iii.c much fish. For al ẏ commeth to this water am.vii.f shal be lusty and whole. By this riuer shal Joh.vii.d the fishers stand from Engaddi vnto En- am.vii.a Eglaim, and there sprede out theyr nets: for there shalbe great heapes of fishe, like as in the mayne sea. As for his claye and pyttes they shall not be whole: for why it shalbe occupied for salt.

By this ryuer vpon both the sides of the C shore, there shal grow al maner of fruitful trees, whose leaues shal not fall of, nether shall theyr fruit perish, but euer be rype at theyr monethes, for theyr water runneth out of theyr sanctuary. His fruite is good to eate, and his leafe profit able for medycine. Thus sayth the Lord God. Let thys be the border wherein ye shall deuide the lande vnto the twelue trybes of Israel w the line. Part it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: of the whiche land I sware Ge.xvii.c vnto youre fathers, that it shoulde fall to your inheritaunce. Thys is the border of the lande vpon the north syde, from the mayn sea, as men go to Zadada: namely, Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim, from ẏ borders of Damascus & Hemath, vnto Ha-zar, Tichon, and that lyeth vpon the coa-stes of Haueran. Thus the borders from the sea forth, shall be Hazar, Euan, ẏ bor- D der of Damascus, the north: and the borders of Hemath, that is the North parte.
The East syde shall ye measure from Haueran and Damascus, from Galead and the land of Israel by Jordan, and so forth from the sea coast that lyeth Eastwarde: & this is ẏ East part. The south syde is frõ Thamar forth to the waters of strife vn- Nu.xx.b, to Cades, the ryuer to the mayne sea: and Ex.xvii.b that is the south parte. The Weste parte, namelye the greate sea from the borders therof, tyl a man come vnto Hemath, this is the west part. This lande shall ye parte Numeri among you, accordyng to the trybes of xxxiiii.f Israell, and deuyde it to be an herytage for you and for the straungers that dwell Leu.xix.g among you, and begette chyldren. For ye Deu.x.d shal take them among the chyldren of Is- e,xxii.c. rael, like as though they wer of your own housholde and countrye: and they shall haue an heritage with you among ẏ childrẽ of Israel. Loke in what trybe ẏ stranger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye geue him his heritage, sayth the lord god.

The

The.xlviii.Chapter.

The lottes of the.xii.tribes. The partes of the possession of the priestes, and of the temple, of the Leuites, of the citie, of the prince, are rehearsed. The lottes of the other tribes. The gates of the citie.

A These are ÿ names of ÿ tribes ÿ lye vpō ÿ north syde, by the way of Hetlon, till thou commest vnto Hemath & Hazar, E-nam, ÿ borders of Damascus towarde the north: besyde Hemath: Dan shal haue his porcion frō the East quarter vnto the West. Upon the borders of Dan from the East syde vnto the west, shall As-ser haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Asser from the East part vnto the Weste, shall Nepthaly haue his porcion. Uppon the borders of Nepthaly from the Easte quarter vnto the West, shall Manasses haue his porcion. Upō ÿ borders of Ma-nasses from the East syde vnto the West, shall Ephraim haue his porcion. Upon ÿ borders of Ephraim, from the East parte vnto the West, shall Ruben haue his por-cion. Upon the borders of Ruben, from the East quarter vnto the West, shall Juda haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Juda from the East part vnto the Weste, ye shall set asyde one portion of.xxv.M. meterodes long and brode, like as another porcion from the Easte syde vnto the West wherin ÿ sāctuary shal stand. As for Ge.xlv.a the portion that ye shall seperate out for ÿ lord, it shalbe.xxv.M.long, and.M.brode which seperated holy porcion shal belong vnto these, namely to the priestes toward the North.xxv.M.and toward the West.x M.brode, toward the East.x.M.brode also, and towarde the southe.xxv.M.long, wherin the sanctuary of ÿ lord shal stand: Ezechi.xliiii.c Yea, this same place shalbe the priestes ÿ xliii.b are of the chyldren of Sadoch, and haue B kept my holy ordinance: which went not astray in the errour of the chyldren of Israel, lyke as the Leuites are gone astray: and this seperated pece that they haue of lande, shalbe the most holy, harde vppon the borders of the Leuites. And nexte vnto the Priestes shal the Leuites haue.xxv M.long, and.x.M.brode. This shalbe on euery syde.xxv.M.long, and.x.M.brode.
Of this porciō they shall sel nothyng, nor make any permutation thereof, least the chief of the lande fall vnto other. for it is halowed vnto the lorde. The other.v.M. after the bredth that lyeth by the.xxv.M shall be common, it shall belong to the ci-tie and the suburbes for habitations, and the city shall stand in the middest thereof.
Let this be the measure, toward ÿ north part fyue hundred and foure thousande, towarde the south part fyue hundred and foure thousande, towarde the East parte fyue hundred and foure thousand, toward the West part, fyue hundred & foure thousande. The suburbes harde vpon the city, shall haue towarde the north fifty & two hundred toward the south.l.and.CC.toward the East.l.and.CC, toward ÿ West also.l.and.CC. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth harde vpon the sepera-ted holy grounde: namely.x.M.towarde the East, &.x.M.toward the west, next vnto the holy porcion, it & the encrease ther-of shal serue for their meate: ÿ labor in the city. They ÿ labor for the wealth of the city, shall maintayn this also, oute of what tribe so euer they be in Israell. All that is C seperated of the.xxv.M.long, and.xxv.M brode on the foure partes, ÿ shal ye put asyde for the seperated portion of the sanctuary, and for the possession of the citye.
The residue vppon bothe the sydes of the sanctuary and possession of the citie, shal belong to the prince, before the place of ÿ xxv.M.vnto the Easte ende and before ÿ place of the.xxv.M. westwarde vnto the borders of the citye, this shalbe the Princes porcion. This shalbe the holy place, & the house of the sanctuary shal stand in ÿ middest. Moreouer from the Leuites and the cities possessiō, that lye in the middest of the princes part: loke what remayneth betwixt the border of Juda, and the border of Beniamin, it shall be the Princes.
Now of the other tribes. From the Easte part vnto the West, shall Beniamin haue his porcion. Uppon the borders of Beniamin, from the East syde vnto the Weste, shal Simeon haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Simeon frō ÿ East parte vnto the West, shall Isakar haue his porcion. D Upon the borders of Isakar, from ÿ East side vnto the West, shal Zabulon haue his porcion. Upō ÿ borders of Zabulon from the East part vnto ÿ West, shall Gad haue his porcion. Upō ÿ borders of Gad southward, ÿ coastes shall reach from Thamar forth vnto the waters of stryfe to Cades, and to the floude euen to the mayne sea. Nu.xxxi.
This is the land with his porciōs, which Deut.xxxii.
ye shall distribute vnto the trybes of Is- and.xxxiii. raell, sayth the Lorde God. Thus wyde shall the citie reache vpon the north parte fyue hundred and foure thousande measures. The portes of the citie, shall haue ỳ names of ỳ trybes of Israel. Thre portes of the north syde, one Ruben, another Iu da, the third Leui. Upon the East syde, v.

C and foure thousande measures, w thre portes: the one Ioseph, another Beiamin the third Dan. Upon the south syde, fyue hundred and foure thousande measures, with thre portes: ỳ one Simeon, another Izakar, the thyrd Zabulon. And vpon the West syde, v. C. and .iiii. M. measures, w thre portes also: the one Gad, another As-ser, the third Nepthaly. Thus shal it haue xviii. M. measures round about. And frõ that tyme forth the name of the citie shall be: the lorde is there.

¶ The ende of the Pro-
phecye of Ezechiel.

The Boke of the Pro-
phete Daniel.

The first Chapter.

The prophet sheweth the captiuitie of Iehoakim king of Iuda. Of the sonnes that wer in captiuitie: the king commaundeth to choose whiche of them should be taught the learning and language of the Chaldees. They ar allowed the kinges feding. Daniel absteineth frõ the meat of the king of Babilõ.

A IN the thirde yeare of the raygne of Iehoakim kig of Iuda came Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon vnto Ierusalem, & besye-ged it: & the lord deliuered iiii. king. xxiiii. a. Iehoakim ỳ kyng of Iu-2 pa. 36. c da into his hand, with certain ornamẽts e xxiiii. a. of ỳ house of god, whiche he caryed awaye vnto the lande of Sennar to the house of his God, and there he brought them into hys gods treasurye. And the kyng spake vnto Asphanaz the chief chamberlayne ỳ he should bryng hym certayn of the chyldren of Israel, that wer com of the kings sede, and of Prynces, yong spryngaldes without any blemishe, but faire and well fauored, instruct in al wisedome, cunning and vnderstandyng, whiche were able to stand in the kings palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldish.
Unto these the kyng appointed a cer- B tain porcion of his owne meat, and of the wine which he dranke himself, so to nourysh thẽ thre yere: ỳ afterward thei might stand before the kyng. Among these now wer certain of ỳ childrẽ of Iuda: namely, Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias.
Unto these the chief chamberlayne gaue other names, & called Daniel, Balthasar, Ananias Sidrach: Misael, Misach: and Azarias, Abednago. But Daniel was at Ge. xxxix a poynt with hymselfe, that he would not Tobi, i be defyled thorow the kynges meate, nor Jud, xii the wine which he dronk. and this he de- C syred of the chief chamberlayne, least he should defyle hymself. So god gaue Daniel fauor and grace before the chief chã-berlain that he said vnto him: I am afraid of my lord the kyng, whiche hath appointed you your meate and drink, least he spy youre faces to be worse lykyng than the other spryngaldes of youre age, and so ye shall make me lose my head vnto ỳ kyng.
Then Daniel answered Melasser, whom the chief chamberlain had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, & sayd: O proue but ten daies with thy seruãtes, and let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drinke, then loke vpon oure faces, & theirs that eate of the kings meate. And as ỳ seest so deale with vs thy seruauntes.
So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them ten dayes. And after ỳ ten dayes, their faces were better lykyng and fatter, than all the yong spryngaldes which dyd eate of the kings meate. Thus D Melassar toke away theyr meat & wine, and gaue thẽ pottage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure spryngaldes cunning & learnyng in all scripture and wisdom: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstã-ding of al visions and dreams. Now whẽ the tyme was expyred that the kyng had appoynted to bring in these yong springaldes vnto hym, the chiefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonozor, & the king comoned with them. But amõg

them all were none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the king, whiche in al wisdom and maters of vnderstanding, that he inquired of them, found them ten times better, than all the sothsayers and charmers y^t wer in all his realm. And Daniel abode styll, vnto the fyrst yere of kyng Cirus.

The .ii. Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto him sothsayers, and requireth of them bothe the dreame and the interpretacion thereof. They aunswere that they cannot shewe it. The kyng comaūdeth all the wise men of Babilon to be slaine. Daniel requireth time to solute the question. The lord openeth y^e mistery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the king, and sheweth him his dreame, & the interpretation thereof. Of the euerlasting kingdō of Christ.

A In the second yere of y^e reigne Ioh.viii.b of Nabuchodonosor, had Na Da.iiii.a buchodonosor a dream, wher [illegible] through his spirit was vexed and his slepe brake from him Then the king commaunded to call together al the sothsayers, charmers, witches, & Chaldees, for to shew y^e kīg his dreame.
So thei came & stode before the king. And y^e king sayd vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, & my spirit was so troubled ther-with, that I haue cleane forgottē what I dreamed. Vpō this y^e Chaldees answered y^e king in y^e Sirians speche: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shew thy seruants y^e dreame, & we shal shew the what it mea neth. The kyng gaue the Chaldees their aunswer, and sayd: It is gone fro me. If ye wil not make me vnderstand y^e dreame with the interpretation thereof, ye shal die & your houses shalbee prised. But if ye tell me the dreame & the meaning thereof, ye shal haue of me giftes, rewardes, & greate honor, onely shewe me the dreame and y^e B signification of it. They answered again and sayd: y^e king must shew his seruauntes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kyng aunswered, saying: I perceiue of a truthe, that ye doe but prolong the time, forsomuch as ye see that y^e thing is gone fro me. Therefore yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall al haue one iudgement. But ye fayne and dissemble with vaine wordes, whiche ye speak before me to put of y^e time. Therfore tel me the dreame, and so shall I know yf ye cā shew me what it meaneth. Vpō this y^e Chaldees gaue answer before the king, and said there is no man vpon earth, that can tel the thing, which the king speaketh of: yea, there is neyther kyng, prynce, nor Lorde, that euer asked such thynges at a sothsayer, charmer, or Chaldee: for it is a very hard matter that the king requireth.
Neyther is there any that can certify the kyng therof, except y^e Gods, whose dwel-lyng is not among the creatures. For the C whiche cause the kyng was wrothe wyth great indignation, and commaunded to destroy all the wise men at Babilon: and the proclamation went forth, & the wyse men were slayn. They sought also to slay Daniell w^t his cōpanions. Then Danyell enquired of Arioch the kings stewarde of the iudgement and sentence, y^t was gone forth already to kyl suche as were wise at Babilon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch being then the kinges deputy. Why hath y^e king proclamed so cruel a sētence?
So Arioch tolde Daniel y^e matter. Vpon this wēt Daniel vp, and desired the kyng y^t he myght haue leysure to shew the king the interpretation: and thē came he home again & shewed the thing vnto Ananias Misael, and Azarias his companions: y^t thei should beseche the God of heauen for grace in this secrete, that Daniel and his felowes with other suche as were wise in Babilon perished not. Then was the mysterye shewed vnto Daniell in a vision by night.

And Daniell praysed the God of heauen. Daniell also cryed loude, and sayde: D O that the name of God might be praysed Da.vii.b for euer and euer, for wisdome & strength Luke.i.c are his own, he chaungeth the times and Iob.34.c ages, he putteth downe kinges, he setteth Ie.xxv.i.a vp kinges, he geueth wisedome vnto the Da.iiii.c wise, and vnderstādyng to those that vn-Iob.32.b derstande, he openeth the depe secrets: he i.Ti.vi.c knoweth the thyng that lyeth in darkei.Ioh.i.b nesse, for the light dwelleth with hym. I thanke thee, and prayse thee (O thou god of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wis-dome and strength, and hast shewed me y^e thyng, that we desired of the, for thou hast opened the kings matter vnto me. Vpon this went Da[illegible] vnto Arioch, whome the king ha[illegible]ed to destroy the wise at Babilo[illegible] went vnto hym, and sayd: destroy n[illegible]uche as be wyse in Babilon, but bryng me in vnto the king, and I shal shewe the king the interpretation. Then Arioch brought Daniell into the king in all the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue found a man among the prisoners of Iu-da, that shal shewe the kyng the interpretation. Then answered the king, and sayd vnto vnto Daniell, whose name was Balthazar, Art thou he that canste shewe me the dreame which I haue sene, and the interpretation therof: Daniell answered the kyng to his face, and sayde: As for this secrete, for the whiche the king maketh inquisition: it is neyther the wyse, the sor-Mat.xi.c. cerer, the charmer, nor the deuil coniurer that can certify the kyng of it. Onely god in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy dreame and that whiche thou haste sene in thine head vpon thy bed is this: O kyng thou diddest cast in thy mynd, what should come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries telleth thee, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for any wisdome that I haue more than any other liuing: but only that I might shew the king the interpretatiō, and that he might know the thoughtes of his owne heart. Thou kyng sawest, and beholde there stode before thee a great ymage, whose figure was maruellous great, and his visage grymme. The images head was of fine golde, his brest and armes of siluer, his body and loynes wer of copper, hys legges were of yron, hys fete were part of yron, and part of earth.
Thys thou sawest tyll the tyme that without any handes, there was hewen Lu.xx.b. mat.xxi.e of a stone, whiche smote the ymage vpon the fete, that wer both of yron and earth, and brake them to pouder: then was the yron the earth, the copper, the syluer and gold broken altogether in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that ỹ wind bloweth away from the sommer floures, that they can no more be founde. But the stone ỹ smote the image, became a greate moūtayn which fulfilleth ỹ whole earth: This is the dreame. And nowe wyll we shew before the king what it meaneth. O F king, thou art a king of kinges: For the Dan.v.d God of heauen hath geuen thee a kingdō riches, strēgth, and maiestye: and hath deliuered thee al thinges that are among ỹ children of men: the beastes of the fielde, and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen thee dominion ouer them all: Thou art that golden head. After thee ther shal arise another kingdom which shalbe lesse than thine. The thyrd kingdom shall bee lyke copper, and haue domination in all lands. The fourth kingdō shalbe as strōg as yrō. For like as yrō bruseth & breaketh all things: yea euē as yrō beateth euerye thing down: so shall it beate downe & destroy. Whereas thou sawest ỹ feete & toes, part of earth, & part of iron, ỹ is a deuided kingdō, which neuertheles shal haue som of ỹ yron ground mixt with it, forsomuch as thou hast sene the yron mixt wyth the clay. The toes of the fete that wer part of yron & part of clay: signifieth that it shall be a kingdom, partly strong, and partlye weak. And wheras thou sawest yrō mixt with clay, they shall mingle thēselues w the seede of the simple people, and yet not continue one with another, lyke as yron wyll not be souldered with a potsherde.
In the dayes of these kings, shall ỹ God of heauen set vp an euerlasting kingdom G which shal not perish, and hys kingdome Esa.ii.a shal not be geuen ouer to another people yea, ỹ same shal breake & destroy all these kingdomes, but it shall endure for euer.
And wheras thou sawest, that wout any handes there was cut out of the mountaine a Dei.xi. mat.xii stone, which brake ỹ yrō, ỹ copper, ỹ earth ỹ syluer & gold in peces: by that hathe the great god shewed ỹ king, what wyll come after this. This is a true dreame, & the interpretation of it is sure. Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fell down vpō his face, Act.xiiii & bowed himself vnto Daniell, and commāded that they should offer meatofferings & swete odours vnto him. The kig answered Daniel, & saide: yea, of a truthe your god is a god aboue all Gods, a lorde aboue al kinges, & an opener of secretes, seing thou cāst discouer this mystery. So the kyng made Daniel a great man, and Gene.xli gaue him many & great giftes. He made him ruler of al the countries of Babilon, & lord of al the nobles, that wer at Babylon. Now Daniell entreated the kyng for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. So that he made them rulers ouer al ỹ offices in the land of Babilon: but Daniel himselfe remayned styll in the court by the kyng.

The .iii. Chapter.

The king setteth vp a golden Image, whiche he commaundeth to be worshipped. Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago are accused bicause they despised the kinges commaundement. They are brought vnto the kyng, and commaunded to worship the image, they refuse to doe it, and are put into a burning ouen. By belief in God they are deliuered from the fier. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of god after the sight of the miracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golde image to bee made, A which was .lx. cubites hye, and sixe cubytes thycke. Thys he made made to be set vp in the fielde of Dura, in the lande of Babilon, & sent out to gather together the Dukes, Lordes and nobles the iudges and officers, the debities and shreues with al the rulers of the lande: y they might come to the dedication of the ymage which Nabuchodonozor the kyng had set vp. so the Dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debities and shreues with al the rulers of the lãd, gathered them together, and came vnto the dedicating of the ymage, that Nabuchodonozor the kyng had set vp. Nowe when B they stode before the ymage, which Nabu chodonozor set vp, the bedell cryed out w all hys myght: O ye people, kynreds and tonges, to you be it sayd: y when ye heare the noyse of the trompets, which shall be blowen w the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Simphonies and all maner of mu-sicke, ye fal down and worship the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonozor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not down and boweth hymselfe, shal euen the same houre be cast into an hote burning ouen.

Therfore when al the folke heard y noyse of the trompets that were blowen, wyth the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Simphonies, and all kynde of melody, then al the people, kinreds and nations, fel down and bowed themselues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonozor the kyng C had set vp, Now were there certaine men of the Chaldees, that went euẽ then and accused the Iewes, and sayd vnto y king Nabuchodonozor: O king, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou being kyng hast geuẽ a commaundement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompets, har-pes, shawmes, Psalteries, Simphonies, and al the other melodies, shal fal downe and bow themselues towarde the golden ymage: whoso thẽ fel not down and worshipped not, that he should be cast into an hote burning ouen. Now are there certaine Iewes whom thou hast set ouer the officers of the lande of Babilon namely, Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. These men (O kyng) regard not y commaunde-ment yea they wyl not serue thy Goddes, nor bow themselues to the goldẽ ymage, that thou hast set vp. Then Nabuchodo-nozor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded y Sidrach, Misach, and A-D bednago, shoulde be brought vnto hym.
So these mẽ were brought before y king Thẽ Nabuchodonozor spake vnto them, and sayd: what O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, will not you serue my Gods? nor bow your selues to the golden ymage that I haue set vp? Well be ready hereafter. When ye heare the noyse of the trompets blowe, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Simphonies, and al the other melodies: that ye fall down and worshyp the ymage which I haue made. But if ye worship it no, ye shalbe cast immediatlye into an hote burning ouen. Let see, what God is there, that may deliuer you out of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, and Abed-nago answered the kyng and sayd. O Nabuchodonozor, we ought not to consẽt vnto thee in thys matter: for why our god whom we serue is able to kepe vs frõ the Da.xvi.g E hote burning ouen, (O kyng) & can righte well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wyl not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kyng) that we wyll not serue thy gods nor do reuerence to the Image, whiche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodo-nozor ful of indignation, so that the countenaunce of hys face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded that y ouẽ shoulde be made .vii. tymes hotter than it was wont to be: and spake vnto the strõgest worthies that were in hys hoste, for to bynde Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burning ouen. So these men wer bounde in their coates, hosen, shoes, with their other garmentes, & cast into the hote burning ouẽ, for the kynges commaundement was so straight, and the ouen was exceadyng F hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, the flame of the fier destroyed them. And these three men, Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago fel downe in the hote burning ouen, being fast boũd Then Nabuchodonozor the kyng mar-uelled and stode vp in all haste: he spake vnto hys counsayle, and sayd: dyd you not cast these three men bounde into the fier?
They answered, and sayd vnto the kyng: yea, O kyng. He answered and said: lo, for al that, yet do I see foure men going loose in the midds of the fire, and nothing corrupt, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of God to loke vpon. Vpon thys went Nabuchodonozor vnto the mouth of the hote burning ouen he spake also and sayd: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruauntes of the hye God, go forth, & come Ec.xliiii.b hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach & Abed-nago wẽt out of y fier. The dukes, lordes and nobles, and y kynges counsayle came together to se these men, vpon whom the fyer had no maner of power in their bodies. Insomuch that ẏ very heere of their head was not burnt, and their clothes vnchaunged: yea, there was no smell of G fier felt vpon them. Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayd: blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach and Abednago: whiche hath sent hys Angell, and defended hys seruauntes, that put their trust in hym: ẏ haue altered the kinges commaundemēt and ieoparde their bodyes thereupon rather thā they would serue or worship any other God, except their owne God onely.

Therfore I wil and commaunde, that al people, kinreds, and tōges, which speake any blasphemy against ẏ god of Sidrach Misach, and Abednago, shal dye, & theyr houses shalbe pylsed: bicause there is no God that may saue, as thys. So the kyng promoted Sidrach, Misach and Abedna go in the lande of Babilon.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor dreameth againe. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his realme, and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored vnto his kingdome.

A NAbuchodonosor king vn to al people, kinreds, and tonges that dwell vppon the whole earth: peace be multiplied amōg you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens & maruelous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O how great are hys tokens, & how mightie are hys wonders? Hys kingdom is an euerlasting kingdom, and hys power lasteth for euer, and euer. I Nabuchodonosor beyng at rest in myne own house, and florishing in my palace, saw a dreame, which made me afraid: and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bedd, with the visions of myne head, troubled me. Then sent I out a commission, that al they which were of wisdome at Babilon, should be brought before me to tel me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Chaldes, and coniurers of deuils: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they could not shewe me: tyll at the last, there came one Daniell (otherwise called Balthazar, according to the name of my god) which hath the spirite of the holy Goddes in hym, to whom I tolde the dreame, saying: O Balthazar thou prynce of soth-sayers: forsomuch as I know, that thou hast the spirit of the holy Goddes, and no B secrete is hyd from thee, tell me therfore what the visiō of my dreame (that I haue sene) may signifie. I sawe a vision in my head vpon my bed: and beholde there stode a tree vpon the grounde which was very hye, great and mighty: the height reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: hys leaues were fayre, he had very much fruite, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein.
The beastes of the fielde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelte in the boughes therof. Shortly, all creatures fedd of it. I saw in my head a vision vpon my bed: and behold a watcher and a holy one came down from heauen, and cryed mightely, saying: hew down ẏ tree, breake of hys braunches, shake of hys leaues, and scater hys fruite abrode: that all ẏ beastes may get them away frō vnder hym, and ẏ foules from hys braūches Neuerthelesse, leaue the grounde of hys roote styll in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne fielde, with cheynes of yrō and stele. With the dew of heauen shal he be wet, and he shall haue hys part in the herbes of ẏ grounde with other wild beastes. That mannes hart of hys shalbe ta- C ken from hym and a beastes heart shalbe geuen hym, tyll. vii. yeares be come and gone vpon hym. Thys errande of ẏ watcher, is a commaundement groūded and sought out in the councell of hym, that is most holy to learne men for to vnderstād, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyng-domes of men, and geueth them to whom it lyketh him, and bringeth the very outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue seen. Therfore O Balthazar, tel thou me what it signifieth, forsomuch as al the wyse men of my kyngdom are not able to shew me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirit of the holy Goddes is in thee. Thē Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) helde hys peace by the space of an houre, and hys thoughtes troubled hym.
So the kyng spake and sayd: O Balthazar, let neyther the dreame nor the interpretation therof feare thee. Balthazar answered, saying: O my Lord, thys dreame happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretation to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that ẏ sawest which was so great and mighty, whose heygth reached vnto ẏ hea- D uē & hys bredth into all the world, whose leaues leaues were fayre, and the frute much, vnder the which the beastes of the fielde had their habitation, and vppon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt: euen thou (O kyng) art the tree, great and strong. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, & reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of the earth. But wheras the kyng saw a watcher, euē an holy Angell, that came down from heauen, and sayd: hew down the tree, & destroy it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in ẏ earth, and bynde hym vppon the playne fielde wyth cheines of yron & stele: he shal be wet with the dew of heauen and hys part shall be with the beastes of the field, till. vii. yeres E be come and gone vpō hym: this (O king) is the interpretation, yea, it is the very deuice of him that is hiest of all, & it toucheth my Lord the kyng. Thou shalte be cast out from men, and thy dwelling shal-be with the beastes of the fielde, wyth grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with ẏ dew of the heauē: yea Da. iii. a vii. yeres shall come and go vpon thee, tyl Ze. xxvii. b. thou know that the hyest hath power vpō the kingdomes of men, and geueth them to whom he list. Moreouer wheras it was sayd, that the roote of the tree should be left still in the grounde: it betokeneth that thy kingdome shall remaine whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to know, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore Ec. xx. b O king, be content wyth my counsell, that F thou mayest redeme thy sinnes with almes, and thine offences with mercye to poore people: for this shalbe an healing of thine error. Al these thinges touch ẏ kyng Nabuchodonosor. So after. xii. monethes the king walked vp and down in the palace of the kingdom of Babilon, and said: thys is the great city of Babilon, whiche I my selfe (with my power and strength) haue made a kynges court, for the honor of my maiesty. While these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fel a voice from heauē, saying: O king Nabuchodo-nosor, to thee be it spoken: thy kyngdome shal depart from thee, thou shalt be caste out of mennes cōpany: thy dwelling shal-G be with the beastes of the fielde, so ẏ thou shalt eate grasse as an oxe, till. vii. yeres be come and gone ouer thee: euen vntyll thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpon the kingdomes of men, and that he may geue them, vnto whom it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fullfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so ẏ he was cast out of mennes company, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dew of heauē, til his heares wer as great as Egles fethers, and hys nayles like birdes clawes. When thys time was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp mine eyes vnto heauen, and mine vnderstāding was restored vnto me again.

Then gaue I thankes vnto the hiest: I Da. iii. f. magnified and praysed hym that lyueth for euermore whose power endureth al-way, and hys kyngdome from one generation to another: in comparison of whom all they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothing. He hādleth accor- Psalme.

uen, and among the inhabiteurs of the earth: and there is none that may resyst hys hande or say: what doest thou? At the Job. xlii.
same tyme was mine vnderstāding geuē b. me again, and I was restored to the honor of my kingdom, to my dignitie, and to mine own shape again. My great estates and Princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kingdome againe, so that I had yet greater worship. Then did I Nabu-chodonosor, loue, magnifie and praise the kyng of heauē: for al hys workes are true and hys wayes right. As for those ẏ goe on proudly, he is able to bryng thē down.

The. v. Chapter.

Balthazar king of Babilon, abusing the vessels of the temple, seeth an hande writing in the wall. The sothsayers called of the king, cannot expound the writing. Daniell is called, which readeth it and interpreteth it also. Balthazar being slain. Darius succedeth in his roume.

KYng Balthazar made a gret A banket to his. M. Lordes w all these. M. he made great chere, and whē he was drōken with wine, he commaun- i. Paral.

which hys father Nabuchodonosor had takē out of ẏ temple at Ierusalem: ẏ the king & hys Lordes, w his Quene and cō-cubines might drink therout. So they brought ẏ goldē vessell, ẏ was taken out of ẏ temple of ẏ Lordes house at Ierusalē Then ẏ kyng & hys lordes w hys Quene and concubines, dronk out of them. They dronk wine & praised their Idols of gold, siluer, copper yron, wood & stone. In ẏ ve- B ry same houre there appeared fingers, as it had ben of a mānes hād writing, right ouer agaīst ẏ cādlestick vpō ẏ plaistr wall in the kynges palace: and the king saw the palme of the hande ỷ wrote. Then chaũ-Iere. l.a. ged the king hys countenaunce, and hys thoughtes troubled him, so that the ioin-tes of hys body shoke, & hys knees smote one against the other. Wherfore the kyng Dan,ii,a cryed mightely, that they shuld bring him the Charmers, Chaldees, and coniurers of deuils.

The king spake also to the wise men of Babilon, and sayd: whoso cã reade this writing, and shew me the plain meaning therof, shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the third part of my kyngdom. Upon, this came all the kynges wyse men: but they could neither reade the writing, nor shew the king what it signified. Then was the kyng sore afrayd, in somuch, that hys coloure chaunged, and his Lordes wer sore vexed. So by reason of thys matter, that C had happened to the king and his lordes, the Quene went vp her self into the ban-ket house, and spake vnto the king, saying O king God saue thy life for euer. Let not Da,ii,a. thy thoughtes trouble thee, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why there is a man in thy kingdom, that hath the spirit of the holy Goddes within hym as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstanding and wisdom like the Goddes. Yea the king Nabuchodonozor thy father, made this man chiefe of the sothsayers, Charmers, Chaldes, and readers of destenies: bicause that such an aboundaunt spirit, knowlege and wisdom (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, & to declare hard doutes) was foũde in him: yea, euen in Daniell, whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tel what it meaneth.
Then was Daniell broughte before the king. So the king spake vnto Daniell, and sayd: art thou that Daniell, one of the prisoners of Iuda whom my father the king brought out of Iewry? I haue heard D speake of thee, that thou hast the spirite of the holy Goddes, experience and vnder-standing and that there hath ben greate wisdom founde in thee. Now haue there ben brought me wyse and conning charmers, to reade thys wryting and to shew me the meaning therof. But they could not tell me, what thys matter signifyed.
Then heard I say, ỷ thou canst expounde darke thinges, and declare hard doubtes Well then, if thou canst reade thys wryting, and shew me the meaning therof, thou shalt be clothed with purple, haue a cheine of golde about thy necke, and rule the third part of my kingdome. Danyell E aunswered, and sayd before the kyng: as iiii.king. b.b. for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, Dan,i,a or geue thy rich giftes to another: yet not the lesse, I wil reade ỷ writing vnto the kyng and shew hym ỷ interpretatiõ ther of. O kyng heare. God ỷ hiest gaue vnto Nabuchodonozor thy father, the dignitie Da,ii,b of a king with worship & honour: so that all people, kinreds and tonges stoode in awe and feare of hym, by reason of the hie estate, that he had lent hym. For why, he Da,iii,a slew whom he would: he smote whom it pleased hym. Againe, whom he would he set vp: and whom he list he put down. But bicause hys hart was so proude, and hys stomacke set so fast vnto wilfulnesse: he was deposed from hys kingly trone, and hys maiestie was taken from hym. He F was shut out from among mẽ, hys heart was lyke a beastes heart, and hys dwellinges was with the wilde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, and hys body was wet with ỷ dew of the heauen, till he knew, that the hiest had power vpõ the kyngdomes of men, and setteth ouer them, whom he list.

And thou hys sonn (O Balthazar) for all thys, hast not submitted thine hearte, though thou knewest al these things: but hast magnified thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauẽ, so that ỷ vessels of his house wer brought before thee: that thou and thy Lordes, with thy Quene and concu-bins, might drinke wyne therout. And hast praysed the Idols of siluer and gold, copper and yrõ, of wood and stone: which neither see, heare, nor vnderstand. As for the God in whose hande consisteth thy Ie,x,iiii breath, and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued hym. Therfore is the palme of thys hande sent hither from hym, to token vp this writing. And thys is the Scripture, that is writtẽ vp: Mane, Thetell, Phares G Now ỷ interpretation of ỷ thing is thys.
Mane, God hath numbred ỷ kingdome, and brought it to an end. Thetel, thou art wayed in the balaunce, and are founde to lyght: Phares, thy kingdom is dealte in partes, and geuen to ỷ Medes & Perses.
Then commaunded Balthazar to clothe Daniell with purple, to hang a chaine of Esa,xlv,b. gold about hys necke, and to make a proclamation concerning hym: that he shuld be the ruler of the third part of hys kyngdom. The very same night was Balthazar

zar the king of the Chaldees slaine, and Darius out of Media toke in the kyngdō Dan. v. a being. lxii. yeres of age.

The. vi. Chapter.

Daniell is made ruler ouer the Lordes. The ymagination of an acte against Daniel. The proclamation of the acte, wherof Daniell is accused vnto the king as a transgressoure: he is put into a denne of Lions by the commaūdement of ẏ king.
He is deliuered by fayth in God. Daniels accusers are put vnto the Lions to be torne in sunder. Darius by the proclamation of a decree magnifieth ẏ god of Daniell.

A It pleased Darius to set ouer hys kingdome an. C. and. xx.
Lordes, which should be in al hys kingdom about. Aboue these he set thre Prynces (of whom Daniell was one) ẏ the Lordes might geue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vndiseased. But Danyell exceaded al these Princes & Lordes, for ẏ spirit of god was plēteous in hym, so ẏ the kyng was minded to set hym ouer the whole realme. Wherefore ẏ Princes and lordes sought, to pick out in Daniel some quarel against ẏ kingdom, yet could they fynde none occasion nor fault vpon hym: for why: he was so faythful, ẏ there was no blame nor dishonesty founde in hym.
Thē sayd these mē, we cā get no quarell against thys Daniel, except it be in ẏ law of hys God. Upon thys, went the Princes B and Lordes together vnto ẏ kyng, & sayd thus vnto him: king Darius god saue thy lyfe for euer. Al ẏ great estates of ẏ realme as ẏ princes, Dukes, Senatours, & Judges, are determined to put out a cōmaundement of ẏ kyng, & to make a sure statutē namely: ẏ whoso desireth any petition, el-ther of any God or mā (within these. xxx. dayes) except it be only of thee, O kyng: ẏ same person may be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng, confirme thou thys statute, and make a writing: that the thing which the Medes and Perses haue C ordained, be not altered nor broken. So Darius made ẏ writing, & confirmed it.
Now whē Daniel vnderstode ẏ the wryting was made, he went into hys house: & the wyndowes of hys wall towarde Jerusalem stode opē. There kneled he down vpon hys knees, thre tymes a day there he made hys petition, & praysed hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore tyme.
Then these men made search, and founde Daniel makyng hys petitiō, and praying vnto hys God. So they came to the kyng, and spake before hym concerning hys commaundement, saying: O kyng, haste thou not subscribed the statute, ẏ within xxx. dayes whoso requireth hys petition of any God or man but only of thy self, O kyng: he shalbe cast into ẏ denne of ẏ Lyons: The kyng aunswered and sayd: yea, it is true. It must be as a law of the Me-des and Perses, ẏ may not be brokē. Thē aunswered they, and sayd vnto ẏ kyng: Daniell one of the prisoners of Juda, O kyng, regardeth neyther thee, nor thy statute ẏ thou hast made: but maketh hys petition thre tymes a day. When the kyng heard these wordes he was sore greued, and would haue excused Daniell, to deli-uer hym, and put of ẏ matter vntill ẏ sun went down, to ẏ intent that he might saue hym. These men perceiuing the kynges mynd, sayd vnto him: know this (O king) that ẏ law of the Medes and Perses is, ẏ the commaundement and statute whiche the kyng maketh, may not be altered.
D Then the kyng bad them bryng Danyel, Bel. c.
and they cast hym into the Lyons denne.
The kyng also spake vnto Daniell, and sayd: thy God, whom thou alway seruest, euen he shall defende thee. And ther was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne: thys ẏ kyng sealed with hys own ryng, and wt the signet of hys Pryn-ces: ẏ the kynges cōmaundement concerning Daniel should not be broken. So ẏ E kyng went vnto hys palace, and eate no meate that night, neyther was there any minstrelsye brought in before hym neyther could he take any slepe. But betimes in ẏ morning at ẏ breke of ẏ day, the king arose, and went in all hast vnto the denn of the Lyons. Now as he came nye vnto ẏ denne, he cryed with a piteous voice vnto Daniel: yea, the kyng spake and sayd vnto Daniell: O Daniell, ẏ seruaunte of the liuing God, is not thy god (whom thou al F way seruest) able to deliuer thee from the Da. iii. e.
Lyons: Danyell sayd vnto the kyng: O Act. xii. c. kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God Jud. xiiii, c. hath sent hys Angell which hath shut the iii. king. xvii. c. lyons mouthes so ẏ they myght not hurte Heb. xi. f me. For why myne vngiltinesse is founde out before hym. And as for thee, O kyng, I neuer offended thee. Thē was the king exceading glad, & commaunded to take Daniel out of ẏ denne. So Danyell was brought out of ẏ den, & no maner of hurt was founde vpon hym. For he put hys trust

trust in hys God. And as for those men which had accused Daniell, ẏ king commaunded to bryng thẽ, and to cast thẽ in the Lyons denne: them, their childrẽ and Da. xiiii. g. their wiues. So ẏ Lyons had ẏ mastery Da. iii. f. of them, and brake al their bones asũder or euer they came at ẏ ground. After this, wrote king Darius vnto al people, kynreds, and tonges, ẏ dwelt in all landes: peace be multiplied wᵗ you. My commaũ-G demẽt is, in all my dominion and kingdõ that mẽ feare and stand in awe of Danyels God. For he is the liuing God, which

Dan. iii. f he hath preserued Daniell from ẏ power of ẏ Lyons. Thys Daniell prospered in ẏ reigne of Darius and Cirus of Persia.

The. vii. Chapter.

A vision of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniell. The vision is interpreted of foure kingdomes of the world. Of the power and encrease of Antychrist. Of the euerlasting kingdom of Christ.

A IN ẏ first yere of Balthazar king of Babilõ, saw Daniel a dreame and a vision was in hys head vpon hys bedd. Which dreame he wrote, and the summe of ẏ matter is thys. Daniell spake and said: I saw in my vision by nighte, and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauẽ stroue vpon the sea, and foure great beastes came vp from the Sea, one vnlyke another. The first was Je. iiii. a. b. as a Lyõ, and yet had he Eagles winges.
Ezec. i. b. x. a. I saw, ẏ hys wynges were pluckt from hym, and he taken away from the earthe:
Eze. xvii. a. that he stode vpon hys fete as a man, and that ther was geuẽ hym a mannes heart Beholde, ẏ second beast, was lyke a Beare
B and stode vpon the one syde. Among hys Pr. xxviii b. teeth in hys mouth he had thre great lõg teeth, and it was sayd vnto hym: aryse, eate vp much flesh. Then I loked, and behold, there was another lyke vnto a Leoparde, thys had wynges as a foule, euen Dan. viii b. and. xi. a. i. Mac. i. a. foure vpon ẏ backe. Thys beast had foure heades, and there was power geuen him After thys I saw in a vision bynight: and behold, the fourth beast was grimme and horrible, and maruellous strong. It had C great yron teeth, it deuoured and destroi-Ap. xiii. c, & xvii. a, ed, and stãped the residue vnder hys fete. It was farre vnlyke ẏ other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hornes, whẽ of I toke good hede. And beholde, there came vp among them another litle horne before whom there were thre of the first hornes pluckt away. Beholde, thys horne had eyes lyke a man: and a mouth speaking presumptuous thinges. I loked till Apo. i. c. iiii. a.
the seates were prepared, and til the olde aged sat hym down. His clothing was as Dan. ii. white as snow, and the heres of hys head lyke the pure woll. Hys throne was lyke ẏ firie flame, and hys wheles as ẏ burning fier. There drew forth a firie streame, and went out from hym. A thousande tymes a Apo. v. thousande serued hym. x. M. tymes tenn thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, and bokes opened.

Then toke I hede therunto, bicause of the voyce of the proude words, which the horne spake. I beheld till the beast was Apo. xix.
slain, and hys body destroyed, geuen ouer Ap. xx. to be brent in the fier. As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken away but their liues were prolonged for a time and season. I saw in a visiõ by night, and beholde, there came one in the cloudes of D heauen lyke ẏ sonne of a mã, which went vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought hym. Then gaue he hym power and dignitie regall, that all people, tribes and tonges should serue hym. Hys power is an euerlasting power which shal neuer be put down: & hys kyngdome endureth vncorrupt. My heart was vexed, and I Daniell had a troubled spirite within me and the visions of my head made me afrayd, tyl I gate me vnto one of them that stode by, to know the truth, concerning al these thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretation of the thinges. These foure great beastes, are iiii. kinges which shal arise out of ẏ earth These shal take in ẏ kingdom of ẏ Saintes of the most hiest, and possesse it styll E more and more for a long season. After thys I required diligently to knowe the truth, concerning the fourth beast, which was so farre vnlike the other beastes, and so horrible, whose teeth were of yron, and hys nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed and stamped the residue vnder hys fete: I desired also to know the truth, as touching the ten hornes that he had vpon hys head, and thys other which came vp afterwarde before whose face ther fell down thre, which horne had eyes and a mouth ẏ spake presumptuous thinges, & loked with a grimmer visage than his felowes.

Apo,xiii,a. lowes. I beheld, and the same horne made batail against ẏ Saintes: yea, and gat the Da,viii,c, victory of them vntil ẏ tyme that the olde F aged came, that the iudgement was geuē to the chefest Saintes: and tyll the tyme that the Saintes had the kyngdome in possession.

He gaue me this answer. That fourth beast shalbe ẏ fourth kingdom vpō earth: it shalbe more than al other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade down, and destroy al other landes. The.x. hornes are.x. kyn-Da,ii,c, ges, that shal ryse out of the kyngdome, af ter whom there shall stande vp another, Dan,ii,e which shalbe greater thā ẏ first. He shall subdue three kynges, and shall speake wordes against the hyest of all: he shal destroy the Saintes of ẏ most hiest, & think that he may chaunge tymes and lawes.
They shalbe geuē vnder hys power, vntil Apo,xii,d a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme. But G the iudgemēt shalbe kept, so that hys power shalbe takē from hym, for he shall be destroyed, and perish at ẏ last. As for the kyngdome, power and al myght that is vnder ẏ heauen: it shalbe geuē to the holy Luk,i,c, people of the most hiest, whose kyngdome Da,viii, is euerlastyng: yea, al powers shall serue and obey hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuerthelesse, I Daniell was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my counte-Luk,ii,c, naunce chaunged, but the wordes I kept styll in my heart.

The.viii. Chapter.

A vision of a strife betwene a Ramme and an he goate. The vnderstanding of the vision is of the battaile betwene the king of Persia, and the kyng of the Grecians. Of the shamelesse kyng Antychriste.

A In ẏ third yeare of the reigne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a visiō vnto me Daniell, after that I had sene thee Da,vii,a first. I saw in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe citie, which lyeth in the land of Elā and in the vision, me thought I was by ẏ riuer of Vlai. Then I loked vp, and saw, Ie,xlix,d and behold there stode before the riuer a Eh,xxxii, ramme, which had two hornes: and these two hornes were hye, but one was hyer than another, and ẏ hyest came vp behind I saw that thys ramme pusshed with his hornes, against the west, against ẏ north and against the south, so that no beastes might stande before hym, nor defende thē from hys power: but he dyd as hym lusted and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this B and then came there an he goate from the west ouer ẏ whole earth, and touched not the ground. This goate had a meruelous wrethē horne betwixt hys eyes, and came vnto the ramme that had ẏ two hornes (whom I had sene afore by ẏ riuer side) and ran fearcely vpon hym wt hys might.
I saw hym draw nye, vnto ẏ ramme, being very fearce vpō hym: yea, he gaue him such a stroke, ẏ he brake hys two hornes.
Neyther had ẏ ramme so much strēgth as to stand before him but he cast him down trode hym vnder hys fete, & no man was able to deliuer the ramme out of hys po- Da,vii,a wer. The goate waxed exceading great, and,xi,a, and whē he was at ẏ strongest, hys great i,Mac,i,c horne was brokē also. Thē grewe there other foure such lyke in the steade, toward the foure windes of ẏ heauen. Yea, out of C one of the least of these hornes, ther came yet vp another horne, which waxed mar-uellous great toward ẏ south, toward the east, and toward ẏ fayre pleasaunt land.
It grew vp to the host of heauē, whereof it did cast some down to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete. Yea, it grew vp vnto ẏ Prynce of the host from whom the dayly offring was taken, and the place of hys Sanctuary cast down. And a certaine season was geuen vnto it, against the dayly offring (bicause of wickednesse) that it might cast down ẏ verity to the grounde, and so to prosper in all things, that it went about. Vpon this D I heard one of the Saintes speaking, which Saint sayd vnto one that asked thys question. How long shal thys vision of the dayly Sacrifice, and of the wasting abhomination endure, that the Sanctuary and the power shal so be trodē vnder fote? And he aunswered hym: vnto the euening and the morning, euē two thousande and thre hundreth dayes then shal the Sanctuary be cleansed againe. Now when I Daniell had sene thys visiō and sought for ẏ vnderstanding of it: behold, ther stode before me a thing lyke vnto a man. And I heard a mannes voyce in the riuer of Vlay which cryed, & sayd: O Gabriell, make thys man to vnderstande the vision. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayd at hys comming, and fell down vpon my face.

Thē sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne E of man marke well, for in the last tyme shall

shal thys vision be fulfilled. Now as he was speaking vnto me, I waxed faynt, so that I sanke down to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, & set me vp again, saying: behold, I wil shew thee what shal happẽ in the last wrath: for in the time appointed it shalbe fulfilled. The Ramme which ẏ sawest with the two hornes, is ẏ kyng of ẏ Medes and Perses: but ẏ goate is ẏ kyng of Greke land: the greate horne that stode betwixt hys eyes, that is ẏ principal kyng. But wheras it brake, & foure other rose vp in ẏ steade: it signifieth, ẏ out of thys people shal stande vp foure kyngdomes but not so mighty as it. After these kyngdoms (while vngodlinesse is a growing) there shall aryse a kyng of an vnshamefast face, which shalbe wise in dark speakinges. He shalbe mighty and strong but not in hys own strength.

, Mac, i, a.

He shall destroy aboue measure, and al that he goeth about shal prosper: he shall slay ẏ strõg and holy people. And thorowe hys craftinesse, falshod shal prosper in his hand: hys heart shalbe proude, and many one shall he put to death in hys welthinesse. He shal stande vp against ẏ Prince of Prynces, but he shalbe destroyed without hande. And thys visiõ that is shewed vnto thee, is as sure as the euening and the morning. Therfore write thou vp this sight, for it wil be long or it come to passe. Upõ this was I Daniell very faynt, so ẏ I lay sicke certaine dayes: but whẽ I rose vp, I went about ẏ kynges businesse, and marueiled at the vision, neuerthelesse no man knew of it.

The. ix. Chapter.

Daniel desireth to haue that perfourmed of god which he hath promised concerning the returne of the people from their banishment in Babilon. A true confession. Daniels prayer is heard. Dan, v. e

IN ẏ first yere of Darius the sonne of Ahasuerus, whiche was of the sede of ẏ Medes, and was made kyng ouer ẏ realme of the Chaldees: yea euen in ẏ first yeare of hys reigne I Daniell desired to knowe the yearly number out of the bokes, wherof the Lord spake vnto Jeremy ẏ Prophet: that Jerusalẽ should lye waste. lxx. yeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lord for to pray and make myne intercession, with fasting, sackecloth and asshes: I prayed before the Lord my God and knowleged saying. O Lord, thou great and fearefull God, thou that kepest couenaũt and mercy with them, which loue thee, and do thy commaundementes, we haue sinned, we haue offended, we haue ben disobediente and gone back: yea, we haue departed frõ all thy preceptes and iudgementes. We would neuer folowe thy seruauntes the Prophetes that spake in thy name to our kynges and Princes, to our forefathers, and to all the people of the lande. O Lord righteousnesse belongeth vnto thee, vnto vs perteineth nothing but opẽ shame: as it is come to passe thys day vnto euery man of Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto al Israell, whether they be farre or nye, thorowout al ẏ lãdes wherin thou hast strowed them, bicause of the offences, that they had done agaynste thee.

Jer, xxv, b.

Yea, O Lord, vnto vs, to our kinges, and Princes, to our forefathers, euen to vs all, that haue offended thee, belongeth open shame. But vnto thee, O Lord our God, perteineth mercy and forgeuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe from hym, & haue not obeyed the voyce of the lord our God, to walke in hys lawes, which he laid before vs by hys seruauntes the Prophetes: yea, al Israell haue transgressed, and gone backe frõ thy law, so that they haue not hearkened vnto thy voyce. Wherfore, the curse and oth that is wrytten in the law of Moses ẏ seruaunt of God (against whom we haue offended) is poured vpõ vs. And he hath perfourmed hys wordes, which he spake against vs, and againste our iudges that iudged vs: to bring vpon vs such a great plague, as neuer was vnder heauẽ, lyke as it is now come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, al thys plague, as it is wrytten in the law of Moses, is come vpõ vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the Lord our God, that we mighte turne againe from our wickednesse, and to be learned in thy veritie. Therfore hath the Lord made hast to bryng thys plague vpon vs, for the Lord our god is righteous in all hys workes which he doth: for why? we woulde not hearken vnto hys voyce. And nowe, O Lorde oure God thou that with a mightie hande haste brought thy people oute of Egipte, to get thy selfe a name which remaineth this day, we haue sinned synned O lord, and done wickedly against al thy righteousnesse: yet let thy wrathful displeasure be turned away (I beseche the) from thy citie Jerusalem thy holy hil. And why? for our synnes sake, and for the wyckednesse of our forefathers, is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are about us. Now therefore, O our God, heare the praier of thy seruāt, and his intercessiō: O let thy face shine ouer thy sāc-tuary, that lyeth waste: for ye Lordes sake.

E O my god encline thine eare, and herken (at the least for thine own sake) opē thine eyes, behold how we be desolate: yea, and ye city also which is called after thy name: for we do not cast our praiers before thein our own righteousnes: no, but only in thy great mercies: O Lorde heare: O forgeue lord, O Lord consider, tary not ouer long: but for thine own sake do it. O my god, for thy city and thy people, is called after thy name. As I was yet speaking at my praiers, knowleging mine owne sinnes, and the synnes of my people, making so myne intercession before the lord my God, for ye holye hilles sake of my God: yea, whyle I was yet speaking in my prayer, behold, ye man Gabriel, (whom I had sene afore in ye vision) came flying to me, & touched me about the offryng tyme in ye euenyng. He informed me, and spake unto me: O Daniel said he, I am now come to make thee understand it. For as soone as thou begānest to make thy praier, it was so deuised, and therfore am I com to shew thee. And F why: for thou art a man greatly beloued Wherfore pōder the matter wel, that thou mayst learne to understand the vision. lxx wekes are determined ouer thy people & ouer the holy city: that ye wickednes maye be consumed, that the sinne may haue an end, that the offence may be reconciled, & to bryng in euerlastyng ryghteousnes, to fulfyll the visions and the prophetes, & to anoint the most holy one. Understād this then, and marke it wel, ye from the tyme it shalbe concluded to go & repaire Jerusater the. lxii. wekes, shal Christ be slayne, & they shall haue no pleasure in him. Then shal there com a people with the prince, & destroy ye city & the sanctuarye: & hys ende shal come as the water floud. But the desolation shal continue tyll the ende of the

The. x. Chapter.

There appeareth unto Daniel a man clothed in linnen, which sheweth him wherfore he is sent.

IN the thyrd yere of kyng Ci- A rus of Persia, there was shewed unto Daniell (otherwyse called Balthazar) a matter, yea a true matter, but it is yet a long tyme unto it. He understoode the matter well, and perceiued, what the visiō was. At the same time I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no lust to eate bread: as for flesh and wine there came none within my mouth: No, I did not once annoint my self, til ye whole thre wekes wer out. Upon the. xxiiii. daye of the first moneth, I was by ye great floud Da.vii.b called Tigris, I lift up mine eyes, & looked: Apoca.i.c and behold, a mā clothed in linnen whose loynes wer gyrded up with fyne golde of Arabie, his body was lyke the Chrisolyte stone, his face (to loke upō) was like lightenyng, his eyes as the flame of fyer, hys armes and fete were like fayre glistering metall, but the voyce of his wordes was B lyke the voyce of a multitude. I Danyell Da.iii.c, alone sawe this vision, the men that wer Acte.ix.a with me, saw it not, but a greate fearful-nesse fel upō them, so that they fled away and hyd themselues. I was left there my self alone, & saw this great vision, so long til there remained no more strength with in me. yea, I lost my colour cleane, I wasted away, and my stregth was gone. yet heard I the voice of his wordes: and as soone as I heard it, faintnesse came upon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde upō my face. And beholde an hād touched me, which set me upon my knees, and upō ye palmes of my hands, saying unto me: O Daniel, ye welbeloued mā, take good hede of the wordes that I shal say unto thee, & Dan.ix.b stand ryght up, for unto thee am I nowe sent. And when he had sayd these wordes I stode up treblyng. Thē said he unto me: feare not Daniel: for why? since ye first day ye thou diddest set thine hart to understād, & diddest chasten thy self before thy God: thy wordes haue bene heard. And I had come

com vnto the, whẽ thou begãnest to speak had not ye prince ouer the kingdome of ye Perses withstand me.xxi.dayes. But loe, Josu.v,d Michael one of the chief princes came to Dan.xii.a help me, & I was left to cõtinue ther with ye king of Persia, & am come to shew thee what shall happẽ vnto thy people in ye latter dayes. For it wilbe long yet or ye vision be fulfilled. Now whẽ he had spokẽ these wordes vnto me, I cast down my head to ye ground, & held my tong. Beholde, there touched my lips one very lyke vnto a mã.
D Then opened I my mouth, & sayde vnto him, that stode before me: O my lorde, my ioyntes are loosed in the vision and there is no more strength within me. How may my lordes seruant thẽ talk with my lord: seyng there is no strength in me, so yt I cã not take my breath? Vpõ this there touched me again, one much like a mã & com-Dan.ix.d forted me, saying: O thou mã so well beloued, feare not: be cõtent, take a good hart vnto the, & be strõg. So when he had spoken vnto me. I recouered, & sayd: Speake on my lord, for yu haste refreshed me. Then said he: knowest thou wherfore I am com vnto the? now wyl I go again to fyght wt the Prince of the Perses. Assone as I go forth, loe, the prince of Grekeland shal com. Neuertheles I wil shew the ye thing that is fast noted in the scripture of truth.
And as for al yõder matters, ther is none yt helpeth me in them, but Michaell youre prince.

The.xi. Chapter.

A prophecy of the kings of Persia. Of the kingdom of Grece. Of the kingdom of Egipt, & of the bonde therof, and of the battel with the kingdome of Siria. Of the Jewes that flye vnto the kyng of Egipt, whom Antiochus the king of Siria persecuteth, which figureth vnto vs Antichristes. The pride of Antiochus.

A AND in the first yere of Darius of Media, I stode by him, to comfort hym, & to strength hym, & now wyll I shew thee ye truthe. Behold, there shal stãd vp yet thre kinges in Persia, but ye fourth shalbe farre rycher than they all.
And when he is in ye chiefest power of his ryches, he shal prouoke euery mã against Da.vii,a the realme of Grekeland. Then shal there arise yet a mighty king, yt shal rule wt gret i.Mac.i,a dominion, & do what him lust. And assone as his kingdom cõmeth vp, it shall be destroyed, & deuided toward ye foure wyndes of ye heauẽ. They yt com after hym, shal not haue such power & dominiõ as he: but his kingdom shalbe scatterd: yea, euẽ among other than those. And ye kyng of the south shalbe mightier than his other princes.
And one shalbe stronger thã he, and shall rule his dominion with great power. And in the ende of yeres, they shalbe ioined together, & the kyngs daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north, for to B make frendship, but she shall not obtayne the power of ye arme, neyther shall she bee able to endure through his might: but she & such as brought her (yea, & he yt begatte her, & cõforted her for his tyme) shalbe de-liuered vp. Out of the brãches of her rote, there shal one stand vp in his stede, which with power of armes shal go through the kinges land of the north, and handle him accordyng to hys strength. As for theyr ydols & princes, with theyr costly Jewels of gold and siluer, he shal cary them away captiues into Egipt, & he shal reign more yeares than the kyng of the Northe. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the southe, he shall be fayne to turne a-gayn into hys owne lande. Wherfore hys sonnes shalbe displeased, and shal gather together a mightye great hoste of people: & one of them shal come, and goe through like a water floude: then shall he returne and go forth defying and boasting, vnto his own land. Thẽ the king of the southe C shalbe angry, and shal com forth to fyght against the king of the north: yea, he shal bryng a great multitude of people together, and a great heape shall be geuen into his hand: these shal he cary away with great pryde, forsomuche as he hath caste downe so many thousandes: neuertheles, he shall not preuayle. For the kyng of the northe shall gather (of the new) a greater heape of people than afore, and com forth (after a certain time & yeres) wt a mighty host, & exceedyng great good. At the same tyme ther shal many stand vp against the kyng of the south, so that the wicked chyldren of thy people also, shal exalt themsel-ues (to fulfyll the vision) and then fal. So the king of the north shal com to lay siege and to take the strong fenced cities. And the power of thẽ of the south shall not be able to abide him, & the best mẽ of the people shal not be so strong, as to resiste hym.
Shortly, when he commeth, he shall handle hym as he lyst, and no man shall be so hardye as to stand agaynst hym. He shall stande

stand in the pleasaunte countrey, which tho-rowe him shalbe destroyed. He shall sette his face with all his power to obtayn hys kyngdome, & to be lyke it. Yea, that shal he do, & geue him vnto the daughters amõg women, to destroy him. But he shal fayle, neyther shal he obtain his purpose. After this shal he set his face vnto the yles, and take many of them. A prince shal stop him to do him a shame, besyde the confusion ẏ els shal com vnto him. Thus shal he turn D agayn to his owne land, stumble and fall, and be no more found: so he ẏ came vpon him, and did him violence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasant kyngdom:
and after fewe daies he shalbe destroyed, & that neyther in wrath, nor in battell. In his stede there shall aryse a vyle persone, not holden worthy of a kynges dignitye: this shal com in peaceably, and obtayne ẏ kyngdome with fayre woordes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtye, (and destroy them) yea, and agaynst the Prynce of the couenaunte. So after that he hath taken truce wt him, he shal worke deceytfully that he maye get vp and ouer come him with a small flocke, and so with craftines to gette hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse, than eyther his fathers or graundfathers did.
E For he shall destroy the thyng that they had robbed and spoyled: yea, and all their substance, ymagining thoughtes agaynst the strong holdes, and that for a time. His power and heart shal be stirred vp with a great army, against the king of the south, where through the kyng of the south shall be moued then vnto battell, with a great & a mighty host also. Neuertheles, he shal not be able to stand, for they shal conspyre against him. Yea, they ẏ eate of his meate shal hurt him: so that his host shal fal, and many be slaine downe. These two kings shalbe mynded to do mischief, and talk of deceyte at one table, but they shall not prosper: for why? the end shal not com yet, [illegible] vnto the tyme appoynted. Thẽ shal he go home again into his owne lãd with great good, and sette his harte against the holy couenaunt: he shalbe busy agaynst it, and then returne home. At the tyme appoynted, he shall come againe and go towarde the southe. So shall it happen otherwise thã at the first, yet once again. And why?
Nu. xxiiii. b the shippes with Italians shal com vpon hym, that he may bee smitten, and turne againe: that he may take indignation against the couenaunt of holines, to medle against it. Yea, he shal turne hym, & draw such vnto him, as leaue the holy couenãt. F He shal set myghty men to vnhalowe the sanctuarye of strength, to put downe the daily offring, and to sette vp the abhomy-nable desolation. And such as breake the couenaunt, shal he flatter with faire wor-des. But the people that will know theyr god, shal haue the ouerhand and prosper.
These also that haue vnderstandyng among the people, shall enfourme the multitude: and for a long season they shalbee persecuted with sweard, with fyer, with captiuity, & with ẏ taking awaye of their goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vp with a litle helpe: but many shall cleaue vnto them faynedly. Yea, some of those that haue vnderstandyng shall bee persecuted also, that thei may be tried, purified and clensed, till the tyme be out: for there is yet another time appoynted. The ii. Tes. ii. a kyng shal do what him lyst, he shal exalte and magnify himselfe agaynst al that is God. Yea, he shal speake maruelous thin- Apo, xv, a ges against the God of all gods, wherein he shal prosper, so long till the wrathe bee fulfylled, for the conclusion is deuised already. He shal not regard the God of hys fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women.
Yea, he shal not care for any God, for he shal magnifye hymselfe aboue all. In hys place shal he worshyp the mightye stoute God: & the God whom his fathers knewe not, shal he honor with golde and syluer, with precious stones and pleasãt Jewels G Thus shal he do through his strong fẽced places, setting vp his straunge god whom he cõfesseth, & encreasing his glory. Such as wil receiue him, & take hym for God, he shall geue them greate worshyppe and power: yea, and make them Lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shal ẏ kyng of the south striue with him, and the king of ẏ north in like maner shal com agaynst him with charrettes, horsemen and wyth a great nauy of shippes. He shal com into the lands, destroy and go thorow: he shall enter also into the faire pleasante lande, Apo, xii, c Many cities and countries shall decaye, excepte Edom, Moab, and the beste of the chyldren of Ammon, whiche shall escape from his hande. He shall stretch forth hys handes vpon the countries, and the land of Egipt shal not escape hym. For thorow his going in, he shal haue dominion ouer ẏ treasures of silver & golde, and ouer all Apo, xi, c, ẏ precious Jewels of Egipt, Libia, and Ethiopia.

Ethiopia. Neverthelesse, the tidinges out of the East and the north shal trouble him for the which cause he shal go forth to destroy and roote out a great multitude.
The tentes of his palace shall bee pitched betwixt the two seas, vpon the hyll of the noble sanctuary: for he shall come to hys Apoc.xix.c and.xx.d death, & and then shal no man helpe him.

The.xii.Chapter.

He prophecieth the resurrection of the dead. The darkenesse of the Prophecy of Daniell.

A Apo.xix,e The time wyll com also, that ŷ ning of heauen: & those ŷ haue instructe ŷ starres, world without ende. And thou, O Daniell, shut vp these wordes, and seale ŷ boke til the last time. Many shall goe about here and there, and then shal knowledge encrease. So I Daniel looked, and C behold, there stode (as it were) other two, one vpō this shore of the water, the other vpon yonder syde. And one of them sayde vnto hym, which was clothed in linnen, & stode aboue vpon the waters of the floud: How long shall it bee to the ende of these Apoc,x.a wonderous workes? Then heard I ŷ mā tymes and halfe a time: and when the power of the holy people is cleane scattered not. Then sayde I: O my Lord, what shal happen after that? He answered: Goe thy that the dayly offryng shalbe put downe,

¶ The ende of the Prophecye of Danyell.

The Booke of the Prophete Oseas.

The first Chapter.

The time wherein Oseas prophecied. Oseas by taking an harlot to his wife, signifieth the idolatry of the people. The destruction of the ofspring of Jehu, and of the Israelites, is prophecied.

This is the woorde of the A Lord that came vnto O-seas the sonne of Beery, in the dayes of Ozias, Joathan, Achas, and Je-zekias kyngs of Juda, & in the tyme of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kyng of Israel.
Fyrste when the Lorde spake vnto O-seas, he sayde vnto hym: Goe thy waye, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: for the land hath commytted great whoredome against the Lord. So he wente and tooke Gomer, the daughter of Deblaim, whiche conceiued and brought forth

B hath a sonne. And the lord said vnto him: call his name Jezraell, for I wyl shortlye auenge the bloud of Jezraell, vpon the house of Jehu, and will bring the kyngdō of the house of Israell to an ende. Then wyll I breake the bow of Israel, in ÿ valley of Jezrael. She conceiued yet againe, and bare a daughter. And he sayde vnto hym: Call her name Loruhamah (that is not obteyning mercy:) for I wyll haue no C pitie vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remembraunce. Neuerthelesse, I will haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and wyll saue them euen through the Lord theyr God.
But I will not deliuer them through any bowe, sweard, bataile, horses, or horsemē.
Now when she had wayned Loruhamah she conceyued againe and bare a sonne.
Then sayd he: call his name Loamy. For D why ye are not my people: therefore wyll I not be your God. And though the number of the children of Israel be as ÿ sande of the sea, which can neyther be measured nor tolde, yet in the place where it is sayd vnto them: ye be not my people: euen ther shall it be thus reported of them: they bee the chyldren of the liuing god. Then shal the chyldren of Juda, and the chyldren of Israell, be gathered together agayne, & chose themselues one head, and then depart out of the lande: for great shal be the day of Israel.

The.ii.Chapter.

The people is called vnto repentaunce.

I Tell your brethren that they are my people: & your sisters, that they haue obtained mercy. As for your mother ye shal chyde with her, and reproue her, for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbande: vnlesse she put awaye her whoredome out of my sight, and her aduoutry from her brestes. Yf no, I shal strip her naked, and set her euen as she came in to the world: yea, I shal lay her waste, and make her lyke a wildernesse, and slay her for thirst. I shall haue no pitie also vpon her children: for they be the chyldrē of fornication.

Theyr mother hath broken her wedlocke, and she that bare them is come to confusion. For she sayde: I wyll goe after my louers that geue me my water and my bread, my wolle and flaxe, mine oyle, and my drinke. But I wil hedge her way B with thornes and stop it, that she shal not finde her footesteppes: & though she runne after her louers, yet shal she not get them: she shal seke them, but not find thē. Then Leu.xv,c shal she say: wel, I wil go turne agayn to my first husbande: for at that time was I better at ease than nowe. But this would she not know, wheras I yet gaue her corn Ez.xvi.b, wine, oile, siluer, and gold, which she hath hanged vpon Baal. Wherefore now will I go take my corne and wine agayne in their season, and set agayne my woll and my flaxe whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. And nowe wyl I discouer her foo- Je,xiii,e, lishnesse euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her out of myne handes. Moreouer I wyll take away all C her mirth, her holy daies, her new mones De,xvi,c her Sabbothes, and all her solemne fea-stes: I wyll destroye her vineyardes and figtrees, though she sayth: loe, here are my rewardes that my louers haue geuē me.

I wyl make it a wood, and wylde beastes shall eate it vp: I wyll punishe her also for Judi.ii.b. the daies of Baal, wherin she censed him, and x.b, deckyng hym with her earynges & chains, when she folowed her louers, and forgatt me sayeth the Lorde. Wherfore beholde, I will call her againe, bryng her into ÿ wildernesse, and speake frendly vnto her: ther wil I geue her her vineyards again: yea, and the valley of Achor also, to shewe her hope and comfort. Then shall she sing D there as in the tyme of her youth, and like Jos.vii,d as in the day when she came out of ÿ land of Egipt. Then (sayeth the Lorde) she shal Juda,b,a say vnto me: O my husbande, and shal cal Eze.xb,a me nomore Baal: for I will take awaye those names of Baal from her mouth: yea she shall neuer remember their names any more. Then wyll I make a couenaūt Le.xxvi,a with them, with the wilde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, & with euery thyng that crepeth vpon the earth. As for bowe, sweard and battaile, I wyll destroy suche Esa.ii,a, out of the lande, and wyll make them to slepe safely. Thus wyll I marry thee vn- Eze.xvi b to mine owne self for euermore: yea, euen to my selfe wyll I marrye thee in righte-ousnesse, in equitie, in louing kindenesse and mercy. In fayth also wyll I marrye thee vnto my selfe, and thou shalte knowe the lord.

At the same tyme wyll I shewe my self frendly and gratious vnto the heauens, sayeth the Lorde: and the heauens shall helpe the earth, and the earth shall helpe

i. Petar. ii. b the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shall help Jezrael. I will sow them vpon earth, Rom. ix. e for a sede to myne owne selfe: I wyll haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy And to them whiche were not my people, I wyll say, thou art my people: & he shall say: thou art my God.

The .iii. Chapter.

Of the loue of God towarde the people.

A Then sayd the lord to me. Go yet thy way and wowe an aduouterous womā: whō respect to straunge Gods, and loue the

Amo. vi. a uerlynges, and for an homer and an half of barly, and sayde vnto her: Thou shalte abide with me a long season, but see that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou medle with none other man, and then wil ii. Parba I kepe my self for thee. Thus the chyldren of Israel shall sitte a great whyle without kyng and prince without offryng and altare, without priest and reuelation. But afterwarde shall the chyldren of Israell conuert, and seke the Lorde theyr God, & ez. xxxiiii. b. * Dauid theyr kyng: & in the latter dayes they shal worship the lord and his louing kyndenesse.

The .iiii. Chapter.

A complaynt agaynst the people, and the priestes of Israel.

A Heare the worde of ẏ lord O ye chyldren of Israel.
For the lord must punish them ẏ dwell in the land.
And whither is no truth there is no mercy, ther is no knowledge of god in ẏ lande: but swearyng, lying manslaughter: theft and aduoutrye haue gotten the ouer hande, and one bloudgiltinesse foloweth another. Therfore shal the land bee in miserable case, & all they ẏ dwel therein shalbe rooted out. The beasts in ẏ field ẏ foules in the ayre, & the fishes in the sea, shal die: yet is there none ẏ wil chaste nor reproue another. For thy people rebuketh the priestes, which should reforme other time, & the prophet with the in the night.

I wil bryng thy mother to silence: & why? B sed vnderstandyng, therefore wyll I refuse thee also: so ẏ thou shalt no more bee my priest: And forsomuch as ẏ hast forgot ten ẏ law of thy god, I wil also forget thy childrē. The more thei increased in ẏ mul titude, the more they sinned against me: therfore will I change their honour into shame. They eate vp ẏ sinnes of my peo- Leui. vi. b.

thers thēselues haue medled wt harlots, Nu. xxv.
& offred wt bawdes: but the people that wil not vnderstande, muste be punyshed.
Though thou Israel art disposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shouldest not haue & brought thē to whordom. Their rulers loue rewardes, bryng (saye they) to theyr fethers: and they shall bee confounded in their offringes.

The .v. Chapter.

Against the priestes and rulers of Israel.

O Ye Priestes, heare this, take A hede, O thou houshold of Israel: geue eare, O thou kingly house: for it were your parte to se iudgemēt done: but you are are become a snare vnto Mizphah, and a spred nette vnto the mount of Thabor.

They kil sacrifices by heapes, & turne far from the lord, and I haue bene a rebuker of them al. I know Ephraim wel inough and Israel is not hid fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, and Israel is defiled.
They are not minded to turne vnto their god, for thei haue an whorish hart, so that B they cannot know the lord. But the pride of Israel wil be rewarded him in his face yea, both Israel and Ephraim shal fal for theyr wyckednesse, & Iuda with the also.
They shal com with theyr shepe and bullockes to seke the lord, but they shall not fynd hym, for he is gone from the. As for ye lord they haue refused hym, and brought vp bastard childre: a moneth therfore shal C deuoure them with theyr porcions. Blow with the shawmes at Gibea, and with the trompet in Ramah: cry out at Bethauen, vpon the yondsyde of Beniamin. In the tyme of ye plage shall Ephraim bee layde waste, therfore did I faythfully warne ye trybes of Israel. Yet ar the princes of Iu-da becom lyke them * that remoue ye land markes: Therefore wyll I poure oute my wrath vpon them like water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right of the law: for why they folowe the doctrynes of vngodly men. Therfore wyll I bee vnto Ephraim as a mothe, & to the house of Iuda D as a caterpyller. When Ephraim saw his sicknesse and Iuda his disease, Ephraim went vnto Assur, and sent vnto king Iareb: yet coulde not he helpe you, nor ease you of your payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a Lion, and as a Lions whelpe to the house of Iuda. Euen I wyll spoyle them, and go my way. I wil take them with me and no man shal rescue them. I wyll go, & returne to my place, tyl they knowledge ye they haue sinned, and seke me.

The.vi.Chapter.

Affliction causeth a man to tourne to god. The wickednesse of the priestes.

he hath smitten vs & he shall heale vs. He hath wounded vs, & he shal binde vs vp again: after two dayes shall he quicke vs, in the third daye he shal rayse vs vp, so ye we shal liue in his syght. The shal we haue vnderstandyng, & endeuor our selues to know the lord. He shal go forth as the spring of the day, and come vnto vs as the euening & mornyng rayn vpon ye earth. O Ephraim, what shal B I do vnto thee? O Iuda, how shall I en- Pro.,xvi.a treate thee? seyng your loue is like a morning cloude, and like a dew ye goeth early away. Therfore haue I cut downe ye prophets & let them be slayne for my wordes sake, so that thy punishment shal come to Mat.,ix,b. light. For I haue pleasure in louing kind and.xii. a nes, & not in offring: yea, in the knowlege Ier., vii,c of god, more than in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as Adam did, so haue they broken my couenaunt, & set me at nought. Gen.iii,b Gilead is a citie of wicked doers, of mali- C tious people and bloudsheders. And as theues armed wayt for hym that passeth by ye way, such is the counsel of ye priestes, which with one agreed counsayle, mur-ther cruelly such as kepe ye way: yea, they dare do al vnspeakeable mischief. Horryble things haue I sene in the house of Israel: there plaieth Ephraim ye harlot, and Ier.viii b Israell is defiled: yea, and thou Iuda kepest an haruest for thy self, when I return the captiuity of my people.

The.vii.Chapter.

Of the vices and wantonnesse of the people.

WHe I vndertake to make Is- A rael whole, then the vngracyousnesse of Ephraim, and the wickednesse of Samaria, cometh to lyght: then goe they about with lies: therfore the thefe robbeth within, and withoute the spoyler destroyeth. They consider not in theyr harts, ye I remember al their wyckednes. Now their own inuentions haue beset the, which I see wel ynough. Thei make the king and the Prynces, to haue pleasure in theyr Rom.i.d wyckednesse and lyes. All these burne in B aduoutry, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth when he hath lefte knedyng, tyl the dow be leauened. Euen so goeth it this day with our kinges and princes: for they begin to bee wood dronken thorowe wine, they vse familiaritie with suche as deceiue them. They with the imaginatio of their hart are like an ouen, theyr sleepe is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the morning is he as hote as the flame of fier: thei ar altogether as hote as an o-ue. They haue deuoured their owne iud- C ges, all their kings are fallen: yet is there none

none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mirt among ẏ heathen, Ephraim is becom lyke a cake ẏ no man turneth: straungers haue deuoured Osee, v. a his strength, yet he regardeth it not. He wareth ful of grey heares, yet will he not know it: & the pride of Israel is cast down before theyr face, yet wil they not turn to ẏ lord theyr god, nor seke hym for all this.
Ephraim is like a doue that is begiled, & iiii.ki. xvi, hath no hart. Now call they vpon the Eb, giptians, now go they to ẏ Assirians: but while they be going here and there, I shal spreade my net ouer them, & drawe them down as the foules of the ayre: and accor ding as they haue ben warned, so wyll I Esai, i, a, punish thē. Wo be vnto thē, for they haue D forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for ii. Pe. ii. a they haue set me at naught: I am he that Mat. x v. a Esa. xx, c haue redemed them, & yet they dissemble ez. xxxiii. f with me. They call not vpon me wͭ theyr hartes, but lye houling vpon theyr beds.
Wheras they com together, it is but for meat & drink, & me they wyl not obey. I haue taught thē & defēded their arme: yet do they imagine mischiefe against me.
They turne thēselues but not to the most hiest, & are becom as a broken bow. Their princes shalbe slain with ẏ sweard, for the malice of their tonges, such scorners shall they haue in the land of Egipt.

The. viii. Chapter.

The destruction of Juda and Israel, bycause of their ydolatrie.

A SEt the horne to thy mouthe, & blowe: swiftly (as an Eagle) shal the enemy come agaynst the house of the lord: for they haue broken my couenant, & De. xxxi d transgressed my law. Israell should haue sayd vnto me: thou art my god, we knowe thee, but he hath refused the thing that is good, therfore shal the enemy folow vpon iii. ki. xii c. hym. They haue ordeyned kings, but not thorow me: they haue made Princes, and [illegible], b, I muste not knowe of it. Of theyr syluer and golde haue they made them images, to bring themselues to destruction. Thy iii, ki, xii a calfe, (O Samaria,) shall be taken awaye, for my wrathfull indignation is gone forth agaynst thee. Howe long wyll it be, or they can be clēsed? For ẏ calf came B frō Israel, ẏ workman made it, therfore cā it be no god, but euen in peces shal ẏ calfe of Samaria bee brokē. They haue sowen wind, therfore shal they reape a storme.
Their sede shal beare no corne, there shal no meale be made of their increse: though they reape, yet shall strangers deuoure it vp. Israel shal perish, the Gētiles shal entreate hym as a foule vessell. Synce they went vp to the Assirians, they are becom lyke a wilde Asse in ẏ desert. Ephraim geneth rewards to get louers, & though thei C hire thē among ẏ heathen: yet now wil I gather thē vp. They shal begin to be weried with ẏ burthen of kinges & Princes.
Ephraim hath made many altars to doe iiii. king. xvii. c wickednesse, his altars (I saye) he had to sin. Though I shew thē my law neuer so Ez. xviii much, they count it but strange doctryne.
Wheras they do sacrifice, offring ẏ flesh, & D eating it, ẏ lord wil haue no pleasure ther in: but will remēber their wickednes, and punish their sinnes. Israel turneth again De, xviii into Egipt, they haue forgotten hym that iii, king, made them, they build fayre palaces, and xvii, a, Juda maketh many strōg cities: therefore iiii, king, wyl I send a fier into theyr cities, & it shal xviii, b consume theyr palaces.

The. ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

DO not thou triumph, O Isra- A ell, make no boasting ouer ioyous things as do the Hethē, for thou haste committed aduoutry againste thy God: whorysh rewardes hast thou loued, more than al ẏ corne floures. Therfore shal thei Agge. i. c no more enioy ẏ corn floures & wine presses, & theyr swete wine shal faile thē. They wilnot dwel in the lordes lād: but Ephraim turneth again into Egipt, & eateth vn- Ez. iiii, c cleane thinges among the Assiriās. They poure out no wine for a drink offring vnto the lorde, neyther geue they hym theyr slayn offeryngs: but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherin, all they ẏ eate thē are defiled. For the bread ẏ they haue such lust vnto, shal not com into the house of ẏ lord. What will ye do then in ẏ solēne B dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? Loe, they shall get them away for the destruction. Egipt shall receiue thē, and Noph, shall burye them. The nettels shall ouergrowe theyr pleasaunt goodes, and bur-res shall be in theyr tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israell) the tyme of visitation is come, the dayes of recompencyng are at hande: and then shall Israell knowe, that

C figges in the toppe of the figge tree. But thei are gone to Baal Peor, and rū away fro me to that shamefull ydol, and are become as abhominable as their louers. Ephraim flyeth like a bird, so shal their glory also: Insomuch that they shall neyther beget, conceiue nor beare children. And though thei bring vp any, yet will I make them childlesse among men. Yea, wo shal come to them, when I depart from them. Ephraim (as me think) is planted in welthinesse, like as Tirus: but now muste she bring her owne children forth to the mā-D slear. O Lord thou shalt geue them: what shalt thou geue thē: geue thē an vnfruitful wombe, and dry breastes. All their wickednesse is done at Gilgal, there do I abhorre thē. For the vngratiousnes of their owne inuentions, I wil driue thē out of my house. I wil loue thē no more, for all their princes are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, theyr roote is dryed vp, so y they shall bring no more fruit: yea, and though they bryng forth any, yet wyll I slay euē the best beloued fruit of their body. My god shal cast them away, for they haue not ben obedient vnto him: therfore shall they go astray among the heathen.

The .x. Chapter.

A Against Israel and his ydols.

ISraell was a goodly vyne, but he hathe broughte foorth vnprofitable fruit: yea, the more fruite he had, the moe altars he made: y more good I did to their lande, the more frendshippe shewed they to theyr images. Their hart is deuided, therfore wyl they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe theyr images, he shal destroy theyr altars. Thē shall they saye: we haue no king, for why: we haue not feared y lord. And what shal then the kyng do to vs: They common together, and sweare vayne othes: they bee confederate together, therfore groweth their punishmēt as the wedes in the furrowes of the land. Thei that dwel in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Bethauen, therfore shall the people mourne ouer them.

Yea, and the priestes also that in their B welthinesse reioyced with them, & why? it shall passe awaye from them. It shall bee brought to the Assirian for a presente vnto kyng Jareb. Ephraim shal receiue full punishmente, Israell shal be confounded for his owne ymaginations. Samaria with his Kyng shall vanishe awaye, as the scumme in y water. The hye palaces of Auen, where Israel do synne, shall bee cast down: thystle and thornes shal grew vpon theyr altars. Then shall they say to Lu. xxiii. c the mountaines: couer vs, and to the hyl- Apo. vi. c les, fall vppon vs. O Israell thou haste C sinned as Gabaa dyd afore tyme where Ju. xix. a. they remayned: shoulde not the battayle then come vpon the wicked chyldren, as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I wyl chasten them, euen after mine owne desyre: y people shall bee gathered together ouer them, when I punishe thē for theyr great wyckednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cow that is vsed to go to plow, therfore I loued him, and fel vpon his faire necke: I droue Ephraim, Juda plowed, and Jacob played the husbande manne. Sowe vnto righteousnesse, and reape the fruites of weldoing: plowe vp your freshe lande, for it is time to seke the Lord, till he come and rayne ryghteousnesse vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlinesse, ye haue D reaped iniquitie, you haue eaten the fruite of lyes. Seing thou puttest thy cōfidence in thine own wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy worthies: ther shal grow a sedition among thy people. All thy strong cities shalbee layde waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his famyliars, through hym that was auenged of Arbell, in the day of battayle, where the mother perished with her children: Euen so shall it go with you (O Bethell) bicause of your malicious wickednesse. Lyke as the mornyng goeth away, so shall y king of Israell passe.

The .xi. Chapter.

Against the vnkindnesse of Israel.

A W Hen Israell was yong I lo= Exo. iiii.b ued hym, and called my sonne and.vi.b. out of the land of Egipt. But math. ii.c the more they wer called, the Ec. xxxii. more they went back, offring
b.
iii.ki xii.e vnto ydols of Baal, and censing ymages. iiii ki,xvij.c I learned Ephraim to go, and bare them in mine armes, but they regarded not me ỹ would haue helped them. I ledde them with cordes of frendship, and with bands of loue. I was euen he that layd ỹ yoke v= Exo.xvi.c pon their neckes. I gaue them fodder my self, that they should not go again into E= gipt. And now is Assur their king, For they would not turne vnto me. Therfore shall the sweard begin in their cities, the store ỹ they haue layd vp, shalbe destroied & eaten: and ỹ bicause of their owne ima= ginations: and my people shal stande in a B dout whither to turne thẽ, for whẽ ỹ pro= phets called them to ỹ most hiest, not one yet would geue him his glory. What gret thinges haue I geuen thee, O Ephraim?
Ge. xix.d how faithfully haue I defended thee, O De.xxix.a Israel? haue I dealt with the as with A= dama? Or haue I entreated thee like Se= boim? No, my hart is otherwyse mynded.
Yea, my mercy is to feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrathful displeasure. For I am God & no man, I am euen ỹ holy one in ỹ myd= Apoc. v.a dest of thee thoughe I came not within ỹ city. The Lorde roreth lyke a Lion, ỹ they may folow him: yea, as a Lion roreth he, ỹ they may be afraid like the children of ỹ sea, ỹ thei may be scattered away from E= gipt, as men scarre birdes: & frayd awaye (as doues vse to be) from ỹ Assirians lãde: and ỹ bicause I would haue them tary at home, saith the lord. But Ephraim goeth about me with lies, & the house of Israell dissembleth: Only Juda holdeth him with God, and with the true holy thynges.

The.xii.Chapter.

Against the vaine trust of the people.

A E Phraim is fed with ayre, & fo= loweth after the east wind: he is euer increasing lies and de struction. They be cõfederate with the Assiriãs. Their oyle is caryed into Egypte. The lorde hath a iiii.ki. xvi court to holde with Juda, and wyl punish
d. Jacob. After theyr owne wayes, and ac= Esa.lviii.b cordyng to theyr owne inuentions, shall he recõpence them. He toke his brother by Ge. the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in his strengthe he wrestled Ge. with God. He stroue with the Angell, and gat the victory: so that he prayd & desyred Ge.
him. He found hym at Bethel, and ther he B talketh with vs: Yea, ỹ lord god of hostes, euen the lord himself remembred hym.
Then turne to thy god, kepe mercy and e= quity, & hope stil in thy god. But thou art like ỹ marchant, ỹ hath a false wayght in hys hand, he hath a pleasure to occupy ex= tortion. Ephraim thinketh thus: Tush, Apoc.
I am rych, I haue good ynough: in al my workes shall not one fault be founde ỹ I haue offended. Yet am I ỹ Lord thy god, C euen as when I brought thee out of the land of Egipt, and set thee in thy tentes, & as in the hyest feast dayes. I haue spoken through the prophetes, and shewed dy= uerse visions, & declared my self by the mi= nistration of the prophets. But at Galead is the abhomination, they ar fallen to va= nity. At Gilgal they haue slain oxẽ: as ma ny heapes of stones as they had in theyr landfurrowes, so many altars haue they made. Jacob fled into ỹ lãd of Siria, and Ge.xxviii Israell serued for a wyfe, & for a wyfe he b. kept shepe. By a prophet the lord brought thẽ out of Egipt, & by a prophet he preser= ued thẽ. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thorow his abhominatiõs, therfore shal his bloude be poured vppon hym self, & the lorde his god shal rewarde him hys blasphemies.

The.xiii.Chapter.

Of the abhomination of Israel.

W Hen Ephraim spake, the A heathẽ trẽbled: & he was exalted amõg ỹ Israelites but he is gone backe to Baall: therefore muste he dye. And nowe they synne more & more: of their syl= uer they make thẽ moltẽ images, after ỹ imaginations of their own braines, ỹ is very ydols, & yet al is nothing, but ỹ work of the craftesman. Notwithstãding, they preach of the same to suche as there sacry= ficeth: whoso wyl kisse the calues, offereth perfectly. Therfore they shalbe as ỹ mor= ning cloud, & as ỹ dew that early passeth awaye: and lyke as dust that the whyrle= wind taketh away from the flore, and as smoke that goeth out of the chimney.

B I am ẏ lord God, which brought thee out Ex.xx.a of ẏ land of Egipt:ẏ thou shouldest know no god but me only,& that thou shouldest haue no sauior but only me. I tooke dyly-gēt hede of thee in ẏ wildernesse, that drie land. But whē they wer wel fed,& had ynough, they waxed proud, and forgat me: therfore wil I be vnto thē as a lyon,& as a Leopard in ẏ wayes to the Assirians. I wyl come vpon them, as a she beare that is robbed of her whelps,& I wyll break ẏ stubborne hart of theyrs. There wil I deuoure thē as a Lion: yea, the wild beastes shal teare them. O Israell, thine iniquitye hath destroyed thee, but in me only is thy help. Where are thy kinges now, ẏ should help the in al thy cities? yea,& thy iudges of whom thou saidest: geue me a king and C Princes?(well) I gaue thee a king in my wrath,& in my displeasure wil I take him frō thee again. The wickednes of Ephraim is bound together,& his sin lieth hyd.
Therfore shal sorowes com vpon hym, as vpon a woman that trauelleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he cōsidereth not ẏ he should not haue bene able to haue endured in ẏ tyme of his birth, had not I defē-ded him frō ẏ graue,& delivered him frō death. O death, I wyl be thy death: O hel, D I wyl be thy styng: yet can I se no cōfort, for when he is now the goodliest among ẏ brethrē, the East wynde(euen the wynd of ẏ lord) shal com down from ẏ wildernes & drye vp his conduits, and drynke vp his welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels. As for Samaria, they shalbe made waste, and why? they are disobedient vnto their god. They shal perish with the sweard: theyr children shall bee slain, and their women great with chylde shalbe ript vp.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

The destruction of Samaria.

A O Israel, turne the now vnto ẏ lord thy god; for thou hast taken a great fal, through thy wickednes. Take these wor-des with you, whē ye turn to ẏ lord, and say vnto him: O forgeue vs all our sinnes, receiue vs graciouslye,& then wil we offer ẏ bullocks of our lippes vnto thee. Assur shalbe no more our helper, neither wyl we ride vpō horses any more. As for ẏ works of our hands, we wil nomore call vpon them. For it is thou that art our god: thou shewest euer mercy vnto the fa- B therlesse. O if they would do this, I should heale theyr sores: yea, with all my harte would I loue them: so ẏ my wrath should cleane be turned away from them. yea, I would be vnto Israel as the dew, and he should grow as the Lily,& his rote should breake out as Libanus. His braunches should spread out abrode,& be as faire as C the Oliue tree,& smell as Libanus. They ẏ dwel vnder his shadow should come again,& grow vp as the corne:& florishe as the vyne. He should haue as good a name as ẏ wyne of Libanus. O Ephraim, what haue I to do with ydols any more? I will gratiously heare him, and lead him forth.
I wyll be vnto thee as a grene firre tree: D vpon me shalt thou finde thy fruite. Whoso is wyse shall vnderstande this: and he Iere.ix.b that is ryght instruct, wyl regarde it. For the wayes of the Lorde are ryghteous, Ps.xviii.c such as bee godly wyll walke in them. As for the wycked, they wyll stumble therein.

¶ The ende of the Pro-
phecye of Oseas.

phete Ioell.

The first Chapter.

A prophecy against the Iewes. He exhorteth the priestes to praier and fasting, for the miserye that was commyng at hand.

This is the worde of ẏ lord A that came vnto Ioell the sonne of Phatuell. Heare O ye elders: ponder thys well, all ye that dwell in the lande: yf euer there happened such a thing in youre dayes, or in the dayes of youre fathers. Tel your children of it, and let them shew it vnto their children, and so they to certifye theyr posteritye thereof. Looke what the caterpiller hath left, that hath ẏ grashopper eaten vp: what ẏ grashopper left, that hath the locust eaten vp:& what the locust hath left, that hath the blasting consumed. Wake vp ye dronkardes, and B wepe, mourne all ye wine suppers, by-cause of your swete wine: for it shalbe ta-kē away frō your mouth. Yea, a mighty & an an innumerable people shal come vp into my land: these haue teeth like the teeth of lions, and chawbones like the lionesses.

De.xxxii,d They shall make my vineyarde wast, they shall pill of the barke of my figtrees, strip them bare, cast them awaie, ⁊ make the braunches white. Make thy mone as a virgin dothe that girdeth her self wyth sacke, bicause of her bridegrome. For the meate and drinke offryng shall be takẽ away from the house of the Lorde, and the priestes, y lordes ministers shall mourne.
The field shalbe wasted, the lande shal be in a miserable case: for the corn shalbe destroyed, the swete wine shall come to confusion, and the oyle vtterly desolate. The C husband men ⁊ the wine gardeners shall loke piteously, and make lamẽtation for the wheate, wine and barley, and bicause the haruest vpõ y field is so clene destroyed. The grape gatherers shal make great mone, when y vineyard and figtrees bee so vtterly wasted. Yea, al the pomegranates, palmetrees, appletrees, and the other trees of the field shal wither away. Thus the mery chere of the chyldren of menne shall come to confusion. Girde you, and make youre mone, O ye priestes, mourne ye ministers of the altare: go your way in, D and slepe in sackcloth, O ye officers of my god: for the meat and drink offring shalbe taken away from the house of youre god.
Proclaime a fasting, call the congregati-Joel. ii,d on, gather the elders, and all the inhaby-tors of the lande together into the house of the lord your God, and crye vnto y lord: alas, alas, for this day. And why? the day of the lord is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer from the almighty. Shal not the meats be takẽ away before our eyes, the mirth also and ioye from the house of our god? The sede shal perysh in y ground the garners shal lye waste, y floures shall be broken downe, for the corne shalbe destroyed. O what a sighing make the kine? the bullockes are in very euyll likyng, bi-cause they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famished away. O Lord, to thee will I cry: for the fire hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wildernesse, and y flame hath burnt vp al the trees of the field. Yea the wilde beastes cry also vnto thee, for y water riuers are dried vp, ⁊ the fier hath consumed the pastures of the wildernesse.

The.ii Chapter.

He prophecieth the comming ⁊ crueltie of their enemies. An exhortation to moue them to conuert.

Blow out the trompet in Si- A on, and cry vpon my holy hil, that all suche as dwel in the lande, may tremble at it: for y day of the lord commeth, and Soph.i, Am.v, is harde at hand: a darke day, a glomming day, a cloudy day: yea, and a stormy daye, lyke as the morning spreadeth out vpon the hilles. Namely, a great and mightye people: suche as haue not bene since y beginning, neither shalbe after them for euermore. Before him shalbe a consuming fier, ⁊ behinde him a burnyng flame. The lande shalbee as a garden of pleasure before hym: but behynde hym shall it bee a verye waste wyldernesse, and there is no mã that shal escape him: They are to loke vpon like barbed horses, and runne lyke horsemen. Thei skip vp vpon the hilles as it wer the sound of charrets: as the flame of fier that consumeth the strawe, and as a mighty people ready to the bataile. The folke shalbe afrayd of hym, al faces shalbe B as blacke as a pot. These shall runne like Giaunts, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euerye man in his goyng shall kepe his array, and not go out of his pathe. There shall not one driue another, but eche shal kepe his own way. Thei shal breake in at the windowes, ⁊ not be hurt.
They shall come into the citie, and runne vpõ the walles. They shall clunbe vp vpõ the houses, and slip in at the windowes like a thefe. The earth shall quake before C him: yea, the heauens shalbe moued. The Joel.iii, sunne and the moone shalbe darkened, ⁊ the starres shall withdraw theyr shyne.
The Lord shall shew his voyce before his hoste, for his host is great, strong ⁊ mighty, to fulfyll his commaundement. This is that greate and maruellous fearefull daye of the Lorde. And who is able to a-byde it? Nowe therefore sayeth the Lord: Apo.vi, Turne you vnto me with all your hartes, with fasting, weping, and mournyng: De.iiii, rent youre heartes and not your clothes, Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, for he is gratious and mercifull, long suffe-ryng, and of great compassion and ready to pardon wickednesse. Then (no doute) he shal turne and forgeue, ⁊ after his chastening he shall let your encrease remayn for meate and drynke offrynges vnto the lord your god.
Blowe out with the trompet in Sion, Joel.i, proclame a fastyng, call the congregatiõ, D ⁊ gather the people together: warne y cõ-gregation, gather the elders, bryng the chyldren

chyldren and sucklinges together. Lette the bridegrome go forth of his chamber, & the bride out of her closet. Then shall the lord be gelous ouer his lande & spare his people, yea the lord shall aunswer and say vnto his people: Beholde, I wyll send you corne, wyne, and oyle, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I wyll nomore geue you ouer to be a reproofe among the heathen. Again, as for him of the North, I shall driue him farre from you: and shut hym out into a dry and waste lande, hys face toward the East sea, and his hynder partes towarde the vttermost sea. The styncke of hym shall go vp, and his filthye corruption shall fal vpon hymself, bicause he hath dealt sō proudly. Fear not (O lād) but be glad and reioyce: for the lord wyll do great thynges. Be not ye afrayde neyther (O ye beastes of the fielde) for the pastures shall be grene, and the trees shall beare their fruit: the figgetrees and vine-

And as for ŷ eares that the greshopper, locust, blastyng and caterpyller, (my great host which I sent among you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore thē to you again, so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satisfyed: and praise the name of ŷ lord your god, that so maruellously hath dealt with you. And my people shal neuer be cōfounded any more. Ye shal wel know that I am in the middest of Israell, and that I am the Lorde your God, yea, and that

For vpon the mount Sion, and at Jerusalem, ther shal be a saluation, like as the lorde hath promised: yea, and among the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde shall call.

The.iii.Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God against the enemyes of his people.

For take heede: in those A daies and at ŷ same time, when I turne again the captiuity of Juda & Jerusalem: I shall gather all people together, & bryng them in the valley of Josaphat: and there wyll I reason with thē bicause of my people and heritage of Israell, whom they haue scattered about in the nations, and parted my land: yea, they haue cast lottes for my people, the yong men haue they set in the bordell house, & solde the damosels for wyne, that they Ez.xxvi.a might haue to drynke. Thou Tirus and xxvii.and Sidon, and all ye borders of the Phily- xxviii, ye defye me? wel, if ye wyll nedes defy me, B I wil recompence you euen vppon youre head, and that ryght worthily: for ye haue taken away my siluer and golde, my faire & goodly iewels, & brought thē into youre goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Jerusalem, haue ye solde vnto the Grekes, that ye myght bryng them farre from the borders of their own countries. Jere.l.c, Behold therefore, I wyll rayse them oute Abdi.i.c, of the place where ye haue sold them, and will rewarde you euen vpon youre head. Your sonnes and youre daughters wyll I sell through the handes of the chyldren of Juda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrye, for the lorde himselfe hath sayde it.

Cry out these thynges among the Gentiles, proclaime warre, wake vp the giantes, let them drawe nye, let them come vp all the lusty warryours of them. Make Esai.ii.a mountains drop swete wyne, and ẏ hilles

¶ The ende of the Prophe-cye of Joell.

phete Amos.

The first Chapter.

The time of the Prophecy of Amos. The word of the Lorde against Azah, against Tire, against Edom, and against the sonnes of Ammon.

These are the sermons I that wer shewed vnto Amos (which was one of the shepeheardes at Thecua) vpon Israel, in the time of Osiah, kyng of Juda, and in ẏ time of Jeroboam the sonne of Joah kyng of Israell, two yeare before the earthquake. And he sayde: The Lorde shall rore out of Sion, and shewe his voyce from Jerusalem, so that the pastures of the shepeheardes shalbe in a miserable case, and the top of Carmell dryed vp. Thus sayth the Lorde: for three and foure wyckednesses of Damascus, I wyl not spare her: bicause they haue threshed B Gallaad with yron flales. But I wil send a fyer in the house of Hazaell, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadab.
Thus wyll I break the barres of Damascus, and roote out the inhabitor from the fielde of Auen, and hym that holdeth the scepter out of the pleasaunt house: so that the people shall bee driuen oute of fayre Siria, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For three and foure wickednesses of Gaza, I wyll not spare her: bicause they make the prisoners yet more captiue, and haue driuen them into the land of Edom.
Therfore will I send a fier into the walls of Gaza, which shall deuoure her houses.
I wil roote out them that dwel at Asdod, and hym that holdeth the scepter of Asca-lon, and stretch out mine hand ouer Acca-ron, that the remnant of the Philistynes shal perish, saith the lord. Thus sayeth the lord. For three and foure wickednesses of C the city of Tire, I wyl not spare her: by-cause they haue encreased the captiuity of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenant. Therefore wyl I send a fyre into the walles of Tire, ẏ shall consume her palaces. Thus sayth ẏ lorde:
For three and foure wickednesses of Edō, I wyll not spare hym, bicause he persecu-ted his brother with the sweard, destroied his

his mothers womb, bare hatred very lõg, & so kept indignatiõ alway by him. Therfore wyl I send a fier into Themã, which shal deuoure the palaces of Bozra. Thus D saith ÿ lord, for .iii. & .iiii. wickednesses of ÿ childrẽ of Ammõ, I wyl not spare thẽ: bycause they ript vp ÿ women great wt child in Galaad, to make ÿ border of their lãds ÿ wyder. Therfore I wyll kindle a fyer in the walles of Rabbath, ÿ shall cõsume her palaces with a great cry, in ÿ day of battel in tempest and in the day of storme: so ÿ their king shal go into captiuity, he & hys prynces together, saith the lord.

The .ii, Chapter.

Against Moab, Juda, and Israell.

A Thus saith ÿ lord: For thre and foure wyckednesses of Moab I will not spare hym: bycause he brẽt the bones of the king of Edom to ashes: Therefore wyl I send a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so ÿ Moab shal perish with noise, and the sound of a shawme. I wil roote out the iudge from among them, and slay all his prynces wt hym, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wyckednesses of Juda, I wil not spare him: bicause he hath B cast asyde the lawe of the lord, & not kept his commaundementes: for why? * they would nedes be deceyued with the lyes that theyr forefathers folowed. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre into Juda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem. Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wic-C kednesses of Israel, I wyll not spare him, bicause he hath sold the righteous for money, and the poore for shooes. They tread vpon poore mens heads, in the dust of the earth, and crooke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and the father goe to the harlot, to dishonoure thy holy name: they lye besyde euery altare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of theyr gods they drinke ÿ wine of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I ÿ Amorite before thẽ, ÿ was as hie as the Cedre trees, & as strong as the Okes: notwithstanding I destroyed hys fruite from aboue, & his roote from vnder. Again, I brought you out of the lande of Egipt, and led you fortye yeres throughe ÿ wildernesse, ÿ ye might haue ÿ Amorytes land in possession. I raysed vp prophetes among your childrẽ, & absteiners among your yong men. Is it not so, O ye children of Israel, saith the lord? But ye gaue ÿ ab- D steyners wyne to drinke: yea, ye commaun- Nu. vi. a, Ier. xi. b.
ded the prophetes, saying: Prophecy not. Beholde, I wyll crashe you in sunder, like as a wayne crasheth that is full of sheaues, so ÿ the swift shal not escape, neyther the strong be able to do any thing: no, the Giant shal not saue his own lyfe. The archer shal not abide, & the swift of fote shal not escape. The horsemã shal not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomacke as a Giaunt, shall in that day be fayne to runne his way naked, saith the lord.

The .iii. Chapter.

He reprouceth the house of Israell of wickednes.

Heare what the lord speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldren of Israell,) namelye vnto all the tribes, whom I brought out of Egipt, and sayd: you onely haue I excepted from all the generations of the earthe: therfore wyl I visit you in al your wyckednesses. A

De. iiii. c, xxxii. b

May twain walke together, excepte they be agreed among themselues? Doth a Lion rore in ÿ wood, except he haue a praye? Job. v. a

Or cryeth a Lions whelp oute of his den, except he haue gotten something? Doth a bird fall in a snare vpon the earth where no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare vp B from the groũd, afore he catch somwhat? Cry they out Alarum with the trompette in ÿ city, and the people not afrayd? Commeth there any plage in a city, without it be the lordes doyng? Now doth the lorde God no maner of thing, but he telleth his secrete before vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. When a Lion roreth who wyl not be afrayd? Seing then that the Lord god hymself speaketh, who wyll not prophecy? Preach in the palaces at Asdod, and in ÿ palaces of the land of Egipt, and saye: gather you together vpon ÿ mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye see great murther & C violent oppression among them: for why? they regarde not the thyng that is ryght, sayeth the Lorde: they gather together euyll gotten goodes, and laye vp robbery in theyr houses. Therefore thus saieth the Lorde God. This lande shall bee troubled and besieged round about, thy strength shalbe pluckt from thee, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayeth the Lorde, like

D like as an heardman taketh twoo legs or a pece of an eare out of ẏ Liōs mouth. Euē so the childrē of Israel (that dwel in Samaria) hauing their couches in ẏ corner, iiii, ki. xvi their beds at Damascus, shalbe pluckt a-and. xvii. way. Heare & beare record in the house of Jacob, (saith the lord god of hostes) that when I begin to visit the wickednesse of Israel. I wil visit ẏ altars at Bethel also:
so that the hornes of the altare shalbe bro ken of, and fal to the groūd. As for ẏ winter house and sommer house, I will smyte them down: and the houses of ẏ yuory, yea, and many other houses shall peryshe, and be destroyed, saith the lord.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Against the gouernours of Samaria.

A O Heare this word ye fat kine, ẏ be vpō the hil of Samaria: ye that do poore men wrong & oppresse the nedy, ye ẏ saye to your lordes: bryng hyther, let vs drink. Therfore ẏ lord hath sworne by his holinesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that the enemyes shall cary you away in ships, and your posterity shall be caryed away vpon fishers hookes. Ye shal get you out at the gappes one after another, euen ẏ kinges palace shall ye ouerthrowe, to make away to escape, sayeth Jos. xvi. a the Lord. Ye came to Bethel for to worke iii, ki. xiii Vngraciousnesse and haue encreased your Ose. iiii, c sinnes at Gilgall: ye broughte your sacry-Ose, ix, c. fices in the mornyng, and your tythes ryng of leuen, ye promysed frewyll offerynges and proclaymed them. Such lust B had ye, O ye chyldren of Israel sayeth the Lord God. Therfore haue I geuen you ydle teeth in all your cities, and scarcenes of bread in al your palaces, yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the lord. Whē there Deu, xi b wer but thre monethes vnto the haruest, & xxviii, b I withheld the rain from you: yea, I ray-

Joel. iii. c one pece of grounde was moistured wyth rain, & the ground ẏ I rained not vpō was dry. Wherefore two, yea, three cities came vnto one, to drink water, but thei wer not satisfied: yet wil ye not turn vnto me, saieth the lord. I haue smiten you wt drouth, & blasting: and loke how many orchyards C vineyardes, figgetrees and Olyue trees ye had: the catterpiller hath eatē them vp.
But yet will ye not turne vnto me, saith ẏ lord. Pestilence haue I sente among you, as I did in Egipt: your yong men haue I slayn with the sweard, and caused youre horses to be taken captiue: I made ẏ stinking sauor of your tents, to come vp into your nostrels. Yet wil ye not tourne vnto me saith the lord. Some of you haue I o-uerthrowen as I ouerthrewe Sodome and Gomorra: so that ye were as a brand plucte out of the fier. Yet will ye not turne D vnto me, saith the lord. Therfore thus wil I hādle the again, O Israel: yea euē thus wil I hādle the. Make thee ready then to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountains, he ordeineth the wind, he sheweth man what he is about to doe: he maketh the morning and the darkenesse, he treadeth vpon ẏ hie places of the earth the Lord God of hostes is his name.

The. v, Chapter.

A complaint of the captiuitie of Israel.

HEare this woorde, O ye A house of Israel: & why? I must make this mone for you. The virgine Israell shal fall, & neuer rise vp again: she shalbe cast down vpon her owne ground, & no man shal help her vp. For thus sayth ẏ lord god: Where as there dwelt a thousād in one citie, there shalbe left scarce an hūdred therin, & wher ther dwelt an. C. ther shal scarce ten be left, in the house of Israel. Neuerthelesse thus saith the lord vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethell.

Com not at Gilgal, and go not to Ber- B saba: for Gilgall shalbe caryed away cap-tiue, and Bethell shall come to naughte, Seke the Lorde that ye may liue: least ẏ house of Joseph be brent with fier & consumed, & least there be none to quēch Bethel. Ye turne the law to wormwood, and cast down righteousnesse vnto ẏ ground.
Ye forsake the lorde that maketh the. vii. starres, and the Orions, that turneth the C night into day, and of the day he maketh darkenesse. He calleth the waters of ẏ sea, and poureth them oute vppon the playne ground: the Lord is his name. He raiseth destruction vpon the mighty people, and bringeth down the strong hold. But they owe hym euil wil, that reproueth them openly: and whoso telleth them the playne truthe, they abhorre hym.

Forsomuch then as ye oppresse ẏ poore
and

and robb him of his best sustenaunce:ther fore whereas ye haue builded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them.
Maruellous pleasaunt vineyardes shall you plant, but the wyne of them shall ye not drinke:and why?as for the multitude of your wickednesses, and your stout sin= D nes, I know them right wel. Enemies at ye of the righteous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse ẏ poore in iudgement. Therfore the wise must nowe be faine to holde hys tong, so wicked a tyme is it. Seke after ẏ thing that is good, and not euil, so shal ye liue:yea, the Lord God of hostes shalbe w you, according to your own desire. Hate ẏ euill, and loue ẏ good:set vp right againe in the port:and (no doubt) the Lorde God E of hostes shalbe mercifull vnto ẏ rēnaunt of Joseph. If no (sayth ẏ Lord God, ẏ god of hostes) there shall be mourning in all stretes:yea, they shal say in euery strete:a= las, alas. They shall cal the husbandman to lamētatiō, and such as can mourne to mourning. In all vineyardes ther shalbe heauinesse, for I will come among you sayth the Lord. Wo be vnto them that de= sire the day of the Lord. Wherfore would ye haue it? As for the day of the Lord, it shalbe darke and not cleare. Yea, lyke as when a man runneth from a Lyon and a beare meteth with hym: or when he cō= meth into the house, and leaneth his hād F vpon the wal, a serpent byteth him. Shal Joel.ii.a. not the day of the Lord be darke and not Sop.i.c. cleare?shall it not be cloudy, and no shine Esa.i.b. in it? I hate and abhorre your holy dayes and whereas ye cense me when ye come together, I wil not accept it. And though ye offer me burnt offringes and meate of= fringes, yet haue I no pleasure therin. As for your fat thanke offringes, I wyll not loke vpon them. Away with that noyse of thy songes. I will not heare thy playes of musike: but see that equitie flowe as the water, and righteousnesse, as a mightie G streame. O ye house of Israel, gaue ye me Jer.vii.e. offringes and Sacrifices those.xl.yeares Act.vii.e. lōg in the wildernesse? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to your Moloch, and yma= ges of your ydols:yea and ẏ starre of your God Rempha, figures which ye made to worship thē. Therfore will I cause you to be caryed away beyōde Damascus, sayth the Lord, whose name is ẏ god of hostes.

The.vi.Chapter.

Against the Princes of Israell lyuyng in pleasures.

Wo be to ẏ proude wel= A which hold themselues for the best of the world and rule the house of Israel, euē as they list.

Go vnto Calne, and see, and frō thēce get you to Hemath the great citie, and so goe down to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at ease thā these kyngdomes, or the B border of their land wider thā yours? ye are taken out for ẏ euil day:euē ye that sit in ẏ stole of wilfulnesse. Ye that lye vppon beddes of yuery, & vse your wantonnesse, vpō your couches:ye that eate ẏ best lam= of instrumētes cōpare your selues vnto Dauid:ye that drink wyne out of goblets and annoint your selues with ẏ best oyle but no man is sory for Josephes hurt. Job.xxi.b.

Therfore now shal ye be ẏ first of them, ẏ Esa.v.b.

so that though there remayne.x.men in one house, they shall dye. So their next kinsfolkes and ẏ dead buryars shall take them, and cary away their bones, and say (shal he say) for thei would not remember the name of ẏ lord. Behold, ẏ lord is min= ded to smite the great houses, so that they D shall decay:and ẏ litle houses, that they shal cleaue asunder. Who can runne with horses, or plow with oxē vpō the hard roc= kes of stone? For why, ye haue turned true iudgemēt vnto bitternesse, & ẏ fruite of ẏ righteousnesse into wormwood. Yea, euē ye that reioyce in vayne thynges, ye that say:haue not we obteined hornes in oure own strength? Well take hede, O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lord God of hostes: I wyll bryng a people vpon you, which shal trouble you from the way that goeth to= warde Hemath vnto ẏ brooke in the me= dow.

The.vii.Chapter.

Of the captiuitie of Israel and Juda.

A The Lord God shewed me such a vision: behold, ther stode one that made Greshoppers, euen when the corne was shoting forth, after the kyng had clypte hys shepe. Now whe͂ they vndertoke to eate vp all the grene things in the land, I said: O Lord God, be merciful, I besech thee, who should els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so low? So the lord was gratious therin, and the Lord sayde: well, it shall not be. Againe, the Lord shewed me thys vision: behold, the Lord god called the fyre to punish withal, and it deuoured the great depe: yea, it consumed a B part already. Then sayd I: O Lord God, holde thyne hande: for who shuld els help vp Jacob that is brought so low? So the Lord was merciful therin, and the Lord God sayd: well, it shal not be. Moreouer he shewed me thys vision: behold, ye Lord stode vpon a plastered wall, and a maso͂s trowell in hys hande. And the Lord sayd vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answe C red a masons trowell. Then sayd the lord iii.King. xvii.a. beholde, I will lay the trowell among my people of Israell, and wyll no more ouersee them, but the hye hylchapels of Isaac must be layd waste, & the churches of Israell made desolate: and as for the house of Jeroboam, I wyll stande vp against it with the sweard. Vpon thys sent Amasiah the Priest to Bethell vnto Jeroboam iii.King. xviii.b. the kyng of Israell, saying: Amos maketh the house of Israell to rebell against thee, the lande can not away wyth his words. For Amos sayth: Jeroboam shall dye with the sweard, and Israell shalbe led a Esa.xxx. b. way captiue out of their own land. And Amasiah sayd vnto Amos. Get thee he͂ce (thou that canst see so well) and flye into the lande of Juda, get thee there thy lyuing and prophecy there: and prophecy no more at Bethell, for it is the kynges chapell, and the kynges court. Amos an
Za.xiii.a swered, and sayd to Amasiah: As for me I am neyther Prophet, nor Prophetes son, but a keper of cattel. Now as I was breakyng down molberies, and going after ye cattell, the Lord toke me, & sayd vnto me: go thy way, and prophecy vnto my people of Israell. And therfore heare thou nowe the word of the Lord. Thou sayest: prophecy not against Israell, and speake nothyng against the house of Isaac. Wherfore thus sayth the Lord: thy wyfe shall be defiled in ye citie, thy so͂nes and daughters shalbe slayne with ye sweard, and thy iiii.Kin. xvii.c. land shalbe measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalt dye in an vncleane land, and Israel shalbe driuen out of hys own countrey.

The.viii.Chapter.

Against ye rulers of Israell. The Lord sweareth that he wyl fulfill the thinges which he hath determined against Israell.

The Lord God shewed me thys vision: and beholde, A there was a mau͂de with summer fruit. And he said Amos what seest thou? I aunswered: a maunde wt summer fruit. Then sayd the Lord vnto me: the ende commeth vpo͂ my people of Israell, I wyl nomore ouersee them. In that day shal the songes of ye temple be turned into sorow, sayth ye lord God: many dead bodyes shall lye in euery place, & be cast forth secretly. Heare thys, B O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroy Eccl.xi. the nedy in the lande, saying: when wyll the new moneth be gone, ye we maye sell vittaile, and the Sabboth, that we may haue scarcenesse of corne to make the bushel lesse, and the sicle greater. We shal set vp false weyghtes, that we may get the poore vnder vs with their mony, and the nedy also for shoes: yea, let vs sel the chaff for corne. The Lord hath sworne against Am.vi.b. the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theirs C wyl I neuer forget. Shall not the lande tremble, and all they that dwell therein, mourne for thys? Shal not their destruction come vpon the͂ lyke a water streame, and flow ouer them as the floud of Egipt. At the same tyme (sayth the Lord God) I Iere.xv.i. shall cause the sunn to go down at noone, and the lande to be darke in ye cleare day. Your hye feastes wyl I turne to sorowe, & your songes to mourning: I wyll bryng Tob.ii. sackecloth vpon all backes, and baldnesse vpon euery head: yea, such a mourning wyl I send them, as is made vpon an only begotte͂ sonn, and they shal haue a miserable ende. Jer.vi.a. Behold, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lord God) that I shall send an hunger into the earth, not the hunger of bread, nor the thurst of water, but an hunger to heare the word of the Lord: so that D they shall go from the one Sea to ye other: yea, from ye north vnto the East, runnyng about to seke ye worde of the Lorde, and shal truly as thy god liueth at Bersaba. These

The ende of the boke of the prophecy of Abdy.

The boke of the Prophet Jonas.

The first Chapter.

Of the flight of Jonas when he was sente to preache. A tempest ariseth and casteth hym in the Sea for his disobedience.

THe word of ẏ Lord came A vnto Jonas the sonne of iiii. king xiiii.c Amithai, saying: arise and Jon.iii. get thee to Niniue, that Ec.xl. great citie: & preach vnto them, how ẏ their wicked nesse is come vp before Ge.xviii.
me. And Jonas made hym ready to flye b. vnto Tharsis from ẏ presence of the lord, and gat hym down to Joppa, where he founde a ship ready for to go vnto Tharsis. So he payd hys fare, & went aboorde: that he might go w them vnto Tharsis, from ẏ presence of ẏ Lord. But the Lord hurled a great wynde into ẏ Sea, & there was a mightie tempest in ẏ Sea, so ẏ the ship was in ieopardy of going in peces.
Thẽ ẏ mariners wer afrayd, & cryed eue-ry mã vnto hys god: & the goods that wer in the ship they cast into ẏ sea, to lightẽ it of them. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches, where he layd him down & slum-bred.

B bord. So ẏ master of ẏ ship came to hym, and sayd vnto hym: why slumbrest thou? vp call vpon thy God: if God (happyly) will thinke vpon vs, ẏ we perish not. And they sayd one to another: come let vs caste lottes, ẏ we may know, for whose cause Josu.vii.c. we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas. Then sayd they vnto hym: tel vs, for whose cause at we thus troubled? what is thyne occupation? whence commest ye? (and whyther goest thou?) what countrey man art thou? and of what nation? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare ẏ Lord God C of heauen, which made both the Sea and the drye lande. Then were ẏ men excea-dingly afrayd, and sayd vnto hym: why diddest ẏ so? (for they knew, ẏ he was fled from ẏ presence of ẏ Lord, bicause he had tolde them) and sayd moreouer vnto him, what shal we do vnto thee, ẏ the sea may ceasse from troubling vs? (for the Sea wrought, and was troublous:) he answered them: take me, and cast me in the sea, so shall it let you be in rest, for I wote it is D for my sake ẏ thys great tempest is come i,b vpon you. Neuerthelesse, the men assayed with rowing to bryng ẏ ship to lande: but it would not be, bicause ẏ sea wrought so, and was so troublous against thē. Wherfore they cryed vnto thē Lord, and said: O Lord let vs not perishe for thys mannes death, neyther lay ẏ innocent bloud vnto our charge: for thou O lord hast done, euē as thy plesure was. So they toke Jonas and cast hym into the Sea, and the Sea left raging. And the men feared the Lord exceadingly, doing Sacrifice & making vowes vnto the Lord.

The.ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

A Mat.xii.a. But the Lord prepared a great fish to swalow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in ẏ belly of ẏ fishe three dayes and three nightes. And Jonas Psal.cxx.c. prayed vnto ẏ Lord his God, out of ẏ fishes belly, and sayd: in my trouble I called vnto ẏ lord and he heard me: out of ẏ belly of hell, I cryed and thou heardest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me down depe in ẏ middest of ẏ Sea, and the floud compassed me about: yea, al thy waues and roules of water went ouer me. B I thought ẏ I had bene cast away out of Psa.xlii.b. thy sight: but I wil yet again loke toward thy holy temple. The waters compassed me, euen to ẏ very soule: ẏ depe lay aboute me, and ẏ wedes were wrapt about mine head, I went down to ẏ bottom of ẏ hils, and was barred in wt earth for euer. But thou, O Lord my God hast brought vp my C lyfe againe out of corruption. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpon the Lord and my prayer came in vnto thee, euen into thy holy temple. They ẏ hold of vaine vanities, will forsake hys mercye.
But I wil do thee Sacrifice wt ẏ voyce of thankes geuing, and wyl pay ẏ, ẏ I haue vowed: for why saluation commeth of the Lord. And the Lord spake vnto the fishe, D and it cast out Jonas againe vpō the drye lande.

The.iii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent again to Niniue. The repentaūce of the king of Niniue.

Then came ẏ word of the A Jon Lord vnto Jonas again saying: vp and get thee to Niniue ẏ great citie, and preach vnto them ẏ preaching which I bad thee.
So Jonas arose & went to Niniue at ẏ Lords commaundement.
Niniue was a great city vnto god, namely of thre dayes iourney. And Jonas wēt B to and entred into the citie, euen a dayes iourney, and cryed, saying: there are yet fourty dayes, and then shall Niniue be ouerthrowē. And ẏ people of Niniue bele- Esay.xxxvii.a. ued God, & proclaimed fasting, & arayed thēselues in sackcloth, as wel ẏ great as ẏ small of them. And ẏ tidinges came vnto the kyng of Niniue, which rose out of hys seate, & did his apparel of, and put on sack cloth, and sat hym down in asshes. And it was cryed & commaunded in Niniue, by the authoritie of ẏ kyng & hys Lordes, saying: se ẏ neyther man nor beast, oxe, or shepe, tast ought at al: & ẏ they neyther C fede nor drīk water, but put on sackecloth Mat.xii.d. Luk.xi.e. Jo... both mā & beast: & cry mightely vnto god.
Yea, se ẏ euery man turne from hys euill way, & from ẏ wickednesse that he hath in hand. Who can tel? god may turne and repent, & cease from hys fearce wrath, that we perish not. And when God sawe their Esdras.xxxviii.b. workes how they turned from their wyc-ked wayes he repented on the euil, which he sayd he would do vnto them, and did it not.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

A Therfore Jonas was sore discontēt & angry. And he prayed vnto ẏ Lord, and sayd: O lord was not thys my saying (I pray thee) whē I was yet in my coūtrey? Therfore I hasted rather to flie vnto Tharsis. For I know wel yn-Ps. lxxxvi. a, ough that thou art a merciful God, full of Joel. ii. c. compassion, long suffring, and of great kindenesse, and repētest whē thou shouldest take punishment. And now O Lorde iii. Kin. xix. a take my lyfe from me (I besech thee) for I had rather dye thā lyue. Then sayd the Lord: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat hym out of ẏ citi, and sat down on ẏ East syde therof: and there made hym a booth, B and sat vnder it in ẏ shadow, til he might see what should chaunce vnto the citie.
And the Lord God prepared a wylde vyne, which sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he might haue shadow aboue hys heade, to deliuer him out of his pain. And Jonas was exceading glad of ẏ wilde vine. But vpō ẏ next morow against ẏ spring of the day, the Lord ordayned a worme: which smote ẏ wild vine, so ẏ it wythered away.
And when ẏ sunne was vp, god prepared a feruēt East wind: and ẏ sunn bet ouer ẏ C head of Jonas, that he faynted agayne, & wyshed vnto his soule that he might dye, and sayd: it is better for me to dye than to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: art thou so angry for ẏ wild vine? And he sayd: yea very angry am I, euen vnto the death.
And the Lord sayd: thou hast compassion vpon a wild vine, wheron ẏ bestowedst no D labour, nor madest it to growe, whiche sprange vp in one night, and perished in another. And shuld I not then haue compassion vpon Niniue ẏ great city, wherin there are aboue an hūdred and .xx. thousande persons, that know not their right hande from ẏ left, besides much cattell.

The ende of the boke of the prophecy of Jonas.

The booke of the Pro-phet Micheas.

The first Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria bicause of their ydolatrye.

This is ẏ word of ẏ Lorde A that came vnto Micheas the Morastite in ẏ dayes of Jothan Ahas and Jehezekiah kynges of Juda: which was shewed him vpon Samaria and Jerusalem. Heare al ye people, mark this well, O earth, and al ẏ therin is. yea, the Lord God himselfe be witnesse among you, euen the Lord from his holy temple.
For why? behold ẏ Lord shal go out of his place, and come down and treade vpō the hye thynges of ẏ earth. The mountaines shal consume vnder hym, and ẏ valleyes shal cleaue a sunder, like as waxe consumeth at ẏ fier, and as ẏ waters run down warde. And all thys shalbe for ẏ wickednesse of Jacob, and ẏ sinnes of ẏ house of Israell. But what is ẏ wickednesse of Jacob? Is not Samaria? Which are the hye places of Juda? Is not Jerusalem? Ther B fore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in ẏ field, to lay about ẏ vineyarde: her stones shall I cast into ẏ valley, and discouer her foundations. All her ymages shalbe brokē down, and all her garmētes shalbe brēt in ẏ fire, yea, all her ydols will I destroy: for why? they are gathered out of ẏ hyre of an whore, and into an whores hyre shal they be turned again: wherfore I wil mourne and make lamentation, bare and naked will I goe, I muste mourne lyke ẏ dragons, and take sorow, as ẏ Estriches, for their wounde is paste remedy. And why? It is come into Juda, and hath touched ẏ porte of my people at Jerusalem already. Wepe not least they at Geth perceiue it. Thou at Bataphra, C welter thy self in ẏ dust and asshes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir, get thee hence w shame. The proude shall bost no more for very sorow: and why: her neighbour shall take from her what she hath. The rebellious city hopeth ẏ it shal not be so euil, but for al ẏ ẏ plague shall come from ẏ Lord, euen into ẏ port of Jerusalem. The great noyse of the charets shall feare them that dwell

iiii. king. xiiii. c. dwell at Lachis, whiche is an occasion of ẏ synne of ẏ daughter of Siō, for in thee D came vp the wickednesses of Israel. yea, she sent her coursers into ẏ lande of Geth.
The houses of lyes will disceiue ẏ kinges of Israell. And as for thee (O thou that dwellest at Moraſa) I shall brynge a possessioner vpon thee, & the plague of Israell shall reache vnto Odolla. Make thee balde, & shaue thee bicause of thy tender children. Make thee cleane balde as an Eagle, for they shalbe caryed awaye cap-tiue from thee.

The .ii. Chapter.

Threatninges against the sinnfull people.

A Woe vnto thē ẏ ymagine to do harme, & deuise vn-gratiousnesse vpon their beds, to performe it in the clere day, for their power is against god. Whē they iii. king. xxi. a. couet to haue lande, they take it by violēce, they rob mē of their hou ses. Thus they oppresse a mā for his house and euery mā for hys heritage. Therfore, Amo. v. b. thus sayth ẏ Lord: beholde, agaynst thys householde haue I deuised a plage, wher out ye shal not pluck your neckes, ye shal no more go so proudly, for it wil be a perilous tyme. In ẏ day shal thys terme be vsed, and a murmuring shalbe made ouer you on this maner. We be vtterly desolate the porcion of mi people is trāslated. Whē B wil he part vnto vs ẏ lande, ẏ he hath ta-Number. xxxiii. c. kē frō vs? Neuerthelesse, there shalbe no mā to deuide thee thy porcion in ẏ cōgre-gation of ẏ Lord. Tushe, holde your tong (say they) it shall not fall vpō thys people: we shal not come so to confusion, sayth the house of Jacob. Is ẏ spirit of the Lord so clene awaye? or is he so minded? Truth it is my wordes are frendly vnto thē ẏ lyue right: but my people doth ẏ contrary, ther fore must I take part against thē, for they take away both cote & cloke frō ẏ simple.
C Ye haue turned your selues to flight, ẏ wo men of my people haue ye shut out from theyr good houses, & takē away myne excellent giftes frō their childrē. Up get you hēce for here shall ye haue no rest. Bicause of their ydolatry, they ar corrupt, & shal mi serably perish. If I wer a fleshly felow, & a preacher of lyes, & told thē ẏ they might D vt bibbing & bolling, & be dronke. O that I wer a Prophet for thys people. But I wil gather thee in dede, O Jacob, & dryue the remnaunt of Israel altogether. I shal cary thē one wt another, as a flocke in ẏ folde, and as ẏ cattel in their stalles, ẏ they may be disquieted of other men. Whoso breaketh ẏ gap, he shal go before. They shall breake vp ẏ port, & go in & out at it. The kyng shal go before them, and the Lord shalbe vpon the head of them.

The .iii. Chapter.

Against the tiranny of Princes, and false Pro-he shal not heare them, but hyde hys face i. ii. et. iii. b.

if a man put not some thing into their hym. Therfore your vision shalbe turned Deuter. xxviii. e.

The sunn shal go down ouer those Pro- C

Thē shal ẏ vision seers be ashamed, and ẏ the house of Jacob their wickednesse, and the house of Israell their sinne. O heare thys ye rulers of ẏ house of Jacob, and ye iudges of ẏ house of Israel, ye ẏ abhorre ẏ thing that is lawfull, and wrest asyde the thyng ẏ is streight. Ye ẏ builde vp Sion with blood, & Jerusalē wt doing wrong. Abac. ii. b.

O ye iudges, ye geue sētēce for giftes. O Ez. xxii. b. ye Priestes ye teach for lucre. O ye Pro- Jer. vi. b.

Of the calling of the Gentiles, and conuersion of the Jewes.

The.vi. Chapter.

An exhortation to heare the iudgement against Israell being vnkind. What maner of Sacrifices do please God.

A Hearken now what the Lord sayth: vp reproue yͤ mountaines, and let the hilles heare thy voyce. O heare yͤ punishment of the Lorde, ye mountaynes, and ye mightie foundations of yͤ earth: for the Lord wyll reproue hys people, and reason with Israell. O my people, what haue I done vnto thee: or wherin haue I hurt thee: geue me aunswere.

B Bicause I brought thee from the land of Egipt, and deliuered thee out of the house of bondage. Bicause I made Moses, Aaron, and Miriam to leade thee: Remember (O my people) what Balach the kyng of Moab had ymagined against the, and what aunswere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue hym, frō Sethim vnto Galgall, that ye may know the louing kindnesses of the Lord. What acceptable thing shall I offer vnto the Lord: shall I bowe my knee to the hye God: Shall I come before hym wyth burnt offeringes, and with calues of a yere olde: Hath the Lord a pleasure in many thousande rammes,

C or innumerable streames of oyle: Or shal I geue my first borne for myne offences, and the fruite of my body for the synne of my soule: I wil shew thee, O mā, what is good, and what the lord requireth of thee namely to do right, to haue pleasure in louing kindnesse, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God. The Lordes voyce cryeth vnto the citie, and the man that shalbe saued cōsidereth thy name (O Lord.) Hearken what is your rodd, and heare hym yͭ warneth you. Should I not be displeased for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wicked, and bicause the measure is minished: Or should I iustifie the false balances, and the bagge of deceitfull weightes among those that be full of ryches vnrighteously gotten: where the cytizens deale with falsehead, speake lyes, and haue disceitfull tonges in their mouthes:

D Therfore I wil take in hand to punish thee and to make thee desolate, bicause of thy synnes. Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: yea, thou shalt bryng thy self down. Thou shalt flee, but not escape: and those that thou wouldest saue, will I deliuer to the sweard. Thou shalt sow, but not reape, thou shalt presse out oliues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoint thy selfe withall: thou shalte treade out swete must, but shalt drinke no wine. Ye kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, and all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folow their pleasures, therfore will I make thee wast, and cause thy inhabiters to bee abhorred, O my people: & thus shalt thou beare thyne own shame.

A Woe is me: I am become as one that goeth a gleaning in yͤ haruest. There are no more grapes to eate yet woulde I fayne (with all my heart) haue of the best fruite. Ther is not a Godly man vpon earth, there is not one righteous among men, They labour all to shed bloud and euery man hunteth hys brother to death yet they say they doe well, when they do euill. As the Prynce will, so sayth the iudge, that he may dooe hym a pleasure againe. The great man speaketh what hys heart desireth: and the hearers alow hym. The best of them is but as a thistle, and the most righteous of them, is but as a bryer in the hedge. But when the day of thy preachers commeth, that thou shalt be visited, then shal they be wasted away. Let no man beleue his frēd nor put hys confidence in hys brother.

B Kepe the port of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome, for the sonne shall put hys father to dishonoure, the daughter shall ryse against her mother, the daughter in lawe againste her mother in lawe: and a mannes foes shalbe euen they of hys owne household. For they shalbe fed, and take their rest, and no man shal make them afrayd. Geue thankes, O daughter Sion, be ioyfull, O Israell: reioyce and be glad from thy whole hearte, O daughter Ierusalem, for the lord hath taken away thy punishment, and turned backe thyne enemies, the kyng of Israel, euen the Lord hymselfe is with thee: so ẏ thou nedest no more to feare any missfortune. It is he ẏ hath power to saue: he hath a speciall pleasure in thee, and a marueylous loue toward thee: yea, he reioyceth ouer thee with gladnesse. Suche as haue ben in heauinesse, wyll I gather together, and take out of thy congregation: as for ẏ shame and reprofe that hath been layd vpon thee, it shalbe farre from thee. And loe, in that time wil I destroy al those that vexe thee. I wil helpe the lame and gather vp the cast away: yea, I wyll get them prayse and honor in all landes, where they haue ben put to shame. At the same tyme wyll I bryng you in, and at ẏ same tyme wyll I gather you. The time of the prophecy of Aggeus. An exhortation to builde the temple again.

A In the second yere of kyng Darius, in the sixth moneth the first day of ỹ moneth, came the worde of ỹ lorde (by the prophet Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiell the prince of Juda, and to Jesua the sonne of Josedech ỹ hye priest, saying: Thus speaketh the Lorde of hostes, and sayth. Thys people doth say: The tyme is not yet come to builde vp the kynges house. Thē spake the lord by the prophete Aggeus, & sayde. Ye your selues can finde tyme to dwell in siled houses, and shall this house lie wast?
B Consider now your owne wayes in your heartes (sayth the Lord of hostes.) Ye sow muche but ye bryng litle in: ye eate, but ye haue not inough: ye drinke, but ye are not filled: ye deck youre selues, but ye bee not warme: and he that earneth any wages, putteth it in a broken purse. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Consyder your owne
C wayes in your heartes, get you vp to the mountain, fetch wood, and builde vp the house, that it may be acceptable vnto me, and that I may shew myne honour, sayth the Lord. Ye looked for much, and loe, it is com to litle: and though ye bring it home, yet doe I blowe it away. And why so, sayeth the Lord of hostes? Euen bicause that my house lyeth so wast, and ye runne euery man vnto his owne house. Wherefore ỹ heauen is forbiddē to geue you any dew, and the earth is forbidden to geue you increase. I haue called for a drouth both vpon the lande and vpon the mountayns, vpon corne, vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that the grounde bryngeth foorth, vpon men and vpon cattel: yea, and vpon al handy labour. Now whē Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye Prieste with the remnaunt of the people, hearde
D the voyce of the Lorde theyr God, and the wordes of the prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lord theyr God had sent hym) ỹ people did feare the Lord. Then Aggeus the Lordes angell sayde in the Lordes message vnto the people: I am with you saith the Lorde. So the Lorde waked vp ỹ spirite of Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and the spirit of Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye priest, and the spirit of ỹ remnaunte of all the people: that they came and laboured in the house of the lord of hostes their God.

He sheweth that the goodlinesse of the seconde temple shall excede the first, bicause of the comyng of Christ.

Vpon the.xxiiii.daye of the sixth moneth, in ỹ second yere of kyng Darius, the xxi.day of the seuenth moneth, came the worde of ỹ lord by the prophete Aggeus, saying: speak to Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, and to Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye priest, and to the residue of the people and say: Who is left among you, that saw this house in her first beautye? But what thinke ye nowe by it? Is it not in your eyes, euē as though it wer nothing? Neuerthelesse, be of good chere. O Zorobabell (sayeth the Lorde) be of good comfort, O Jesua thou sonne of Josedech the hye priest: take good heartes vnto you also, all the people of the lande, sayth ỹ lord of hostes, and do accordyng to the worde for (I am wyth you sayeth the Lorde of hostes) lyke as I agreed wyth you, when ye came out of the lande of Egipt: and my spirite shall bee among you, feare ye not. The siluer is mine, and the golde is mine, sayeth the lorde of hostes. Thus the glory of the last house, shalbe greater than the first, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: and in this place wyl I geue peace sayeth the Lorde of hostes. And I sayd: No my Lord. He answered & sayd vnto me: This is the word of ye Lord vnto Zorobabel saying: Neither through Esay.xi.a an hoste of mẽ, nor through strength, but through my spirit, saith the lord of hostes.
What art thou, thou great mountain before Zorobabel? thou must be made euen, And he shall bring vp the first stone, so ye C men shall cry vnto him, good lucke, good i.Es.28.c lucke. Moreouer ye word of the lord came vnto me, saying. The hands of Zorobabel Phili.i.a. haue layd the foundatiõ of thys house, his handes shall also finishe it, that ye maye De.xviii. d. know how yt the Lord of hostes hath sent me vnto you? For he yt hath bene despysed a little season, shal reioyce, when he seeth the tinne weight in Zorobabells hand.
The seuen eies are the Lordes which goe D thorow ye whole world. Thẽ answered I and said vnto him: what are these two oliue trees vpon the right and left syde of the candelsticke? I spake moreouer, and sayd vnto him: what be these two Oliue braunches, (which through the two gol-dẽ pipes) empty thẽselues into ye gold? He aunswered me, & sayd: knowest thou not what these be? And I said: no mi lord. Thẽ said he: These are ye two Oliue braũches, yt stand before the ruler of ye whole earth.

The.v.Chapter.

The visiõ of the flying boke, signifying ye curse of theues, & such as abuse the name of God: by the vision of the measure is signified ye bringing of Juda to Babilon.

SO I turned me lifting vp mine A eies & loked: & beholde a flying booke. And he said vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I see a fleyng booke of.xx.cubites long, & x. cu-bites brode. Then sayd he vnto me: Thys is the curse yt goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all theues shalbe iudged after this booke, & all swearers shalbe iudged according to the same: and I will bring it forth (saith ye lord of hostes) so that it shall come to the house of ye thefe, & to the house B of him yt falsly sweareth by my name: and shall remaine in his house & consume it, wt the timber and stones therof. Thẽ the Angel yt talked with me went forth, and said vnto me: lift vp thine eies, & se what is this yt goeth forth. And I said: what is it? He answered: this is a measure goyng out. He said moreouer: Euen thus at they C (that dwel vpon the whole earth) to loke vpon: And behold, there was lift vp a talent of lead: & loe, a womã sat in the middest of ye measure. And he said: this is vngodlinesse. So he cast her in the middest of the measure, & threw the lump of leade into the mouth of the measure. Then lyft I vp mine eies, and loked: & behold, there D came out two women, & the wind was in their winges (for thei had wings like the wings of a storke) & they lift vp the measure betwixt the earth & the heauen. Thẽ spake I to the Angell yt talked with me: whither will these beare ye measure? And Ge.xi. he sayd vnto me: into ye land of Sinear, to builde thẽ an house, which when it is prepared, the measure shalbe set there in his place.

The.vi.Chapter.

By the foure charrettes he discribeth the prosperity of foure kingdomes.

MOreouer I turned me lifting A vp mine eies, & loked: and behold ther came.iiii.charretes out from betwixt two hilles, which hils were of brasse. In Zach.i. ye first charret wer red horses, in ye seconde Apo.vi. charret

charet wer blacke horses, in ỷ third charet wer white horses, in ỷ fourth charet were B horses of diuers colours, and strōg. Thē Ze.i.d spake I, and said vnto the angel that talked to me: O Lorde, what are these: The angel answered, and said vnto me. These are the.iiii. windes of ỷ heauen, whiche be come forth to stand before ỷ ruler of all ỷ earth. That with the black horse wēt into the land of the north, and the white folowed them, and ỷ speckled horses went forth toward ỷ south. These horses were very strong, & went out, & sought to go & take their iourney ouer the whole earth.
And he said: get you hence & go thorow ỷ world. So thei went thorow out ỷ world.
C Then cried he vpon me, & spake vnto me, saying: behold, these ỷ go toward ỷ north, shal stil my wrath in the northe countrey.
And ỷ worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Take of the prisoners ỷ are come frō Babilon: namely, Heldai, Tobiah, and Idaia: & com thou the same day, & go into the house of Josiah, ỷ sonne of Sophony.
Then take gold & siluer, & make crownes therof, & set them vpon the head of Jesua, the sonne of Josedech, the hie Priest, and Za.iii.b. speake vnto him. Thus saith the Lord of Jer.xxiii. hostes: behold, ỷ man whose name is the Esa.iiii. braunche: & he that shall spring vp after Jo.i.b. him, shall build vp ỷ temple of ỷ lord: yea, D euen he shal build vp the temple of ỷ lord.

Jo.iii.viii shal he be also vpon his trone, and a pea-

And the crownes shalbe in the temple of ỷ lord, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaiah, & Hen ỷ sonne of Sophony, and such as be far of, shal com & build the temple of the Lord, ỷ ye may know how ỷ the Lord of hostes hath sent me vnto you.
And this shal come to passe, if ye will her-ken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lord your god.

The.vii.Chapter.

The estimation of fasting without mercy, the despising of charitie, and the obstinacy of ỷ people.

A IT happened also in ỷ fourth yeare of king Darius, that ỷ word of ỷ lord came vnto Za-charye in ỷ fourth day of the B ninth moneth, whiche is called Castue what time as Sarasar & Rogomelech & the men ỷ wer with thē, sente vnto Bethel for to pray before the lorde & that they shoulde saye vnto the Priestes, which wer in the house of ỷ Lord of hosts, & to the Prophets: Should I wepe in the fifth moneth, & abstayne as I haue done now certain yeares? Then came ỷ worde 4.Ki.xxv of the Lorde of hostes vnto me, saying: b.
Speake vnto al the people of the land, & to the priestes, and say: when ye fasted & mourned in the fifth & .vii. moneth (now this.lxx. yeares) did ye faste vnto me? whē B ye did eate also and drinke, did ye not eat Jer.xli.b.
& drinke for your owne selues? Are not 3.Ki.xxv.
these the wordes, which the lord spake by b. his Prophets afore time when Jerusalē was yet inhabited & welthye, she & the cities round about her? whē thei dwelt mē, both toward ỷ south & in the plaine coun-treys? And ỷ worde of the lord came vnto Zachary, saying: Thus saith ỷ lorde of ho-& louing kindnes, euery man to his bro- C least they should heare the law & wordes which ỷ lord of hosts sent in his spirite by the Prophetes afore time. Wherfore the ii.Pe.i.d.

Lord of hostes was very wroth at them.
And thus is it come to passe ỷ lyke as he spake & they would not heare euen so thei cried, & I would not heare (saith the Lord D of hostes:) but scattred them among all Jere.xl b. gentiles, whom they knew not. Thus the land was made so desolate ỷ there tra-uailed no man in it, neither to nor fro: for ỷ pleasaunt land was vtterly laid waste.

The.viii.Chapter.

Of the returne of ỷ people vnto Jerusalem, & of the mercy of god toward them. Of good workes. The calling of the gentiles.

SO the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thus saith the A lord of hostes. I was in a great gelousy ouer Sion: yea, I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a great displeasure, thus saieth the Lorde of hostes I will tourne me agayne vnto Sion, & will dwel in the middest of Jerusalem: so that Jerusalem shalbe called a faithfull & true citie, the hyll of the Lorde of hostes: Esay.i.d yea, an holy hyll. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. There shal yet olde mē & wome̅ dwell agayn, in the stretes of Jerusalem: Yea, and suche as go with staues in theyr handes for very age. The stretes of ẏ cy-ty also shalbe ful of yong boyes and damsels, playing vpõ the stretes. Thus saith Mat.xix.b the Lord of hostes: yf the residue of this people thinke it to be vnpossible in these dayes: should it therfore be vnpossible in my sight, saith the Lord of hostes? Thus sayth the lorde of hostes: Beholde I wyll deliuer my people from the land of ẏ east and west, and wil bring them agayn, that they may dwel at Jerusalem. They shal Iere.iii.f. be my people, and I wilbe their god, in Apo.xxi.c truth and righteousnesse. Thus saith the Heb.viii.f lord of hostes: let your hands be strong ye ẏ now heare these wordes by the mouthe of the prophets which be in these daies, ẏ the foundation is laid vpon the Lorde of hosts house, ẏ the temple may be builded.

For why: before these daies, neither men, Agge.i.a. nor cattle could wyn any thing, neither might any man com in and out in rest for trouble: but I let euery man goe against his neighbour. Neuerthelesse, I wil now intreate ẏ residue of this people nomore Agge.ii.a as afore time saith the Lord of hostes, but they shalbe a sede of peace, the vineyarde shal geue her fruit, the ground shall geue her increase, & the heauẽs shall geue their C dew: & I shal cause the remnaunt of thys people, to haue al these in possession. And it shall come to passe, ẏ like as ye were a curse among the heathen: (O ye house of Juda, & ye house of Israel) euen so will I deliuer you, ẏ ye shalbe a blessing: feare not but let your handes be strong. For thus saith the lord of hostes: like as I de-uised to punish you, what time as your father prouoked me vnto wrath saith ẏ lord of hostes, & spared not: Euen so am I determined now in these daies, for to do wel vnto ẏ house of Juda & Jerusalem, therfore feare ye not. Now ẏ things ẏ ye shall do, are these: Speake euery mã the truth vnto his neighbour, execute iudgemente truly & peaceably with your portes, none of you ymagine euil in his heart agaynst Ep.iiii.c. his neighbour, & loue no false othes: for al Za.vii.b: these are the things that I hate saith the Mala.ii.b Lord. And the word of the Lord of hostes came vnto me, saying: thus sayth ẏ Lorde of hosts: The fast of the fourth moneth, ẏ fast of the fifth, the fast of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenthe, shalbe ioy and glad-nesse, and prosperous hye feastes vnto ẏ house of Juda, onely loue the trueth and peace. Thus saith the lord of hosts. There shall yet come people, and the inhabitors of many cities, and they ẏ dwel in one ci- Esay.ii.

go & pray before the Lord, let vs seke the Iere.xvi. lord of hosts. I wil go with you, yea, much people and mighty heathen shall come & seke the Lord of hosts at Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: In that time shal ten mẽ (out of al maner of languages of the gẽtiles) take one Jewe by the hemme of his garment, and say: we wil go with you, for we haue heard that god is among you.

The.ix.Chapter.

The conuersion of the gentiles. The commyng of Christ, sitting on an asse.

THe word of ẏ Lord shalbe re- A ceiued at Adrach, & Damascus shalbe his offring, for the eies of al men & of the tribes of Israell, shal loke vp vnto ẏ Ioel iii.
Lorde. The borders of Hemah shalbe heard therby: Tirus also & Sidõ, for they are very wise. Tirus shall make her selfe strong, heape vp siluer as ẏ sande, & golde as the clay of the stretes. Beholde, ẏ Lord Ez.xxvi. shal take her in, & haue her in possession: Ie.47.
he shal smite down her power into ẏ sea, Amos.i. and she shalbe consumed with fire. This B shal Ascalon see, & be afrayd. Gaza shalbe very sory, so shal Accaron also, bicause her hope is come to confusion. For ẏ king of Gaza shal perishe: & at Ascalõ shall no mã dwel. Straũgers shal dwel at Asdod, & as for the pride of ẏ Philistines, I shal roote it out. Their bloud wil I take away from Act.xv. their mouth & their abhominations from i.Cor.x. among their teeth. Thus they shalbe left and.xi. for our God: yea, they shalbe as a prince in Juda, and Accaron like as a Jebusite.
And so wil I compasse my house rounde about with my men of warre, going to & fro: ẏ no oppressor com vpõ thẽ any more.
For ẏ haue I sene now with myne eyes. Esa.62.
Reioyce thou greatly, O daughter Sion, Mat.xxi. be glad, O daughter Jerusalẽ. For lo, thy Ioh.xii. king commeth vnto thee, euen ẏ righteous & sauior, lowly and simple is he, he rydeth vpõ an asse, and vpon the foale of an asse.
I will rote out the charets frõ Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, the battel C bowes shalbe destroyed. He shal geue the Ps.lxxii. doctrine of peace vnto the heathen, and his dominion shalbe from the one sea to the other, and from the floudes to ẏ ends

of the worlde. Thou also thorow ỹ bloud of thy couenaunte, shalt let thy prisoners out of the pit wherin is no water. Turne you now to the strong hold ye ỹ be in prison, & long sore to be delivered. And thys day I bring thee worde, ỹ I wil rewarde thee double again. For Juda haue I bẽt out as a bow for me, and Ephraim haue I filled. Thy sonnes, O Sion, wil I raise vp against the Grekes, & make thee as a D giaunts sweard: the lord God shalbe sene aboue them, & his dartes shal go forth as the lightning. The Lord God shal blow ỹ trompet, & shall com forth as a storme out of the south. The Lorde of hostes shall defend them, they shal consume & deuoure, & subdue them with sling stones. They shal drinke and rage as it were thorow wine.
They shalbe filled like the basens, and as the hornes of ỹ aulter. The lord their god shal deliuer thẽ in the day, as the flocke of his people. For as precious stones of a di-ademe they shalbe sette vpon his lande.
O how prosperous, and goodly a thing shal ỹ be: The corne shal make the young men chereful, & the new wyne ỹ maidens.

The.x.Chapter.

The people is moued to require the doctrine of truth of the Lord: the Lord promiseth to visite and comfort the house of Israell.

A Pray the lord thẽ bytymes to geue you the latter raine: so shall the Lorde make bryght cloudes, and geue you raine inough for al ỹ encrease of ỹ field. For vaine is ỹ answere of idols. The sothsaiers se lies, & tel but vaine dreames ỹ comfort ỹ they geue is nothing worth.
Therefore goe they astray like a flocke of B shepe, and are troubled, bicause they haue no shepeheard. My wrathfull displeasure is moued at ỹ shepeheardes & I wil visite the goates. For the Lord of hosts wil graciously visite his flocke, ỹ house of Juda, and hold them as a goodly faire horse in the battaile. Out of Juda shall come the helmet the naile, the battailbow, and al ỹ princes together. They shalbe as the Giauntes, which in ỹ bataile tread downe ỹ mire vpõ the stretes. Thei shal fight, for ỹ Lord shal be with thẽ, so that the horsemẽ shalbe confounded. I wil comforte ỹ house of Juda, & preserue the house of Joseph.
I wil turne them also for I pitye them.
C and they shalbe like as they wer, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lorde am their god, and wil heare them. Ephraim shalbe as a giaunt, & their hearte shalbe chereful as thorow wine: yea, their children shal se it, & be glad: & their heart shal reioyce in the Lord. I wil blow for them & gather thẽ together: for I will redeme thẽ. They shal increase, as they increased afore. I will sow them among the people that they may thinke vpon me in farre countreis: thei shal liue with their childrẽ & turne again. I wil bring thẽ again also frõ the land of Egipt, & gather them oute D of Assiria. I wil cary them into ỹ lande of Gilead, and to Libanus, & thei shal wãte nothing. He shal go vpõ the sea of trouble & smite the sea waues, so that all the depe floudes shalbe dried vp. The proude bos-ting of Assur shalbe cast down & the scep- Esay.x.a. ter of Egipt shalbe takẽ away. I will com Ez.xxix.c fort thẽ in the Lord, ỹ they may walke in his name, saith the Lord.

The.xi.Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The care of the faithful is committed to Christ by ỹ father. A greuous vision against Jerusalem and Juda.

Open thy dores, O Liba- A nus, that ỹ fire may consume thy Cedre trees.
Houle ye firre trees, for ỹ Cedre is fallẽ: yea all the proude ar wasted awaye.
Houle (O ye oketrees of Basan) for ỹ mighty strong wood is cut down. Mẽ may heare the shepeheardes mourne, for their glory is destroyed. Men may heare the Lions whelpes rore, for ỹ pride of Jordan is wasted away. Thus saith the Lorde my God: fede the sheepe of the slaughter, whiche shalbe slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no sinne, but they that sel them, say: ỹ Lorde be thanked, I am riche: yea, their own shepeheardes spare them not. Therfore wil I no more spare those that dwel B in the land (sayeth the Lorde:) but loe, I will deliuer the people euery mã into his neighbours hande, and into the hand of his king, that they may smite the lande: and out of their hands I wyll not dely-uer them. I my selfe fed the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verily) and toke vnto me two staues, the one is called louing mekenes, ỹ other is called destroyer and so kepte the shepe. Three shepeheardes I put oute of offyce in one moneth, for C I myghte not awaye wyth them, neyther had they any delite in me. Then said I: I wil fede you nomore, the thing that dieth

dieth, let it die: and that ŷ will perish, let it perish: & let the remnaunt eate, euery one the flesh of his neighbour. I toke also my Ose.xi.c. louing meke staffe & brake it ŷ I might disanul ŷ couenaunt which I made with al people.
And so it was broken in ŷ day. Then ŷ poore simple shepe ŷ had a respecte vnto C me, knew therby ŷ it was the word of the Lord. And I sayd vnto thē if ye thinke it good, bring hither my price if no, then leaue. So they weied down thirtie siluer Mat. 27. c. pence, the value ŷ I was prised at. And ŷ Lord said vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly price for me to be valued at of thē:) and I toke the .xxx. siluer pens and cast them to the potter, in the house of the Lord. Then brake I mine other staffe also, (namely destroier:) ŷ I might loose the brotherhead betwixt Iuda & Israel. And the Lord said vnto me: take thee also the staffe of a folishe shepeheard: for lo, I will raise vp a shepehard in ŷ land, which shal not seke after ŷ thinges ŷ be lost, nor care D for such as go astray: he shal not heale the wounded, he shal not norishe the thing ŷ is whole: but he shal eate the fleshe of such as be fat, & teare their clawes in peces. O ydols shepeheard ŷ leaueth the flocke: the sweard shal come vpon his arme, & vpon his right eie. His arme shalbe cleane dried vp, & his right eie shalbe sore blinded.

The.xii.Chapter.

Of the destruction & buildyng againe of Ierusalē.

A Esai.xl.c. xliiii.e. and xlv.b Gen.ii.b.
The heauy burthen which the Lord hath deuised for Israel Thus saith ŷ Lorde whiche spread the heauens abrode, layd the foundaciō of ŷ earth, and geueth man ŷ breath of life. Behold, I wil make Ierusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto al the people that are round aboute her. yea Iuda himself also shalbe in the siege against Ierusalem. At thesame time Za.xiiii.c wil I make Ierusalē an heauy stone for al people, so that al such as lift it vp shalbe torne & rent: and al the people of ŷ earthe shalbe gathered together against it. In ŷ B day, sayth the lord: I wil make all horses Abdi.i.c. Amos.i.a abashed, & those ŷ ride vpon them to be out of their wittes. I wil open myne eies vpon ŷ house of Iuda, & smite all ŷ horses of ŷ people with blindnes. And the princes of Iuda shall say in their heartes: the inhabitours of Ierusalē shal geue me cōsolation in the Lord of hostes their God.

In ŷ time wil I make ŷ princes of Iuda like an hote burning ouen with wood, & like a cresset of fier among the strawe, so ŷ thei shal consume al the people rounde about thē, both vpon the right hande & the left. Ierusalem also shalbe inhabited again: namely in thesame place wher Ie-rusalem standeth. The lord shal preserue C the tents of Iuda like as afore time: so ŷ the glory of ŷ house of Dauid, and ŷ glory of ŷ citizens of Ierusalē shalbe but litle regarded, in cōparison of the glory of Iu-da. In ŷ day shal the Lord defende ŷ citizens of Ierusalem, so ŷ the weakeste then among thē shalbe as Dauid: & the house of Dauid, shalbe like as Gods house, & as the Angel of ŷ lord before thē. At thesame time wil I goe about to destroye all suche people as com against Ierusalē. Moreo-uer, vpon the house of Dauid, & vpon the citizens of Ierusalem, will I poure out ŷ spirite of grace & compassion, so ŷ thei shal loke vpon me, whom they haue pearsed: & they shal bewepe hym as men mourne for their only begotten sonne: yea, & be sory for him as men are sory for their first child. Thē shal ther be a great mourning at Ierusalē: like as the lamentaciō at Adremmon in the field of Meggadon. And ŷ land shal bewaile euery kynred by thē-selues. The kinred of the house of Dauid thēselues alone, & their wiues by thēsel-ues. The kinred of ŷ house of Nathā thē-selues alone & their wiues by thēselues.
The kinred of ŷ house of Leui thēselues alone, and their wiues by thēselues. The kinred of ŷ house of Semei thēselues alone, & their wiues by thēselues. In like maner al the other generatiōs euery one by themselues alone, and their wiues by themselues.

The.xiii.Chapter.

Of the well of grace & truth. Of the cleane riddaunce of Idolatry: and of false prophets.

At that time shal ŷ house of A Dauid & the citizens of Ierusalē haue an open wel, to washe of sine & vncleanesse.
And thē (saith ŷ lord of hostes,) I wil destroy ŷ names of the idols out of the land, so ŷ they shall nomore be put in remembraunce. As for ŷ false prophets also, & the vncleane spy-rit, I shal take thē out of the lād: so ŷ yf any of thē prophecy any more, his own father & mother ŷ begat him, shall say vnto hi. Thou shalt di, for ŷ speakest lies vnder
the

B the name of the Lord: yea his own father & mother ẏ begat him shall wounde him, when he prophecieth. And then shal those prophets be cõfounded, euery one of hys visiõ whẽ he prophecieth; neither shal thei weare sackclothes any more, to disceaue men withal. But he shalbe faine to say: I am no prophet: I am an husband mã, for so am I taught by Adã fro my youth vp.
And if it be said vnto him: how came these woundes thẽ in thine hands? He shal an= swere. Thus am I wounded in ẏ house of C mine own frendes. Arise, O thou sweard, vpon my shepeherd & vpon ẏ prince of my people, sayth the Lord of hostes. Smite ẏ shepeard & the shepe shalbe scattred a= brode: and so wil I turne mine hand to ẏ little ones. And it shal come to passe (saith the lord,) ẏ in al the land, two partes shal be rooted out, but the thirde parte shal re= main therin. And the same third part will I bring thorow the fier, & will clense thẽ as the siluer is clensed: yea, & trye thẽ like as golde is tried. Then shal they cal vpon my name, and I wil heare thẽ: I will say: it is my people. And they shall say: Lorde my God.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

The wasting of the church vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kingdome of the Lord.

A BEhold, the day of ẏ Lorde cõ= meth ẏ thou shalt be spoiled & robbed, for I wil gather toge ther al the heathẽ to fight a= gainst Jerusalẽ, so ẏ the citye shalbe wonne, ẏ houses spoiled, & the wo= men defiled. The halfe of the citie shal go away into captiuitye, and the residue of ẏ people shall not be caried oute of the citie.
After ẏ shal the Lord goe forth to fight a= gainst those heathen, as men vse to fighte in ẏ day of battel. Then shal his fete stand B vpõ the mount Oliuet ẏ lieth vpon ẏ east side of Jerusalem. And the mount Oliuet shal cleaue in two, east ward & west ward so ẏ there shalbe a great valey, & the halfe mount shall remoue towarde the north, & the other toward ẏ south. And ye shal flee vnto the valey of my hils, for the valey of the feast of tabernacles: yea, this shalbe the sinne plage of Egipte, and the sinne

A complaint against Israell and her priestes.

A The heavy burthen which the lord sheweth against Israell by Malachye. I haue loued you sayth the Lord, & yet ye say: wherin hast ẏ loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother

Ge. xxv. c / Rom. ix. d / Jo, xxiii a saith ẏ lord: yet haue I loued Jacob, & hated Esau: yea, I haue made his hils wast, and hys heritage a wildernesse for dragons. And though Edom said: wel we ar destroied, we wil go builde vp againe the places ẏ be wasted, yet (saith ẏ lord of hostes)

And if ye saye: wherein haue we despised thy name? In thys, that ye offre vncleane bread vpon mine aulter. And if ye wil say wherein haue we offred any vncleane thing vnto the? In this ẏ ye say: ẏ aulter

And now make your praier before God, that he may haue mercy vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shall he regarde your persons thynke ye, sayth the Lord of hosts? Yea, what is he amōg you, that will do somuch as to shut ẏ dores, or to kindle the fier vpon myne aulter for nought? I haue no pleasure in you saith ẏ Lord of hostes: & as for the meat offring,

But ye haue vnhalowed it, in ẏ ye say: the aulter of the Lord is not to be regarded, & the thing that is set therupon not worthy to be eaten. Now say ye: it is but labour & trauaile; and thus haue ye thought scorne at it, (saith ẏ lord of hosts) offring robbery, yea, the lame & the sicke, ye haue brought me in a meateoffring: should I accept it of your hand, saith the Lord? Threatninges against the priestes, being deceyuers of the people.

A And now (O ye priestes) thys cōmaundemēt toucheth you: if ye wil not heare it nor regard it, to geue ẏ glory vnto my name, sayth ẏ Lord of hostes: I wil send a curse vpon you, and wil curse your blessings: yea, curse thē will I, if ye do not take hede. He walked with me in peace & equitie, and did tourne many one away frō their sinnes. For in the Priestes lyppes shoulde be sure knowledge, ẏ men may seke the law at his mouth, for he is a messanger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the way, and haue caused the multitude to be

Wherfore wil I also make you to be despi=

Haue we not all one father? Hath not one the aulter of the lord is couered w teares,

And yet ye say: wherfore? Euen bicause ẏ wheras the Lorde made a couenaunt be= & let no mā despise the wife of his youth.

If ẏ hatest her, put her away saith ẏ Lord god of Israel, & geue her clothing for the then to your spirit, and despise her not. Ye greue ẏ Lord with your wordes, & yet ye say: wherwithal haue ye greued him? In this ẏ ye say: All that do euil are good in ẏ sight of God, and such please him. Or els where is the god ẏ punisheth.

Josias holdeth Passeouer. After his death is Jechonias his sonne made king in his steade: whome the king of Egipt putteth out, and setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalē is destroyed, and Sedechias in taken.

A AND * Josias held the feast
i. Par. xxxv. a. iiii. Reg. xxiii. c. of Easter in Jerusalē unto the Lorde, and slew the Passeouer the. xiiii. day of the first moneth. He set the priests also in order (according to their daily courses) beyng araped in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake unto ye Levites the holy ministers of Israel, that they should halowe them selues unto the Lord, to set the holy Arke of the Lord, in the house that king Salomō the sonne of David had builded, and saide: ye shall no more beare the Ark upon your shoulders. Now serue your Lord, & take the charge of his people of Israel, after your villages & your tribes: according as king David ye king of Israel hath ordeined, & according as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: yea, loke that ye all do seruice in the temple, according to the ordring and distribution of the principal men which ar appointed out of the tribes, to do seruice Exo. xii. b for the children of Israel. * Kyl the Passeouer, & prepare offringes for your brethrē and do according to the commaundement of the Lord, which was geuen unto Moses. And unto the people that was found, Josias gaue. xxx. thousand shepe, lābes, kiddes & goates, & thre thousande oxen. These the king (of his kyngly liberality) gaue unto the people, according as he had promised: and to the priestes for the Passeouer, he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxen. Moreouer Jechonias, and Semeias, & Nathanael his brethren, and Hasabias, Jehiel, and Josabad gaue thē to the passeouer, fiue thousand shepe, & fiue hundred bullockes.

And when these thinges wer brought to passe, ye priestes & the Levites stode goodly in their ordre, and had the unleuened bread thorowout the tribes. And after the ordring of the principal men in the tribes, they offred unto the Lorde in the sighte of the people, accordyng * as it is written in Exo. xii. b the boke of Moses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe as according was. As for ye thancke offeringes & the other, they dight thē in kettelles and pottes, & set thē before the people with good will, and afterward before them selues and the priestes. For ye priestes offered the fat until the time was expired, but the Levites prepared for thēselues, and for their brethren, the children of Aaron. The holy singers also, the children of Asaph stode in their order, according as David deuised. So dyd Asaph, Zacharie, & Iduthun, which wer appointed by the kyng. Moreouer the porters & dore kepers stode by the dores, & that diligently, so that none went out of his standing and seruice: for their brethren (ye Levites) prepared for thē. Thus wer al thinges perfourmed, that belonged to ye offering of the Lord. In that day they held ye Passeouer, & offered thanckeofferings beside the sacrifice of the Lord, according to the commaundement of king Josias. C

So the children of Israel which wer thē present, held an honourable Passeouer, & the feast of swet bread seuen dayes long. Yea, such a Passeouer was not kept in Israel frō the time of the Prophet Samuel. And all ye kynges of Israel, held not such an Easter as this, which king Josias held and the priestes, the Levites, the Jewes, and all Israel, of all them that wer at Jerusalem. And in the eyghtene yere of the raygne of Josias, was this Passeouer kept. And with a perfecte harte dyd kyng Josias order al his workes before ye lord, and the thinges that were written of him in times paste, concernyng those that sinned and were ungodly against the Lorde before all the people: and that sought not ye worde of the Lord upon Israell. * After iiii. Reg. xxiii. c. al these actes of king Josias, Pharao the king of Egipte went up and came toward ii. Par. xxxv. a.
Carchamis by Euphrates, and Josias went to mete him. Then sente the kyng of Egypt vnto Josias, sayinge: what haue I to do with thee, o king of Juda? I am not sent of the Lord to fight against thee, for my war is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy way home again in all the hast. And Josias would not turne againe vpon his cha-rette, but vndertoke to fight against him, and harkened not vnto the woorde of the Prophet, whiche he tolde him oute of the mouthe of God, but pitched battaile against him in the felde of Mageddo. And D the princes preased to kyng Josias. Then saide the king vnto his seruauntes. Cary me away out of the battell, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him away out of the front of the battell. Then satte he vp vpon the second charret, came to Jerusalem, died and was buried in his fathers sepulchre. And in all Iurye they mourned for Josias: yea, the rulers also with their wiues made lamē-tatiō for him vnto this day, and this was done euer still in Israel.

These thinges are written in the booke of the stories of the kings of Juda, namely, al the actes and works of king Josias, his kingly power & maiesty, his vnderstāding in the law of God, & what he did: yea things which at not written in ẏ booke of iii. Regū. xxiii. f. ii. Para. xxxvi. a. the kinges of Israel & Juda. ✠ And ẏ people toke Jeconias the sonne of Josias, and made him king in stede of Josias his father, when he was. xxiii. yere old. And he raygned ouer Israel. iii. monethes. And the king of Egypt put him downe, that he should not raygne in Jerusalē, and raised vp a taxe of the people: namely, an hūdred talentes of siluer, and one talent of golde.
E The kyng of Egipte also made Joachim his brother king of Juda and Jerusalem.
As for them of the kinges counsell with ẏ king him selfe, & Zaraceles his brother, he toke them, and caried them awaye prisoners into Egipte.

Fiue and twenty yere old was Joachim, whē he was made king in the land of Juda and Jerusalē, and he did euill in ẏ sight iiii. Reg. xxiiii. a. of the lord. After this * Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon came vp, and bounde him with bādes of yron, & caried hī to Ba-bilō. Nabuchodonosor also toke al the vessels that wer halowed in the temple of the Lord, and al the Jewels, and caried them vnto Babilon, and brought them into his [illegible] temple at Babilon. Of his vnclen[illegible] vngodlinesse, it is written in ẏ boke [illegible] actes of the kinges. And Joachim his sōn raigned in his stede. He was made F kyng beyng. xviii. yere olde, and raygned but thre monethes, and. x. dayes in Jeru-salē, & did euil before the Lorde. So after a yere, Nabuchodonosor sēt & caused him to be brought vnto Babilon with the holi vessels of ẏ lord, and made Zedechias his brother king of Juda & Jerusalem, when he was. xxi. yere old, & he raigned. xi. yere.

And he did euil also in the sight of ẏ lord and cared not for the wordes that wer spoken vnto him * by the prophet Jeremy, at the mouth of the Lord. And where he had made an othe vnto kyng Nabuchodonosor, he forsware himselfe, and fel from him hauyng a stiffenecke and a herte, and transgressed all the statutes and ordinaūces of the Lorde God of Israell. The rulers also and the heades of the people of ẏ Lorde dyd muche euil, and became vngod-ly, more thā the Heathen, being defiled in all maner of abhominations: yea, and defiled the holy temple of the Lord at Jerusalem. And the God of their fathers sente his messengers vnto them, to turne them backe: and to call them againe from theyr sinnes: for he would faine haue spared thē for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuerthelesse, they had his messengers in derision: and loke what God spake vnto thē by his prophetes, they made but a sport of it. G This drew on so long, till the Lorde was wroth with his people for their vngodlynesse, and till he caused the kynges of the Chaldees to come vp, whiche slew their yong men with the sword, yea, euen in the compasse of their holy temple, and spared no body, nether yōg nor old, nether may-den nor yong man, but they wer al deliue-red into the power of the kings of ẏ Chaldees, and all the holy vessels of the Lorde, and the kinges treasures toke they, & caried them vnto Babilon. * As for ẏ house of the Lord, they went vp into it, and brēt it, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fire vpon hir towers, destroyed all hir noble buildinges and brought them to nought, and the people that wer not slaine wyth the swearde, they caried vnto Ba-bilon.

Thus became they prisoners and bond-men of the kyng of Babilon, til they were deliuered and raigned for thē selues ✠ whē the wordes of the Lord wer fulfilled, whiche he promised them by the mouthe of the prophet Jeremie, and till the land had her rest: namely, all the time that it laye wast, had it rest and quietnesse. lxxvii. yeres.

The. ii. Chapter.

Cirus geueth licence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, & restoreth thē the vessels of the temple. After y are ther letters sent to Artaxerses: which accuse y Jewes for building of the city: & so is y building layed of vntil the. ii. yere of Darius.

A Now ✤ when king Cyrus raigned ouer y Persians & whē the lord would perfourme the worde that he had promised by y mouthe of the prophet Jeremy: y Lord raised vp the spirite of Cirus, the King of the persians: so that he caused his wrytyng to be proclaymed thorowe oute his whole realme, saying: Thus saieth y king of Persians: The lord of Israel that hie lord hath made me king of the land, & commaūded me to build him an house at Jerusalem in Jewry. If there be any now of your people, y lord be with him, & go vp with him to Jerusalē. And al they that dwel round about that place shal helpe thē, whether it be with gold, w siluer, with giftes, w horses & necessary B cattel, & all other thinges y are brought w a fre wil to y house of the Lord at Jerusalē.

Thē the principal men out of the tribes & villages of Juda & Bē Jamin stode vp: so did the Priestes & also y Leuites (whō the Lord had moued) to go vp, & to builde vp the house of the Lord at Jerusalē. And they that wer about thē, helped them with al maner of gold & siluer, & cattel also, and with many liberal giftes, and this did many one, whose minde was stirred vp therto. ✤ King Cirus also brought forth y vessels & ornamentes y wer halowed vnto y Lord (which Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon had caried away frō Jerusalem, and cōsecrated thē to his ydole & ymage) and deliuered them to Methridatus his treasurer, & by him they were deliuered to Salmanasar the deputy in Jewry.

And this was the numbre of them. ii. M. and foure hundred siluer boules, thirty siluer basens. xxx. basens of gold. ii. thousād and. iiii. C. vessels of siluer & a. M. beside. Al the vessels of gold and siluer were fiue M. viii. C. and. ix. These wer nūbred vnto Salmanasar, & to them that wer come againe with him to Jerusalem out of y captiuitie of Babilon. ✤ Nowe in the time of kyng Artaxerses the king of Persia, these men: Balemus and Mithridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semellius the scribe, and other y dwelt in Samaria and in other places, vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kig Artaxerses
C wherin they cōplained vnto y king of thē in Jury & Jerusalē. The letter was made after this maner. Sir, thy seruaūtes Rathimus the story writer, Sabellius the scribe, & other iudges of y court of Celosiria, & Phenices. Be it knowen & manifest to our lord the kyng, that y Jewes which are come vp from you vnto vs into y rebellious & wicked city, beginne to build it again, and the walles about it, & to set vp the temple anew. Now if this city and the walles thereof be set vp againe, they shall not only refuse to geue tribute & taxes, but also rebell vtterly against the kyng. And for so much as they take this in hand now about the temple, we thought it reason, to thinke no scorne of it, but to shew it vnto our lord the king, & to certifie him therof: to the intent that if it please the kyng, he may cause it to be sought in y bokes of old: and thou shalt find such warning written, and shalt vnderstād, y this city hath alway ben rebellious & disobedient, y it hath subdued kings & cities, and y the Jewes which dwel therin, haue euer bē a rebellious, obstinate, vnfaitful, and fighting people, for the whiche cause this citie is wasted.

Wherfore now we certify our lord y king that if this citie be builded and occupied againe, and the walles therof set vp anew, thou canst haue no passage into Celosiria and Phenices.

D Then wrote the king to Rathimus the story writer to Balthemus, to Sabellius the scribe, and to y other officers & dwellers in Siria, & Phenices, after this maner: I haue read y epistle whiche thou sentest vnto me, & haue cōmaūded to make diligent search, & haue found, y the city hath euer resisted kinges, y the same people are disobedient, & haue caused muche warre, & that mighty kinges haue raigned in Jerusalem, which also haue raised vp taxes of Siria, & Phenices. Wherefore, I haue commaunded those people, that they shall not build y city, y they make no more in it, and that they procede no further with the buildig, for so much as it might be y cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kinges.

Now when Rathymus and Sabellius the scribe & the rulers in the land had read the writing of king Artaxerses, they gate them togither, & came in al the hast to Jerusalem with an host of horsemen, & with much people of foote, & forbade thē to [illegible] de. And so they left of from building [illegible] temple, vnto y secōd yere of king Darius.

 The

The.iii.Chapter.

Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the thre yōg men, of the which the first is declared.

Kyng Darius made a greate feast vnto hys seruauntes, vn-
A to all his court, and to all the officers of Medea & Persia, yea, to al the deputies and rulers that wer vnder him, from India vnto Ethiopia, an. C and. xxvii. countrees. So when they hadde eaten and dronken, beyng satisfied & wer gone home agayne. Darius the king went into his chambre, layed him down to slepe and so awaked.

Thē the thre yong men, that kept ỹ kinges person, and watched his body, cōmoned among thē selues, & spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye some thing, & loke whose sentence is wiser & more excellenter than the other, vnto him shall kyng Darius geue great giftes, & cloth him w purple, he shall geue hym vessels of golde to drinke in, clothes of gold & coueringes, he shal make him a costly charet & a bridle of gold, he shal geue him a bonet of white silke, & a chaine of golde about hys necke: yea, he shalbe ỹ second and principall next vnto king Darius, & ỹ bicause of his wisedom, & shalbe called the kinges kinsman.

So euery one wrote his meaning, sealed it, & layed it vnder the kinges pillow, & B sayd: when the kyng ariseth, we will geue him our writings, & loke whose word the kyng & his chiefe lordes iudge to be ỹ most wisely spoken: ỹ same shal haue ỹ victory. One wrote: Wine is a strong thyng, the secōd wrote ỹ kyng is stronger. The. iii. wrote: Women haue yet more strēgth, but aboue all things the trueth beareth away the victory. Now whē the kyng was risē vp, they toke their writinges & deliuered thē vnto him, & so he read them. Then set he forth to cal al his chiefe lordes, & all the deputies & rulers of the countrees of Medea & Persia. And whē they wer set down in the coūsel, the writynges wer read before them. And he commaunded to call for the yong men ỹ they might declare their meaninges thē selues by mouth. So whē they wer sent for, & came in, the kyng sayd vnto thē, shew vs, and make vs to vnderstand what ỹ thinges are ỹ ye haue writthen. Then began the first (which had spo-D ken of the strength of wine) & sayde: O ye Pro. xx. a men * wyne is merueilous strong, & ouercommeth them ỹ drinke it: it deceaueth the mind, and bringeth both ỹ pore man and the king to dotage & vanity. Thus doth it also with the bondman and with the free, with the pore and ryche, it taketh awaye their vnderstanding, and maketh them careles & merry, so that none of them remembreth any heauinesse, det, or dutye. It causeth a man to thinke also, ỹ ỹ thing which he doth is honest & good, & remembreth not that he is a king, nor that he is in authoritie, and that he ought not to do suche thinges. Moreouer, when men are drinking, they forget al frendshyp, al brotherly faithfulnes & loue, but as sone as they are dronken, they draw oute ỹ sweard and wil fight, & when they ar layed downe frō ỹ wine, & so risen vp againe, thei cā not tel what thei did: iudge ye now, is not wine ỹ strongest? For who would elles take in hand to do such things? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tong.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The declaration of the two last sentences of the yong men, propoūded in ỹ chapter before, of which the last is, ỹ veritie beareth the victory in all thinges, is most cōmended & allowed. Darius writeth letters to al the rulers vnder him, that they shoulde ayde Zorobabel, to the building of Ierusalem.

Then the seconde (whiche had saide: ỹ the king was strōger) began to speake, A saying: O ye men, are not they the strongest & most excellent, that conquere ỹ land & sea, and all that is in the sea, & in the earth? Now is the king lord of al these things, & hath dominion of them al: and loke what he cōmaundeth, it is done. If he sende his men forth a warfare, they go & breake downe hilles, walles, & towers. They are slaine (and slay other men) them selues, & ouerpasse not the kinges word. If they get the victory, they bring the king al the spoyle. Likewise, the other that meddle not with warres and fighting, but till ỹ groūd: whē they reape, they bring tribute vnto ỹ king. And if the king alone do but cōmaūd to kil, they kill: if he cōmaunde to forgeue, they forgeue. If he commaūd to smite, they smite. If he byd driue away, they dryue awaye: If he cōmaūd to build, they build: If he cōmaūd to breake down, they breake downe. If he commaunde to plante, they plante.

The common people and the rulers are B obedient vnto him. And the kyng in the meane season sitteth him downe, eateth & drinketh, & taketh his rest: thē kepe they watche round about the king, & not one of them them dare get him out of ŷ way, to do hys owne busines, but must be obediente vnto the king at a worde. Judge ye now, O ye mē, how should not he go far aboue, vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had spokē thus, he held his tong. The third, whose name was Zorobabel, which had spoken of women and of truth, began to say after this maner: O ye mē, it is not the great king, it is not the multitude of menne, neither is it wyne that excelleth: who is it then that hath the lordship ouer them: Haue not wemen borne ŷ king, and all the people that rule those thynges?

Haue not women borne thē, and brought them vp that plante the vynes, whereout the wyne commeth. They make garmentes for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, and withoute women can not men lyue.

If they gather gold & siluer & all precious thinges, and se a faire wellfauoured woman, they leaue altogether, and turne their eyes only vnto the woman, & gape vpon her, and haue more desire vnto hyr, than vnto the siluer and gold, or any maner of precious thing.

C ✤ A man leaueth his father that brought Gen.ii.b. him vp, leaueth his own natural coūtrye, Mat.xix. a and cleaueth vnto ŷ womā: yea, he ieopar-1.Cor.vi. b deth his life with the woman, & remēbreth neither father, nor mother, nor countrye.
Eph.v.g By thys then ye must nedes knowe that women haue dominion ouer you.

Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his swerde, & goeth his waye, to steale, to kil, to murther, to saile vpon ŷ sea, & seeth a Lion, and goeth in the darcknesse: & whē he hath stollē, disceaued, & robbed, he bringeth it vnto his loue. Againe, a mā loueth his wife better than father & mother: yea, many one there be, that runne out of their wittes, & becom bondmen for their wiues sakes, many one also hath perished, haue ben slaine, & haue sinned bicause of womē.

D And now beleue me, I know a king whiche is great in his power, & al landes stād in awe of him, & no man dare lay hād vpō him: yet did I see, that Apame (the daughter of the great king Bartacus) ŷ kynges concubine, sate besyde the kyng vpon the right hand, & toke of his crowne from hys heade, & set it vpon her own head, & smote the kyng with her left hand. Moreouer, ŷ kyng loked vpon her with open mouth, if she laughed vpō him, he laughed also, but yf she toke any displeasure with him, the king was faine to flatter her, and to geue her good wordes, till he had gotten her fa-uour againe.

O ye men, are not women thē stronger?
Great is ŷ earth, & hie is the heuen. Who doth these thinges? Then the king and the princes loked one vpō an other. So he began to speake of the trueth: O ye men: are not women stronger? Great is the earth, hie is the heauen, swift is the course of the sunne, ✤ he compasseth the heauen round Eccle.i.a aboute, and fetcheth his course agayne to his own place in one day. Is he not excellent that doth this? Yea, great is the truth and stronger than al thinges. Al the earth calleth vpon the truth, the heauē praiseth it, al workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thing. Wyne is vnryghteous: the kyng is vnryghteous: women are vnryghteous: all the children of mē are vnrighteous: yea, al their wor-kes are vnrighteous, & ther is no truth in them: in their vnrighteousnesse also shall they be destroyed & perishe. As for ŷ truth *it endureth, & is alway strong: it liueth & Esai.xl.a cōquereth for euermore: world w^t out end. Ps.cxvii. a The truth accepteth no persons: it putteth no difference betwixt rich or pore, betwixt the mighty or simple, but doth ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euill or good, and al men are louynglye dealt withall in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it, there is no vnrighteous thyng, but strēg-th, kingdome, power, and maiestye for euermore. Blessed be ŷ God of truth. And with that he helde hys tong, and all the people cried & said: Great is the truth, and aboue all, then sayd the kyng vnto him: Aske what thou wilt, more than is appointed in the writing, and I shall geue it the, for thou art found wyser than thy companions, thou shalt syt next me, and be my kynsman. Thē said he vnto the king: Remembre thy promise and vow, which thou hast vowed and promised (in the day whē thou cammest to thy kyngdome) to builde vp Jerusalē, and to send again al the vessels & Jewels, that wer taken awaye out of Jerusalem, whiche Cirus separated, when he offered in Babilon, and woulde send them agayne. And thy mynd was to build vp the temple, which the Edomites brent whē Jerusalē was destroyed by the Chaldees. This only (O king) is the thīg that I require, this is the maiestie, which I desire and aske of the: ŷ thou perfourme the vowe, which thou w^t thine own mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heauen.

Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kyssed

ii.Es.ii b. kissed him,*and wrote a letter vnto al the i.Es.vi.d deputies and shreues, to al the lordes and nobles,that they should cõuey him forth, and al them that would go vp with him.
He wrote a letter also vnto al the shreues that wer in Celosiria and Phenices, and vnto Libanus,ŷ they should draw Cedre trees frõ Libanus vnto Jerusalẽ,to build the city withal.Moreouer,he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone oute of hys realme into Jewry bicause of the fredom, that no officer nor ruler,nor shreue,should come to their dores , & that all their lande which they had cõquered , should be free & not tributary,& that ŷ Edomites shoulde geue ouer the cities & villages of ŷ Jues, which thei had taken in:yea,and that thei should yerely geue twenty talentes to the building of the tẽple,vntil ŷ time ŷ it were finished,& to ŷ daily halowing of ŷ brẽt-offerings(as it is cõmaũded)x.talẽtes yerly also.And ŷ al they which come frõ Babilõ to build the city,should haue fre liber-tie:they & their children,and al ŷ priestes.
He wrote ŷ greatnesse also, and cõmaũded that the holy garmentes should be geuen them,wherin they ministred:& wrote that cõmaundementes should be geuen to the leuites,vntil the day,ŷ the house were finished , and Jerusalem builded vp, & cõmaunded ŷ al thy ŷ watched ŷ city should haue their portiõs & wages.He gaue ouer also al ŷ vessels ŷ Cyrus had seperated frõ G Babilon:and all that Cyrus had geuen in cõmaundement,the same charged he also:
that it should be done,and sente vnto Jerusalem.Now when this yong man was gone forth,he turned his face toward Je-rusalẽ,and praised the king of heauẽ , and said:*Of thee commeth ŷ victorye, of thee Eccle.i.a cõmeth wisdom and clearnesse,& J am thy seruaunt.Blessed art thou which hast geuẽ me wisedom,thee wil J prayse O lord, thou God of our fathers.
And so he toke the letters, and went vnto babilon.And whẽ he came there,he told this vnto al his brethren that wer at Ba-bilon,and they praised the god of their fathers,ŷ he had geuẽ them refreshing and libertye to go vp,and to builde Jerusalem and the temple(wherin ŷ name of the lord is called vpon)and they reioyced with instrumentes & gladnesse seuen dayes lõg.

*So whē the seuenth moneth came, and i. Esd.iii. when the childrē of Israel wer euery mā a. at his busines,they came al with one cōsēt into the court,whiche was before ẏ East dore. And there stode Jesua the sonne of Josedec,and his brethren the priestes,and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiell, & hys brethzen, settyng vp an aultare, to offer burnt sacrifices vpon it, as it is wzitten in the law of Moses.

Ther came people also of other coũtries and the Heathen out of al landes, to set vp the aulter in his place, and offered sacrifices and burntofferings vnto the Lozd in the mozning. And so they held the feast of Le.xxiii.f tabernacles, *as it is commaunded in ẏ Nu.xxix.b. law. And daily offered they as accozdyng was, and made the Sacrifices appointed, 2.Mac.i.c the offerings also of the Sabbothes, and of the new Mones, and all holy feastes.

i.Esd.3.b *And al they that vowed offeringes vnto the Lozd, began at the new Mone of ẏ seuenth moneth to offer vnto God, foz the temple of the Lozde was not yet builded.
And they gaue vnto ẏ Masons & carpenters: money, meat and dzinke with cherefulnesse, vnto them of Sidon also & Tyze, they gaue cartes, ẏ thei should cary Cedze trees, frõ Libanus to be ioystes & beames and ẏ they should make shyppes in ẏ hauen of Joppe, accozding as it was appoited & ozdeined by Cirus kyng of the Persians.

F And in the second yeare, they came into Ec.xix.b. ẏ temple of God, at Jerusalẽ.* In ẏ secõd moneth begã Zozobabel, the sonne of Sa-lathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, & their bzethzen the pziestes and Leuites: and all they that wer come vnto Jerusalem out of the captiuity of Babilon, and layed the foundation of the temple, in the new Mone of the secõd moneth in the second yere, that they were come into Jewry and Jerusalem. And they apointed the Leuites (that wer aboue .xx. yere old) vnto the seruice of the Lozde, so Jesua and his sonnes, and his bzethzen, al the Leui-tes stode together, and perfourmed ẏ law and ozdinaunce in the house of the Lozd.

And the pziestes stode, and had theyz garmentes and trompettes, and the Le-uites, the sonnes of Asaph, had cymbales, giuing thãkes and pzaises vnto the Lozd, i Par.xvi b accozding as Dauid the kyng of Israel had ozdeined.

Ps. cxxxv a. And the songe that they did singe vnto the lozd, was after this maner. O singe Esai.xlib vnto the Lozde, foz he is gracious, & hys goodnesse vpõ Israell endureth foz euer.
And al the people blew out with trompet-tes, and sang with loude voyce, pzaising, G the Lozd together, in the rearyng vp of i Esd.3.d. the house of the Lozd. There came also from among the pziestes and Leuites the rulers and elders, accozding to the trybes and kynredes (such as had sene the house afoze) to the building of this temple with great cry and great mourning, many also with trõpettes and great ioy: In so much ẏ the trompettes might not wel be heard, foz the wepyng and mournyng. Foz the common people blew goodlye vpon the trompettes.

Then came the ennemyes of ẏ tribes i Esd.4. of Juda and Bẽ Jamin, to know what ẏ trompetting & noyse of shawmes myght be. And they perceyued that it was they which wer come againe out of captiuitie, and would build the temple vp a new vnto the Lozd God of Israel. So they went to Zozobabel, and Jesua, & to ẏ rulers of the villages, and sayde vnto them. Shall we builde with you also? Foz we likewise haue heard your Lozd, & we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Azba-sareth the king of Assiria, which brought vs hyther. Then Zozobabel & Jesua, and the rulers of the villages of Israell, sayde vnto them: It is not mete, that ye should build the temple of our God with vs: we our selues alone wil build vnto the Lozd, i.Chr. like as Cirus the king of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the Heathen in the land layd them selues against those that were in Jewzie, helde vp the building from them, layed waite vpõ them pryuyly, stopped suche as brought any thing to them, fozbad them to build, and hyndzed those that made thẽ passage, that the building should not be finished: and this cõtinued so long as king Cirus liued: and so they put of ẏ buildyng foz the space of two yeares, vntill ẏ raigne of kyng Darius.

Zachary the sonne of Addo, pzophecied, vpõ them, in Jewzye, and Jerusalẽ in the name of the God of Israell: Then Zozobabell, the sonne of Agge.i.
Salathiell, and Jesua the sonne of Jose-dec stode vp, and beganne to buylde the house of the Lozd at Jerusalem, whẽ the pzophetes of the Lozd helped them. At the same time came Sisenes the vnderzeue in Siria and Phenices, with the landloz-des and his companions, and sayde vnto
them:

them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the roofe and all other thinges agayne? And who are the workemen: that build them? Ne-uerthelesse, the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of the Lorde, that they woulde not be lette (thoughe they were prouoked therto) but builded on still, vntill the time that kyng Darius were certified therof, & an answere receaued frõ him. The letter that these men sente vnto kyng Darius, was after this maner.

Sisennes the vnder shreue in Ciria, & Phenices, & the landlordes with their cõ-panions, which are head rulers in Siria, and Phenices, sende their salutation vnto Darius the king. We certifie the Lord the kyng, that we came into the land of Jewry, and went to Jerusalem: wher we foũd them building ŷ great house of God, and the temple, with great costly freestone, & B with goodly tymber for the walles: yea, they make great hast with the worke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in theyr handes, and with great diligence and worshippe it is made. Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded them to make vp the house and the buyldyng, and thys we dyd, to the entent that we might certifye thee perfectly and wryte vnto thee, the names of those that were the rulers of the worcke. So they gaue vs this answere: we are the seruaũ-tes of ŷ lord, which made heauẽ and earth, 3.Re.vi.a and as for this house, * it hath ben builded and set vp afore time by the great and myghty kyng of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and sin-iiii.Reg. xxiiii. ned agaynst the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodo-nozor kyng of Babilõ the kyng of ŷ Chaldees, whiche brake downe the house, and brent it, and caried awaye the people prisoners vnto Babilon. * Neuerthelesse, in the first yere that kyng Cirus raygned at Babilon, Cyrus the kyng wrote and commaunded to builde vp this house againe, and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodo-nozor caried away from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and appropriated vnto his owne temple, these broughte Cirus forth again, and deliuered them to Zorobabel and to Salmanasar, the vndershreue: commaũ-dyng them, that they shoulde bring those same ornamentes agayne to Jerusalem, into the temple, and to begynne from that tyme forthe, to builde the temple agayne in his owne place: Then Salmanasar layde the foundation of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer synce they haue builded, and yet it is not ended. And therfore, O kyng, yf thou thynckest it good, let it be soughte in the libraries and rolles of kyng Cirus. Yf it be found then, that it is done with the councell and consente of kyng Cyrus, and if our Lorde the kyng be so mynded, let him write vnto vs thereof. C

*Thẽ commaunded king Darius to seke 1.Esd.vi.a in the libraries, and so at Egbathanis in a 2.Esd.iiii.c litle citie in Media there was found suche a writyng. In the fyrst yeare of the raigne of Cyrus, the same kyng Cyrus commaũ-ded that the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem should be builded again, (and odours there to be made cõtinually vnto the lord) whose hyghte shalbe. x. cubites and the bredth. lx. cubites and. iiii. square with thre hewen stones, with a loft of timber of the same coũtrey: yea, with a new loft, and the expences therof to be geuen of the house of the kyng Cirus, and the ornamẽ-tes of golde and siluer, that Nabuchonozor toke oute of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalẽ, shalbe set againe in the temple at Jerusalem, wher they were afore. Si-sennes also the vndershreue in Siria and Phenices, the princes, and their companions, and the other that bee head rulers in Siria and Phenices, shall not medle ner haue any thig to do with that place, I Ci- D rus haue commaunded also, that they shal build the house of the Lord whole vp, and haue ordained them, to helpe those that be come out of captiuitie: till the house of ŷ Lorde be fynyshed, and out of the tribute and taxinge that is yearely raysed vp in Syria and Phenices, diligentely to geue them a certayne summe to the offeryng of the Lorde: and the same to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel ŷ officer, that he therwith may ordayne oxen, rammes, lambes, corne, salt, wyne, and oile, and that cõtinu-ally euery yeare: after ŷ expences * whiche 1.Esd.vi.b the priestes that bee at Jerusalem shewe to be made daylye: this shalbe geuẽ vnto them without delay, that they maye offer sacrifices daylye to the hiest God, for the kyng and for hys seruauntes, and to praye for their lyues. Let it be proclaymed also on euery side, that whosoeuer breaketh or despiseth thys commaundement of the kyng, shalbee hanged vpon a galowes (made of his owne good) and all his goo-des shalbe seasoned vnto the kyng. The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called led vpon)rote out and destroy all the kynges and people, that vndertake by vyolence to hinder ÿ same, or to deale vncur-teously with the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. J Darius the kyng haue ordained, that these thinges shall be done with al diligence.

The.vii.Chapter.

The temple is finished and dedicate, and the feast of the vnleuened breade is holden.

A Hen Sisennes ÿ vndershreues in Celosiria, and Phenices, & the other lād lordes with their companions, obeied the thynges that kyng Darius had ordeined, & wer diligent in ÿ holy workes, & wer felow helpers with ÿ old rulers of the Jewes, & so the worke of ÿ Sanctuari went forth & prospered, whē Aggeus & Zachary prophecyed. And they perfourmed al things thorow ÿ commaūdement of ÿ Lord God of Israel, and after ÿ deuice of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerses kinges of Persia.
And thus was our house finished vnto B the.xxiii. daye of the moneth Adar in the vi. yeare of kyng Darius. And the childrē of Israel, the priestes & the Leuites and ÿ other that wer come out of captiuity: and suche as wer ioyned vnto them, dyd according as it is written in ÿ boke of Moses.
And in the dedication of ÿ tēple, they offered an. C. Oxen, two hūdred rammes.iiii.
C. lābes, &.xii. goates, for the sinnes of all the people of Israel, after ÿ number of the tribe of Israel. The priests also & the Le-uites stod araped in their priestly garmē-tes, after the tribes, ouer al ÿ worckes of the lord God of Israel, accordig to ÿ boke of Moses, & the porters by all the dores.
C And the children of Israell (with those that were come out of captiuity) helde the passeouer the fourtene day of the first mo-neth, when the priestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that came oute of captiuity were not all sanctified together: But ÿ Leuites wer all sāctified together, and so all they that came out of captiuity, killed the Easter lambe, for their brethren for the priestes and for them selues. And the childrē of Israel, that came out of cap-tiuitie, and escaped from all the abomina-D tions of the Heathen, sought the Lord and kept the feast of the vnleuened breadseuē dayes long, eating and drynckyng & were merry before the Lord, that the Lord had turned the deuice of the king of Assyria, & comforted their handes to the workes of the Lord God of Israel.

The.viii.Chapter.

Esdras caused the people to assemble and come together: And then redeth them the law. They kepe the feast of tabernacles.

And after him & when Arta- A xerses the kyng of the Par-sians raygned, there went vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiah, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Saddoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, ÿ sonne of Azarias, ÿ sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu, ÿ sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazer, the sonne of Aarō the first priest.
This Esdras went vp from Babilon (for he had good vnderstanding in the law of Moses, that was geuen of the Lord God of Israel, to be taught and done in dede.) And ÿ king fauoured him & did him great worship and honoure, after al his desires.
There went vp with him also certain of ÿ children of Israel of the priests, of the Le-uites, of the singers, porters, & ministers of the temple at Jerusalem.
In the seuenth yeare of the raygne, of king Artaxerses, in the.v. moneth, that is in the.vii. yeare of the raygne, they went from Babylon in the new mone of the.v. moneth, and came the hye way to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lyke as ÿ Lord had prospered their iourneye. For in these Esdras gat great instruction, that he should leaue none of the thinges behynd, which are in the law and commaundemētes of God. And he taught whole Israell all righteousnesse & iugementes.
Then came the Secretaries of king Artaxerses, and deliuered the writings (that B were come from Artaxerses ÿ king) to Esdras the priest and reader of the lawe of ÿ Lorde. And this is the copie of the letter.
Kyng Artaxerses sendeth his greting vnto Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Lorde. Of frendeshyppe and good will, J haue ordayned and charged, yf there be any of the Jewes, of the priests & Leuites in my realme, which desireth and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalē, that he may do it. Therfore, yf any be minded to beare the company, let thē come together, and go with the (like as J am content and my seuen frendes, my coūcelers) to

to se what thei do at Jerusalē and in Jewry, and to kepe the thinges (accordyng as thou hast,) in the law of the Lorde, and to bring the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promised to Jerusalem, and al the siluer and golde that is in the countrey of Babilon, vnto ỹ Lorde to Jerusalem, with ỹ thing that is geuen for the people in the Lords temple at Jerusalem: yea, that the same siluer and gold may be gathered, and oxē, rammes, shepe, and goates, and other that belong to these thinges: and that they may offer sacrifices vnto ỹ Lord, vpon the aulter of their Lord which is at Jerusalem.

And what soeuer thou and thy brethrē will do with the siluer and golde, that do after thy minde, according to the cōmaundement of the Lorde thy God, and likewise, with the holy vessels that are geuen the, for the seruice of the house of the Lord thy God, and other thynges whatsoeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the tēple, that shalbe geuen thee of the kynges treasure, and loke what thou with thy brethren wilte do with the golde and siluer, ỹ do after the will of the Lord. And I king Artaxerses haue commaunded ỹ kepers of the treasures in Siria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the priest & reader of the law of the Lorde doth write, it shalbe geuen him, til an. C. talentes of siluer, and of gold in lyke maner. Of corne also an. C. measures, and till an. C. vesselles of wyne, and other plenteous thinges without number. Let all thinges be done
C after the law of ỹ hiest God, ỹ the wrath of God aryse not in ỹ realme of the kyng, and of hys sonnes. I commaund you also that ye require no taxe nor tribute of the preestes, Leuites, syngers, and ministers of the temple, nor of the wryters, and that no manne haue authority to medle anye thing against them. As for ỹ, (O Esdras) set thou iudges and arbitrers in ỹ whole lande of Syria and Phenices, after the wisdome of God, & learne al suche as are ignoraunt in the law of God thy Lorde, & let all them that offend against the lawe, be punished: whether it be with death, wͭ paine, to be condemned in mony, or to be banished.

i.Esd.vii.a Then sayde Esdras the writer. * Blessed be ỹ God of our fathers, that hath geuen so good a minde and will into ỹ herte of the king, to magnifie his house that is at Jerusalem. and hath made me to be accepted in the sight of the king, of his counsell, of his frendes and of his nobles, and so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordyng as ỹ Lord my god helped me, and I chose out mē of Israel to go vp with me. * And i.Esd.8.b these are the heades (after their kinredes and houses of their fathers) that went vp with me from Babilon, oute of the kyngdome of Artaxerses. Of ỹ sonnes of Phares: Gersonius. Of the sonnes of Siemitrath, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Accus, the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zacharye, & with him there turned again an. C. and. l. men. Of ỹ sonnes of the captain of Moabilon, Zarei, and with him. ii. C. l. mē. Of the sōnes of Zachnes, Jechonias, Zecholi, and with him. ii. C. l. men. Of the sonnes of Salamaasias, Gotholie. lxx. with him: Of the sonnes of Zaphacia, Zarias, Micheli, and with hym. lxxx. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias, Jebely, and with him. ii. C. and. xii. menne. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth the sōnes of Josaphia, & with him, an hundred & thre score men. Of the sonnes of Beer, Zacharie, Behei, and wͭ him two hundred and. viii. menne. Of the sonnes of Esead Johannes, Ezechā, and with him an hundred and ten men. Of the sonnes of Adonicam, those that wer ỹ last, and these are their names. Eliphalam: the sonne of Gebel, & Semeias, and with him lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, wher we pitched our tēt thre dayes, and there I mustred them.

D *As for the sonnes of the priestes and i.Esd.8.b Leuites, I found none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazer, and Excelom, and Masmam, and Malabam, and Enaathan, and Samea, & Joribimathan, Eunagan, Zachari, Mosolamum (these were the leders and men of experience) and I sente them word, ỹ they should come vnto Loddeus, whiche was by the place of the treasury, & commaunded thē that they should speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren, & to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs such men, as might execute the preests office in the house of the Lorde oure God, and with the mighty hande of oure Lord God, thei brought vnto vs mē of good experience, from among the sonnes of Moolius, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebeiam, & the sōnes and his brethen Asbin, and Anin, of whom there wer xviii. From among the children of ỹ sonnes of Cananeus, and their sonnes were xx. men. And of them that serued in the tēple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, and the princi-principal mẽ that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple two.C.& xx.menne, whose names are all tokened

E vp in wrytyng.

i.Esd.i.a. *Then commaunded I a fastyng vnto the yong men before the Lord, ẏ I might desire of him a prosperous iourney and a good way for vs:yea, for vs : for our children and for the Catell,because of the layinges awayte,and I durst not require of the kyng men of horse and of fote:to conuey vs safely against oure enemies , for we had said vnto the king,th at the power of the Lord oure God should be with thẽ, that seke him with their whole herte. And therefore,we besought God oure Lorde earnestly bycause of these thinges,and he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde our prayer.And I seperated from among the rulers of the people,and from the priestes of the temple.xii.men , and Sedeia , and Asania,and.x.men of their brethren with them.And I weied them the gold and the siluer and all the priestlye ornamentes of the house of our God,which the king and his counsell , and his princes , and whole Israel had geuen.And when I had weied it,I gaue them an.C.l.talentes in siluer, and an hundred talentes of siluer vessell, an hundred talentes of golde , and of golden vessell,seuen times twentye,and vessels of other metal(yea,of good metal)xii, glysteryng as the golde , and sayde vnto them,ye are holy vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holy,and the gold , and the siluer is promised vnto the Lord God of our fathers.

Be diligente now,and kepe it, vntill the time that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people,to the priestes,to the Leuites,and to the principal men of the cities of Israel in Ierusalem,and in the chamber of the house of our God, i.Esd viii D. * So,the priestes and Leuites whiche receaued of me the golde, ẏ siluer,and the vessel,brought it vnto Ierusalem into the temple of the Lorde . And from the ryuer of Thia,we brake vp the twelueth day of the first moneth,til we came to Ierusalẽ. And when the thirde daye was paste , the weyed golde and siluer was deliuered in the house of the Lord the fourth day,vnto Marimoth,the sonne of Ior the priest , & with him was Eleazar ẏ sonne of Phineas,and with them wer Iosabdus the sonnes of Iasnet:Medias,and the sonnes of Banus,and certain of the Leuites,to the nomber and to the weyght: and ẏ weyght of thẽ was written vp the same time . As for those that were come out of captiuity, they offered sacrifice vnto the Lorde the God of Israell : euen twelue oxen for all Israell. lxxxvi.Rammes. lxxii. shepe. xii. Goates for sinne,twelue kyne for a thãk offering, all to the sacrifice of the Lorde. And the kinges commission deliuered they vnto the stewardes and deputies of the kyng,and to thẽ vnder shreues in Celosyria,and Phenices.

* Now,when these thinges wer done, ẏ rulers came vnto me,& said: The generation of Israel,the Princes,the priestes,& Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande haue not put away their vnclẽnesse,from the Cananites,Hethites Pheresites, from the Moabites, Egyptians,& Edomites. For both they & their sonnes haue myngled them selues with ẏ daughters of them, and the holye sede is myxte with the outlandishe Heathen,and since the beginnyng of their raygne haue the rulers and heades ben partakers of their wyckednesse.

*As soone as I had hearde these thinges, immediatly I rent my holy garmentes,and pulled out the heere of my hearde and my beard,and sate me downe sorowful and heuy.So all they that wer moued thorow the worde of the God of Israell, came vnto me,and I sat still:full of heuynesse,vntill the euening sacrifice . Then stode I vp from fasting, hauing rent clothes and the holy garment,kneled down vpon my knees, helde vp my handes vnto the Lorde,and sayde: O Lord, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for oure sinnes are become manye vpon oure heades:and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heauen:for since the time of oure fathers,we are in greate sinne vnto thys daye.And for the sinnes of vs and our fathers,we with our brethren and with our priestes haue bene delyuered vnto the kynges of the earth : into the swerd , and into captiuitie,and became a spoyle wyth confusion and shame vnto this daye. And nowe, O Lorde God,howe greate is thy mercy that we haue gotten of thee in that thou hast left vs a name and a rote in the place of thy Sanctuary, to dyscouer oure lyghte in the house of the Lorde our God, and haste geuen vp meate at all tymes of our ministration.And whẽ we wer in captiuitie,we wer not forsaken of ẏ Lord our god:but he made ẏ kinges of Persia gracious,& fauourable vnto vs , so that they gaue gaue vs vitailes, and meate: yea, & leaue to build vp the temple of oure Lord God again, to repaire ẏ wasted places of Sion, and to dwel in Iewry and Ierusalē, and nowe, O Lord, what shal we saye, hauing al these thinges in possessiō? For we haue broken thy cōmaundements: which thou G gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes saying. The land that ye go vnto, and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defiled with the vnclēnesse and filthynesse of the Heathen, and with their abominacion haue thei poluted it altogether. Therfore shall ye not ioyne your daughters, vnto their sonnes, nor marry your sonnes vnto their daughters. Moreouer, ye shall not seke to make peace with thē, that ye maye encrease and eat the best in the lande, and that ye may deuide the enheritaunce of ẏ land vnto your children for euermore. As for the thing that now happened vnto vs, it commeth al for our wycked workes and great sinnes, yet hast thou geuen vs such a rote, the we are come again into our owne laude, and we are so wycked that we haue brooken thy statutes and commaundementes againe: and myngled our selues with the vnclēnes of the outelandysh Heathen. O Lord, art thou angry with vs? wilte thou roote vs cleane oute? that our rote and name remaine nomore? O Lord God of Israel thou art true, for our rote endureth yet vnto this presente day. And beholde, nowe are we before the in our sines, now can we not stand before the in them.

✠ And whē Esdras with his prayer had knowledged the sinne, wepinge, and lieng flat vpon the grounde before the temple, there gathered vnto him from Ierusalē a great multitude of men and wemen, of yong men and maydens, for there was a very great wepinge and mournyng in the congregation. So when Iechonias the sonne of Iehely one of the children of Israel cried, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue sinned against the Lord, bicause we haue married outlādish womē of the Heathen. Now arte thou ouer all Israell. We will sware an oth therfore vnto ẏ Lord, ẏ we shal put awaye al our wyues, whiche we haue takē of the Heathen, with their childrē: like as it is appointed the by our forelders. Stand vp then, open thou it, and declare it plainly vnto vs, according to the law of the Lord, for the matter belongeth vnto the, and we will helpe the, quite thy selfe mā ly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the preestes, and of ẏ Leuites & of Israel to do after these thynges, and they sware.

The. ix. Chapter.

After Esdras had red the lawe, the people put awaye their straunge wiues, and then returned euery man merely vnto his own dwelling.

Then Esdras stode vp from ẏ courte of the temple without, and wēte into the chamber of Ionathas the sonne of Nasabus, & remained ther, and did eate no meat, nor dronke drincke: for the multitude of ẏ wickednesse of the people. A — i. Esd. x. b
And there was made a proclamation in al Iewry and at Ierusalem, for all suche as were gathered at Ierusalem out of captiuity, that whosoeuer came not to Ierusalem within two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgement of the olde lordes of the councel) his goodes should be taken from him, and be excluded frō the congregation of the captiuitie. And in thre dayes were al they of the trybe of Iuda & Ben Iamin gathered together at Ierusalē, the xx. day of the. ix. moneth. And ẏ whole multitude satte tremblyng in the court of the temple for it was wynter. So Esdras arose vp, & sayde vnto them, ye haue done vnrighteously, in that ye haue taken outelandishe wyues to mariage, and so to increase the synnes of Israell. And nowe knowledge the same, and geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers, and perfourme hys will, departing from the Heathen of the land, and from the outlandishe wyues.
Then cryed ẏ whole multitude wt a loude voyce, and sayd: like as thou haste spoken, B so will we do: but for somuche as the people are many, and ẏ winter here, we may not stande without the house: Agayn, this worke is not a thing that can be finished in a daye or two. For we be many ẏ haue sinned in these thinges. Ordaine therfore that the rulers of the multitude, and they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues, the preestes also and iudges of euery place maye stande in the time appointed, till they swage the wrath of the Lord in this businesse.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Ezeli, and Ozias and Theran receaued ẏ charge of this matter, & Bozoramus & Lelus, and Sabatheus helped thē therto. After this al they stode vp that were come out of captiuite:

tinite. And Esdras the prieste chose vnto him the principall men from among ẏ fathers according to their names, and in ẏ new mone of the .x. moneth they sat together, to examine this matter. And so the C matter was a determining (concernyng the men that had out landishe wiues) vntil the new moone of the first moneth.
And of the preestes that hadde mixt them selues with outlandish wiues, there wer nes of Iosedec, and his brethrẽ. Mazeas,

And of the sonnes of Semeri, Masias, & singers of ẏ Sãctuary, Eliarib, Zackarus.

Of ẏ porters, Sallumus, and Tolbanes.
And of Israel, of the childrẽ of Foro, Osi & Remias, & Geddias, & Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Iemmebias & Bannas.
And the children of Iolamã. Chanias, Zachari, Ieizrelus, Ioddius, Erimoth, and Elias. And of the sõnes of Iathoim, Elia-Manasses. And of the sonnes of Naue:

beus, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zecheda, Sedmi. Iesseus, & Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to ma-riage, and they put them away with their children. The priests & Leuites, & al they that wer of Israel, dwelt at Ierusalem & thorowout al the land, in the new moone of the seuenth mooneth, & the children of Israell wer in their dwellinges: And the E the whole multitude came together, vpon the floore at ẏ Eastside of the holy porte of the tẽple. And they spake vnto Esdras the hye priest & reader, that he would bryng ẏ law of Moses: whiche was geuen of the Lord God of Israell. So Esdras the hye priest brought the law vnto ẏ whole multitude, to man & wemen, & to al ẏ priests, that they might heare the law,* in ẏ new ii.Esd. moone of the .vii. moneth. And he read in the flore that is before the holy porte of ẏ temple, from the morning early vnto the euening, before men & women. And they applyed their minde al vnto the lawe.
And Esdras the priest & reader of ẏ law stode vp vpõ a pulpet of wood, which was F made therfore: & vpõ his right hand, there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Vrias, Ozechias, & Balsamus. Vpõ his left hãd stode Faldeus, Mi-sahel, Malachias, Abuschas, Sabus Nabadias, & Zachary. Then toke Esdras the booke before the whole multitude, for he was ẏ principal and had in most honoure of thẽ al. And when he had read out ẏ law they stode al straight vpon their fete. So Esdras praysed the Lorde the moost hiest God ẏ almighty God of hostes: & all the people answered, Amen: & helde vp their handes, fel down flat vpon ẏ earth, & prai- G sed the Lord. And Iesus, Beneas, Sare-bias, Iaddimus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, Calithes, Azarias, Iozadus, Ananias, & Philias, ẏ Leuites lifte their handes vpwarde, & praysed ẏ Lord: Those wer they, which taught the law of ẏ Lord, & reade the law of the Lord, in the congregation: and euery man set thẽ before ẏ vnderstode the law. Then spake Atharates vnto Esdras the hie priest and reader, & to ẏ Le-uites that taught the multitude, saying: This day is holy vnto the lord, & al they ẏ had heard ẏ law, wepte. So Esdras said: ii.Es.
*Departe your way then, & eate the best, and drincke ẏ swetest, & sende giftes vnto them ẏ haue nothing: for this day is holye vnto ẏ Lord, & be ye not sory, for the lorde wil bring you to honour. Then went they their way euerychone, & did eate & drinck, and wer mery, and sente rewardes vnto thẽ that had nothing, that they also might eate with gladnesse, for they were exceading reioysed, thorow the wordes ẏ were reade vnto them in the law. And so they wer all gathered together at Ierusalẽ to holde ẏ feast, according to the couenaunte of the Lord God of Israel.

The.ii.Chapter.

The Sinagoge findeth faute with her own children. The gentiles are called.

A Thus sayeth the Lorde: I brought this people oute of bondage, I gaue them my commaundemẽtes by my seruaũtes the prophetes, which they would not heare, but despised my coũsailes. The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto them: Goe your way ye childrẽ, for I am a wyddowe & forsaken: I broughte you vp with gladnesse, but with sorow and heauines haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the Lorde oure God, and done the thing y is euill before him. But what shal I now do vnto you? I am a widdow and forsaken: go your way, O my children, and aske mercy of the Lord. As for me, O father, I cal vpon the for a witnes ouer y mother of these children which would not kepe my couenaunt: that thou bring them to confusion, and their mother to a spoile, that she beare no more. Let their names be scattered abrode among the Heathen. Let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Wo be vnto thee Assur, thou y hidest the vnrighteouse by thee. Thou wyckyd people, remẽbre * what I did vnto Sodome Gen.xix.
& Gomorre, whose land is turned to pitch & asshes. Euẽ so also wil I do vnto all thẽ, that heare me not, saith y almighty Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord vnto Esdras: tel my people, that I wil geue them y kyngdome of Ierusalem, which I would haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glorie also will I take vnto me, and geue them the euerlasting tabernacles, whiche I hadde prepared for those.

The Tree of lyfe shall be vnto them a swet smellyng oyntement: they shall neyther laboure nor be wearye. Goe ye youre waye, and ye shall receaue it. Praye for your selues a fewdayes, that they maye dwell therein.

Nowe is the kyngdome prepared for you, therefore watche. Take heauen and B earth to wytnes, for I haue broken the euill in peces, and created the good, for I liue sayeth y Lord. Mother embrace thy childrẽ, and bring them vp with gladnes: make their fete as faste as a piller, for I haue chosen thee saieth the Lord.

And those that be dead wil I rayse vp againe from their places, & bring them out of y graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not y mother of the children, for I haue chosen the, saith the lord. And for thy healpe, I shall sende the my seruaũtes Esay and Ieremy, after whose councell I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with diuerse fruites, and as many welles flowing with milke & hony, & seuen mountaines, wheruppon there grow Roses & Lilyes, wherin I wil fil my children with ioy. Execute iustice for the wyddow: be iudge for the fatherlesse: geue to the poore: defend the comfortlesse: cloth the naked: heale the wounded & sick: laugh not a lame man to scorne: defend y creple, & let the blynd com into the light of my clearnes: * wheresoeuer thou findest y Tobi.i. dead, take them, & bury thẽ, & I shall geue the, the first place in my resurrection. C

Hold stil (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quietnes is come. Fede thy childrẽ, O thou good nurse, stablish their fete. As for the seruauntes whom I haue geuen the, there shal not one of them perishe, for I will seeke them from thy numbre, vexe not thy selfe.

For when the day of trouble & heauines cometh, other shal wepe and be sorowful, but thou shalt be mery & plentuous. The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be able to do nothing against the, saith the Lorde. My handes shal couer the, so yͤ thy children shal not se yͤ fire euerlasting. Be ioyful, O thou mother with thy childre, for I wil deliuer the, saieth the Lord. Remẽ-bre thy dead children, for I shal bring thẽ out of the earth, & shew mercie vnto thẽ: for I am merciful, saith yͤ lord almightye.
Embrace thy children, vntil I come, and shew mercy vnto thẽ, for my welles rũne ouer, and my grace shal not faile.
I Esdras receaued a charge of the lord vpon yͤ mount Oreb, that I should go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they set me at nought, & despised the commaundemẽt of the Lord. And therefore I saye vnto you, O ye Heathen yͤ heare and vnderstand, Loke for your shepheard, he shal geue you euerlastig rest, for he is nye at hand, that shall come in the ende of the world: Be ready to yͤ reward of the kingdom, for the euerlasting light shal shine vpon you for euermore. Flee the shadow of this world, receaue the ioyfulnesse of your glory. I testify my sauioure openly: O receaue the gifte that is geuen you, and be glad, geuing thankes vnto him, that hath called you to the heauenly kingdome.
Aryse vp, & stande fast: behold the num-D bre of those yͤ be sealed in the feast of yͤ lord which are departed from the shadow of yͤ world, and haue receaued glorious garmẽtes of the Lorde. Take thy numbre O Siõ, & shut vp yͤ purified, which haue fulfilled the law of yͤ Lorde. The numbre of thy children whom thou longest for, is fulfilled: beseech the power of the Lord, yͤ the people whiche haue bene called from the beginning, may be halowed. vii.c *I Esdras saw vpon the mount Syon a great people, whom I could not nũbre, and they al praised the Lord with songes of thankesgeuing. And in the middest of thẽ, ther was a yõg man of an hie stature, more excellent than all they, & vpon euery one of their heades he set a crowne, & was euer hygher & hygher, which I marueiled at greatly. So I asked the angel, & saide: Sir, what are these? He answered & sayd vnto me: These be they, that haue put of yͤ mortal clothing, and put on the immortal, and haue testified & knowledged yͤ name of God. Now are thei crowned, & receaue their rewarde.
Then said I vnto the angel: what yong person is it, that crowneth thẽ and geueth them the Palmes in their handes? So he answered and said vnto me: it is the sonne of God, whom thei haue knowledged in yͤ worlde. Then beganne I greatly to commend them, that stode so stifely for yͤ name of the Lord. And so the aungell sayd vnto me: Goe thy way, and tel my people, what maner of thinges, & how greate wonders of the Lorde thy God thou hast sene.

The.iii.Chapter.

The wonderous workes which God dyd for the people are recited. Esdras marueileth that GOD suffereth the Babiloniãs to haue rule ouer his people, which yet are sinners also.

IN the thirty yere of the fall A of the citye, I was at Babilon, and laye troubled vpon my bedde, and my thoughtes came vp ouer my hert: for I saw the desolation of Sion, & the plenteous wealth of thẽ that dwelt at Babilon: & my spirit was sore moued, so that I began to speake fearful wordes to the most hyest, & sayd: O Lord, Lorde, thou spakest at the beginnyng whẽ thou plãtedste the earth (& that thy selfe alone) & gauest cõmaundement vnto the people.
And a body vnto Adã (whiche was a creature of thine hãds) & hast breathed in him the breath of life, & so he liued before the, & thou leddest hi into Paradise, which garden of pleasure thy right hand had plãted, or euer yͤ * earth was made. And vnto him Earthe thou gauest commaundement to loue thy for yͤ peoway which he trãsgressed, and immediat- ple in it ly thou appointedste death in him, & in his cõtained. generations. Of him came nations, tribes people, & kynredes out of numbre. * And Gen.vi.b euerye people walcked after their owne B wil, & did nyce thinges before thee: and as for thy cõmaundemẽtes, thei despised thẽ.
*But in processe of time thou broughteste Ge.vii.b the water floude vpon those that dwelt in the world, and destroyedst them. And like as the death was in Adã, so was yͤ water floud also in these. Neuertheles one of thẽ thou leftest, namely Noe wͭ his houshold, of whom came all ryghteous men. And it happened that when they yͭ dwelt vpon yͤ earth, begā to multiply, & had gotten many children, & wer a great people, they began to be more vngodly than the first.

Now when they al liued so wickedly before thee, * thou diddest chose the a man Ge.12.xd frō among them, whose name was Abraham. Him thou louedste, & vnto him onely thou shewedst thy will, & madest an euerlasting couenaunte with him, promising him, that thou wouldest neuer forsake his Ge.xxi.a sede. * And vnto him thou gauest Isaac, Ge.xxv.c * vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob, and Esau. As for Jacob thou dyddest chose him, and put backe Esau. * And so Jacob Ge.xxxii. e. became a great multitude.
¶ And it happened that when thou leddest Ex.xix.a his sede out of Egipte, * thou broughtest Deu.iiii. b thē vp to the mount Sion, bowyng down the heauens, setting fast ẏ earth, mouing the ground, making the depes to shake, & troubling the world: And thy glorie went thorow .iiii. portes of fire, & earthquakes, and windes, & cold: ẏ thou mightest geue the law vnto ẏ sede of Jacob, and diligēce vnto the generation of Israel. And yet to-kest thou not away from thē that wicked hert, ẏ thy law might bring forth frute in thē. For the first Adā bare a wicked heart, trāsgressed, & was ouercom, & so be al they Ro.viii a that are borne of him. * Thus remained weakenesse with the law, in the hearte of the people, with ẏ wickednesse of the rote: so that the good departed away, & the euil abode stil. So the times passed away, and i. Re.xvi. e. the yeares wer brought to an ende. * Thē dyddest thou rayse vp a seruaunte called ii.Re.v a Dauid * whom thou cōmaūdedst to build a city, vnto thy name: & to offer vp incense and sacrifice vnto the therein. Thys was done now manye yeares. Then the inha-biters of the Citie forsoke thee, and in all thinges dyd euen as Adam and al his generations hadde done: for they also had a wycked herte.
D And so ẏ gauest thy city ouer into ẏ hādes of thine enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous than thy people: that they shall therfore haue ẏ dominion of Sion? For when I came ther, and saw their vngodlinesse, and so greate wickednesse, that it could not be numbred: yea, whē my soule saw so many euil doers (in the thirty yeare) my hearte failed me, for I saw how thou sufferedst them in such vngodlinesse, and sparedste the wycked doers: but thine owne people haste thou roted out, and preserued thine enemies, & this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceaue how this happeneth: Doo they of Babilon better than they of Sion? Or is there any other people that knoweth thee, sauing ẏ people of Israell?
Or what generation hath so beleued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet their reward appeareth not, & theyr laboure hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorow the Heathen, and I se that they be ryche & wealthy, & thyncke not vpon thy cōmaundements. Wey thou therfore our wickednesse now in the balaunce, & theirs also ẏ dwell in ẏ world, & so shal thy name be no wher faund but in Israel. Or wher is there a people vpon earth, that hath not sinned before the. Or what people hath so kept thy cōmaundemētes? Thou shalt find that Israel by name hath kept thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

The .iiii. Chapter.

The Aungel reproueth Esdras, bicause he semed to enter into the profounde iudgementes of God.

AND the angell that was sent A vnto me (whose name was Uriell) gaue me an answere, and sayd: thy herte hath takē to much vpon it in this world and thou thinckest to comprehende ẏ way of the hyest. Then saied I: Yea my Lord.
And he aunswered me and said: I am sent to shew the thre wayes, had to set forthe similitudes before thee: wherof if ẏ canste declare me one, I will shewe the also the way, that thou desierest to see: And I shal shewe the from whence the wycked herte commeth. And I sayed: Tell on my Lord.
Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy way, wey me the weyght of the fire, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me agayne the day that is past.
Then aunswered I and said: What man borne is able to doe that: why requirest thou suche of me?
And he said vnto me: If I shoulde aske the, how depe dwellinges are in ẏ sea? Or how great watersprynges are vpon ẏ fir-mamēt? Or how great water springs are in the beginning of ẏ depe? Or whiche are the outgoings of Paradise? Paraduenture thou wouldeste say vnto me: I neuer wēt down yet into ẏ depe nor hell, neither did I euer climb vp into heauē. Neuerthelesse now haue I asked thee but onelye of fyre, and wynde, and of the daye, wher thorow thou hast trauailed, and from the whiche thou canst not be seperated: and yet canste thou geue me none answere of them.

He said moreouer vnto me: Thine own thinges, and such as are growen vp with thee, canst thou not know: how should thy vessell then be hable to comprehende the waye of the Hiest, and now outwardly in the corrupte world, to vnderstande ẏ corruption that is euidente in my syghte Then sayde I vnto him: It were better that we wer not at al, than that we should lyue in wyckednesse, & to suffer, and not to B know wherfore. He answered me, & saide: I went in a woode, & *the trees toke such a deuice, and sayd: Come, lette vs go, and fight against the sea, that it maye depart awaye before vs, and that wee may make vs yet more woddes.
The floudes of ẏ sea also in lyke maner toke this deuice, & said: Come, lette vs go vp, & fight againste the trees of the wood, that we may make our land ẏ wyder. The thought and deuice of the woode was but vaine, & nothing worth, for the fire came & cōsumed the wood. The thought of the floud of the sea, came likewise to noughte also, for ẏ sande stode vp & stopped them.
If thou were iudge now betwixte these two, whom wouldeste ẏ iustifye, or whom wouldeste thou condempne? I aunswered and said: Uerely it is a folish thought that they both haue deuised. For the ground is geuen vnto the woode, and the Sea also hath his place to beare his floudes.
Thē aunswered he me, and sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgemēt, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For like as ẏ groūd is geuē to ẏ wood, & the sea to his floudes, euen so *they that dwel vpon earth, maye vnderstād nothing, but that which is vp-on earth: & he that dwelleth aboue ẏ hea-uens, may only vnderstād the thynges ẏ are aboue the heuens. Thē answered I, & sayed: I beseche ẏ O lord, let me haue vnderstāding: for it was not my minde to be curious of thy hie thīgs, but of such as we daily meddle whal, namely, wherfore ẏ Israel is blasphemed of ẏ hethē, & for what cause ẏ people (whō thou hast euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punished of vngodlye nations: and why ẏ law of our fathers is brought to nought, & the writtē couenaūtes come to none effect. & we passe awaye out of ẏ world as the Greshoppers, & our life is a very feare, & we are not worthy to obtayne mercy. What wil he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs?
Of these thinges haue I asked question.
C Then answered he me, & said: The more thou searchest, ẏ more thou shalt maruell, for the worlde hasteth fast to passe awaye, and can not cōprehende the thinges, that are promised for the righteous in time to come: for * this worlde is full of vnrighte- b.Iob.v.c ousnesse and weakenesse.
But as concerning the thinges, wherof thou askest me, I wil tel thee. The euil is sowen, but ẏ destruction thereof is not yet come. If ẏ euel now that is sowen, be not turned vpside downe, & if the place where the euel is sowen, passe not away, then cā-not the thing come that is sowen wͭ good.
For the corne of euil sede hath bene sowē in ẏ hearte of man frō the beginning, and how much vngodlinesse hath he brought vp vnto this time? & how much shal he yet bring forth, vntil he come into the barne.
Ponder now by thy selfe, when the corne of euel seede is cutte downe, howe great a barne shal it fil? I answered & said. Howe & when shall these thinges come to passe?
Wherfore are our yeres fewe & euill? And he aunswered me, saying: Haste not thou to much vpon ẏ Hiest, for thy hastinesse to be aboue him is but vaine: thou makest to much a doe. Did not the soules also of the righteous aske question of these things in their holinesse, saying. *How long shall I Apo.vi.b. hope of this fashion? When commeth the fruite of my barne, & my rewarde? And vpō this Ieremiel the Archaungel gaue them aunswere, & sayd: Euen when the numbre of the seedes is filled in you, for he hath weyed the world in the balaunce: in measure and numbre hath he measured the time, & moueth it not, vntil the same measure be fulfilled.
Then aunswered I & said, O Lord, lord, now are we al ful of sinne, & for our sakes peraduenture it is not, that the barne of ẏ righteous shal not be filled, bicause of the sinnes of them that dwel vpon the earth.
So he answered me, & said: Go thy way to a woman with child, & aske of her, whē D she hath fulfilled hir nyne monethes, if her childbed may kepe ẏ birth any longer within her. Then sayd I: No Lorde, that can she not. And he said vnto me: In hel ẏ secrete places of Soules are like ẏ priuye chābre of a womā. For like as a woman ẏ trauaileth maketh hast whē ẏ time & necessity of ẏ birth is at hand: Euen so doth she hast to deliuer it that is committed vnto her. Loke what ẏ desierest to see, it shall be shewed the from the beginning. Then aunswered I, and said: If I haue founde fauoure in thy sight: & if it be possible, or if I be mete therfore, shew me then, whether ther be moe to come than is past, or more past than is for to come. What is paste, I know, but what is for to cõe, I know not.

And he said vnto me: Stand vp vpon the right side, & I shal expoũd ẏ similitude vnto the. So I stode, & behold, an whote burning ouen went ouer before me: and it happened that when the flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After this, there went ouer before me a watery cloude, and sent downe much rayne with a storme, & when the stormye rayne was past, the drops remained still.

Then said he vnto me: Like as the raine is more thã the drops, & as the fire exceadeth the smoke, euen so the measure of the thinges that are past hath the vpper hãd. Then went the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and said: maye I lyue (thinkest thou) vntill that time? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me, and saide: As for the tokens whereof thou askest me, I maye tell the of them in part: but as touching thy life, I maye not shew the, for I am not sent therfore.

The.v Chapter.

Esdras and the angel commen together.

A Neuerthelesse, as concernyng the tokẽs, marke this: Beholde the dayes shal come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shall be taken in a great numbre, & the waye of the trueth shal be hyd, and the Ma.xxiiii a. land shalbe barren from faith: but * iniquity shall haue the vpper hande, like as thou hast sene now, & as thou haste heard long ago. And the lãd that thou seest now to haue rule, shalte thou shortely se waste. But if God graũt the to liue, ẏ shalt se after the.iii.trũpet ẏ the sunne shall sodenly shine again in ẏ night, & ẏ mone.iii.times in ẏ day, & bloud shal droppe out of woode, and the stone shall geue his voice, and the people shal be vnquiet: & euen he shal rule, whõ they hope not, ẏ dwell vpõ earth, and the foules shal flit, and the Sodomitysh sea shall cast out his fish, and make a noise in the night, which many shal not know, but they shal al heare the voyce therof.

Ther shal be a cõfusion also in many places, & the fire shall be oft sent againe, and the wilde beastes shal go their way, & mõstruous wemen shall beare monsters, and salte waters shall be founde in the swete, one frende shall fyght againste an other: then shal al witte and vnderstandyng be hyd, and put asyde into their secrete places, and shall be sought of manye, and yet not be found: then shall vnryghteousnesse & voluptuousnesse haue ẏ vpper hand vpõ earth. One lande also shall aske another & saye: Is righteousnesse gone thorow the? And it shal say: No. At the same time shall men hope: but nothyng obtaine: they shall labour, but their wayes shal not prospere.

To shew the such tokens I haue leaue, & if thou wilt pray agayne, & wepe as now, and fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulnesse went thorow all my bodye, & my mind was feble and careful, so that I almost sounded withall. So the aungell ẏ was com to talke with me, held me, cõforted me, and set me vp vpon my feete.

And in the secõd night it happened, that B Salathiel ẏ captain of ẏ people came vnto me, saying: Wher hast thou bẽ? & why is thy coũtenaunce so heuy? Knowest ẏ not, ẏ Israel is cõmitted vnto the, in the land of their captiuitie? Up then, and eate, & forsake vs not, as the shepehearde ẏ leaueth his flocke in ẏ hãdes of ẏ wicked wolues. Thẽ said I vnto hi: Go thy waies frõ me, com not nie me: & he heard it, & as I said: so wẽt he his way from me. And so I fasted vii. dayes, mourning and weping, like as Uriel ẏ angel cõmaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened that ẏ thoughtes of my hert wer very greuous vnto me againe, & my soule receaued ẏ spirite of vnderstanding, & I begã to talke with ẏ most hiest again, & said: O Lord, Lord, of euery wood of ẏ earth, & of al the trees therof, ẏ hast chosen the one only vineyard: & of all landes of the whole world, thou hast chosen the one pit, & of all floures of ẏ groũd, thou hast chosen the one lillye: & of all the depes of the sea: thou hast filled the one riuer: & of all builded cities ẏ haste halowed Sion vnto thy selfe: & of al ẏ foules ẏ are created, thou hast named the one doue, & of all the cattell that are made, thou haste prouided the one shepe: & among al multitude of folkes thou hast gottẽ the one people, & vnto this people whõ thou louedest thou gauest a law that is proued of all.

And now, O Lord, why hast thou geuẽ this one people ouer vnto many? And vpõ the one rote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scatered thine owne onely people among many, which tread them downe? yea, which haue euer withstãd thy promises, & neuer beleued thi couenaũts.

And though thou were enemye vnto thy people, yet shouldest thou punish them with thine owne hands. Now whẽ I had spoken spoken these wordes, the angell ẏ came to me the night afore, was sent vnto me, and said vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thing ẏ I say, & I shal tell ẏ more. And I said: Speake on my lord. Thẽ said he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou ẏ people better thã him ẏ made the? And I said: No lord: but of very griefe & cõpassion haue I spoken. For my raines paine me euery hour, because I would haue experience of ẏ way of the most hyest, & to seke out part of hys iudgement. And he said vnto me: that thou mayest not. And I said: wherfore Lorde?

Wherunto was I borne thẽ? or why was not my mothers childebed thẽ my graue?
B So had I not sene the misery and trouble of Iacob, and the trauaile of my people of Israel.
And he said vnto me: Nũbre the thinges ẏ are not yet com: gather me together the droppes, ẏ are scattered abrode: make me C the floures grene againe ẏ are wythered: open me the thyng ẏ is closed, & bring me forth the windes, ẏ are shut vp: shew me ẏ Image of a voice, & then shall I declare ẏ thyng ẏ thou labourest to knowe. And I said: O Lord: Lord, who may know these things, but he that hath not his dwelling among men. As for me, I am vnwise, how may I then speake of these things wherof thou askest me?
Then said he vnto me: like as thou cãst do none of these thinges ẏ I haue spoken of, euẽ so cãst thou not find out my iudge-mẽt: or in the end, ẏ loue that I haue promised vnto my people. And I said: beholde, O lord, yet art thou nie vnto thẽ that haue no end: & what shal they do, that haue ben before me, or we that be now, or they that shal come after vs? And he said vnto me: I will liken my iudgement vnto a ryng.
Like as ther is no slacknesse of ẏ last, euẽ so is there no swyftenesse of ẏ first. So I answered & saide: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, & be now, and ẏ are for to come) at once, ẏ thou myghtest shew thy iudgement the soner?
Then answered he me, & said: The creature may not hasten aboue the maker, neither may the world hold thẽ at once, that shall be created.
And I said: How hast thou said then vnto thy seruaunt, ẏ thou liuing maker, hast made ẏ creature liuing at once, & the creature bare it? euen so myght it now also bear them ẏ be presẽt at once. And he sayd vnto me: Aske the childbed of a womã, and say vnto her: If thou bringest forth childre why doest thou it not together, but one after another? Pray her therefore, to bryng forth .x. childre at once. And I said: she can not, but must do it one after an other.
Then said he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childbed vnto the earth, for those that be sowen vpon it by processe of time.
For like as a yong childe maye not bryng forth ẏ things ẏ belong to ẏ aged: euen so haue I ordeined the world which I made.
And I asked & said: Seing thou hast now geuen me awaye, I wil speake before the:
for oure mother of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet yong, and now she draweth nye vnto age.
He answered me, & said: Aske a woman that beareth children, & she shall tell thee.
Say vnto hyr, wherfore are not thei (whõ thou hast now brought forth) like those ẏ were before ẏ: but lesse of stature? And she shal answere thee: They ẏ be borne in the youth of strẽgth, are of one fashion, & they that are borne in the time of age (when ẏ childbed faileth) are otherwyse. Consider now thy selfe, how ẏ ye are lesse of stature than those that were before you, & so are they ẏ come after you, lesse than ye: as the creatures which now beginne to be old, & haue passed ouer the strengthe of youthe.
Then sayd I: Lord I beseche ẏ, if I haue found fauour in thy sight, shew thy seruaũt by whom doest thou visite thy creature?

The.vi.Chapter.

The aungel instructeth Esdras, and geueth him answere to his questions.

AND he sayd vnto me: In the begynning when the ground A was made, before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blewe, before it thondred or lyghtened, or euer ẏ foundatiõs of Paradise wer layd, before ẏ faire floures were sene, or euer ẏ moueable powers wer stablished, before ẏ innumerable multitud of angels wer gathered together, or euer the highnesses of the aire wer lifted vp, before the measures of the firmament were named, or euer the chimneys in Sion were hote, & or ẏ present yeres wer sought out, & or euer the inuentions of thẽ that nowe sinne, wer put aside. before they were sealed that now gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consider, and ponder all these thinges: and al they were made thorowe me, & thorow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other.

Then answered I, & said: which shal be yͤ parting a sunder of the times? Or when shal be the end of the first, and the beginning of it that foloweth. And he said vnto me: From Abrahã vnto Isaac (when Iacob and Esau were borne of him) Iacobs hand held first the hele of Esau: for Esau is the end of this world, and Iacob is the beginning of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwyxt the hele & the hãd. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then & sayd: O Lord Lord, if I haue found fauour in thy sight, I beseech the shew thy seruaunte the end of thy tokens, wherof thou shewedst me part the last night. So he ãswered & said vnto me: Stand vp vpon thy fete, and hear yͤ perfect voice and sounde. There shall come a great motion, but the place wher yͤ stãdest shal not be moued. And therfore whẽ thou hearest the wordes, be not afrayed, for of yͤ ende shal the worde and fundation of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the word therof trẽbleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende.

And it happened, that when I had heard it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and herkened. And behold, ther was a voice that spake, & the sounde of it was like the sound of many waters, & it said: Behold, yͤ dayes come that I wil begin to drawe nye, and to visit them that dwel vpon earth, and wil begin to make inquisition of them, what they be that haue hurt equitie with vnrighteousnesse, and when the lowe estate of Sion shal be fulfilled: and when the world, that shal vanish away, shal be ouersealed, then will I do these tokens.

B The bookes shal be opened before yͤ firmament, & they shal se altogether, and the children of a yeare old shal speake wt their voyces: the women with childe shall bring forth vntimely children of three or foure monethes olde: & they shal liue, and be raised vp: and sodainely shall the sowen places appeare as the vnsowen, the full store houses shal sodenly be found empty, & the trumpet shal geue a sounde, whiche when euery man heareth, they shal be hastely a-Mic.vii.a frayed. * At that time shall frendes fyght Mat.x.c. one against another, lyke enemyes, & the earth shal stande in feare with them.

The springes of yͤ welles shal stand stil, & in.iii.houres they shal not runne. Whosoeuer remaineth from all these thinges yͤ I haue told the: shal escape, & se my saluation, & the ende of your world. And the men yͤ haue receaued, shal se it, they yͤ haue not tasted death frõ their birth: & the herte of the indwellers shal be chaũged, & turned into an other meaning, for euill shall be put out: and disceate shall be quenched. As for fayth, it shal florish, corruption shal be ouercom, & the trueth, which hath bene so long without fruite, shall be declared. And it happened whẽ he talked with me, that I loked demurely vpon him, before whom I stode, & these wordes sayd he vnto me: I am come to shew thee, the time of the night for to come.

If thou wilte pray yet more, and fast seuen dayes again, I shal tel the more thinges, & greater than before: for thy voyce is heard before the hiest: for why: the mighty hath sene thy righteous dealing, he hath sene also thy chastitie, which thou hast had euer sice thy youth: & therfore hath he set C me to shew thee all these thinges, & to say vnto thee. Be of good cõforte, & feare not, and hast not with the times that are paste, to thinke vaine things, and make not hast of the latter times.

And it happened after this, that I wepte again, & fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I might fulfil the thre wekes whiche he told me. In yͤ.viii.night was my heart vexed within me againe. And I began to speake before the hiest: for my spirite was greatly set on fire, & my soule was in distresse: & I said: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the beginning (euen the first day) & saydst: *Let heauen & earth be Gene.i. made, & thy word was a perfect worke.

And then was ther the spirit, & the darknesses wer yet on euery syde, and silence: ther was no mans voice as yet from the. Then commaundest thou a faire lyght to come forthe out of thy treasures, that thy worcke myght appeare and be sene.

Upon the secõd day thou madest the spirit of the firmament, and commaundest it to parte asunder, & to make a diuision betwyxt the waters, that theone part might remaine aboue, & the other beneth. Upon the third daye thou broughtest to passe, yͤ the waters wer gathered in the.vii. parte of yͤ earth. vi. partes hast thou dried vp, & kept the, to yͤ entent that men myght sowe and occupie husbandry therin. As sone as thy worde went forth, yͤ worke was made. For immediatly there was great & innumerable fruite, & many diuers pleasures and desyres of temptations: flowers of changeable coloure and smell, & this was done the third daye.

*Upon the.iiii.day thou commaundedst Gene.i.

that the sunne shoulde geue his shyne, and the mone her lyght: the starres didst thou Ge. i. c set in order* & gauest them a charge: to do seruice euen vnto man, that was for to be made. Upon the fifte day thou saydest vnto the seuenth part* (wher yͤ waters wer Gen. i. a gathered) that they should bring forth di-uers beastes, fowles, and fishes. And so it came to passe, that the dũbe water & without soule, brought forth liuyng beastes, at the commaundement of God, that al people might praise thy wonderous workes.
Then dydst thou preserue two soules, the one thou calledst Enoch: & yͤ other Leuiathan, & dydst separate the one from the other: for the seuẽth part (namely, wher the water was gathered together) might not holde thẽ both. Unto Enoch thou gauest one part, which was dryed vp yͤ third day, that he should dwel in yͤ same part, wherin are a thousãde hilles. But vnto Leuiathã thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst: and hast kept him to deuour what thou wilt, and when. Upon the sixte day yͤ gauest commaundement vnto the earth, yͤ before thee, it should bring forthe beastes, cattell, & all that crepe: and (besides thys) Adã also, whom thou madest lord of al thy creatures. Of him come we al, and yͤ people also, whom yͤ hast chosen specialy vnto thy selfe. Al this haue I sayed now & spoken before yͤ, that I might shew how that the world is made for our sakes. As for yͤ other people which also com of Adã, thou hast said that they are nothing, but be like a spittle, & hast likened yͤ abundaũce of thẽ vnto a droppe that falleth from the rofe of the house. And now, O Lord, the heathen which haue euer bene reputed as nothĩg, haue begõ to be lords ouer vs, & to deuour vs: but we thy people (whom yͤ hast called the first borne, thy only begottẽ, & thy feruẽt louer) ar geuẽ ĩto their hãds & power.
If the world now be made for our sakes, why haue we not yͤ inheritaũce in possessiõ w the world? How long shall this endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

The aungell sheweth Esdras many thinges to come.

1 And it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sente vnto me an Aungel, which hadde bene by me also the nyghtes afore.
And he said vnto me. Up Esdras, & heare the wordes that I am com to tel the. And I sayd: speake on Lorde my God. Then sayd he vnto me. The sea is set in a wyde place, that it might be depe & great: but yͤ entraunce is narow & smale like a ryuer.
For who would go into the sea, to loke vpon it and to rule it? If he went not tho-row the narow, how might he come into the broade?
Itẽ an other: a citie is builded and sette vpõ a broade field, and is ful of al goodes, the entraunce is narrow and sodayn, like as if there wer a fire at the ryghte hande, and a depe water at yͤ lefte, and as it wer only one straight path betwixte thẽ both, so smale that there could but one man go there.
If this city now wer geuẽ vnto an heire, and he neuer wente thorow the perillous waye, how woulde he receaue his inheritaunce. And I sayd: It is so Lorde. Then sayd he: Euen so is Israell also a portion.
And why? for their sakes haue I made the world: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thing Judged that was done. Then wer the entraũces of the world made narrowe, full of sorow & trauaile. They are but few and euill, full of perilles and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore world wer wyde and sure, and brought immortall fruite.
If they now which are entred into this world, may not comprehende these straite and vayne thinges, muche lesse may they cõprehend & vnderstand yͤ secrete things.
Why disquietest thou thy selfe then, seyng thou art but a corruptible man? And what wouldst thou know, wher as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thine hert yͤ thing that is for to come but that is presente?
Then said I: O Lord, lord, * thou hast B ordeyned in thy lawe, that the ryghteous De. viii. a should inherite these thinges, but that the vnfaithfull & vngodly should perish. Ne-uerthelesse, yͤ righteous shal suffer straite thinges and hope for the wyde: for they yͤ haue liued vngodly, & haue suffered straite thinges, shal not see the wyde.
And he said vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, & none that hath vnderstanding aboue the hiest. For there be manye that perish, bycause they despise the law of God that is set before thẽ. For God hath geuen straite commaundement to such as come, that they know what they do, & how they shoulde lyue: and if they kepe thys, they should not be punished.
Neuerthelesse, they wer not obediẽt vnto hym, but spake agaynst him: Imagined vayne thinges: & purposed to sinne: & said moreouer, ÿ ther was no God, & that god regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen, his law haue they despised, & denied his promises: in his statutes & ordinaũces haue they not ben faithfull & stedfast, & haue not perfourmed his workes.

And therfore Esdras: vnto the ful. plentye: & to the emptye, emptines. Beholde, ÿ time shal com, that these tokens which I haue told thee, shal com to passe, & ÿ bride shal appeare, & the earth that now passeth away, shal be shewed: & whosoeuer is deliuered from the forsayde euels shall se my wonders. For my sõne Jesus shal be openly declared, wt those ÿ be with him, & they that remaine shalbe merry in.iiii.C.yeres.

After these same yeres shall my sonne Christ dye, & all men that haue lyfe: & the world shal be turned into the olde silence seuẽ dayes, like as in the fore iudgemẽtes, so that no man shall remaine. And after. vii.dayes, ÿ worlde that yet awaked not, shal be raysed vp, & shal dye corrupte. And the earth shall restore those ÿ haue slepte in her: & so shal the dust those that dwell in silence, and the secrete places shall deliuer those that be committed vnto them. And the most hyest shalbe openly declared vpõ the seate of iudgement, and al misery shall vanish away, & long suffering shalbe gathered together. But ÿ iudgemẽt shal cõtinue, the trueth shal remaine, & faith shal ware strong, the worke shall folowe, and the reward shalbe shewed: the righteousnesse shal watche, and ÿ vnrighteousnesse shal beare no rule.

Ge.xviij. b. The said I: * Abraham prayed first for the Sodomites, * & Moses for ÿ fathers Ex.xxxii. b. that sinned in the wildernesse, and he that came after him for Israell, in the time of Achas & Samuel: * Dauid for ÿ destru-

2.Re.24. b. ction, * & Salomon for thẽ that came into ii.Par.b. c. the sanctuary, * & Helias for those that receaued rayne, & for the dead that he might 4 Re.xvii a. liue, & * Ezechias, for the people in ÿ time of Sennacherib: and diuerse other in lyke Jac.v.c. iiii.Reg. xviii & xix maner, which haue prayed for many.

Euen so now, seyng ÿ corrupt is growẽ vp, & wyckednesse increased, & the righteous haue prayed for the vngodlye, wherfore shal it not be so now also?

He aunswered me, and sayde: This presente world is not the ende, there remayneth much honour in it, therfore haue thei prayed for the weake. But ÿ day of dome shal be the ende of this time, & the begynning of the immortality for to com, wherin al corruption vanished, all voluptuousnesse is lowsed, al misbelefe taken away, ryghteousnesse growen, & the verity spryng vp. Then shal no man be able to saue him that is destroyed, nor to oppresse him that hath gotten ÿ victory. I aunswered then and said: This is my first & last saying: ÿ it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam, or els when it was geuen him to kepe him ÿ he should not sinn. For what profit is it for men now in this present time to lyue in heauinesse, & after death to loke for punishment? O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that sinned, thou art not fallen alone, but we al that come of ÿ. For what profit is it vnto vs, yf ther be promised vs an immortall time, where as we medle wt deadly workes? And that there is promysed vs an euerlasting hope, where as our selues are euel & vaine, and that there are layde vp for vs dwellinges of helthe and fredom, where as we haue liued euel, and that the worship of the Hiest is kept to defend them, which haue ledde a paciẽt lyfe, where as we haue walked in ÿ most wycked wayes of all? And that there shalbe shewed a Paradise, whose frute endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medicine where as we shal not goe in, for we haue walcked in vnpleasaunt places: And that the faces of them whiche haue abstayned shal shine aboue the starres, wher as our faces shall be blacke & darcke? For while we liued & did vnrighteously, we cõsidred not, ÿ we shuld suffre therfore after death?

Then aunswered he me, and said: This D is the consideration and thought of ÿ battaile, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercom, he shal suffre as thou hast said. But if he get the victorye, he shall receaue the thyng that I say. For this is the life, wherof Moses spake vnto the people, Deu.xxx while he lyued, saying: * Chose the lyfe that thou mayst lyue: Neuerthelesse, they beleued him not, neyther the Prophetes after him.

No, nor me, which haue spokẽ vnto thẽ, that heuinesse should not reach vnto them to their destruction, lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those that haue suffered themselues to be enfourmed in saluation.

I aunswered then, & said: I know lord, that the hyest is mercifull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the world, & vpon those also that walcke in his law: & that * he is pacient and long suffe- Rom.ii.a ring toward those ÿ haue sinned in their workes, & that he is liberal to geue wher

as it requireth: & that he is of greate mercy, for he multiplied his louing kindnesses toward those that are presente, & that are past, & to them whiche are for to come.

For if he multiplie not his mercyes, the world shal not be made liuing, with those that dwel therin. He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse, that thei which haue done euel, might be eased from their wyckednesse: the ten thousādth part of mē should not be made liuing. And if y Judge forgaue not those that bee healed w his worde, & if he woulde destroye the multitude that striueth, ther should be very few left in an vnnumerable multitude.

Esdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon his own mercy, than vpon the sinnes of the people.

1 AND he aunswered me, saying: the moste highest made thys world for many, but y worlde to come for few. I wil tell the, a similitude, Esdras: As when thou askest the earthe, it shall saye vnto thee, that it geueth muche moulde wherof earthen vesselles are made, but litle of it, that gold commeth of. Euē so is it with xx.b the worke of this world: & There be many xxii.b created, but few shalbe preserued. Then answered I and said: Then swalow vp the wit (o thou soule) & deuoure vnderstāding for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare, & willing to prophecy: for thou haste no longer space geuē the, but only to liue, O Lorde, wilt thou not geue thy seruaunt leaue, that we may praye before thee, and that thou mayst geue sede vnto our hert, and build our vnderstandyng that there may come frute of it: and that euery one whiche is corrupt, and beareth the state & place of a man, may liue.

For thou arte alone, and we all are one workmanship of thy handes, like as thou hast said, and like as the body is fashioned now in y mothers wombe, and thou geuest the membres, & thy creature is preserued in fire & water: & nine monethes doth thy worck suffer the creature in her which is fashioned in her, but y thīg that preserueth, & it y is preserued, shal both be kepte together: & when time is, y wombe deliuereth y thing that is kept & growen in her.

For thou hast commaunded the brestes to geue milke vnto the frute, that y thyng which is created & fashioned, maye be norished for a time: & then thou disposest and ordrest it with thy mercy, bringest it vp w thy righteousnesse: nurturest it in thy law and refourmest it with thy vnderstāding, mortifiest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuing as thy worke. Seing then y thou destroyest him, which w so great labours is created and fashioned thorowe thy commaundement, thou couldest lyghtlye ordaine also, that the thing which is made, might bee preserued.

And this I speake nowe of all men in general: as thou knowest: but of thy peo- B ple, for whose sake I am sory: and of thine inheritaunce, for whose cause I mourne: and of Israel, for whom I am woful: and for Jacob: for whose sake I am greued: therfore begynne I to pray before the, for my selfe and for them: for I se the fall of vs: euen of vs, that dwell vpon earth: but I haue heard the swiftnesse of the iudge which is to come: therfore heare my voice, and vnderstande my wordes, and I shall speake before the.

This is the beginning of the wordes of Esdras, before he was receaued. O Lord, thou y dwellest in euerlastingnesse, whose eyes beholdeth the heauens and the ayre, whose stoole is exceading hie, whose glory and maiesty may not be cōprehended, before whome the hostes of heauen stande trēbling (whose keping is turned in wind & fire,) whose word is true, whose talking is stedfast, whose cōmaūdment is strong, whose ordinaunce is fearfull, whose loke drieth vp y depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melte away, & whose truth beareth witnesse. O heare y prayer of thy seruaūt, and marcke with thine eares the petition of thy creature.

For while I liue, I wil speake, & so long as I haue vnderstāding, I wil aunswer. O looke not vpon the sinnes of thy people, which serue in the truth. Haue no respecte vnto the wycked studies of the heathē, but to the desire of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thyncke not vpon those that haue walked faynedly before the, but vpon them which do fear the.

Let it not be thy wil to destroy thē which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vpon them that haue clearly taughte thy lawe. Take thou no indignation at them, which are worse than beastes: but loue thē, y alway haue put their trust in thy righteousnesse & glorie: for we & our fathers haue al the same sickenesse & disease, but bicause of our sinnes thou shalte be called mercifull. C

For if thou hast mercy vpō vs, thou shalt be called merciful, where as wee haue no

workes of righteousnesse for ẏ righteous which haue laide vp many good workes together, shal out of their dedes receaue reward. For what is man, that ẏ shouldst take displeasure at him? Or what is the corruptible and mortall generation, that thou shouldest be so rough toward him?

ii.Par.vi f. i. Joh.i.b *For of a truth there is no man among them that be borne, but he hath dealte wickedly: and among ẏ faithful there is none which hath not done a mysse. For in thys (O lord) thy righteousnes & thy goodnes shalbe praised & declared, if thou be mercifull vnto them, which are not rich in good workes.

Then aunswered he me, and said: Some thinges hast thou spoken aright, & according vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wil not verely consider ẏ workes of thẽ, which haue sinned before death, before the iudgement, before destruction: but *I wil reioyse ouer the worck & thought of ẏ righteous. (Ec.iiii.a) I wil remẽbre also ẏ pilgremage, the holy makyng & the reward. Like as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe.

For as ẏ husbandman soweth muche sede vpon the ground, and plãteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thing that is sowen or planted is not all kept safe, neither doth it al take roote: Euen so is it of them that ar sowen in the worlde, they shall not all be preserued.

I aunswered then and sayd: yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake. Lyke as the husband mannes seede perisheth, if it receaue not rayne in due seasõ, or yf there come to muche rayne vpon it: Euen so perisheth mã also which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thine owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made al thinges and likened him vnto ẏ husband mannes sede. Be not wroth at vs, O lord, but spare thy people, & haue mercy vpon thine owne inheritaunce, O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

D Then aunswered he me, and said: Thinges present are for the present, & thinges to come for such as be to come. For thou lackest yet muche, seyng thou mayest loue my creature aboue me. I haue oftymes drawen nie vnto the, but neuer to the vnryghteous. In this also thou arte maruelous before ẏ hiest in that thou hast hũbled thy selfe, as it becommeth the, & haste not regarded thine own selfe, ẏ thou arte had in suche honoure emong the righteous.

Therfore shal great wretchednesse & miserie come vpon thẽ that in the latter time shal dwel in the world, bycause they haue walked in great pride.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, & seke out glorie for such as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradise opened: the tree of lyfe is planted, the time to come is prepared, plenteousnesse made readye, a citie is builded for you, and a rest is prepared: yea, perfect goodnesse & wisedom. The rote of euell is marcked from you, the weaknesse & moth is hyd frõ you, & into hell flieth corruption in forgetfulnesse. Sorowes are vanished away, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortality. And therfore aske ẏ nomore questions concerning the multitude of thẽ that perish. For they haue taken libertye, despised the hyest, thought scorne of his law, and forsaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe his righteous, & *said in their hert ẏ ther is no God: yea, & that wittingly knowing ẏ they shal die. (Psal.) For like as the thing that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you. Euẽ so is thrist and paine prepared for them. For it was not his wil that man should come to nought: but thei which be created, haue defiled the name of him that made thẽ, and are vnthãkefull vnto him, which prepared life for them. And therfore is my iudgemẽt now at hande. These thinges haue I not shewed vnto all mẽ, but vnto few: namely vnto the, and to such as be like the.

Then answered I and said: Behold, O Lord, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokẽs, which thou wilt begin to do at the last: but at what time & when, thou hast not shewed me.

The .ix. Chapter.

Esdras hath visions shewed vnto him.

A He aunswered me then, & said: Measure thou ẏ time diligẽtlye in it selfe, when thou seest that one part of ẏ tokens com to passe, whiche I haue told ẏ before, so shalt thou vnderstand, that it is the very same time, wherin the hiest will begin to viset the world, whiche he made. And when there shalbee sene an earthquake & vproe of the people in ẏ worlde, then shalte thou wel vnderstand, that the moste Hyest spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the beginning.

For like as al that is made in the world hath a beginning & ende, and the ende is manifest: Euen so ẏ times also of the Hyest haue plaine beginnings in wonders & signes, & the ende in worcking and in tokens.

tyng. And euery one that shalbe saued, & shalbe able to escape by his workes and by fayth (wherin ye haue beleued,) shalbee preserued from the sayd perils, and shal se my sauiour in my lãd, and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shal they be in carefulnesse, which now haue abused my wayes, & they that haue cast them out dispitefullye, shall dwel in paines.

For such as in their lyfe haue receaued benefites, & haue not knowẽ me, and they ỹ haue abhorred my lawe (while they had yet fredom, & when they had yet open leisure of amendement and conuersion, and vnderstod not, but dispised it:) ỹ same must know it after death in pain. And therfore be thou nomore careful, how the vngodly shalbee punished, and how the righteous shalbe saued, and whose the world is, & for whom the world is, and when it is. Then answered I: and said: *I haue talked before, and nowe I speake, & wil speake also hereafter, that ther be many moe of them which perishe, than shalbe saued, lyke as the floude is greater than the droppes.

And he answered me, saying: like as the fielde is, so is also ỹ sede: as ỹ floures be, so are ỹ couloures also: such as the worckmã is, such is the worcke: & as the husbande-mã is him selfe, so is his husbandry also, for it was the time of the world.

And when I prepared for them ỹ are now, or euer the world was made wherin they should dwell, then was ther no man that withstode me. Now when euery one was, & the maker also in the world which is nowe prepared, & the moneth that cea-seth not, and the law which is vnsearchea-ble: their maners wer corrupte. So I cõ-sidered the world, & beholde, ther was peril, bicause of the thoughtes that wer com into it. And I saw, & spared thẽ greatly, & haue kept me a wyne bery of ỹ grapes, & a plante frõ among many generations.
Let the multitude perishe then, which are growẽ vp in vaine, & let my grape & win-bery be kept: euẽ my plant: for with greate laboure haue I made it vp.

C Neuerthelesse, if ỹ wilte take vpon ỹ yet seuẽ dayes mo (but ỹ shalte not fast in thẽ) go thy way then into the feldes of floures, wher no house is builded, & eat only of the flours of ỹ feld, tast no flesh, drick no wine but eat floures only. Pray vnto the Hyest cõtinually, so wil I come & talk with thee.

So I went my way and came into the fielde whiche is called Ardath (like as he commaunded me) & ther I sat among the floures, & dyd eate of the herbes of ỹ field, & the meate of the same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I satte vpon the grasse, & my herte was vexed within me like as afore: and I opened my mouth, & began to talke before the hiest, & sayd: O Lord, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, * thou haste de- Ex.xix.b. and.xxiiii a.

thers, in ỹ wildernesse, in a place were no came out of Egipt, & thou spakest saying: Heare me O Israell, & marke my wordes thou seede of Jacob: Beholde, I sowe my law in you & it shal bring frute in you and ye shal be honoured in it for euer. For our fathers which receaued the lawe kepte it not, and obserued not thy ordinaunces & statutes, and the frute of thy law was not declared: for it might not: for why it was thine. * For they ỹ receaued it, peryshed De.xxxii. f. bycause they kept not the thing that was sowen in them.

It is a custome when the ground receaueth seed, or ỹ sea a shyp, or a vessel meate & drincke, ỹ when it perisheth or is broken wherin a thing is sowen, or wherin any thing is put, the thinges also perish & are broken: whiche are sowen or put therin.
But vnto vs it hath not happened so, for we ỹ haue receaued the law, perish in sin, & our herte which also receaued the lawe: notwithstanding * the law perisheth not, Esa.xl.a. 1.Tim.ii a. but remaineth in his laboure.

And when I considered these thinges in my herte after this maner, I loked about D me with mine eyes, & vpon the right syde iiii.Esd.x b.
* I saw a woman, whiche mourned sore, made great lamentation, and wepte with lowde voyce: her clothes wer rente in pe-ces, & she had asshes vpon her heade.

Thẽ let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, & turned me vnto her, & said: wherfore wepest thou? Why art thou so sory and discomforted? And she said vnto me: Sir, let me bewayle my selfe, & take yet more so-row for I am sore vexed in my minde, and brought very low. And I sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? Or who hath done any thing to the? tel me: She sayd: I haue ben vnfruteful & barren & haue had an husband thirty yeares. And these thirtye yeares I doe nothing els daye and nyght and all houres, but make my prayer to the hyest.
After thirtye yeares God hearde me thy handemayden, loked vpon my miserie, cõ-sidered my trouble, & gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husbande also also and al my neyghbours, and we gaue greate honour vnto the mightie. And I nourished him with greate trauaile. So when he grewe vp, and came to the tyme that he shuld haue a wife, I made a feast.

The.x.Chapter.

Esdras and the woman that appeareth vnto him, commune together.

A And it happened, that whẽ my sonne went into his chãbre, he fell downe, & dyed: then ouerthrew we all the lightes, & all my neyghbours rose vp to comfort me.

Then toke I my rest vntil the seconde daye at night: & when they had all rested, that they might comfort me, I rested and also rose vp by night, & fled: & am com hether into this feld, as thou seest, & am purposed not to come in ẏ city but to remayne here, & nether to eate nor drincke, but continually to mourne & to fast, vntil I dye.

Then let I my meditations & thoughts fall ẏ I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou folishe woman: seest ẏ not our heuinesse & mourning, & what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion our mother is al wofull and sorye, how she is cleane brought down and in miserie? seing we be all nowe in heuinesse, and make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull.) As for the heuynes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, & she shal tell the, that it is she which ought (by reasõ) to mourne, for the fal of so many that grow vpon her.

For from the beginnyng all men are borne of her, and other shal com: & be hold, they walcke almost al into destruction, & manye of them shalbe rooted out.

Who should then (by reason) make more mourning, than she, ẏ hath lost so great a multitude: & not thou which arte sory but for one. But if thou wouldst say vnto me: My mournyng is not like the mournyng of ẏ earth, for I haue lost the fruite of my body, which I bare with heuinesse, but ẏ earth is accordyng to ẏ maner of ẏ earth, & the preset multitude goeth again into her as it is come to passe. Then say I vnto ẏ: like as thou hast borne with trauaile and sorow, euen so the earth also frõ the beginning geueth her fruite vnto man, for him

Heb.xii.a that made her. And therfore withhold thy sorow & heauinesse by thy selfe, * and loke what happeneth vnto the, beare it strõgli. For if thou iudgest the marke and end of God, to be righteous and good, and receauest his cousaile in time, thou shalte be cõmended there in. Go thy way then into ẏ citie to thy husbande.

And she said vnto me, that wil I not do: I wil not go into the citie: but here wil I dye. So I communed more with her, and said: do not so, but be counsailed, and folow me, for how many falles hath Siõ? Be of good comforte because of the sorow of Ierusalẽ. For thou seest that our Sanctuary is laied wast, oure aulter broken, oure tẽple destroyed, our playing of instrumẽtes and singing layd down, ẏ thanckesgeuing put to *silence, our myrth is banished away, ẏ lighte of our candelstycke is quenched, the Arcke of the couenaunt is taken from vs, al oure hol y thinges are defiled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs is dishonoured: our children are putte to shame, oure priests are brent: our Leuites are caryed away into captiuitie: oure virgins are defiled, & oure wiues rauished, oure righteous men spoiled: and our children destroied: our yong men are brought in bõdage, & our strong worthyes are become weake; & (Sion whiche seale is the greatest of all) is loosed vp from her worship: for she is deliuered into the hands of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy great heuynesse & put away ẏ multitude of sorowes: that the mightie may be mercifull vnto ẏ: and that the hyest may geue the rest from thy laboure & trauaile. And it happened, ẏ when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd shyne & glister, so that I was afrayed of her, & mused what it might be. And immediatly she cast out a great voyce, verye fearful, so that the earth shoke at the noise of the woman: and I loked. And behold, ẏ woman appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a citie builded, and a place was shewed from the ground & foundation.

Then was I afrayed, and cryed, with a loude voyce, and sayde: Where is Uriel the Angel* whiche came to me at ẏ firste: 4.Es... a.
For he hath caused me to come in manye considerations and hygh thoughtes, and mine ende is turned into corruption: and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speaking these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me: and I lay as one that had bene deade, and myne vnderstandyng was altred, and he toke me by the ryghte hande, and comforted me, and sette me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thyne vnderstanding vexed? and the vnderstanding of thy hearte, and wherefore arte thou sorye?

And

And I sayd: Bycause thou haste forsaken me: and I haue done *accordinge vnto thy wordes, I went into the fielde, & ther haue I sene thinges that I am not able to expresse. He saide vnto me: Stande vp, & be manly, and I shall geue the exhortation.

Then sayd I: speake vnto me my Lord, forsake me not, least I dye in vayne: for I haue sene, that I knew not, & herde that I do not know. Or shal my vnderstâding be disceaued, & my minde? But now I beseche the that thou wilte shew thy seruaûte of this wondre. He aunswered me then, and said: heare me, and I shall enforme þ and tel the wherfore thou art afrayed, for the hiest hath opened manye secrete thinges vnto thee.

He hath sene that thy wayes are right, & that thou takest sorow côtinuallye for thy people: and makest great lamentation for Sion: & therfore vnderstande the vision, which thou sawest a litle while agoe after this maner. Thou sawest a woman mourning and thou hast comforted her. Neuerthelesse nowe seest thou the lykenesse of þ woman nomore, but thou thoughtest ther was a citye builded: & like as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne: so is this the aunswere. The woman whom thou sawest, is Sion: & where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thirty yeares vnfruitefull and barren, those are the thirty yeares wherin ther was no offering made in her.

D But after thirty yeares Salomon builded her and offered, & then bare the barrê a sonne. And where as she tolde the: þ she norished him with laboure, that was the dwellig of Ierusalê. But wher as she told that her sonne died when she came into her chamber, that is the fal of Ierusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse howe she mourned for her sonne: & what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed þ. And nowe God seeth, that thou art sory in thy minde and sufferest from thy heart for her, and so hath he shewed the her clearnesse, & the fairenesse of her beauty.

And therfore I bad the remain in þ field wher no house is builded. For I knew þ the hiest would shew this vnto the: therfore I cômaunded the to go into the fielde where no foundation nor building is. For in þ place wher the hiest wil shewe his citie, there shalbe no mannes building. And therfore feare not, & let not thine herte be afraied, but go thy waye in, & se the gloryous faire buildyng, and howe great it is, and how great thou thinckest it, after the measure of thine eyes, & then shalte thou heare as much as thine eares may côprehende. For thou art blessed aboue manye other, & art called with the hiest amongest the few. But to morow at night thou shalt remain here: and so shal the hiest shew the visions of high things, whiche he will do vnto thê, that dwel vpon earth, in the last dayes. So I slepte the same night like as he commaunded me.

The.xi.Chapter.

In this chapter and in the two nexte ensuynge, he intreateth of certaine visions, and of the interpretations therof.

A Then saw I a dreame: & behold there came vp from the see an Aegle, which had twelue winges, & thre heads: And I saw, & behold, he sprede his winges ouer all the earthe, and all the wyndes of the aire blew in thê, and so they were put together againe.

And I beheld, & out of his fethers ther grew out other litle côtrary fethers þ heades rested, þ head in þ middest was greater thâ þ other, yet rested it wt the residue.

Moreouer I saw, that the Eagle flewe with his wynges, & raygned vpon earth, and ouer al thê that dwelt vpon the earth: And I saw that al thinges vnder heauen wer subiecte vnto him, & no man spake against him, no not one creature vpô earth. I saw also þ the Eagle stode vp vpon hys clawes, & gaue a sounde with his fethers, & a voice saying after this maner: watche not al together, slepe euery mâ in his own place, & watche for a time, but let the heades be preserued at þ last. Neuerthelesse, I sawe, that the voice went not out of his heades, but from þ middest of hys bodye. And I numbred hys contrarye fethers, & behold, there wer.viii.of them. And I loked. And behold vpon the right side there arose one fether, and raigned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that when it raigned, the end of it came, & the place thereof appeared nomore. So the nexte folowing stode vp, and raygned & had a great time: and it happened, that when it raygned, the end of it came also like as the first, so that it appered nomore,

Then there came a voice vnto it, and sayd: heare thou that hast kepte in þ earth so long: This I say vnto the: before thou beginnest to appere nomore. There shall none after the attayn vnto thy time. Thê arose the thirde, & raygned as the other afore, & appeared nomore also. So went it with B with al the residue one after another, so ẏ euery one raigned, ⁊ thē appered nomore.

Thē I loked, ⁊ behold, in processe of time the fethers that folowed wer set vp vpon the right side, that they might rule also: ⁊ some of thē ruled, but within a whyle thei appered no more: for some of thē were set vp, but ruled not. After this I loked, ⁊ behold the twelue fethers appered nomore, nor the two wynges, ⁊ ther was no more vpon the Eagels body but two heades ẏ rested, ⁊ sixe fethers. Thē saw I also, that the sixe fethers were parted in two, ⁊ remained vnder the head, that was vpō the right side, for the foure contynued in their place. So I loked, ⁊ behold, they that wer vnder the wynges, thought to set vp thē-selues, ⁊ to haue the rule. Then was ther one set vp, but shortly it appered nomore, and the second was soner awaye than the first. And I behelde, ⁊ loe, ẏ two thought also by them selues to raygne, ⁊ whē they so thought, behold, there awaked one of ẏ heades that were at rest: namelye, it that was in the middest, for that was ẏ greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, ẏ the two heades wer filled with him. ⁊ the heade was turned with them, that were by him, and did eate vp ẏ two vnder win-ges, that would haue raigned.

But this heade put the whole earth in C feare, ⁊ bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelt vpon earth with much laboure, and he had the gouernaūce of the worlde, ouer al the foules that haue bene. After this I loked, and beholde, the head that was in ẏ middest, sodaynlye appered no more, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heads, which ruled vpon earth, and ouer those ẏ dwelt therin. And I beheld, and lo, ẏ head vpon the right side, deuoured it that was vpon the left side. And I hearde a voyce, whiche sayd vnto me: loke before the, and consider the thing that thou seest. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a Lyon that roareth, runnyng hastely out of the wood, and he sente oute a mans voyce vnto the Eagle, and saide: Heare thou: I will talke with thee, and the hyest shall say vnto the:
Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whom I made to raigne vpon earth and in my worlde, and ẏ the end of their tymes myght come thorowe thē?
And the fourth came, and ouerran all the beastes that were past, ⁊ had power ouer the worlde with greate fearfulnesse, ⁊ ouer ẏ whole compasse of the earth with ẏ most wicked laboure: ⁊ so long time dwelt he vpō the earth with disceate, ⁊ the earth hast thou iudged not with truth. For thou hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurt the peaceable and quiet: thou hast loued liers, and destroied the dwellinges of them that brought forth fruite. and hast caste downe the walles of such as did the no harme.
Therefore is thy wrongfull dealyng and blasphemy come vp vnto the hiest: and thy pride vnto the mighty. The hiest also hath loked vpon the proude times: and behold, they are ended ⁊ their abhominations are fulfilled. And therfore appere nomore ẏ Egle, and thy horrible winges, ⁊ thy wyc-ked fethers, and thy vngracious heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne body, that the earth may be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe: when she is deli-uered from thy violence: and that she may hope for the iudgement and mercy of hym that made her.

The .xii. Chapter.

AND it happened whē the Lion A spake these wordes vnto the Egle, I saw, and beholde, the head that afore had the vpper hāde, appered nomore: neither did the foure wynges appeare any more, that came to him, ⁊ were set vp to raygne:
and their kyngdome was smal ⁊ full of vproure. And I saw, and behold, they appered nomore, ⁊ the whole body of ẏ Eagle was brent, and the earth was in greate feare. Then I awaked out of ẏ traunce of my mynde, and frō great feare, and sayde vnto my spirit: Lo, this hast thou geuē me in that thou searchest out ẏ wayes of the hiest: loe, yet am I werye in my mynde, ⁊ very weake in my spirit, ⁊ litle strength is there in me, for the greate feare ẏ I recei-ued this night. Therefore will I now besech the hiest, that he wil comfort me vnto the end: and I sayd: Lord, Lord, yf I haue found grace before thy sight, ⁊ yf I am iustified with the before many other, and if my prayer be come before thy face, cōforte me then, and shew me thy seruaunt the interpretation and plaine difference of this horrible sight, that thou mayest perfectlye comfort my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy, to shew me the last of tymes.

And he said vnto me: thys is the interpretation of this sight. The Eagle whom thou sawest com vp from ẏ sea, is the king- B dom* whiche was sene in the vision of thy Dan.vii. brother Daniel, but it was not expounded c vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto thee.
Beholde, ẏ dayes com, ẏ ther shall rise vp a king-

kyngdome vpon earth, and it shalbe feared aboue al ÿ kingdomes that wer before it.
In the same kingdom shal twelue kinges raigne one after another. For the seconde shall beginne to raygne & shall haue more time than the other twelue: & this do the twelue wynges sygnifie, which ÿ sawest: As for the voice that spake, & that ÿ sawest goe out from the heads, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after the time of the kyngdom there shal arise greate stry-uinges, and it shall stande in peril of falling. Neuertheles, it shal not yet fal, but shalbe set into his begynnyng: And the eight vnder wynges whiche thou sawest hang vnto the wynges of him, betoken, ÿ in him ther shal arise eighte kings, whose time shalbe but smal, & their yeares swift, and two of them shall peare. But whē the myddeste time cōmeth, there shalbe foure kept for a time vntil their time beginneth to come, that it maye be ended: but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende.
C And where as thou sawest thre heades resting: this is the interpretation. In his last, shal the hiest raise vp thre kingdoms, and cal many againe in to them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earth, & of those that dwel therin, with much laboure aboue all those that wer before thē. Therfore are they called the heades of ÿ Eagle: for it is they that shal bring forth his wickednesse againe, & that shall perfourme & finish his last. And where as thou sawest, that the great head appered nomore, it signifieth, that one of them shal dye vpon his bed, and yet with paine: for the two ÿ remaine, shalbe slaine with the swerd. For the sweard of the one shal deuour ÿ other, but at the last shal he fal thorow ÿ sweard himselfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnder winges vpon the head that is on ÿ righte side, it signified, that it is they, whome the hyest hath kepte vnto their ende: this is a smal kingdom, & ful of trouble. The Lion whom thou sawest risinge vp, oute of the woode, & roaring, and speaking vnto the Eagle, & rebukyng him for his vnrighte-ousnesse, is the winde, whiche the hyghest hath kept for them & for their wickednesse vnto the ende: he shal reproue them, & rēte them asundre before them. For he shall set D them liuing before the Judgement, and shall rebuke them: the resydue of my people shall he deliuer with trouble: those ÿ be preserued ouer mine ends. And he shal make them ioyful, vntill the comming of the day of iudgement: wherof I haue spoken vnto ÿ from the beginnyng. This is the dreame that thou sawest: and this is ÿ interpretation. Thou only hast bene mete to know the secrete of the hiest.

Therfore write all these thinges ÿ thou hast sene in a booke, and hide the: & teache them the wise in ÿ people, whose heartes thou knowest may comprehend and kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes mo, that it maye be shewed ÿ whatsoeuer it pleaseth ÿ highest to declare vnto thee: and with that he wēt hys waye.

And when all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes wer past, and I not come againe into the citie, they gathered thē all together, from the least vnto the most, and came vnto me, & said: what haue we offended the: & what euell haue we done agaīst the, that thou forsakest vs, and sittest here in this place: For of al people, thou onelye art left vs, as a grape of the vyne, & as a candle in a darcke place, & as an hauē and shyppe preserued from the tempest. Haue we not els aduersity ynough, but ÿ muste forsake vs: Were it not better for vs, that we had ben brent with Sion: For we are not better, than they that dyed there: and they wept with loude voice. Then answered I them, & sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israel, and bee not heuy thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hath you in remēbraunce, and the myghty hath not forgotten you in temptation. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, nether am I departed from you: but am come into this place to pray, bycause of the misery of Israel, that I mighte seke mercy for the lowe estate of youre Sāctuary. And now goe your way home euery man, & after these dayes will I come vnto you. So the people wēt their way into the citie, like as I commaunded them: but I remained stil in the fielde seuē dayes, as the Angel bad me, & did eate only of ÿ floures of the field, & had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The.xiii.Chapter.

AND it happened after the se- A uen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyghte. And behold, there arose a wynde frō the sea, that it moued all the floude therof. And I loked and beholde, the manne was strong, and increased with the cloudes of heauen: and when he turned his countenaunce to consider, all the thynges trembled that were sene vnder hym:

him:and when the voyce went oute of his mouth, all they brent that heard him, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fire.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of men out of numbre, frō the foure windes of the heauen, to fight against the mā that came out frō the sea. And I loked, and behold, he graued hi selfe a great moūtaine, and flewe vp vpon it. But I woulde haue sene the border or place, where out the hil was grauen, and I could not.

I saw after these, that all they whiche came to fyghte against him, were sore afrayde and yet they durst fighte, Neuertheless, when he sawe the fearcenesse and violence of yͤ people, he nether lifte vp his hande nor helde a sweard, nor any weapō: but onely (as I sawe) he sente out of hys mouth as it had bene a blast of fire, & oute of his lippes the winde of the flame: & oute of his tong he cast out sparckes & stormes, and they wer all mixte together: yͤ blast of fire, the winde of the flammes, & the great storme, & fel with a rushe vpon the people, which was prepared to fight, & brent thē vp euerichone: so yͭ of yͤ innumerable multitude ther was nothig sene, but only dust & smoke. Whē I saw this, I was afrayed.

B Afterward saw I the same man come down from yͤ mountaine, and calling vnto him another peaceable people: & there came much people vnto hi:som wer glad, some wer sory, some of them wer bounde, so that they were caryed & brought forth.

Then was I sycke thorow great feare, & I awaked, & sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt all thy wonders, from the beginning, & hast coūted me worthy, that thou mightest receaue my praier: shew me now yet the interpretation of this dreame. For thus I considre in my vnderstanding: wo vnto thē that shalbe lefte in those dayes, & muche more wo vnto them that are not lefte behynde, for they that were not left, were in heuynesse.

Now vnderstande I the thinges that are layed vp in yͤ latter dayes, which shall happen vnto them, & to those that are not lefte behynd. Therfore are they come into great perils, and many necessities, like as these dreames declare, yet is it easier, that he which suffereth hurte come in these, thā to passe away as a cloud out of yͤ world, & now to se yͤ thinges yͭ shal happē in yͤ last.

Then answered he me, & sayd: The interpretation of the sight shal I shew the & I wil open vnto the, the thing that thou hast required. For thou hast spoken of the that are lefte behynde & this is the interpretation. He that hath suffred paine in yͭ time shal saue him selfe. They that be fallen into harme, are suche as haue workes and faith vnto yͤ most mighty. Know this therfore, that thei which be left behind, are more blessed than they that be deade.

This is yͤ meaning of the vision. Wheras thou sawest a man commyng vp frō the deepe of yͤ sea, the same is he whom God yͤ hyest hath kept a great seasō: which by his own selfe shal deliuer his creature, and he shall ordre thē that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest, yͭ out of his mouth ther came a blast of wynde, fire & storme: and how that he lift vp nether swerde nor weapon, but yͭ the rushyng in of him destroyed yͤ whole multitude yͭ came to fight against him: it signifieth, yͭ the daies com, when God will deliuer them yͭ are vpon earth, & in a traunce of mynde shall he com vpon thē that dwell in the earth. And one shall vndertake to fight against another, one city against another, one place agaist an other.* & one people against another, one realme against an other. Whē this cōmeth to passe, thē shal yͤ tokēs com yͭ I shewed yͤ before: & then shal my sōne be declared whom thou sawest clymb vp as a mā. And whē al yͤ people heare his voice, euery mā shal in their own land, leaue yͤ battaile yͭ thei haue one against another: & an innumerable multitude shalbe gathered together, as thei that be willyng to come, and to ouercome him by fighting. But he shall stande vpon the top of yͤ moūt Sion. Neuertheless, Sion shal come, & shall be shewed, beyng prepared & builded for all men, like as thou sawest yͤ hil graue forth without any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people that are come, for their wickednesse, and euill imaginacions into the tempest: & their paines wherwith they shalbe punished, are likened vnto that flāme, and without any laboure shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, whiche is compared vnto the fyre.

And wher as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peaceable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes which wer caryed awaye prisoners out of their owne lande, *in the time of Oseas the kyng, whome Salmanazar yͤ kyng of Assiria toke prysoner, and caried them ouer the water, & so came they into another lande.

But they gaue them this coūsaile, that they should leaue yͤ multitude of yͤ heathē, and is to go forth into a farther coūtrey, where neuer mankynd dwelt: ẏ they might there kepe their statutes, which thei neuer kept in their owne land. And so they entred in at the narowe passages of ẏ water of Eu-D phrates, and so God shewed tokens for them, * ⁊ helde stil ẏ floude till they were passed ouer: for thorow the coūtrey, there was a great way, namely of a yeare and a halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asareth. Then dwelte they there vntil the latter time: and when they come forth again, the Hyghest shal hold stil the springes of the streame againe, that they maye go thorow: therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be lefte behynd of thy people, are those ẏ be found within my border. Now when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shall defende his people ẏ remain, and then shal he shew thē great wonders.

Then said I: O Lord, Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man com-ming vp from the deape of the sea: And he said vnto me: Like as thou canst neyther seke out, nor know these thinges that are in the depe of the sea, euen so mayst thou not se my sonne or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the day. This is the interpretation of the dreame which thou sa-west, therfore thou onely are here lightened, for thou hast forsakē thine owne law, and applyed thy diligence vnto mine, and sought it. * Thy life hast thou ordred in wisdome, and * hast called vnderstandyng thy mother, and therefore haue I shewed the treasure of the Hyghest. After thre dayes, I wil shewe the more, and talke w thee ẏ more at large: yea, heuy and wondrous thinges will I declare vnto the.

Then went I forth into the field, ge-uing prayse ⁊ thākes greatly vnto God, bicause of these wonders whiche he did in time, and bycause he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in time, and there I satte thre dayes.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

God appereth to Esdras in the bushe ⁊ sheweth him what he shal do.

A Upon the third day I sat vnder an Oke tree, then came there a voice vnto me oute of the bushe, and sayde: Esdras, Esdras: And I saide: here am I Lorde, and stode vp vpon my fete.
Thē spake he vnto me: * in the bush dyd I appere vnto Moses, ⁊ talked with him when my people serued in Egypt and I sent him, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount Sion, where I held him by me a longe season, ⁊ tolde hym my wonderous workes, ⁊ shewed him the secretes of ẏ times ⁊ the end, and commaūded him, saying: These wor-des shalt thou declare, and not hide them:
And now I say vnto the, that thou laye vp in thine hert ẏ dreames that thou hast sene, ⁊ the interpretations which I haue shewed the, for thou shalt be receaued of al thou shalt be turned, and remayne with my counsaile, and with suche as be lyke thee, vntill the tymes be ended. For the world hath lost his youth, and the times beginne to waxe olde. For the time is deuyded into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone already, and halfe of ẏ tenth part: yet remaineth there, that whiche is after the halfe of the tenth part.

Therfore, prepare and ordre thy house, B and reforme thy people: cōfort suche of thē as be in trouble: ⁊ tell now of the destruction: let goe from the mortall thoughtes: cast away the burdens of man: put of the weake nature: laye asyde the thoughtes that are most heuy vnto the, and haste the to flye from these times: for such euill and wickednesse as thou hast sene now happē, shal they do yet much worse. * For ẏ wea- Ma.xxiiii. ker that the world and the time is, ẏ more a. shall sinne and wickednesse increase in thē i.Ioh.ii.c that dwell vpon earth. For the trueth ys fledde farre awaye: ⁊ leasyng is heard at hand. For now hasteth the vision to come, that thou hast sene.

Then aunswered I before ẏ, and sayde: Beholde Lord, I wil go as thou hast commaunded me, ⁊ reforme the people whiche are present. But they that shall be borne afterward, who wil exhorte or rebuke thē: Thus the world is set in darcknesse: and they that dwell therin, are without light, for thy lawe is brent: wherefore no man knoweth ẏ thinges that are done of thee, or that shal be done. Yf I haue foūd grace before the, send the holy gost into me, and I shall wryte all that hath bene done in ẏ worlde, since the begynnyng, which was written in thy law, that men maye fynde the path, and that they which will lyue in the latter dayes, may lyue.

And he aunswered me, saying: Goe thy way, and gather the people together, and say vnto them: that they seke thee not for fourty dayes, but loke ẏ haue many boxe tables, ⁊ take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus, and Asiel, these fiue, which are ready to wryte swiftlye, & come hither, and I shal light a candle of vnderstandyng in thine hert, which shall not be put oute, till the thynges be perfourmed which þ shalt begin to wrît. And thē shalt thou declare som thinges openly vnto the perfecte, & some thinges shalte thou shewe secretly vnto the wyse. To morowe thys houre shalte thou begin to write.

C Then went I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together, and said. Heare these wordes, O Is-Ge. xxvii a. rael: * Our fathers at the beginning wer straungers in Egipte, from whence they were deliuered, and receaued the lawe of De. iiii. d life, * which they kept not, whiche ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was this land, & the land of Siō parted amōg you by lot, to possesse. But your fathers & ye your selues also, haue done vnrighte-ousnesse, & haue not kept the waies which the Hyest commaunded you. And for so much as he is a ryghteous iudge, he toke from you in time the thing that he had geuen you. And now are ye here & your brethren among you. Therefore if so be that ye will subdue your owne vnderstanding, and refourme your hert, ye shall be kepte aliue, and after death shal ye obtaine mercy. For after death shal þ iudgement come, when we shal lyue againe: & then shall the names of the righteous be manifest, & the workes of the vngodly shalbe declared.
Let no man therfore come now vnto me, nor aske anye question at me these fortye dayes.
So I toke the fiue men (as he commaū-D ded me) & we went into the field, & remayned there. The next day a voice called me, Eze. iii. a saying: Esdras * open thy mouth, & drinck Apoc. x. b that I geue þ. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde, he reached me a ful cup, which was ful as it were with water, but the coloure of it was like fire. And I toke it, & dranke. And when I had dronke it, my herte had vnderstanding, and wysedome grew in my brest: for my spirite was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouthe was opened, and shut nomore.
The Hyghest gaue vnderstanding vnto the fiue mē, that they wrote the hye thin-ges of the Night, whiche they vnderstode not. But in the night they did eate breade, as for me, I spake in the day, & helde not my tong by nyght. In fourtie dayes, they wrote two. C. and foure bokes.
And it happened when the fourty dayes wer fulfilled, that the Hiest spake, saying:
The first that thou hast written, speake openly, that the worthy and vnworthy maye read it. But kepe þ. lxx. last, þ thou mayest shew it onely to suche as be wyse among thy people. For in thē is the spring of vnderstanding, the fountaine of wisedome, & the streame of knowledge. And I did so.

The. xv. Chapter.

The punishement that euill people shall haue which God commaunded Esdras to shew vnto thē.

Behold, speake thou in the ea-res of my people, the wordes of this prophecye, whiche I I wil put in thy mouth, sayeth þ Lord: & cause them to be written in a letter, for it is þ truthe. Feare not the immaginations against thee. Let not the vnfaithfulnesse of them trouble thee, that speake against thee.
For al the vnfaithful shal dye in their vn-faythfulnesse. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I will bryng plages vpon the worlde, the sweard, hūger, death, & destructiō, for wickednesse hath þ vpperhande in all þ earth, and their shameful workes are fulfilled.
Therfore saith the Lord: I wil hold my toung no more vnto their wyckednesse, which they do so vngodly: neyther will I suffre them in the thinges, that they deale withal so wickedly. Beholde, * the innocēt bloud of the troubled crieth vnto me, & the Apoc. soules of þ righteous complain cōtinually and & therfore (saieth the Lorde) I will surely auenge them, and receaue vnto me all the innocent bloud from among them.
* Beholde, my people is led as a flocke of B Psal. shepe to be slaine. I will not suffre them Ro. now to dwel in Egipt, but wil bring them I Co. out with a mighty hand, & a stretched oute arme, and smite it with plages as afore.
And wil destroy al the lād of it. Egipt shal mourne, and the foundations of it shall be smitten with the plage and punishement, that God shall bring vpon it.
They that til the ground, shal mourne: for their seedes shal be destroyed thorowe the blasting, haile, and horrible starre falling. Wo worth the worlde and them that dwel therin, for the swearde and their destruction draweth nie, and one people shal stande vp to fyght against an other, and sweardes in their hands. For men shalbe vnstedfast, and some shal do violence vnto other: they shall not regarde their kyng C and princes, the wayes of their doynges and handlynges shal be in their power.

Man shall desyre to go into the citie, and shal not be able. For bicause of their pride the cities shal be brought in feare, the houses shal shake, and men shall be afrayde: A man shall haue no pitye vpon hys neygh-bour, but one shall prouoke an other vnto battaile to spoile their goodes, bicause of the hunger of breade, and bicause of the great trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together D all the kynges of the earth, which are frō the vp rysing, from the South, from the East, and Libanus to turne vnto them, & restore the thinges that they haue geuen them. Like as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wil I do also, and recōpence them in their bosome. Thus sayeth the Lord God: My right hand shal not spare the sinners, and my sweard shal not cease ouer them that shed ŷ innocent bloud vpō earth. The fire is gone out frō his wrath, and hath consumed the foundacions of the earth, and the sinners like the strawe that is kyndeled. Wo worth them that sinne, and kepe not my commaundementes saith the Lord: I wil not spare them. Go your way ye children from violence, defyle not my Sanctuary: for the Lord knoweth all thē that sinne against him, and therefore deliuereth he them vnto death and destructiō: for nowe are the plages come vpon the world, and ye shall remaine in them. For God shal not deliuer you, because ye haue sinned against him.

Behold, an horrible vision commeth frō E the East, where generations of dragons shal come out, & the people of the Arabies with many charrettes, and the multitude of them shalbe as the winde vpon ŷ earth that al they which do heare them raginge in their wrath, maye feare and tremble.
And as ŷ wilde Boores out of the wood, so shall they goe out, & with great power shal they com & stand fighting with thē, & shal wast the porcion of the Assirians land.
And then shal the dragons haue the vp-per hand, & not remembre their birth, and shall turne about swearing together in great power to persecute them. But these shalbe afraied, & kepe silēce at their power and shal flee: and one out of the land of the Assiriās shal besege them, & consume one of them, & in their hoste shall be feare and dread, and strife among their kynges.

F Behold, cloudes from the East and frō the North, vnto the South, & they are be-rye horrible to loke vpon, ful of wrath and storme. They shal smite one vpō another: and they shal smite the great starre to the earth, & their owne starre also: & the bloud (for the great slaughter) shall be as depe as from the belly downe, & the filth of mā lyke vnto the Camels lytter: And there shal be great scarefulnesse and trembling vpon earthe, and they that se the wrathe, shall be afrayed, and a tremblyng shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate ray-nes from the south, & from the North, and parte from the West: and the wyndes from the East shall be of great power, & shall shut them vp agayne, and the cloude which was raised vp in wrath, & the starr raised to feare ŷ East & West wynde, shalbe destroyed: and the great cloudes shalbe lyfte vp, & the mighty cloudes ful of wrath, and the starre: that they may make all ŷ earth afrayde, and them that dwel therin, & that they maye powre oute ouer all places an horrible starrefalling, fire and hayle flying, sweardes, & manye waters: that all fieldes may be ful, and al ryuers: and they shall breake downe the cities and walles, mountaines and hilles, al trees, woode, & ŷ grasse of the medowes, & all their frute.
And they shall go stedfast vnto Babilon, & make her afrayed: they shal come to her & besege her, the starre and all wrath shall they powre out vpon her.

Then shall the dust & smoke go vp vnto the heauen, & all they that be about her: G shal bewayle her: & they that remaine vnder her, shal do seruice vnto thē that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia, that cōser-test thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babilō, and art a worshipper of her persone: Wo be vnto thee thou wretch, bicause thou hast made thy selfe like vnto her, and haste deckt thy daughters in whordom, that they might triumph & please thy louers, which haue alwaye desired to commit whordom with thee: ŷ hast folowed the abhominable citie in all her workes and inuention.

Therfore saith God: I will sēde plages vpon the wydowhode: pouerty, hunger, warres and pestilēce, to waste thy houses with destructiō & death, & the glorie of thy power shall be dried vp as a floure, when ŷ heate ryseth that is sēt ouer thee: Thou shalte be sicke as a poore wife ŷ is plaged & beaten of wemen: so that the myghtye & louer shal not be able to receaue ŷ. Would I so hate the saith the Lord; yf thou haddest not alway slayne my chosen, exalting the stroke of thy handes, & sayd ouer their death, when thou wast dronken: set forth the beautie of thy countenaūce. The reward of thy whordō shalbe recōpēced ẏ in thi bosom, therfore shalt ẏ receue reward.

B Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen, saieth the Lorde, euen so shall God do vnto thee, and shal deliuer ẏ into ẏ plage.
Thy children shal die of hunger, and thou shalte fall thorow the swearde. Thy cities shall be broken downe, and all thine shall perish with the swearde in the fielde.
They that be in the mountaines shall dye of hunger, and eate their owne flesh, and drinke their owne bloud for very hunger of breade and thyrst of water. Thou vn-happy shalt come thorow the sea, and receaue plages againe.
In the passage they shal cast downe the slaine citie, & shal rote out one part of they land, and consume the portion of ẏ glory.
Thou shalt be vnto thē lyke stuble, & they shalbe vnto thee like fire, and consume the:
thy cities and thy land, thy woode and thy fruiteful trees shal they burne with ẏ fire.
Thy childrē shal they cary away captiue, and loke what thou hast, thei shal spoile it, and marre the beauty of thy face.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The heathen shalbe punished.

A Wo be vnto the Babilō and Asia, wo be vnto ẏ Egipte and Siria, girde your sel-ues with clothes of sacke & heere, and mourne your children, be sory, for your destruction is at hande. A swearde is sēt vpon you, & who wil turne it backe? A fire is kyndled amōg you, and who wil quenche it? Plages are sente vnto you, & what is he that will driue thē away? May any man driue away an hūgry Lion in ẏ woode? Or may any man quēch the fire in stubble, when it hath begon to burne? May one turne again ẏ arow, that is shot of a strong archer? The myghtie Lord sendeth ẏ plages, & what is he that wil dryue thē away? The fire is kyndled & gone forth in his wrath, & what is he that wil quench it? He shal cast lyghtenynges, and who shal not feare? He shal thonder, & who shall not be afrayde? The Lorde shall threaten, & who shal not vtterly be beatē to pouder at his presence? The earth quaketh, & the foundations therof: ẏ sea ariseth vp with waues from ẏ depe, & the floudes of it are vnquiet, & the fisches thereof also before the lord, & before the glorye of his power. For strong is his right hand ẏ holdeth the bow, his arowes ẏ he shoteth, are sharpe & shal not misse, when they begin to be shot into the endes of the world.
Beholde, the plages are sent, & shall not turne again, til they come vpō earth. The B fire is kyndled, & shal not be put out, till it consume the foundations of ẏ earth. Like as an arowe which is shot of a mighty archer, retourneth not backward: euen so ẏ Plages ẏ shall be sente vpon earth, shall not turne againe. Wo is me, woe is me, who shal deliuer me in those dayes? The beginning of sorowes & great mourning, ẏ beginīg of derth & great death, ẏ begīnīg of wars, & ẏ powers shal stād in feare: the beginning of euils, & thei shal trēble euery one. What shal I do in these thinges whē the plages come? Beholde, hunger, & plague, trouble, & anguish ar sēt, as scourges for amendemēt. But for all these thinges they shal not turne frō their wickednesse, nor be alway myndeful of the scourges.
Beholde, vitailes shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thincke them sel- C ues to be in good case, and euen then shal mischiefe grow vpon earth: warres, dearth, and great disquietnesse. For many of them that dwel vpon earth shal perishe of hunger, and the other that escape the hū-ger, shal the swearde destroy: and the dead shal be cast oute as dong: & there shalbe no man to comforte them. For the earth shal be wasted, and the cities shalbe cast down: there shalbe no man lefte to til the earth, and to sowe it. The trees shal geue frute, and who shall plucke them of & gather thē? The grapes shalbe ripe, and who shal treade them? For al places shalbe desolate of men, so that one man shall desire to se another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole citie there shalbe ten lefte, and two in the fielde which shall hyde thē sel-ues in the thicke busshes, and in ẏ clifftes of stones: like as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vineyard is gathered, ther are left some grapes of them ẏ diligentlye sought thorow the vineyarde.
Euen so in those dayes ther shal be thre or foure left for thē that search their hou- D ses with the swearde. And the earth shalbe lefte wast, & the fieldes there of shal waxe old: and her wayes and al her pathes shal grow ful of thornes, bicause no man shall trauaile there thorowe.
The daughters shal mourne, hauyng no bridegromes: the women shal make lamētation, hauing no husbands, their daughters shal mourne hauing no helpe of their bridevndegrowne. In ȳ warres shal they be destroyed, & their husbandes shall perishe of hunger. O ye seruauntes of ȳ Lord, heare these thinges, & marke thē. Behold, ȳ word of the Lord, O receaue it: behold, the plages drawe nie, & are not slacke in taryeng.

Like as a trauelinge woman, which after ȳ nine moneth bringeth forth a sōne when the hour of the birth is com, an hour, two, or thre, afore ȳ the paines com vpō her body, and when the childe commeth to birth, they tary not the twinckling of an eye. Euen so shal not the plages be slacke to com vpon earth, & the world shal mourne, and sorowes shal come vpon it on euery syde.
O my people, heare my worde, make you C ready to the battaile: & in all euill be euen as pilgrymes vpō earth. *He that selleth, Esa. xxiiij. let him be as he that flieth his waye: & he that byeth as one that will lose.
Who so occupieth marchaundise, as he ȳ winneth not, & he that buildeth, as he that shal not dwell therin, he ȳ soweth, as one ȳ shal not reape: he ȳ twisteth ȳ vyneard, as he that shal not gather the grapes: thei that mary, as they ȳ shall get no children, and they ȳ mary not: as the widdowes and therfore *they ȳ laboure, labour in vaine.
Deu. xxviij. For straungers shal reape their fruites, & spoile their goodes, ouerthrow their houses, & take their childrē captiue, for in captiuity & hunger shall they get childrē. And they ȳ occupy their marchaūdise wt robbery, how long decke they their cities, their houses, their possessiōs, & persons: ȳ more wil I punish thē for their sinnes, saith the lord. Like as an whore enuieth an honest woman, so shal righteousnesse hate iniquity, when she decketh her selfe, & shal accuse her to her face: when he commeth ȳ defendeth, which shal make inquisitiō for al sine vpō earth. And therfore be not ye like ther vnto, nor to ȳ workes therof: for or euer it be long, iniquity shalbe takē away out of ȳ erth: & righteousnes shal raigne amōg you.
F Let not ȳ sinner say, ȳ he hath not sined: for coales of fire shal burne vpō his head, which saieth before the lord God & his glorie: I haue not sinned. Beholde, the Lorde knoweth al ȳ workes of mē, their imaginations, their thoughtes, & their heartes.
Gene. i. a *For he spake but the worde: let ȳ earth be made, & it was made: let the heauen be made: & it was made. In his word were ȳ starres made, & he knoweth ȳ numbre of thē. He searcheth ȳ grounde of the depe, & the treasures therof, he hath measured the sea, & what it conteineth. He hath shut the sea in ȳ middest of ȳ waters, and with his word hath he hāged the earth vpon ȳ waters. He spredeth out ȳ heauē like a vaute, vpon the waters hath he founded it. In ȳ desert and drye wildernesse hath he made springes of water, & pooles vpon ȳ toppe of the mountaines, ȳ the floudes mighte poure downe from ȳ stony rockes to water ȳ earth. He made man, & put his herte in the middest of the bodye, and gaue hym breath, life, and vnderstanding: yea, & the spirit of the almighty God, which made al thinges, and hath searched the ground of all the secretes of the earth.
He knoweth your imaginations & inuē- G tions, & what ye thinke whē ye sinne, and would hide your sinnes. Therefore hath ȳ Lorde searched and soughte out all youre workes, & he shal bewray you al. And whē your sinnes are brought forth, ye shall be ashamed before men, and your owne sin-nes shal be your accusers in that daye.
What wil ye do: Or how wil ye hide your sinnes before God & his āgels: Behold, God him selfe is ȳ iudge, feare him, leaue of from your sinnes, and forget your vnrighteousnesse, & meddle no more wt them so shal God leade you forth, & deliuer you from al trouble. For beholde, the heat of a great multitude is kindeled ouer you, and they shal take away certaine of you, & fede the pore with Idoles, & they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derision, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder fote.
For in al places, & in the nexte cities shal H be a great insurrectiō, vpon those ȳ feare the Lord. They shalbe lyke mad men, thei shal spare no man: they shal spoile & waste such as feare the Lord, their goodes shall they take from thē, and shut them oute of their houses. Then shal it be knowen who are my chosen, and they shal be tried as ȳ golde in the fire. Heare, O ye my beloued, saieth the Lord: behold, the dayes of trouble are at hand, but I wil deliuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dispeire not, for God is your captaine.
Who so kepeth my commaundementes & preceptes (sayeth the Lorde God) let not youre sinnes wey you downe, and let not your vnrighteousnesse be lifte vp. Wo be vnto thē that are subdued vnto their syn-nes, and tangled in their wickednesse: like as a field is hedged in with bushes, & ȳ path therof couered with thornes, ȳ no man may trauel thorow, & so is he taken, and cast in the fire and brent.

The ende of the .iiii. Booke of Esdras.

The Boke of Tobias.

The first Chapter.

Tobias beyng taken prisoner, forsaketh not the lawe of trueth. The mercye and charity of Tobias: and ẏ maners of him in his youth. He taketh Annah to wife, by whom he hath a sonne named Tobias. He succoureth Gabel with money: He and his are fayne to flee, but after the death of Sennacherib they returne agayne.

A Tobias was of ẏ trybe and citye of Nephtalye, which lyeth in the hie countries of Galile above Aser, the way toward ẏ west hauing the City of Sephet vpon ẏ left side. Though he was taken prisoner in the dayes of Salmanasar kyng of the Assirians, neuerthelesse being in cap-tiuitye, he forsoke not the waye of trueth: Inso much ẏ whatsoeuer he might get, he parted it daily with his felow prisoners and brethren, that wer of his kynred. And thoughe he wer yonger than all in ẏ tribe of Nephtalim, yet did not he behaue h[illegible] selfe childishly in his workes. And when al the other went to Baal ẏ gol[illegible]n Calfe which Jeroboam the king of Israell had made, he him selfe alone fle[illegible] al theyr companies, and gate him to Je[illegible]salem vnto the temple of the Lord, and ther worshipped the Lord God of Israel, faithfully offering of al his first fruites and tithes, so that in the third yeare he ministred all the tithes vnto straungers, and to such as he thought good. These & suche like thinges did he obserue according to the law of god when he was yet but yong.
B But whẽ he was a mã, he toke out of his own tribe a wife called Anna, & of her he begat a sõne, whom he called Tobias after his own name, and taught him from his youth vp, to feare God, and to refrain from al sinne.
Now, when he with his wife, his sõne, & with all his kinred, was come in captiuity vnto the citye of Niniue, what time as they al did eate of the meates of the Heathen, he kepte his soule, & was neuer defiled in their meates. And for so muche as he was mindful of the Lord in al his hert, God gaue him fauoure in ẏ sight of Sal-manasar ẏ kyng, which gaue him power to go where he would, & so had he libertie to do whatsoeuer him lyst.
So went Tobias vnto al thẽ ẏ were in prison, & conforted them, & gaue thẽ whol- C some exhortations. And when he came to Rages, a city of the Medes, hauing ten talẽtes of siluer of the kinges gift, & sawe among a great cõpany of people his kynred, one Gabelus (which was of his owne tribe) being in necessity, he gaue hi ẏ saide weight of siluer vnder an hand wryting.
After a long season when Salmanasar the king was deade, & Sennacherib hys sonne raigned in his stead, whiche hated ẏ children of Israel. Tobias wẽt daily throrowout all his kynred, & cõforted them, & gaue of his goodes to euery one of thẽ as much as he might: He fed the hungry, clothed the naked, & buried the dead & slaine, and that diligentlye.
And when Sennacherib the kyng came againe, & fled out of Jewry (what time as D God punished him for his blasphemy) & in his wrath slew many of the children of Israel, Tobias buried their bodies priuylye.
But when it was told the king, he cõmaũded to slea him, & toke away al his goods.
Neuerthelesse Tobias with his sõne and with his wife fled away into mount Ararath, for ther wer many ẏ loued him. But after .xlv. dayes, ẏ king was slaine of his own sõns. And whẽ Sarchidatus (which did succede his father) had geuen Achiacarus Tobias brothers sonne many offices of honour, & made him his cupbearer, chiefe steward, chiefe auditour, maister of the signet, and vicegerente of his own person. Achiacarus spake vnto the kyng for his vncle Tobias. Then came Tobias againe to his house, and al his goodes wer restored vnto hym.

The .ii. Chapter.

Tobias biddeth such of his frendes as feare God to a feast. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more than the kyng. He bicommeth blinde by the permission and sufferaunce of God. His kinsfol-kes mocke him.

After

I After those thinges, vpon a solemne day of the Lord, Tobias made a good feast in his house, and said vnto his sonne: Go thy way and bring hither som of our tribe, suche as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And whe he was gone, he came againe, and tolde his father that one of the children of Israel laye slayne vpon the strete. And immediatly he leapte from his table, lefte the feast, came fasting to the dead coarse, toke him, and bare him priuily into his house, that when ẏ sunne was downe, he might safely bury hym. And when he had hydde the coarse, he dyd eate hys meate with mourning and feare, remembring the wordes that the Lord sayd by the prophet Amos: *your hye feastes shall be turned to sorow and heauinesse.

B But whe the sunne was downe, he went his waye, and buried him. Then all hys neighbours reproued him, saying: It is not long since it was commaunded to slea the, bicause of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buriest thou the dead againe? Neuerthelesse, Tobias fearing God more than ẏ kyng, toke the bodies of the slaine, and hyd the in his house, and buried them at midnyghte.

It happened vpon a day, that he hadde buried ẏ dead, and was wery, came home, and layed him downe by ẏ wal and slepte. And while he was a sleepe, there fel down vpon his eyes warme dunge out of ẏ swalowes neste, so ẏ he was blind. This tentation did God suffer to happe vnto him, that they whiche came after, might haue an example of his pacience, like as of holy Job. For in so much as he euer feared god from his youth vp, and kept his commaundementes, he grudged not against God ẏ the plage of blindnesse chaunced vnto him but remained stedfast in the feare of God, & thanked God al the dayes of his life.

C For like as blessed Job was had in derision of Kinges, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders, & kinsfolkes, which sayed vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes, and buried ẏ dead? But Tobias rebuked them & spake: Say not so, for we are the children of holye men, and loke for the life, whiche God shal geue vnto the, that neuer turne their beliefe from him. Anna his wife went dayly to the weauyng worcke: and loke what liuyng shee coulde gette with the laboure of her handes, shee brought it. And it happened that shee tooke a kyd, and broughte it home.

And when her husbande heard it crye, he said: *loke that it be not stolen, restore it againe to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eate or to touch any thing of thefte. The was his wife angry, and said: Now is thy hope become vaine openlye, & thine almes deedes are manifeste. With these and suche lyke wordes dyd shee caste him in the teeth.

The.iii.Chapter.

The prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Raguel is sclaundred of her fathers seruaunt. The praier and fasting of Sara. And also the innocencie and chastity of her. The prayers of Tobias and of Sara are hearde.

A When Tobias toke it heauily, and with teares, began to make his prayer, saying: O Lorde, thou art righteous, and al thy iudgementes are true: yea, al thy waies ar mercy, faithfulnesse, and iudgemet. And now O lord, be mindefull of me, & take no vengeaunce of my sinnes, neither remember my misdeedes, neither ẏ misdeedes of my elders. For we haue not ben obediente vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoiled, brought into captiuitie, into death, into derision, and shame vnto all nations, among whom thou hast scattered vs. And now O Lord, thy iudgemetes are great, for we haue not done according to thy commaundementes, neither haue we walcked innocentely before thee. And now O lord, deale with me according to thy will, and commaunde my spirite to be receaued in peace, for more expedient wer it for me to dye, than to lyue.

B At ẏ same time it happened, that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Rages a citye of ẏ Medes was staundered of one of her fathers handmaydes: namely, ẏ she should haue had seuen husbandes, whiche assone as they wer gone in vnto her wer slain of the deuil called Asmodeus. Therfore, whe she reproued the mayden for her fault, she aunswered her, saying: God let vs neuer se sonne nor daughter of thee more vpon earth, thou killer of thy husbandes. Wilt thou slea me also, as thou hast slaine seuen men? At this voice went Sara into an hy chaber of hir house, & .iii. dayes, & .iii. nightes she neither ate nor dranck, but continued in prayer, & besought God wt teares that he would deliuer her frō this rebuke.

C Upon the third daye it chaunced, ŷ whē she had made an end of prayer, she praised the Lord, saying: Blessed be thy name. O God of our fathers, which when thou art wroth, shewest mercy, & in time of trouble, thou forgeuest the sinnes of them, that cal vpon thee. Unto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the liste I vp mine eyes, I beseche the O Lord, lose me out of the bōdes of this rebuke, or els take me vtterlye away frō of the earth. Thou knowest lord, that I neuer had desire vnto man, & that I haue kept my soule cleane from all vncleanly lust: I haue not kepte companye with those that passe their time in sporte, neither haue I made my selfe partaker wt them ŷ walke in light behauoure. Neuertheles an husbande haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture, either haue I bene D vnworthye of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happyly haste kepte me to an other husbāde. For why, thy coūsel is not in the power of man. But whosoeuer loueth thee, and serueth the aright, is sure of this, that if his life be tempted & proued, it standeth in the tryyng: and if he endure in patience, he shal haue a reward, & be highly crowned: & if he be in trouble, that god (no dout) shal deliuer him, and yf his life be in chastenyng, that he shal haue leaue to come vnto thy mercye.

For thou hast no pleasure in our dampnation: and whyrafter a storme thou makest the wether faire and stil: after weping and heauinesse thou geuest great ioy. Thi name O God of Israell, be praysed for euer. At the same time wer both their praiers heard in the sight of the maiesty of the hyest God. And Raphael the holy Aungel of the Lord was sente to helpe them both, whose prayers came at one time togither before God.

The.iiii.Chapter.

Tobias thinking to dye, geueth a godly exhortation and monition to his sonne.

A So when Tobias thought his prayer to be hearde, that he might dye, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, and sayde vnto him: My sōne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and lay them in thine herte as a foundation. When God taketh away my soule, bury thou my body: * And honour thy mother al the daies of her life. Exo.xx.b

For thou oughtest to remembre, what and how great perilles she suffered for thee in her wombe. And when she also hath fulfilled the time of her life, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy life, and beware * lest at any time thou consent vnto sinne, and least thou let slyp the commaundementes of the Lord oure God. Ro.vi.

* Geue almes of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face frō the pore: & so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lord shall not be turned away from thee. * Be mercifull after thy power. If thou haue much, geue plenteously, if thou haue little, do thy diligence, gladlye to geue of that little. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good reward in the day of necessity. For mercy deliuereth from all sinne, and from death, & suffreth not ŷ soule to come in darcknesse. A great comfort is mercy before the hyghe God, vnto all them that shew it. Luk.xi.b. B Ec.iiii.

My sōne, kepe the wel frō al whordom, & (beside thy wife) se ŷ nofaltu be knowē of ŷ. Let neuer pride haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde: for in pryde began al destructiō. * Whosoeuer worcketh any thing for the, immediatly geue him his hire, and loke that thy hired seruauntes wages remaine not by thee ouer night. * Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man ŷ thyng that thou wouldest not another mā shuld do vnto the. * Eate thy bread with ŷ hungrye and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bread and wyne vpō the burial of the rightrous, & do not thou eate and dryncke therof with the sinners. Aske euer counsel at the wyse. Deu.xxiiii.c. Mat.vii. Luc.xiiii.b.

Be alway thanckeful vnto God, and beseche him that he wil order thy wayes, and that whatsoeuer thou deuisest or takest in hande, it may remaine in him. I certifie ŷ also my sonne, that (whē thou wast yet but a babe) I deliuered ten talentes of siluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a citie of ŷ Medes, and his hand writing haue I by me: And therfore seke som meanes, how thou mayest come by him, and receaue of hym the sayd weyghte of siluer, and geue hym his hand writing againe. C

My sonne, be not afrayed: truth it is, we lead here a poore life: * but great good shal we haue, if we feare God, and depart from all sinne, and do well. Rom.viii.b.

The.v.Chapter.

The obedience of yong Tobias to his father, which is sente in to Rages. An Angell accōpanyeth with him in his iourney.

Then

A THe answered Tobias his father, and sayde: father, all that thou haste commaunded me, will I do, & that dilygently. But how I shal require this money I can not tel. Nether doth he know me, nor I him. What token shall I geue him? And as for the way thether, I neuer knew it. Thē his father aunswered him, and said: I haue his hādwrityng by me, which when thou shewest him, immediatly he shal paye the. But go thy way now, and get the some faithful man to go with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, while I am yet liuyng. Thē went Tobias out, and vpon ẏ strete he founde a faire yong man standing, girded vp, and as it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knew not that it was an angel of God, but saluted him and said: From whence art thou, ẏ good yong mā? he aunswered: Of the children of Israel.

B And Tobias saide vnto him: knowest thou the way, that leadeth vnto the coūtry of the Medes? He answered, I knowe it wel, and all those stretes haue I gone oftimes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages a citye of the Medes, which lieth vpō the mounte Egbathanis: Tobias saide vnto him: I pray the, tary for me, till I haue tolde my father these thinges. Then went Tobias in, and told his father al. At the which his father merualled, & prayed, that he would come in vnto him.

Now whē the Angel came in, he saluted him, & said: Joy be with the for euermore. And old Tobias said: what Joy cā I haue that sit here in darckenesse, & se not ẏ lyght of heauen? The yong man said vnto him:
C Be of good chere, God shal help ẏ shortly. And Tobias said vnto him: Canst ẏ bring my sōne to Gabelus, vnto the citie of Rages in Medea? And when thou commest again, I shal pay thee thy hyre. And ẏ Angel said vnto him: I shal leade thy sonne, & bring him to the again. Thē Tobias said to him: tel me I pray the of what house, or of what tribe arte thou? The Angell Raphael said vnto him: Askest thou after the kired of an hireling, or sekest thou a guide for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make the not careful, I come of ẏ Stocke of Azaria and greate Ananias thy brothers. And Tobias answered: ẏ arte come of a great kinred: but I pray ẏ, be not displeased ẏ I desire to know thy kired. The Angel said vnto him: thy sōne shal I leade forth safely, & bring him whole to ẏ again.

Then answered Tobias, & said: well, go on your way, & God be in your iourney, & his Angel beare you company. So when they had prepared all thinges, that they would take w them in their iourney, Tobias bad his father & his mother farewel, & they went on their way both together.

Now whē they wer gone, his mother began to wepe, & saide: * The staf of our age hast ẏ takē away & sent him frō vs. Would God ẏ mony had neuer bene, for ẏ which thou hast sente him away. Yf we had bene content with our pouertye, this had bene great riches vnto vs, that we saw our sōn here: Thē said Tobias vnto her: wepe not our sonne shal come to vs againe safe and sounde, and thine eyes shall se him. For I trust, ẏ the good Angel of God shal beare him company, & order wel all the thinges that he doth: so ẏ he shal come to vs again with ioye. At these wordes his mother lefte of from weping, and helde her tong. Tobi. x. a

The. vi. Chapter.

Yong Tobias is deliuered from the fishe, by the Angel. The Angell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

SO Tobias went on hys waye, & a dogge folowed him, & the first night they abode by the water of Tigris. Then went he out to wash his fete, and behold, there came forth an horrible fyshe to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayde: and cryed with a loude voice, saying: Lord, he commeth vpon me. And the Angell said vnto him: Take hym by the gill, and drawe him to thee. And he dyd so, and drew him vpon the land. And the fyshe beganne to leape at his fete. A

Thē said the Angel vnto him: take out the bowels of this fysh, & as for the heart, the gall and the liuer, kepe them by the. For these thinges are necessary and good for medicine. Tobias dyd so, and rosted ẏ fish, and they toke him with them in their iourney: the residue they salted, as muche as was sufficient for them, till they came to Rages a city of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Angel, and sayd vnto hym: I pray the brother Azaria, tel me, wherto are these thinges good of ẏ fish, that thou hast bydden me kepe? B

The Angel aunswered, him, and sayde: yf thou layest a pece of the heart vpon the coales, the smoke therof dryueth away all maner of euel spirites, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thence forth, the same shal com nomore vnto thẽ.

The gall is good to annoynt or to stryke eyes withal, where as ther is any blemish in them, so that they shalbe whole.
C And Tobias sayde vnto him, wher wilt thou that we remayne? The Angel aũswered & said: Here is a nye kinsman of thine, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath neyther sonne nor daughter but her. Al his good belongeth vnto the, & thou must mary her, & therfore desire her of her father, & he shall geue her the to wife. Thẽ answered Tobias & said: As I vnderstãd, she hath ben maried vnto .vii. husbandes, & they all are dead: and I haue heard say that the deuill slew thẽ.
I am afrayde therfore, lest suche thynges happen vnto me also: whiche yf it came to passe (seyng I am the onelye sonne of my father & my mother) I should bryng them in their age with sorowe to their graues.
D Then said the Angel Raphael vnto him: Heare me, and I wil tel the what they be, of whom the deuill hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of such a fashiõ that they shut God out from them, & from their hearte, & geue them selues to theyr own lust, euen as it wer an horse & mule, which haue no vnderstanding: vpon suche hath the deuyl power. But when thou ta-kest her, and arte come into the chamber, withholde thy selfe frõ her thre dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto nothing, but vnto prayer with her.
And in the first night, roste the liuer of the fishe, and the deuyll shall be driuen awaye. The second nyght shalt thou be re-ceaued into the company of the holy patriarkes. The third night shalt thou obtaine the blessing of God, so that whole children shalbe borne of you. After the third nighte take ỹ mayden in the feare of God, & more for the desire of children, thã for any fleshlye lust: that in the seede of Abraham thou mayest obtaine the blessing in children.

The .vii. Chapter.

Yong Tobias and the Angel come to the house of Raguel. He requireth Raguels daughter to wife, & obtaineth her.

A Then went they in to Raguel, which receaued thẽ ioyfully.
And when Raguel loked vpõ Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wife: How like is this yõg man vnto my sisters sonne? And when he had spoken this, he said: Whẽce be ye good brethren? They sayde: Of the tribe of Ne-phthaly out of he captiuitie of Niniue.
Then sayd Raguel vnto thẽ: know ye my brother Tobias? They said: yea, we know him well. And when he had spoken muche good of him, the Angel said vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou askest, is this yong mannes father.
Then Raguel bowed him selfe down, and wepte, toke him about the necke, and kyssed him, and sayd: Godds blessing haue thou my sonne, for thou art the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wife, and Sara his daughter wepte also. Now B when they had talked together, Raguell bad kil a wether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sit downe to dy-ner, Tobias sayde: I will nether eate nor drynke here this daye, except thou firste graunt me my petition, and promise me to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Ra-guell heard this, he was astonyed: for he knew, what had happened vnto the other vii. men, that went in vnto her, and he began to feare, that it shoulde chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.
And while he stode so in doubt, and gaue the yong manne no aunswere, the Angell sayd vnto him. Feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wife, therfore might none other haue her.
Then sayd Raguel: I doubte not, but God hath accepted my prayers and tea-res in hys syghte: and I truste he caused C you to com vnto me for the same intente, that this daughter of mine might bee maried in her owne kynred, accordyng to the law of Moses.
And nowe, doubt thou not, but I will geue her vnto the. So he toke the ryghte hande of his daughter and gaue her into the right hand of Tobias, and saide.
The God of Abraham, the God of Isahac, and the God of Iacob, be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfil his blessing in you. And they toke a letter and made a writing of the mariage: And then made they merry, and praysed God.
And Raguell called Anna hys wyfe vnto him, and bad her prepare another chamber, and thyther he broght Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good chere my daughter, the Lorde of Heauen geue the ioye, for the heauynesse that thou hast suffered.

The

The.viii.Chapter.

The Angel byndeth the deuil: Tobias exhorteth his wife to prayer, and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

A Now, after that they had supped, they brought ÿ yong man in to her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the Angell: & toke out of his bag, a pece of the leuer of the fishe, and layde it vpon the hote coles. So the Angell Raphael toke holde of the deuil, and sent him B away, and bounde him in the wildernesse of the hier Egipt. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin: and sayd: Up Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to day, to morow, and other morowe: for these nyghtes will we reconcile oure selues with God, & when the third holy night is past, we shal ioyne together in the dutie of mariage.
For we are the children of holy men, and we may not com together, as the Heathē, that knowe not God.
B Then stode they vp both together, and besought God earnestlye, that he woulde preserue them, And Tobias said: O Lord God of oure fathers, praysed be thou of heauen & earth, of the sea, welles, & floudes, & of al thy creatures that be therin.
Thou madest Adam of the + mould of the enia. earth, and gauest him Eue for an helper.
And now lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnesse, that I take this sister of myne to wife, but onely for ÿ loue of childre, in whom thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayde: haue mercye vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde together to a good age.
And about the cockecrowing, it happened, that Raguel called his seruauntes, and they went with him, to make a graue. For he sayd: it is chaunced nowe vnto him peraduenture, as it dyd vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wife, & saide vnto her: sende one of C thy maydens, to loke if he be dead, that I may bury him before the light day: So she sent a mayden to se: which when she came into the chāber, found them whole & soūd, sleping together. And so she came againe, & brought good tydinges. Then Raguell and Anna his wife praysed the Lord, and said: Praised be thou, O Lord God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealte mercifullye with vs, and put away from vs ÿ enemye that persecuted vs, & haste shewed mercye vnto yonder two beloued. O Lorde, cause thē to magnifie thee more perfectlye, and offer the sacrifice of thy prayse, and of their health: that al people may know that thou onely art God in all the earthe.
And immediatly, Raguel commaunded his seruauntes to fill the graue, that they D had made with earth, afore it was lyghte, and badde his wife prepare a feast, and to make ready all thinges that were necessary for meate, to such as went by the way.
He caused two fat kine also, and foure wethers to be slaine, & meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours & frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remain with him two weekes. As for all the good that he hadde, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, and made this writing, that the halfe whiche remained, shoulde fall vnto Tobias after their death.

The.ix.Chapter.

The Angel goeth to Gabelus, at the desire of Tobias: which delivereth the letter, and receaueth the money.

Then Tobias called vnto him ÿ Angell, whome he thought A to haue bene a man, and saide vnto him: Brother Azarias, I pray ÿ herkē vnto my wordes, yf I shoulde geue my selfe to be thy seruaūt, I shal not deserue thy prouidēce.
Neuerthelesse, I beseche thee, that thou wilt take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the city of Medes, & deliuer him his handwriting, and receaue the money of him, & pray him to come to my mariage. For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father doth nombre the dayes: and if I tarye one daye to long, he will be sory in his minde, Now seest thou howe earnestly Raguel hath required me, so that I can not say him nay.
Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two camels, & went vnto B Rages the citie of the Medes: & when he had found Gabelus, he gaue him his hādwriting, and receaued all the money. He told him also of Tobias ÿ sonne of Tobie, how al thinges had happened, and caused him to com with him to ÿ mariage. Now whē he came into the house of Raguel, he found Tobias sitting at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyssed one another, & Gabelus wept, & praised God, & sayd: the blessing of the God of Israell haue thee, C
for

for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iust man, & of one that feareth God, & geueth great almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe, and your elders, that ye may se your children, and your childers children, vnto the third, and fourth generatiō, and your sede be blessed of the God of Israell, with raygneth worlde without ende. And when they al had sayd, Amē: they went to the feast, but with the feare of the Lorde held they the feast of the mariage.

The.x.Chapter.

Tobias and his wife are sad for the taryng of their sonne. Raguel sendeth againe Tobias with his wife.

A Now while yong Tobias mad long tarying, by reason of the mariage, his father was full of care & heuinesse, & thought what should be the cause, that my sōne tarieth so long: Or why should he be kept so long there: Paraduenture Gabelus is dead, & no man wil geue him the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull, he & Anna his wife with him, & begā to wepe both together, bicause their sōne was not com again vnto them at the day
B appointed. As for his mother, she wept vn discōfortable teares, & sayd: Wo is me my sōne. Oh, what ayled vs to sende yͤ awaye into a strāūge countrey, thou light of our eyes, yͤ staffe of our age, yͤ comforte of our life, thou hope of our generation: Seing al yͤ thinges that we haue, ar onely in thee we should not haue sente the away frō vs.

Then Tobias cōforted her, & said: hold thy tong, & be not discomforted, our sonne is whole & sound: the man that we sēt him withal is faithful ynough. Neuerthelesse she might in no wise be cōforted, but dayly went out, loked about, and went about al yͤ stretes, wherby she thought he should come againe: that (if it were possible) she C might se him comming a farr of. But Raguel said vnto his sonne in lawe: O tarye here, & I shall send a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell him that thou art in good helth. Tobias saide vnto him: I am sure, that my father, & mother counte euery day, and that their hertes are sory.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, & woulde in no wise heare him, he deliuered Sara vnto him, and the half part of al his good, in seruauntes, & hand maydens, in shepe, in Camels, & in kine, & much money, & so sent him awaye
D frō him with peace & ioye, and sayde: The holy Aungel of the Lorde be with you in your iourney, & bring you forth safe and sounde, that ye may fynde all thynges in good case with your elders, and that mine eyes may se your children afore I dye. So the elders embraced their doughter, kissed her, & let her go, exhorting her to honoure her father and mother in law, to loue her husband, to rule wel her houshold, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe fautlesse.

The.xi.Chapter.

Yong Tobias leauing his wife and houshold in the myd waye, commeth before with the Aungell. The dreame of his mother lokyng after her sonne. He is ioyfully receaued of his father and mother. Sara commeth seuen dayes after.

As they now were going homewarde again, vpon the.xi. A daye, they came to Charra, which lieth in the halfe waye toward Niniue. And the Angel saide: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father, therfore if it please the, we two wil go before, and let yͤ houshold with they wife & the cattel come softe & faire after vs. And when Tobias was contente that they should go before, Raphael said vnto him: Take of the gaule of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gaule, & they wēt their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat daily by yͤ waye side vpon yͤ toppe B of an hil, from whence she mighte se farre aboute her. And while she was wayting there for his comming, she looked a farre of, and anone she perceaued her sonne cōming, and ranne and tolde her husbande, saying: Behold, thy sonne commeth. And Raphael saide vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest into the house, immediatly worship yͤ Lord thy God, and geue thankes vnto him: then goe to thy father, and kysse him, and stricke his eyes ouer with the gaule of yͤ fish, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure, that his eies shall streight waye be opened, & thy father shall se the light of heauen, and shall reioyce at the sight of the. Then yͤ dog that had bene with thē in their iourney, rāne before, and came as a messanger, & wagged his taile for gladnesse.

So the blind father arose, and began to C runne, and stomble with his feete, & gaue a seruaunt his hande, ranne to mete his sonne, receaued him, & kissed him, he & his wife, and they began to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshipped and thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fyshes gaule, & annoynted his fathers eyes, and taryed half an houre and then began the blemish to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene ÿ white skin of an egge: which Tobias toke & drew from his eyes, & immediatly he receaued his syght.
D Then they praysed God, he and his wife and al they that knew him. And Tobias sayd: O Lord God of Israell, I geue thee prayse and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole.

And loe, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes, came Sara his sonnes wife also whole and sounde with all the houshold & cattel, with Camels and much monye of his wyues, and with the monye that he had receaued of Gabelus, & he told hys father and his mother al ÿ benefites, which God had done for him, by the man that led him. Achyor also & Nabath, Tobias systers sonnes came, & were glad, and reioyced with him, by reason of all ÿ good that God had shewed vnto him. And so for the space of seuen dayes thei made merry, and were right ioyefull euerychone.

The.xij. Chapter.

Yong Tobias rekened vp vnto his father ÿ pleasures that the Angel dyd him. He offred vnto ÿ Angel halfe the goodes that he brought with him.

A Then Tobias called his sonne vnto him, & said: What maye we geue this holye man, that went wt thee? Tobias answered his father, & said: Father, what reward shal we geue him? Or what thing can deserue his benefites? He hath bene my guyde & brought me safe againe: he receaued the money from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife, he droue ÿ euill spirit from her, he hath bene an occasiō of gladnesse to her father and mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of ÿ fysh, he hath made thee to se ÿ light of heauen: yea, we al haue receaued greate good of him. How should we worthely deserue these thinges vnto him? But I praye thee my father, that thou wilt desire hi, yf happly he wil vouchsafe, to take with him the halfe of al that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called him, toke him asyde, & began to pray him, that he would be cōtent to take in good worth, the halfe part of al that they had brought.

B Then said he secretly vnto them. Prayse ye the God of heauen, & geue thākes vnto him before all men liuing, for he hath shewed his mercye vpon you. It is good to hyde the kynges secrets, but to shewe and prayse the workes of God, is an honourable thing. Prayer is good with fasting: & mercy is better, than to horde vp treasures of golde. For mercye delivereth from death, clenseth sinne, and causeth to finde everlasting life. But they that do synne, & unrighteousnes, are the enemyes of their own soule.

C Wherfore I tell you the trueth, and wil hide nothing frō you. When thou prayedst with teares, & buryedst the dead, & leftest thy diner, & hyddest the deade in thy house vpon the day time, that thou mightest bury them in the nyght: I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And bicause thou wast accepted & beloued of God, it was necessary, that temptation should trye thee. And now hath the Lord sent me to heale thee, and to deliuer Sara thy sonnes wife frō the euel spirit. For I am Raphael on Angel, one of the seuē that stāde before God.

When they heard this, they were sore afrayed, and trebled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto ÿ ground. Then said the Angel: Peace be wt you, feare not. Whereas I haue bene wt you it is the wil of god D praye and geue thanckes vnto him.

You thought that I did * eate & drinke with you, but I vse meate that is inuisible, and drincke that cannot be sene of mē. Now therfore is the time ÿ I must turne agayne vnto him that sent me: but be ye thanckeful vnto God, and tell out all hys wonderous workes.

Ge.xviij. a. Jud.13 c.

And when he had spoken these wordes, he was taken away out of their sight, so ÿ they sawe him no more. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces, by the space of thre houres, and praysed God: when they arose vp, they told al his wonderous workes.

The.xiij.Chapter.

Tobias the elder geueth thankes vnto God.

A Then olde Tobias opened hys mouth and prayed the Lord, and saide: Greate arte thou O Lorde for euermore, and thy kyngdome worlde without ende: for thou scourgest, and healest, thou leadest vnto hell, and bringest out agayne and there is none that may escape thyne hande. O geue thanckes vnto the Lorde, ye chyldren of Israell, and prayse hym in the syght of the heathen. For among mong the heathen whiche knowe him not, hath he scatered you, to the entent that ye shoulde shewe forth his marvelous workes, and cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God Almighty but he. He that chasteneth us for our misdedes, & for hys owne mercy sake shal he save us.

B Consider then how he hath dealte with you, and prayse him with feare & dread, & magnify ye everlasting kyng in your workes. I wil praise him even in the land of my

D captivitie, for he hath shewed his maiestie unto a sinful people. Tourne you therfore, O ye sinners, and doe righteousnesse before God, & beye sure, that he wil shew his mercy upon you. As for me, & my soule, we wil reioyse in God. O prayse the Lord all ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse and be thankeful unto him. O Jerusalem thou city of God, the Lord hath punished the, for the workes of thine owne handes. O praise the Lord in thy good thinges, & geve thanckes to the everlastyng God, yt he may build up his tabernacle agayne in the, that he may cal again unto ye, all such as be in captivity, & that thou maiest have ioy for ever more. With a faire lyght shalt thou shyne, and al the endes of the worlde shal honour the. The people shal come unto the from farre, they shal bring giftes, & worshyp the Lord in ye, and thy land shall they have for a sanctuary, for they shal cal upon the great name in the.

C Cursed shal they be that despise the, and all that blaspheme ye, shall be condempned: but blessed shal they be that builde the up. As for ye, thou shalt reioyce in thy children, for they al shalbe blessed, & gathered together unto ye Lord. Blessed are they al that love ye, & that be glad of thy peace. Praise thou the Lord, O my soule, for the Lorde our God hath delivered his citie Jerusalem from al her troubles. I wil count my selfe happy, if my sede remain to se ye clearnesse of Jerusalem. The gates of Jerusalem shall be builded with Saphire, & Smaragde, and al the compasse of her walles with precious stones. Al her streates shalbe paved with white marble ston, & in al her stretes shal Alleluia be song. Praised be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kingdom may be upon her for evermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkyng.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

Tobias prophecieth the destruction of Ninive. His sonne returneth unto Raguell, after the decease of his father and mother.

A And after that Tobias hadde gotten his syght againe, he lived .xlii. yeres, and sawe his childrens children. Now whe he was .C. and two yeare old he dyed. And was buried honorablye in Ninive. For when he was .lvi. yeares of age, he lost the light of his eyes, & whe he was .lx. yeare old, he gat his light againe. The residue of his life led he in ioy, and increased wel in the feare of god, and departed in peace. But in the hour of his death, he called unto him his sonne Tobias and .vii. yong springaldes his sonnes children, and sayde unto them. The destruction of

B Ninive is at hand, for the word of ye Lord cannot faile: and our brethren that are scattred out of the lande of Israell, shal come thyther againe. And the whole lande of it that hath bene wast, shalbe fylled: and the house of God that was brente in it, shalbe builded againe, and al such as feare God, shall retourne thyther: The heathen also shal forsake their ydols, and cam to Jerusalem, and dwel there, and all the kynges of the earth shalbe glad of her, and worshyp the Lord God of Israell.

C And therfore my children, heare your father: serve the Lorde in the truth, seke after his will, and do the thing that pleaseth him. Commaunde your children that they do right: geve almes, be myndefull of God, & ever to be thankefull unto him in trueth, with all their power: Heare me now therfore my childre & abyde not here: But in what day soever ye have buryed your mother beside me, get you from hece. For I se, that the wyckednesse of it shall bring it to destruction and ende.

D After the death of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Ninive, with his wyfe and children, and with his childrens children, and came againe to his father & mother in law, and founde the whole and in good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes, & was heire unto Raguels goodes, and saw the fifth generation, and his childrens children. And whe he was .xcix. yeare of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lord, and his kynsfolkes buried him. And all his posterity continued in a good life, and holy conversation, so that they were loved and accepted both of god and men: and of all the people of the land.

The ende of the Booke of Tobias.

The booke of Judith.

The first Chapter.

The buildyng of Ecbatanis. The victory of Nabuchodonosor against Arpharad. The messangers of Nabuchodonosor are despised.

1 Arphaxad the kyng of the Medes, subdued manye people vnto his dominiō, & builded a noble strong city, which he called Ecba-tanis: ẏ walles of it made he of free stones, foure squared, seuenty cubites highe, and thirty cubites broade. He made towers ther vpō an hundred cubites hygh. But vpon the foure corners euery side was twenty fote broad. He made ẏ portes in ẏ highth, lyke as the towers. This kyng trusted in hys mighty host, & in his glorious charettes.
So in the .xii. yeare of his raygne, it hap-B pened that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assirians (which raigned in the great city of Niniue) fought agaynst Arpharad, and ouer came him in the great fielde called Ragan, beside Euphrates & Tigris, and Hydaspes in the fielde of Arioch the king of the Elimeans.
Then was the kingdom of Nabuchodo-nosor exalted, and his heart was lift vp: & he sent vnto al them that dwelt in Cilicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, & to the Heathen that dwelt in Carmell & Cedar, & to D such as dwelt in Galile in the great fielde of Esdrelon, to all them that dwell in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordan vnto Jerusalem, and the whole lande of Gessē, vnto the mountaines of Ethiopia.
Unto all these did Nabuchodonosor the king of the Assirians sende messangers.
But they al with one cōsent would not a-gre vnto him, & sent the messangers again empty, and put thē away without honor.
Thē Nabuchodonosor the king toke indignation at al those landes, & sware by his throne, & by his kingdom, that he would be auenged of all those coūtries. And whē he had slayne Arphaxad in the mountaynes of Ragan, he returned to Niniue. And ther feasted his souldiers an hundred and twenty dayes.

The .ii. Chapter.

Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the worlde. The preparation and pursute of Holofernes.

In the .xiii. yeare of king Na- A buchodonosor, vpon the .xii. daye of the first Moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonosor ẏ kyng of the Assirians, ẏ he would defend himselfe. So he called vnto him al ẏ elders, all his captaines, & men of warre, and shewed thē all his secrete counsaile, & told them ẏ his purpose was, to bring the whole earth vnder his dominion. Nowe when they wer al contēt with this saying.
Nabuchodonosor ẏ kyng called Holofernes, ẏ chief captaine of his warres, & sayd vnto him: Go thy way forth against all ẏ kingdoms of the West, & specially against those ẏ haue dispised my cōmaundement.
Thou shalt spare no realme, al strōg cities shalt thou bryng in subiection vnto me.
Then Holofernes called together al the captaines, & rulers of al the power in As- B siria, & mustred ẏ souldiours vnto the host (like as the kyng cōmaunded him) namely an hundred & .xx. thousand fighting mē vpō fote, and .xii. thousand archers vpon horsback. And al his ordinaunce sent he afore with an innumerable multitude of camels, so ẏ the host was well prouided for, with oxen and small cateil, & that without nūbre. He caused corne to be prepared out of al Siria for his host. Much gold & siluer also toke he out of the kinges house.
So he toke his iourney, he & all his hoste with charrettes, & horsmē, and archers, of whō ther wer so many, that they couered the ground of ẏ lande, like ẏ grashoppers.
And when he was gone paste the borders of the Assirians, he came toward the great mountaynes of Ange, whiche lyeth vpon the left syde of Cilicia: and so went vp into all their castels, and wōne euery D strong holde. As for the welthy citie of Melothus, he brake it downe, and spoy-led al ẏ children of Tharsis, and ẏ Ismalites, whiche lay toward the wildernesse,
and

and vpon the south side of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also & came into Mesopotomia, and brake downe all the high cities that were there, from the broke of Mambre to the sea: and he toke the borders in from Cilicia, vnto ÿ costes of Iaphet towarde the south: He caryed away all the Madianites, and spoyled all their goodes, and whosoeuer withstode him, he slew them with the swearde.

After this he went downe into the field of Damascus in the time of haruest, and brent vp al the corne and al the trees, and caused the vines to be cut downe. And the feare of him fell vpon al them that dwelte vpon the earth.

The.iii.Chapter.

Kinges become willingly subiect to Holofernes. The tiranny and cruelty of him.

A SO the kynges and princes of all cities and lãdes, sent their Ambasadours: namely, they of Siria and Mesopotamia, Siria, Sobal and Libia, and Celicia, whiche came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wrath cease towarde vs. It is better for vs to serue ÿ great kyng Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiect vnto the, thẽ that we should dye, & to be slayne: & receaue greater hurt. Al our cities and possessions, al mountaines and hilles, fieldes, great and smal, catel, shepe, goates, horses, & camels, all our goodes, & housholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it altogether. We our selues also, and our children wyl be thine owne, come vnto vs a peaceable Lorde, and vse oure seruice at thy pleasure.

B Then came Holofernes downe frõ the moũtaines with horsmen, & great power, and conquered all the strong fenced cities and all that dwelt in the land, and out of al cities he toke strong men, and suche as wer mete for the war to helpe him. There came such a feare also vpon al those countryes, that the indwellers of all the cities, the princes & rulers, and the people together went forth to mete him as he came, and receiued him honourably with garlãdes and torches, with daunces, tabrettes and pypes.

C Neuerthelesse, though they dyd this, yet might they not swage his rigorous stomacke: but he destroyed their cities, and hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the king had cõmaunded him that he shuld rote out al ÿ gods of the lãd: to the entent that he onely might be called and taken for the god of ÿ nacions whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So went he thorow Siria Sobal, and thorow al Apamia, and al Mesopotamia, and came to the Idumeans, in the land of Gabaa, and Septopoly, and toke their cities, and remained ther.xxx. daies, wherin he caused al the whole multitude of his host to be gathered togither.

The.iiii.Chapter.

Israel requireth the helpe of god against Holofernes. They fast and praye.

When the children of Israell ÿ dwelte in Iewrye heard this, A they wer sore afrayed of him. There came such trembling & feare also vpon them lest that he shuld do vnto the city of Ierusalẽ, and to the temple of the Lord, as he had done vnto other cities and their temples. So they sent into all Samaria rounde about vnto Iericho, to take in and occupy al the toppes of the mountaines, and make fast the tounes with walles, & prepared corne for them against the batel.

Ioachim also the priest, wrote vnto all thẽ that dwelt toward Esdrelon (whiche lyeth ouer against the great fielde of Dothaim) & vnto al those by whom mẽ might haue passage vnto them, that they shoulde take in ÿ wayes of the mountaines, wherby there might be any way and passage to Ierusalem, and that they shuld holde diligẽt watch wher any straite was betwixt the mountaines. And ÿ children of Israel dyd as Ioachim the priest of ÿ Lorde had commaunded thẽ. And al the people cried earnestly, & humbled their soules with fastinges & prayers, they and their wyues. The priestes put on hery clothes, & layed the yong babes before ÿ temple of ÿ lord, and couered ÿ aulter of the Lorde with an hery clothe. And w one accorde they cryed B vnto the Lord God of Israel, ÿ their children shuld not be geuen into a praye, and their wiues into a spoile, that their cities should not be layed wast, & that their sanctuary shuld not be vnhalowed, & so they to be a shame & rebuke vnto the Heathen.

Then Ioachim the hie priest of the lord went round about all Israell, and spake vnto thẽ, saying: Be ye sure, that the lorde will heare your petitions, if ye continue stedfast in fastynges & prayers in ÿ syght of the Lorde. Remembre Moses the seruaunt ment of ẏ Lord, which ouerthrew ẏ Amalechites (ẏ trusted in their might & power, in their host, shilds, charettes & horsmen) not with weapons, but with holy praiers.

Euen so shall all the enemyes of Israell be, if ye continue in this worcke, that ye haue begõne. So vpon this exhortation, they continued in prayer before the Lord: In so much that they whiche offred burnt sacrifices vnto the lorde, offred the offerings vnto the Lord, beyng araied in hery clothes, and had ashes vpon their heades.
And they all besoughte God from their whole hert, that he woulde visite his people of Israell.

The.v. Chapter.

Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes. Achior sheweth vnto Holofernes ẏ maruailes of God done vnto the Jewes, for the which thing the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with him.

AND worde came to Holofernes (the prince of the 1 war of the Assirians) that the children of Israel prepared thẽ selues to make resistance, and howe they had stopped the wayes be-twene the mountaines. Then was he exceading wroth, and called all the princes of Moab, and the captaines of Ammon, & sayd vnto them: Tell me, what people is this, that kepeth in the mountaines? Or what maner of cities are they? What is their power? Or what maner of host haue they? Who is their captaine? And why do they dispise vs (more than all those that dwell in the Easte) and come not forth to mete vs, that they might receaue vs with peace? Then Achior the captaine of all the Ammonites answered, and said: Sir, if it please the to heare, I will tel the truth before thee, cõcerning this people that dwel in the mountaines, and ther shal no lye go out of my mouth.

This people is of the generation of the Chaldees: they dwelt firste in Mesopota-B mia, for they would not folow the goddes of their fathers that were in the land of ẏ Chaldees, and so forsoke they the customes of their forefathers (which had many goddes) and worshypped one God, that made heauen & earth: which also cõmaunded them that thei should go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Nowe when there came a dearth into the whole lande, they went downe into Egipte, and there they Gen.xv.c dwelt *four hũdred yeres, in ẏ which they multiplied so greatly, ẏ theyr hoste might Exo.xii.f not be numbred. And whẽ the kyng of E- Act.vii.a gipt oppressed them, and subdued them in Gal.iii.c building of his cities with making of clay & bryke, they cried vnto God theyr Lorde, which punished the whole lande of Egipt with diuerse plages.

Now when the king of Egipt let them go their way, and the plage ceased, & then folowed after thẽ, to take them, & to bring them againe into his seruice, while they were flying awaye, the God of heauen opened the sea, so that the waters stode fast vpon both sides as a wall, and these went thorow the botome of the sea drye shod.
In the which place when an innumerable people of the Egiptiãs folowed vpon thẽ, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters: that there remained not one, to tell them that came after, howe it happened. C So whẽ this people was passed thorow ẏ red sea, they came into the wildernesse of the mount Sinai, where neuer mã might dwel afore, and wher the sonne of mã had neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that thei might drynke, and forty yeares had they meate frõ heauen. Wheresoeuer they went (without bow and arowe, without buckeler or swerde) their God fought for them, & caused them to haue the victory. Yea, no man was able to hurte this people, except it were so, that they departed vnfaithfullye from the worshippyng of the Lorde their God. But as ofte as thei worshipped any other beside their God, he gaue them ouer to be spoiled, to be slayne, and to be put to D confusion. Neuerthelesse, as ofte as they were sorye for their departinge from the worship of their God, ẏ same God of heauen gaue thẽ power and strength to withstande their enemyes.

Moreouer, they slew the king of ẏ Ca-nanites, Jebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Euites, and Amorites, and all the mighty in Hesbon, and toke their landes & cities in possession: and so long as thei sinned not in the sight of their God, it went wel with thẽ, for their god hateth vnrighteousnes.
For in times past when they went oute of E the waye, which God had geuẽ them, that they should walke in it, they were destroied in diuers battailes of many nations: and many of them were caried awaye prisoners vnto a straunge countrey. But now lately they haue turned themselues againe vnto the Lord their God, and are come together againe out of the countries when they were scatered abrode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaines, & dwell therin: and as for Jerusalem where their Sanctuary is, they haue it againe in possession.

And therfore my Lord, make diligente inquisition, if this people haue done wickednesse in the sight of their God, then let vs go vp against them, for doubtlesse their God shall deliuer them into thy handes, & subdue them vnto thy power: But if this people haue not displeased their God, we shall not be able to withstande them: for F their God shall defende them, and so shall we be a shame to al the worlde.

Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, all the great men of Holofernes wer wroth, and thought to slay him, & said on to another: What is he, this which dare saye, that the children of Israell are able to withstande Nabuchodonozor the king, and his hoste? where as they are an vnweaponed people, without stregth, or vnderstanding of the feates of warre. That Achior therefore maye know that he hath disceaued vs, we will go vp into the mountaines: and when the mighty men of them are taken, he also shalbe sticket with the sweard, that al people may know, that Nabuchodonozor is the god of the earth, and that ther is none other without him.

The.vi.Chapter.

Achior is cōmitted vnto the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tre, but losed of the Jews. The prayer for the people. Achior is cōforted of the Jewes.

So when they had left of speakyng, Holofernes toke sore A indignatiō, and said vnto Achior: For so muche as thou hast prophecied vnto vs, saying: that the people of Israell shalbe defended of their God, I will shew the, that ther is no God but Nabuchodonozor: Yea, when we slay thē al (as one man) thou also shalt perish with them thorow the sweard of the Assirians, and all Israel shalbe destroyed with the, & then thou shalt fele that Nabuchodonozor is the lord of the whole earth. Then shal the sweard of my knyghthode go thorow thy sides, & thou shalt fal down sticket among the wounded of Israel, and shalt not com to thy selfe again, but be vtterly destroied with thē. But if thou thinckest thy prophecye to be true, why doest thou B the chaunge thy coloure, why art thou afrayde? Thynckest thou that my wordes are not able to be perfourmed? But the thou mayest know, that thou shalte fele these thinges with thē, behold, from this houre forth wyll I sende the to yonder people, that when the punishemēt of my sweard (which they haue worthily deserued) falleth vpō them, thou mayest be punished with them.

So Holofernes commaūded his seruauntes to take Achior, & to cary him vnto Bethulia, & to deliuer him into the handes of the children of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke him, & went thorow the plaine feld. But when they drew nie vnto the mountaines, the slyng casters came out against them. Neuerthelesse, they gat thē away by the side of the moūtaine, & bound Achior hande and fote to a tree, and so left him bounde with withes, and turned agayne vnto their Lorde.

Notwithstanding, the children of Israel went downe frō Bethulia, came vnto him losed him, brought him into Bethulia, set him in the myddest of the people, & asked him what the matter was, that the Assiriās had left him bounde.

Ozias, the sonne of Micha, of the tribe of Simeon and Charmin (whiche is also called Gothoniel) were the principall rulers at the same time. Now when Achior C stoode in the middest of the Senatours, and before them al, he told them, what answer he gaue Holofernes to the thing that he asked him, and how Holofernes people would haue slayne him for so saying: and how Holofernes himselfe was wroth and commaunded him for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the children of Israell, he myght commaunde Achior also to be put to death with diuers tormentes, bycause he said: the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achior had playnely tolde out all these thinges, al the people fel down vpon their faces, praising the Lorde, and powred out their prayers together vnto the Lorde, with a general complainte, and wepinge, and said: O Lord God of heauē and of earth, behold their pryde: and loke vpon oure lowlynesse, and consider howe D it standeth with thy saintes, and make it to be knowē, that thou forsakest not those which hold them fast by the, and how that thou bringest them low, the presume of them selues, and make theyr boast in their own strength. So when the wepyng & prayer of the people (whiche they had made the whole daye long) was ended, they conforted Achior, saying: The God of oure fathers, whose power and strēgth thou hast praysed, shal so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather ther se their destruction. When the lord our God then shall geue his seruauntes this libertie: God be also with the among vs: so that if it please thee, thou with all thine mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Ozias had ended the counsaile, he toke him into his house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it: and so they refreshed them selues after the fasting. And afterward was all ẏ people called together, whiche made their prayers all the night long in the cõgregation, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The.vii.Chapter.

Bethulia is besieged of Holofernes. The people requireth helpe of God. They of Bethulia woulde geue ouer the citie for want of water. The prayer of of the people with teares and lamentation.

The next day. Holofernes cõmaunded his host to go vp a-1 gainst Bethulia. There were an.C.&.xx.M.fyghting men on foote, and.xxii. thousande horsmen, besyde the preparing of thẽ that C were won, and came to them on euery side out of the cõutreyes & cities which he had taken. Al these prepared them selues vnto the battaile against the Israelites, & came on by the hil syde, vnto ẏ toppe that loketh ouer against Dothain, from ẏ place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lieth toward Esdraelon.
Now when the children of Israell sawe so great a multitude of the Assirians, they B fel down flat vpõ the ground, strawed asshes vpon their heades, & praied with one accorde, that ẏ God of Israel would shew his mercy vpon his people. And so they toke their weapons, & sat betwene ẏ mou-taines in the narow place, & kept the way day & nighte. But while Holofernes was going aboute, he found the water spring, which from the South side was conuaied into the citie by a condite: this cõmaunded he, to be directe an other waye, and to cut their cõdite in sonder. There wer wels also not far frõ the wals, which they vsed secretly, more for pleasure thã for necessity.
Then went the Amonites, & the Moabites vnto Holofernes, and said: The chil-C dren of Israell trust nether in speare nor arow, but haue taken in, & kepe the moun-taines and hilles, ẏ thou mayest not easily ouercom thẽ: therfore without ẏ strikyng of anye batell set men to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them: so shalt thou destroye them without sweard, or at the least they shalbe so feble that they must be faine to geue ouer the citie, which they thyncke not able to be wonne: for so muche as it lyeth in ẏ mountaines. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and all his men of war, and he set an.C.at euery well rounde aboute.
And whẽ this watch had endured twenty dayes, the Cesterns & al that had water D failed them that dwelt in the citie of Be-thulia, so that in the whole citie they had not drincke ynoughe for one daye, for the people had water geue thẽ daily in a measure. Thẽ came the men & wemen, yong personnes and children all vnto Ozias, & sayd all with one voice: God be iudge be-twixte vs and the, for thou hast dealte euil with vs: thou wouldest not speake peaceably with the king of ẏ Assirians, therfore hath God solde vs into their handes, & there is no man to helpe vs where as we are brought downe before their eyes in thirst & great destructiõ. Therfore gather now together all the people that be in the citie, ẏ we may all yelde our selues williglye vnto ẏ people of Holofernes, for better it is ẏ we be captiue and praise ẏ Lord with our liues, than to be slayne & perish, and to be laughed to scorne & shamed of euery man when we se our wiues & children dye before our eyes. We take heauen and earth this day to recorde: and the God of our fathers (which punisheth vs accor-dyng, to the deseruing of our sinnes) and gyue you warning, that ye gyue vp the ci-tie now into ẏ power of Holofernes hoste, that our ende may be shorte wt the sweard which els shall endure long, for wante of water and for thirst.
When thei had spoken out those wordes, E there was a great weping & howling in ẏ whole cõgregation, & that of euery man: & they cried an whole houre lõg vnto god with one voice, saiyng: we haue sined with our fathers, we haue done amisse, we haue delte wickedly. Thou that arte gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punish our vnrighte-ousnesse with thine owne scourge, & geue not those ouer that knowlegde thee, vnto a people which know the not, lest they say among the Heathen: Wher is their God?
And when they were so wery with thys crying and weppyng, that they held their tonges, Ozias stode vp with watery eyes and said: O take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fiue dayes for mercy of the Lord, paraduenture he shall put away his indignation, and geue glory vnto his name. But if he helpe vs not when these fiue dayes are past, we shal do as ye haue sayd.

The.viii.Chapter.

Of the vertuous woman Judith: which reproueth the auncientes bycause they tempted the Lord. She also moueth them to encourage and hartē the people, and sheweth her counsell against the enemyes of the Jewes.

A And it happened when these wordes came to the eares of Judith a wyddowe, whiche was the daughter of Merari the sonne of Idox, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Osia, the sonne of Elay, the sonne of Jammur, the sonne of Jedeon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, the sōne of Enam, the sonne of Nathania, the sōne of Salathiel, the sonne of Simeon, the sōne of Ruben. And her husbande was called Manasses, which died in the dayes of the barly haruest. For while he was byndyng sheues togither in the field, the heat came vpon his heade, and he dyed at Bethulia, his citie, and there was he buryed beside his fathers.

Now was Judith his desolate widdow thre yeres and sixe monethes. And in the hier partes of her house, she made her self a preuie chābre, wher she dwelt, being closed in w her maydēs. She ware a smocke of here, and fasted al the dayes of her life, except the Sabbothes, and new Mones: & the solēpne daies that ẏ people of Israel B kept. She was a very faire & beautifull persō. Her husbād also had left her great riches, a plēteous houshold great vnmouea-ble possessions & many catel. This Judith was a woman of a very good reporte w euery one, for she feared the Lord greatly and there was no body that spake an euill word of her. Whē Judith heard this, how Ozias, had promised the people, that after the fift day he wold geue vp the citie vnto the Assirians, she sent for the elders, Chā-bri and Charmi, and when they came to her, she said: what thing is this, wherin O-zias hath consented, that if God helpe not within fyue dayes, he will geue ouer the citie to the Assirians. What are ye, that ye tempte the Lord? This deuice obtayneth no mercie of God, but prouoketh him to wrath and displeasure. Will ye set ẏ mercy of the Lord a time, & appoint him a day after your will?

Neuerthelesse, for so much as the Lord C is pacient, let vs rather repente, pouring out teares, & beseching him of grace. For God threateneth not as a mā, nether will he be prouoked vnto wrath as the childre of men. And therefore let vs hertelye fall down before him, & serue him with a meke spirite, & with weping eyes, saye vnto the Lord, that he deale with vs according to his owne wil and mercy: that like as oure herte is now vexed, and brought low tho-row the pride of thē, it may be so cōforted thorow his grace: in so much as we folow not the sinnes of our fathers, whiche forsoke their God, & worshipped other God-des: for the whiche sinne they perished w the sweard, were spoiled & brought to shame, of all their enemies. As for vs, we know none other God but onely him, for whose cōfort let vs tary with mekenesse.
He shall require & make inquisitiō for our bloud, from the vexations of our enemies he shal bring downe all the Heathen that ryse vp against vs, and put them to disho-nour, euen the Lord our God.

Therfore deare brethren, seyng ye are the D honourable & elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respect, & vpon whom the life of the people standeth, lyft vp their hertes with your exhortatiō, that they may cal to remembraunce, howe our fathers also in times past wer tēpted, that they might be proued, if thei worshipped their God a right. They ought to remēbre, how *our father Abraham beyng Gen tempted, & tried thorow many tribulatiōs was foūd a louer & frend of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and al they ẏ pleased God, being tried thorow many troubles, were founde stedfast in faith. Againe, they that receaued not their tēptations with the feare of God, but put thē selues forth with vnpacientye & murmuryng against God, perished of the destroyer, and wer slaine of serpentes. And therfore should not we vndertake to be auenged, for the thing that is done vnto vs: but to consider, that al these punishmētes are far lesse than oure sinnes & mysdedes.
Beleuing also that this correction commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of god) for amendement, and not for our destruction.

Then said Ozias, & the elders vnto Ju- E dith: Al that thou speakest is true, and no man can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therefore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and fearest God. And Judith sayde vnto them: Seyng ye know that my wordes are of God, thē proue my councel and deuise, if it be of God: and beseche God, that he will bring my counsell to good ende.

Thus haue I deuised: ye shall stande this night before the porte, and I will goe forth with Abra my mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God: that he wil graciously remember his people of Israell within fiue dayes, as ye haue said. As for the thing ŷ I go in hande with al, aske ye no questiōs of it, till I open it vnto you my selfe: doye nothing els but pray vnto the Lorde your God for me. Thē Ozias, the Prince of the people of Iuda, said vnto her: Go thy way in peace, the Lord be with ŷ that we maye be auenged of oure enemyes. And so they went from her agayne.

The .ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Iudith for the victorye.

A Now when they wer gone their waye, Iudith went into her closet, put on an hearye smocke, strawed asshes vpon her heade, fel downe before the Lord, & cryed vnto him, saying: O Lord God of my father Simeon, which gauest him a sweard for a defence against the enemies, that vsed violence & wilfulnesse, and that rauished ŷ virgine, and put her to dishonestie. Thou that gauest their wiues into a pray, & their daughters into captiuity, & all their pray, for a spoile vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zele vnto thee: helpe me a wyddowe, O Lord my God, I beseche the. For thou hast done al thinges from the beginnyng: and loke what thou hast taken in hand & deuised, it came euer to passe. For al thy wayes are prepared, & thy iudgemētes are done in thy euerlastig foreknowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assirians, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtime to loke vpon the host of the Egiptians, whē thei being weaponed persecuted thy seruauntes, & put their trust in their charettes, horsemen & in the multitude of their menne of warre. But thou lokedest vpon their hoste, casting a thycke darcknesse before thē: & whē they came into the depe, ŷ waters ouerwhelmed thē.

Gen. 34. b.

Euen so Lord, let it go with these, ŷ trust B in the power and multitude of their men of warre, in their charettes, arrowes, and speares: & know not, that thou onely arte our God, which destroyest warres from the beginning, & that thou art the Lord.

O lift vp thine arme now, like as euer frō the beginning, & in thy power, bring their power to nought: cause their might to fall in thy wrath. They make their bost, that they wil vnhalow & defile thy Sanctuary, and to wast ŷ tabernacle of thy name, and to cast downe ŷ horne of thyne aulter with their sweard. Bring to passe (O lord) that the pride of thine enemy maye be cut downe with his owne sweard, that he may be taken with the snares of his eyes in me and that thou mayest smyte him with the loue of my lippes. O geue me a stedfaste mynde, that I maye dispise him and hys strength, and that I may destroye him.

This shall bring thy name an euerlastig C remembraunce, if the hand of a womā ouerthrow him. For thy power (O Lord) standeth not in the power of men neither hast thou any pleasure in ŷ strength of horses. Ther was neuer proud persone ŷ pleased the, but in the praier of the humble & meke hath thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauen, thou maker of the waters, and Lord of all creatures heare me pore woman, calling vpon the, & putting my trust in thy mercy. Remembre thy couenaūt, O Lord, and minister wordes in my mouthe, and stablishe this deuise in my hert, that thy house may continue still in holinesse, and that all the Heathen may know, that thou art god, & that there is none other but thou.

The .x. Chapter.

Iudith decketh her self to go to Holofernes. The blessing that the elders gaue Iudith. Holofernes is in loue with Iudith.

And whē she had left of crying A vnto the Lord, she rose vp frō the place, where she had lyen flat before the Lord, and called her mayden, went downe into her house, layd the heary cloth from her, put of the garmētes of wyddowhode, washed her body, anoynted her selfe with precious thinges, of swete sauoure: broyded and platted her heer, set an houe vpon her heade, and put on such apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slyppers vpon her fete, armellettes, spanges, earinges, fyngerringes, and decked her selfe with al her best araye.

The Lord gaue her also a special beautie and fairenesse (for all this deckyng of her selfe, was not done for any voluptuousnesse and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discretion & vertue, therfore did the Lord increase her beauty,)so that she was exceading amiable,and welfauoured in al mens eyes. She gaue her mayde also a bottell of wyne, a pot with oyle, pottage, cakebread and chese,and went her waye.

B Now when she came to the porte of the citie,she founde Ozias, and the elders of the citie wayting there.Which when they saw her,they were astonied,and maruailed greatly at her beautie. Neverthelesse, they asked no questiō at her,but let her go, saying:The God of our fathers geue thee his grace,and with his power perfourme all the deuise of thy hert, that Jerusalem may reioyce ouer thee,and that thy name may be in the numbre of the holy & righteous.And al they that were ther,said with one voice:so be it:so be it.Judith made her praier vnto the Lord,and went out at the porte,she and her mayde.

And as she was going downe ẏ mountaine,it happened that about the spring of the day,the spies of the Assiriās met with her,and toke her,saying:whence commest thou?Or whither goest thou?She answered:I am a daughter of the Hebrues,and am fled from them,for I know that they shalbe geuē vnto you to be spoiled:bicause they thought scorne to yelde themselues vnto you,that they might fynde mercy in your sighte. Therfore, haue I deuised by my selfe after this maner:I wil go before the Prince Holofernes, & tell him al their secretes,and will shew him,how he maye com by them,and winne them,so that not one man of his Hoste shall perish.

C And whē these men had heard her wordes,and considred her faire face,they wer astonyed(for they wondred at her excellēt beautye)& said vnto her: Thou hast saued thy life by finding out this deuice, ẏ thou wouldest com downe to our Lord:and be thou sure, that when thou commest vnto him,he shal intreate the wel,& thou shalte please him at the hert. So they brought her into Holofernes pauilion, & tolde him of her. Now when she came in before him immediatly he was ouercome, & taken wt her beauty.Thē said his seruauntes:who would dispise ẏ people of the Jewes, that haue so faire wemen? Shulde we not by reason fight against thē for these?So whē Judith saw Holofernes,sitting in a canapie that was wrought of purple,silcke, gold,Smaragde,and precious stones,she loked fast vpō hi,& fel down vpon ẏ earth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp againe at their lordes commaundement.

The.xi Chapter.

Holofernes requireth of Judith the cause of her comming,which geueth him a subtell answere.

A Then sayd Holofernes vnto her,be of good chere, and feare not in thine hert; for I neuer hurt man ẏ would serue Nabuchodonozor ẏ kyng. As for thy people,if they had not dispised me,I shuld not haue lift vp my speare against them. But tell me now,what is the cause that thou arte departed from them,and wherfore arte thou came vnto vs.

B And Judith said vnto him:Sir,vnderstande the wordes of thy handemayde,for yf thou wilt doe after the wordes of thy hādmayden,the Lord shal bring thy matter to a prosperous effecte:as truely as Nabuchodonozor the lord of the lande lyueth,& as truly as his power liueth,which is in thee,to the punishment of al men that go wronge,al men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the, but all the beastes also of the field. For all the people spake of thy prudēt actiuitie:& it hath euer bene reported,how thou onely art good & mightye in all his kingdome, and thy discretion is commended in all landes.

The thing is manifest also, that Achior spake,and it is well knowen, what thou commaūdedst to do vnto him. For this is plaine and of a suretye, ẏoure God is so wrath with vs(by ẏ reason of our sinnes) that he hath shewed by his Prophetes vnto the people,how that for their sinnes he will deliuer them ouer vnto the enemies. And for so much as the children of Israel, knowe that they haue so displeased their God,they are sore afrayed of thee.

C They suffre great hunger also, and for want of water,thei are dead now in a maner. Moreouer,they are appointed to slay all their cattel,that they maye drincke the bloud of them,and are purposed to spende all ẏ holy ornamētes of their God(which he hath forbydden them to touch)for corne wyne and oyle. Seing now,that they doe these thinges,it is a playne case,that they must nedes be destroyed. Which when I thy handemayden perceaued, I fled from them,and the Lord hath sent me vnto the, to shew the these thinges. For I thy hādmaiden worship God euē now here beside the,and thy handmayden shall go forth,& I will make my prayer vnto God, and he shall tell me when he wil reward thē their sinne:then shall I come and she w the,and bring the thorow the middest of Jerusalē, so that thou shalt haue al the people of Israel, as ẏ shepe without a shepeherd: there shall not so muche as one dogge barcke agaynst the, for these thinges are shewed me, by the prouidence of God: and forsomucheas God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to tel thee thesame.

These wordes pleased Holofernes and B all his seruauntes, whiche maruailed at ẏ wisdome of her, and saide one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon earth, in beautie and discretiō of wordes. And Holofernes said vnto her: God hath done wel that he hath sēt ẏ hyther before thy people that thou maiest geue thē into our hādes.

And forsomuchas thy promise is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, & thou shalte be excellent and great in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shalbe spoken of in all the lande.

The.xii. Chapter.

Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be wel entreated. She desireth licence to go out in the nighte season to pray, and obtayneth it. Vagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banket, and she commeth. Holofernes is dronken.

A Then cōmaunded he her to go in, wher his treasure lay, and charged that she should haue her dwelling there, & appointed what should be geuen her from his table. Judith aunswered him, & sayd: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I may not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but will eate of suche as I haue brought with me. Then said Holofernes vnto her: yf these thinges that thou haste brought with the fayle, what shall we do vnto vnto the?

And Judith sayd: As truely as thou lyuest my Lorde, thy handmayden shall not spēd al this, till god haue brought to passe in my hand the thinges ẏ I haue deuised.

So his seruauntes brought her into the B tent, where as he had appointed. And as she was goinge in, she desired ẏ she mighte haue leaue to goe forth by night, & before day to her prayer, and to make intercessiō vnto the Lord. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaines, that she should go out and in at her pleasure, to pray vnto God those thre dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth into the vally of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the wel water. Then went she vp, and besought the lord God of Israel, ẏ he woulde prospere her waye, for the deliueraunce of his people. And so she went in, & remayned cleane in her tent, till she toke her meate in the euening.

Upon the fourth day it happened, ẏ Holofernes made a supper vnto his seruaūtes, and sayde vnto Vagao his chamber- C laine: Go thy waye, and counsel this Hebruesse, that she may be willing to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assirians, that a womā shoulde so laugh a man to scorne that she were come from him vnmedled withall.

Then went Vagao vnto Judith, & sayd: Let not the good daughter be afrayde, to come into my lord, that she may be honoured before him, that she may eate & drinke wine, and be mery with him. Unto whom Judith answered: Who am I, ẏ I shoulde saye my Lorde naye: What soeuer is good before his eyes, I shal do it: and loke what is his pleasure, ẏ shal I thinke well done, as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and deckt her selfe with her apparel, and went in, and stode before D him. And Holofernes hearte was whole moued, so that he brent in desire towarde her. And Holofernes said vnto her: drinck now and sit downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then said Judith: Sir, I wil drincke, for my mynde is meryer to daye, than euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, & dyd eate & drincke before him, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her: And Holofernes was mery with her, & dranke more wine than euer he dyd afore in his life.

The.xiii. Chapter.

Holofernes slepeth for very dronckēnes, and Judith cutteth of his head, and goeth therewith to her owne people, of whō she is receaued with ioy. They geue thanckes vnto God for their deliueraunce. Judith speaketh vnto Achior. Whiche maruayleth at her feate done to Holofernes.

Now when it was late in the nighte, his seruauntes made A hast euery mā to his lodging. And Vagao shut the chāber dores, and went his way, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he lay vpon ẏ bed all dronkē, and of very dronkennesse fel a slepe.

Then commaūded Judith her mayden, to stand without before ẏ dore, & to waite. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng her prayer with teares, and moued her lippes secretly, & said: Strengthe me, Lorde God of Israel, and haue a respect vnto y workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp the citie of Jerusalem, like as thou hast promised, O graunt that by thee I may performe y thing, which I haue deuised thorow y beliefe that I haue in the, And when she had spoken this, she went to the bedsteade, & loosed y swearde, that hanged vpon it, & drew it out. Then toke she holde of the heary lockes of his head, & said: strengthen me, O lord God in B this houre, & with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of hys head. Thē toke she the canapie away, and rolled the dead bodye asyde. Immediatlye she gotte her forth, and deliuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two went forth together after their custome, as thoughe they would pray, & so passed by y host, & came thorowe the vallye vnto the porte of the citie. And Judith cryed a far of vnto y watchmē vpō the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, whiche hath shewed hys power in Israell. And when they hearde her voice, they called the elders of the citie together. And they came all to mete her: litle and great, yōg & old, for they thought not that she should haue come so sone. So they lighted candels, and gathered about her euerychone: but she wēt vp into an hie place, and caused silence to be proclaymed.

When euery man now held his tonge, C Judith said: O praise the Lorde our god, for he hath not dispised, nor forsaken them that put theyr trust in him, and in me hys hādmayden he hath perfourmed his mercy which he promised vnto y house of Israel: yea, in my hand this same night hath he slaine the enemye of his people.

And with that she toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, saying: Behold the head of Holofernes the captaine of the Assirians, and this is the canapi, wherin he laye in hys dronckenesse: where the Lorde oure God hath slayne him by the hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord lyueth, hys angel hath kept me, going thither, remay-ning there, and comming hyther againe frō thence. And y Lord hath not suffered me his handemayden to be defyled, but without any filthynesse of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: and that w great victorye, so that I am escaped, and ye deliuered. O geue thankes vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

So they praised the Lord all together, and gaue thankes vnto him. And to her they saide: The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thorow y he hath brought our enemyes to nought. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of the people of Israell, sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lorde y hye God, aboue all wemen vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lord, the maker of heauē D and earth, which hath guyded the aryght to wounde and smite of y head of the captaine of our enemies. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy praise shall neuer com out of the mouth of menne, whiche shall alway remembre the power of y Lord, seyng thou hast not spared thine owne selfe, but put the in ieoperdye, considering the anguishe and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped their fall before God our Lorde. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, and he came.
Then sayd Judith vnto him: The God of E Israel vnto whom thou gauest witnesse, that he would be auenged of his enemies, euen he hath this night thorowe my hand smitten of the head of all the vnfaithfull.
And that thou mayest se that it is so, behold, this is y head of Holofernes, whiche in his presumptuous pride, dispised y God of y people of Israel, and threatened thee with destruction, saying: when the people of Israel is taken, I shal cause the also to be sticke with the sweard. When Achior saw Holofernes head, he fel downe vpon his face to the grounde, for very anguishe and feare, so that he sowned withall.

But after that he was come againe to him selfe, he fel down before her, and praised her, saying: Blessed art thou of thy god in all the Tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israell bicause of thee.

The.xiiii.Chapter.

The counsaile of Judith. Achior being an Heathen man, turneth to God. The Assiriās are afraied of the Jewes.

IUdith said vnto all the peo- A ple: brethen, heare me. Stick vp this head vpon our wal-les, and when the sunne ariseth, take euery mā his weapon, and fall out violentlye:

not as though ye would go beside them, but to rūne vpon them with violence. Whē the spyes in the tentes se this, they shal of necessitie be compelled to flee backwarde, and to raise vp their captaine to battaile. So when their captaines come into Holofernes paulion, and finde the dead body wrapped in the bloud, fearfulnesse shal fall vpon them, and whē ye perceaue that they fle, folow them, without all care for god shall deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed. Then Achior seyng the power of God which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel fell of from his Heathenish beliefe, and put his trust in God, and let himselfe be circumcised: and so was he numbred among the people of Israell, he and all his posterity vnto this day.

B Nowe as soone as it was daye, they sticke vp Holofernes head vpon the walles, & euery man toke his weapon, & so thei went out with an horrible crie. When the spies saw that, thei rāne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that wer within the tente, came before his chamber, & made a great rushyng to wake him vp, bycause they thought with ŷ noyse to haue raised him. For there durste not one of the Assirians knocke, go in, or open.

But whē the captaines and princes and all the chiefe in the king of the Assirians host came together, they sayd vnto ŷ chāberlaines: Go your waye in, & wake him vp, for the mice are crept out of their holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto battaile.

Thē went Vagao into his chāber, stode before ŷ bed, & clapped with his hādes, for he thought he had ben sleping wt Judith.

C But when he had herkened perfectlye with his eares, and could perceaue no stering, he went nygher to the bed, and lyfte it vp, and thē saw he the dead body of Holofernes lyinge there without a heade, weltred in his bloud vpon ŷ earth. Then cried he with loud voice, and with weping rent his clothes, & went into Judiths tent and found her not. And so he lepte out vnto the people, & sayd: one woman of ŷ Jewes hath broughte al Nabuchodonozors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde, and hath no heade.

When ŷ chiefe of ŷ Assirians host heard that, they rent their clothes, & there fel an intollerable feare & trembling vpon them so that their myndes were sore afrayde.

And there was an exceading great crye in the whole hoste.

The.xv.Chapter.

The flight of the Assirians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel becommeth riche by the spoyles of the Assirians. Judith is praysed of Joachim, and of the people.

Now when al ŷ host heard that Holofernes was headed, their minde & councel fel from them, and suche a feare came vpō them that they vndertoke to defend thē selues by flying away: on spake not to another, but hāged down their heades, left al behynde them, & made hast to escape from the Hebrues: for they heard, that they were hasting to come after with their weapons, and so they fled by the wayes of the fieldes, and thorowe al the foote pathes of the dales. A

And when the children of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon thē, and went downe with trompettes, blowyng and makyng a great crye after them. As for the Assirians, they had no order, and kepte not themselues together, but fled their way. Neuerthelesse, the children of Israel fel vpon them with one companye and order, & discomfyted as many as thei might get. And Ozias sent messēgers vnto all the cities and countreys of Israel. B

So all the regions and euery city sent out their best men after them in harnesse, and smote them with the sweard, till they came to the vtmost parte of their borders. And the other that wer in Bethulia came into ŷ tentes of the Assirians, & toke all ŷ they which wer fled had left behynd thē, & so thei found great good. And they ŷ came againe to Bethulia from the bataile, toke with thē such thinges as had bene theirs, ther was no numbre of the cattell, and of all costlye Jewels, so that from the hyest vnto the lowest, they were all made ryche of the spoiles of them. And Joachim the C highe priest at Jerusalē, came to Bethulia with al ŷ Elders, ŷ thei might see Judith.

Now when she came out vnto them, they began all to praise her with one voice, sayinge: Thou worshyp of the city of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israell, thou honour of our people, thou hast done manly, and thy herte is cōforted, because thou haste loued clenlynesse and chastity, and hast knowen no man but thine owne husbande: Therefore hath the hande of the Lorde cōforted the: & blessed shalte thou be for euer. And all the people sayd: So be it, so be it.

In thirty dayes could ŷ people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoiles of ŷ Assiriās.

But all that belonged vnto Holofernes and had ben his specially (whether it wer of gold, siluer, precious stones, clothing, and al ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Iu-dith. And al the people, reioyced both women, maydens, and yong people, with pipes and harpes.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The songe of Iudith for the victorye. After the victory obtained, the people cometh to Ierusalem to worshyp and prayse God.

A Then songe Iudith thys song vnto the Lorde: Beginne vnto the Lord vpō the tabrettes, syng vnto the Lord vpon the cimba-les, O singe vnto hym a new songe of thankesgeuyng, be ioyefull and call vpon his name.
It is the Lorde that destroyeth warres, euen the Lord is his name. Whiche hath pytched his tentes in the myddest of hys people, that he might deliuer vs from the hand of all oure enemies. Assur came oute of the mountaynes of the Northe in the multitude of his strength. His people stopped the water brokes, and their horses co-uered the valeyes. He purposed to haue brent vp my lande, & to slay my yong men with the swerde.
He would haue caried awaye my chil-B dren and virgins into captiuity, but the almighty Lord hyndred him, and deliuered him into the handes of a woman, whiche brought him to confusiō. For theyr migh-tye was not destroyed of the yonge men.
It was not the sōnes of Tytan that slue him, nether haue the great giauntes sette themselues agaynst hym: but Iudith the daughter of Merary with her faire beauty hath discomfited him, and brought him to nought. For she layed awaye her wy-dowes garment and put on the apparel of gladnesse to the reioycing of the children of Israel. She anointed her face, & bound vp her heere in an houe to begyle hym.
Her slippers rauished his eyes, her beauty captiuated his mynde, wͭ ꝧ sweard smote she of his necke. The Persians wer astonied at her stedfastenes, and the Medes at C her boldnesse. Then howled the armies of the Assirians, when my simple appeared drye of thirste. The sōnes of daughters haue pearsed them thorow, and slayne thē as fugitiue children: They perished in the battaille, for ꝧ very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs singe a songe of thanckesgeuyng vnto the Lord, a new song of praise will we synge vnto our God: Lord, Lord, thou arte a great God, mightie in power, whom no man may ouercom. Al thy creatures should serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, & they were made, thou sentest thy spirite, and they were created, and no man can withstande thy voyce. The mou-taines shall moue from the foundations with the waters, ꝧ stony rockes shal melt before the like waxe. But they that feare the, shalbe great with the in all thinges.
Woe vnto the people that ryse vp against my generation, for the almightye Lorde will auenge him selfe of them, and in the day of Iudgement wil he vyset them. For he shall geue fire and wormes into theyr fleshe, that they maye burne, and fele it for euermore.
After this it happened, that after the D victorye, all the people came to Ierusalē, to geue praise and thanckes vnto ꝧ Lord.
And when they were purifyed, they offred all their burnt sacrifices, and their promised offeringes. And Iudith offered all Holofernes weapōs, and al the Jewels, that the people had geuen her, and the canapy that she toke from his bed, and hanged them vp vnto the Lord. The people was ioyfull, as the vse is: And this ioye by reason of the victorye, with Iudith, endured thre monethes.
So after these dayes, euery man went home again, and Iudith was in great reputation at Bethulia, and ryghte honou-rablye taken in all the lande of Israell.
Unto her vertue also was chastity ioyned so that after her husband Manasses died, she neuer knew man all the dayes of her life. Upon the hye solemne dayes she went out with great worshyppe. She dwelte in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yeare, and left her handmayden fre, and dyed, and was buried beside her husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her. vii. dayes. So long as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeres also after her death.
The day wherin this victorye was gotten, was solemply holden and rekened of the Jewes in the numbre of ꝧ holy dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euer sence vnto this daye.

The dreame of Mardocheus.

A Mardocheus the sonne of Jair, the sōne of Semei, the sonne of Cisei of the tribe of Beniamin, a Jew whiche had his dwellyng in the citie of Susis, a mā of great reputation & excellent among them that were in the kyn-4.Re.14 b ges court (Neuerthelesse, he was one of the prisoners, whom Nabuchonozor the kyng of Babilon, had caryed awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilon with Jechoni-1.Pet.a. as the king of Juda.) In the seconde yere of the raigne of great Artharerses in the first daye of the moneth Nisan, hadde this Mardocheus suche a dreame. He thought he hearde a great tempest, horrible thonder clappes, earthequakes, and great vproure in the land, & that he sawe two great dragōs, ready to fight one agaist another.
Their crye was great. At the which roa-B ring and crye all the Heathen were vp, to fyght against the righteous people. And the same day was ful of darkenesse, & very vncleare, full of trouble and anguish: yea, a great fearefulnesse was there in all the land. The righteous wer amased, for they feared the plage and euill that was deuised ouer them, and were at a point with themselues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: and while they were yet crying: The litle wel grew into a great riuer and into many waters. And with that it was daye, the sūne rose vp againe. And ẏ lowly wer exalted, & deuoured ẏ glorious & proud.

Now when Mardocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his heart, what God would do, and so he desired to know all ẏ matter, & his mynde was therevpon vntil the night.

The.xii. Chapter.

Mardocheus vttreth the treason deuised agaynst the kyng: and is therfore rewarded of him.

At ẏ same time rested Mar- A docheus with Bagatha and Tares, in the kinges court, the kynges chamberlaines & porters of the palace. But whan he heard their deuice, and had diligently considred their imaginatiōs, he perceiued that they went about to lay their cruell handes vpon the kyng Artharerses: and so he certifyed the kyng therof. Then caused the king to examine the two gelded with tormentes. And whē they hadde graunted it, they were put to death. This the king caused to be put in ẏ Cronicles for an euerlasting remēbraūce, and Mardocheus wrote vp ẏ same matter. So the king commaunded ẏ Mardocheus shuld remaine in ẏ court, & for this faithfulnes of his, he gaue him a reward.
But Aman ẏ sōn of Amadathu ẏ Agagite, which was holden in great honour & re-putatiō in the kinges court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus & his people, because of the.ii. chamberlaines ẏ were put to death.

The.xiii. Chapter.

The coppye of the letters of Artharerses against the Jewes which pertayneth to the.iii. Chapter. The prayer of Mardocheus.

The great kyng Artharerses xxvii. lādes sendeth his frendly salutatiō vnto al the princes, & debites of the countres, which be subiect vnto his dominiō. Whē I was made lord ouer many people, & had subdued ẏ whole earth vnto my dominiō, my mīde was not with crueltye & wrong to exhalte my selfe by ẏ reason of my power: but purposed w equitie alway and gentlenesse, to gouerne those ẏ be vnder my iurisdiction, & wholy to set them in a peaceable life, & therby to bring my kingdom vnto tranquillity, that men might safely go thorow on euery side, and to renue peace againe, which all men desire. Now when I asked my coūcellers B how these thinges might be brought to a good end, there was one by vs, excellēt in fulnesse hath ofte ben shewed and proued, fied vs, how that in all landes there was lence be thrust down into the hel, to the intente that after this maner, oure empire may haue peace and tranquility.

But Mardocheus thought vpon all the D workes & noble actes of the Lord, & made his praier vnto him, saying: O Lord, lord, thou valeaunte and Almighty king (for al thinges are in thy power) and yf thou wilt helpe and deliuer Israel, there is no man that can withstand or let the: for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what won-derous thing so euer is vnder the heauen: thou art Lord of all thinges, and there is no mã that can resist thy maiesty (O lord.) Thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest lord, that it was nether of malice, nor presumption, nor for any desire of glory, that I woulde not bowe downe my selfe, nor worship yonder proude presumpteous A-man (for I would haue bene content, and that with good wil, if it mighte haue done Israell any good, to haue kyssed euen his fote stepps) but ÿ I did it, bicause I would not set the honour of a man in the stede of the glorie of God: & bicause I would worship none but only the my Lord. And this E haue I done in no pride nor presumption.
And therfore O lord thou God and king, haue mercy vpon thy people, for they imagin how thei may bring vs to nought: yea their mynde & desire is to destroye, and so ouerthrowe thy people, that hath euer bene thine inheritaunce of olde. O despise not the portiõ, which thou hast deliuered and brought out of Egipt for thine own selfe.
Heare my prayer, and be mercyfull vnto thy people, whom thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne oure complaint & sorow into ioy, that we may liue, O Lorde, and prayse thy name. O Lorde suffre not the mouthes of them that prayse the to be destroyed.
All the people of Israel in like maner, cryed as earnestly as they could vnto the Lord: for their death and destruction stode before their eyes.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

The prayer of Esther for the deliueraunce of her and her people.

QUene Esther also beyng in ÿ battaile of death, resorted vn- A to ÿ Lord, laid away her glorious apparel, and put on the garmentes that serued for sighing & mourning. In ÿ stede of precious ointmẽt, she scattered ashes & dong vpon her head: and as for her body, she humbled it with fasting, & brought it very lowe. All the places wher she was wont to haue ioy afore, those filled she with ÿ heere that she pluct of her selfe. She prayed also vnto the Lord God of Israell with these wor-des. O my Lord, thou only arte our king, helpe me desolate woman, which haue no helper but thee, for my misery & destructiõ is harde at my hande. Fro my youth vp I haue heard out of the kinred of my father, that thou tokest Israell from among all people (and so haue our fathers of their forelders) that they should be thy pepetual enheritaũce, & loke what thou diddest pro-myse them, thou haste made it good vnto them. Now Lorde, we haue sinned before the, therfore hast thou geuẽ vs into ÿ hã-des of our enemyes, bicause we worshipped their gods, lord ÿ art righteous. Ne-uerthelesse, it satisfied thẽ not, that we are B in bitter, & heuy captiuity and oppressed among thẽ, but thou hast laide their hãdes vpon the hãdes of their Gods: so that thei begin to take away, the thyng (that thou with thy mouth hast ordeined & appoited) and to destroy thine inheritaunce, to shut and stop the mouthes of them ÿ praise the to quenche the glorie and worship of thy house, and thine aulter, & to open ÿ mou-thes thes of the Heathen, that they may prayse the power and vertue of the goddes, and to magnifye the fleshly kyng for euer.

C O Lorde, geue not thy scepter vnto the that be nothyng, lest they laughe vs to scorne in our misery & fall: but turne their deuise vpon them selues, and punish him, that hath begon the same ouer vs, and set hym to an example. Thincke vpon vs, O Lorde, and shew thy selfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure distresse, and of our trouble.
Strength me O thou kyng of Gods, thou Lord of al power geue me an eloquent & a pleasaunt speach in my mouth before the Lion. Turne his hert in the hate of oure enemyes, to destroy him, & all such as consent vnto him. But deliuer vs with thine hand, and helpe me thy handmayde, which haue no defence nor helper but only ye lord thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest yt I loue not the glorie & worship of ye vnrighteous, & that I hate and abhorre ye bed of the vncircumcised, and of al Heathen.
Thou knowest my necessity, that I hate the token of my preeminence and worship, D which I beare vpon my head, what tyme as I must shew my selfe, & be sene, & that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, & that I weare it not when I am quiete & alone by my self. Thou knowest also, that I thy handemayden haue not eaten at Amans table, & that I haue had no pleasure nor delite in the kinges feast, that I haue not drunke the wine of the drinke offeringes, and yt I thy hādmayden haue no ioy synce the day that I was brought hether, vntill this day, but only in the Lord. O thou god of Abrahā, O thou mighty God aboue al, heare the voice of them, that haue none other hope, & deliuer vs out of the hand of the wycked, & deliuer me out of my feare.

The. xv. Chapter.

Mardocheus moueth Esther to go in to ye kynge and make intercession for her people: and she perfourmeth his requeste.

A MArdocheus also bad Esther go in vnto the kyng, and praye for her people, & for her coūtrey. Remē-ber (sayeth he) the dayes of thy low estate, how thou was norished vnder my hand: For Aman which is nexte vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death against vs. Cal thou therfore vpon ye Lord, and speake for vs vnto the kyng, and deli-uer vs from death. And vpō the third day it happened, that Esther layde awaye the mourning garmentes, & put on her glorious apparell, & dect her self goodly (after that she had called vpon God, which is the beholder and sauiour of al thinges) toke two handmaydens with her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her beauty made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was chearful and amiable, but her herte was sorowfull for great feare. She went in thorowe all the dores, & stode before ye kyng. The kyng sat vpon the throne of his kyngdome, & was clothed in his goodlye araye, all of gold, & set with precious stones, & he was verye terrible: He lifte vp his face, that shone in the clearnesse, & loked grymly vpon her.
Then fell the Quene downe, was pale & faint, and leaned her selfe vpon the heade of the mayde, that went with her.
Neuerthelesse, God turned the kynges B mynde that he was gentil, that he leaped out of his seate for feare, & gat her in hys armes, and held her vp till she came to her selfe againe. He gaue her louyng wordes also, and saide vnto her: Esther what is ye matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye: for our cōmaundement toucheth the comons & not thee.
Come nye. And with that he helde vp hys golden rodde, & laid it vpon her necke, & embrased her frendely, & sayd: talke with me. Then said she: * I saw thee (O lord) as Gen. 33. b an Angel of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiestye & clearnesse. For excellent & wonderfull arte thou (O lord) and thy face is full of amitye. But as she was thus speakyng vnto hym, she fell downe again for faintnesse: for the which cause the kyng was afrayed, and all hys seruauntes comforted her.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The copye of the letters of Arthaxerses, wherby he reuoketh those which he fyrst sente forth.

THe great kyng Arthaxerses, which raigneth from India A vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred & seuen & twenty landes, sendeth vnto ye Princes and rulers of the same lādes, such as loue him his frendly salutation. Ther be many that for the sondry frendshippes and benefites diuersly done vnto them for their worship be euer the more proude and hye mynded, and vndertake not onelye to hurte oure subiectes (for plenteous benefites maye they not suffre, & beginne to imagine som thing against those that do thē good, and take

take not only al unthanckefulnesse away from men) but in pryde and presumption (as they that be unmyndeful & unthanckfull for the good dedes) they goe aboute to escape the iudgement of God, that seeth al thinges, which (iudgement) hateth and punisheth al wickednesse: It happeneth oft also, that they which be set in office by the hier power, and unto whom the businesse and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, waxe proud, and defile thẽselves with shedding of innocente bloude, which bringeth them to intolleeable hurt. Which also with false and deceitfull wordes, and with lying tales, disceaue and betray the innocente goodnesse of Princes.

B Now is it profitable and good, that we take hede, make search therafter, and consider, not onely what hath happened unto us of olde: but the shamfull, unhonest, and noysome thinges, that the debities haue now taken in hande before our eyes, and therby to beware in time to com, that we may make the kingdome quyet and peaceable for al men: and that we might somtime draw it to a chaunge: and as for the thing that now is presẽte before our eyes, to withstand it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

What time now as Aman, the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verelye of the Persians bloud, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in among us as an aleant, & had obtained ẏ frendeship that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called our father, and had in hyghe honoure of euery man, as the nexte and principal unto the king, he coulde not forbeare himselfe, but his pride hath undertaken, not onely to robbe us of ẏ kingdome, but of our life.

C With manyfolde disceate also hath he desired to destroye Mardocheus our helper and preseruer, whiche hath done us good in all thinges: and innocente Esther the lyke partaker of our kyngdome, with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken them out of the waye, & robbed us of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians unto them of Macedonia, but we fynde, that ẏ Iewes (which wer accused of the wicked, that they might be destroyed) are no euill doers, but use resonable and ryght lawes, and that they be the children of the moste high liuing God, by whom the kingdome of us and our progenitoures haue bene wel ordred hitherto. Wherefore, as for the letters, and commaundementes that wer put forth by Aman the sõne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effect: for he that set them up, and inuented them, hangeth at Susis before the porte with all his kinred: and God, (which hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deserning.

And upon this ye shal publish and set up D the copye of this letter in all places, that the Iewes maye frely and without hyndraunce holde them selues after their own statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that uppon the thyrtenth daye of the twelue moneth Adar, they maye be auenged of them, which in the time of their anguysh and trouble, would haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth al thinges, hath turned to ioye the day, wherein the chosen people should haue perished.

Moreouer, among the highe solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shal holde this daye also with all gladnesse: that nowe and in time to come, this daye may be a remembraunce to good for al such as loue ẏ prosperytie of the Persians: but a remẽbraunce of destruction to those that be sedicious unto us.

All cities and landes that do not this, shal horribly perish, and be destroyed with the swearde and fyre, and shall not onelye be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

The ende of the reast of the Booke of Esther.

The Boke of Wysedome.

The first Chapter.

Howe we oughte to searche and inquire after God, and who be those that fynde him. Of the holy ghost. We ought to flye from backbityng and murmuryng. &c.

1 OSet your affection vpon righteousnesse, ye that be Iudges of y earth. Haue a good opinion of the lord, and seke him in the singlenesse of heart. For he will be founde of the that tepte him not, and appeareth vnto suche as put their trust in him. As for froward thoughtes, they seperat from God: but vertue (yf it be allowed) refourmeth the vnwyse.
And why? wisedom shall not enter into a froward soule, nor dwell in the body y is subdued vnto sinne. For y holy Ghost ab-horreth fained nurtoure, & withdraweth himselfe fro the thoughtes that are without vnderstading, and wher wyckednesse hath the vpperhande, he flieth from thece, for the spirit of wisedom is louyng, gentle and gracious, and wil haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euill with his lippes.
For God is a witnesse of his raines, a true searcher out of his herte, and an hearer of his tonge. For the spirit of the Lorde fil-leth the round compasse of the world: and the same that vpholdeth all thinges, hath knowledge also of the voice.
B Therfore, he that speaketh vnrighteous thinges, can not be hid: neither may he escape the iudgement of reprofe. And why? inquisition shalbe made for thoughtes of the vngodlye, and the reporte of his wor-des shal come vnto God, so that his wickednesse shalbe punished. For the eare of gelousy heareth all thinges, and the noise of the grudginges shal not be hyd. Therfore, beware of murmuryng which is nothing worth: and refraine your tong from slaunder. For there is no worde so darcke and secrete, that it shal go for nought, and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.
O seke not your owne death in the er- C roure of your lyfe: destroy not your selues thorow the worckes of your own handes.
For God hath not made death, neyther hath he pleasure in the destruction of the liuing. For he created al thinges, that thei might haue their being: yea, all the people of the earth, hath he made that thei should haue health, y there shoulde be no destruction in them, and that the kyngdome of hel should not be vpo earth (for righteous-nesse is euerlasting and immortal, but vnrighteousnesse bringeth death.) Neuer-thelesse, the vngodly cal her vnto the both with words and worckes: and while they thincke to haue a frende of her, they come to nought: for the vngodly that are confederate with her, and take her parte, are worthy of death.

The .ii. Chapter.

The imaginations and desires of the wycked, and their counsaile against the faithfull.

FOr the vngodly, talke & ima- A ginne thus among thēselues, but not ryghte. The tyme of our life is but short & tedious: & when a man is once gone, he hath nomore ioye nor pleasure, nether know we any man y turneth again from death: for we are borne of nought, and we shalbe hereafter as thoughe we had neuer bene. For our breath is as a smoke in our nostrels, and the wordes as a sparke to moue our hert. As for our body, it shalbe very asshes that are quenched, & our soule shal vanish as the soft ayre. Oure life shal passe awey as the trace of a cloude, & com to naught as the mist that is driue awaye with y beames of the Sunne, & put down with y heat therof. Oure name also shalbe forgotten by litle and litle, & no man shall haue oure workes in remembraunce.
For our time is a very shadow that pas- B seth awaye: and after our ende ther is no returnyng, for it is faste sealed: so that no man commeth again. Come on therfore, let vs enioy the pleasures that ther are, & let vs sone vse y creature like as in youth.
Let vs fil our selues w good wyne & oint-met, & let ther no flour of y time go by vs.
Let vs crowne oure selues w roses afore thei be withered. Let ther be no faire me-
dow,

dow, but our lust go thorow it. Let euery one of you be partaker of our volupteousnesse. Let vs leue som toke of our pleasure in euery place, for that is our portion, els get we nothing. Let vs oppresse the poore righteous: Let vs not spare the widdowe nor old man: let vs not regarde the heads that are gray for age. Let the law of vnrighteousnesse be our auctoritie, for ÿ thig that is feble is nothing worth. Therfore let vs defraude the righteous: & why the is not for our profit: yea, he is cleane contrary to our doinges. He checketh vs for offending against the law, and slaundereth vs as transgressours of al nurtoure. He maketh his bost to haue the knowlege of god: yea, he calleth him self gods sonne. He is the bewrayer of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for hys life is not like other men, his wayes are of another fashiō. He counteth vs but vaine persons, he withdraweth him selfe frō our wayes as from filthines, he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh his bost that God is his father. Let vs se then if his wordes be true, let vs proue what shal come vpon him: so shal we knew what end he shal haue. For yf he be the true sōne of God, he will receaue him, and deliuer him frō the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examine him with dispiteful rebuke & tormenting, that we may know hys dignitie and proue his patience. Let vs condemne him with the most shameful death: for like as he hath spoken, so shal he be rewarded.

Suche thinges do the vngodlye ymagin. and go astray, for their owne wickednesse hath blinded them. As for the misteries of god they vnderstande thē not: they D nether hope for the reward of righteousnesse, nor regard ÿ worship that holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be Gen.3.b. vndestroyed, yea, after the * ymage of hys owne likenesse made he him. Neverthelesse, thorow enuy of the deuil, came death into the worlde: and they that holde of his side, do as he doth.

The .iii. Chapter.

The conseruation and assuraunce of the righteous. The rewarde of the faithful.

A But the soules of ÿ righteous are in ÿ hand of God, and the paine of death shal not touche them. In the sighte of the vnwyse they appeared to dye, and their end is taken for very destruction. The way of the righteous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffre paine before men, yet is their hope ful of immortalitie. They are punished but in few things, neuerthelesse in many thinges shall they be wel rewarded. For God proueth thē, and findeth them mete for him selfe: yea, as the gold in the fornace, doth he trye them: and receaueth them as a burntoffering, and when the time commeth, they shalbe loked vpon.

The righteous shal shine as the sparkes that runne thorow the redde bushe. They B shall Judge the nations, and haue dominion ouer the people, and their Lorde shal reigne for euer. They that put their trust in him, shal vnderstand the trueth, & suche as be faithful, will agre vnto him in loue: for his chosen shal haue giftes and peace. But the vngodlye shalbe punished according to their imaginations, for they haue dispised ÿ righteous: & forsaken the Lord.

Who so dispiseth wisedome & nurtour, he is vnhappy: and as for the hope of such it is but vaine: their laboures vnfruteful, C and their workes vnprofitable. Their wiues are vndiscrete, and their children most vngodly. Their creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the barren and vndefiled, which hath not knowen the sinfull bed: she shall haue fruite in the reward of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, which with his hādes hath wrought no vnrighteousnesse, nor imagined wicked thinges agaist God. For vnto him shalbe geuen the special gifte of faith, and the most acceptable portion in the temple of god. For glorious is the fruite of good laboure, and the rote of wisedome shal neuer fade away.

As for the children of aduouterers, they D shal come to an end, and the seed of an vnrighteous bed shalbe rooted out. And though they liue long, yet shal they be nothing regarded, and their laste age shalbe withoute honoure. Yf they dye hastelye, they haue no hope, nether shall they be spoken to in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death, and ende of the vnrighteous.

The .iiii. Chapter.

Of the chaste generation of the faithfull, and of theyr felicity. Of the death of the righteous, and of the condemnation of the vnfaithfull.

O How

1 O How faire is a chaste generation with vertue? The memoriall therof is immortal, for it is knowē with God and with men. When it is presente, men take example therat, and yf it go awaye, yet they desire it. It is alway crowned and holden in honour, and winneth the rewarde of the undefyled battaile. But the multitude of ungodlye children is unprofitable: and the thynges that are planted with whoredome, shall take no depe rote, nor lay any fast foundation. Thoughe they be grene in the braūches for a time, yet they shalbe shaken wt the wynde: for they stand not faste, & thorowe the vehementie of the wynde they shalbe roted out. For the unperfect braūches shalbe broken, their frute shalbe unprofitable and sowre to eate: yea, mete for nothing. And why? al the childrē that are borne of the wicked, must beare recorde of the wickednesse against their fathers and mothers, when they be asked. But though the righteous be ouertakē with death, yet shal he be in rest.

B Age is an honourable thing: neverthelesse it standeth not onely in the length of time, nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wisdom is the graye heere, and an undefiled life is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him: so that where as he lived among synners, he translated him. (Gen.v.c.) Yea, sodainly was he takē awey, to the entent that wickednesse shoulde not alter his understanding, and that hipocrisie shouldnot begile his soule. For ye crafty bewitchyng of lyes make good thinges darcke, the unstedfastnesse also & wickednesse of voluptuous desire turne aside the understanding of the simple. Thoughe he was sone dead, yet fulfilled he much time. For his soule pleased God: therfore hasted he to take him awaye from among ye wicked. This the people se, and understāde it not: they laye not up such thinges in their hertes, how that the louing fauoure and mercy of God is upō his saintes, and that he hath respecte unto his chosen.

C Thus the righteous that is dead, condemneth the ungodly which are living: & the youth that is soone brought to an end, the long life of the unrighteous. For they se the ende of ye wise, but they understande not what God hath deuised for him, and wherfore the Lord hath taken him away. And why? they se him, & despise him therefore shall God also laughe them to scorne: So that they themselues shal dye herafter (but withoute honoure) yea, in shame among the dead for euermore. For without any voyce shall he burst those that be pufte up, and remoue them from the foundations, so that they shalbe laide wast unto the hyghest. They shal mourne, & their memoriall shall perish. So they beyng afrayed, shal remember their sinnes: & their owne wyckednesse shall bewraye them.

The. v. Chapter.

The constantnesse of the righteous before their persecuters. The hope of the unfaythfull is vndurable and vayne. The blessednesse of the Sainctes and godlye.

Then shal the righteous stād in great steadfastenesse against suche as haue dealte extremelye with them, and takē away their laboures. When they se it, they shalbe vexed with horrible feare, and shall wonder at the hastinesse of the sodayne health: gronyng for very distresse of mynde, and shall saye within themselues, hauyng inwarde sorow, and mourning for very anguish of minde. These are they, whom we sometime had in dirision, & iested upō. We fooles thought their life very madnesse, & their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are counted among the children of God, and their portion is among the sainctes. Therfore we haue erred from ye waye of truth, the light of righteousnesse hath not shined unto us, and the Sunne of understanding rose not up upon us. We haue werped our selues in the way of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lord, we haue not knowen it.

What good hath oure pryde done unto us? Or what profite hath the pompe of richesse brought us? All those thinges are passed away like a shadowe, and as a messanger runnyng before: as a ship that passeth ouer the waues of the water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace therof cānot be founde, nether the path of it in the floudes. Or as a birde that flyeth thorow in ye ayre, and no man can se any token wer she is flowen, but onely heareth the noyse of her winges, beatyng the light wynd, partting the aire, thorowe the vehementie of her goyng, and flieth on shaking her wingges, where as afterward no token of her B way can be founde. Or like as when an arowe is shotte at a marke, it parteth the ayer, which immediatly cõmeth together again, so that a man can not know where it went thorow. Euen so we in like maner as sone as we were borne, began immediatly to draw to oure ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but ar consumed in our own wickednesse.

Suche wordes shall they that haue
C sinned speake in the hell: for the hope of the vngodlye is lyke a drye thistle floure (or duste) that is blowen awaye with the wynde: lyke a thynne scũme that is scatered abroade with the storme, lyke as the smoke whiche is dispersed here and there with the wynde, and as the remembraũce of a stranger, that tarieth for a daye, and then departeth. But the ryghteous shall liue for euermore: their rewarde also is with the Lorde: and their remembraunce with the Highest. Therfore, shall they receaue a glorious kyngdome, and a beautifull crowne of þ Lordes hande: for with hys righte hande shall he couer them: and with his owne holy arme shall he defend them. His gelousye also shall, take awaye the harnesse, and he shall weapon the creature to be auenged of the enemies. He shall put on righteousnesse for a brestplate, and take sure Judgement in steade of an helmet. The inuincible shield of equitie shall he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a speare, and þ whole compasse of the worlde, shall fyght wyth him against the vnwyse.

D Then shall the thonderboltes go oute of the lyghtnynges, and come oute of the rayne bow of the cloudes to the place appointed: out of the harde stonye indignation, there shall fall thycke hayles, and the water of the sea shalbe wroth against thẽ, and the floudes shall runne roughlye together. Yea, a mightye wynde shall stande vp against them, and a storme shall scatre them abroade. Thus the vnrighteous dealynge of them, shall bring all the land to a wyldernesse, and wyckednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of þ myghtie.

The.vi.Chapter.

The calling of kinges, Princes, & iudges: whiche are also exhorted to searche wisedome.

A Wysedome is better thã strẽgth and a man of vndestanding is more worth than one that is strong. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderstande: O learne ye that be Judges of the endes of þ earth. Geue eare ye that rule þ multitudes, and delite in muche people. For the power is geuen you of the Lord, and the strength from the Hyghest: which shall trye your workes, and searche oute your imaginations. Howe that ye beyng officers of his kingedome, haue not executed true Judgement, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnesse, nor walked after the will of God. Horrible, and that ryght sone shal he appeare vnto you: for an hard B judgement shal they haue that beare rule. Mercy is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctoritie shalbe sore punished. For God which is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mans person, neyther shal he stande in awe of any mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small and great, & careth for all a lyke. But the myghtye shal haue the sorer punishement.

Unto you therfore (O ye kinges) do I speake, that ye maye learne wysedome, and not goe amysse. For they that kepe hys righteousnesse, shalbe ryghteouslye Judged, & they that are learned in rightous thynges, shall fynde to make answer. Wherefore, sette your luste vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shal ye come by nurtoure.

Wisedome is a noble thing, and neuer fadeth awaye: yea, she is easily sene of thẽ C that loue her, and founde of suche as seke her, she preuenteth them that desire her, that she may first shew her selfe vnto thẽ. Whoso awaketh vnto her by times, shall haue no great trauaill for he shall fynde her sitting ready at hys dores. To thincke vpon her, is perfect vnderstanding: & who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe: and that sone. For she goeth about, seking suche as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherfully vnto them in their goings, and meteth them with all diligence. For the vnfayned desire of reformation is her beginning: to care for nurtoure is loue, and loue is the keping of her lawes. Now the kepyng of the lawes is perfection, and an vncorrupt life: and an vncorrupt life maketh a man familiar with God. And so the desire of wisedome leadeth to the kingdome euerlasting. Yf your delite be then in royall D seates, and scepters (O ye kynges of the people) sette your luste vpon wysedome, that ye maye raygne for euermore. O loue the lighte of wisedome, all ye that be rulers of þ people. As for wisdome, what she is, and howe she came vp, I will tell you:

you:and wil not hyde the mysteries of god from you: but will seke her oute from the beginnyng of the natiuitie, and bryng the knowledge of her into light, and will not kepe backe ye trueth: Neither will I haue to do with consuming enuye, for suche a man shall not be partaker of wisedome.
But the multitude of the wise, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kyng is the upholding of the people. O receaue nur-toure then thorow my wordes, and it shal do you good.

The.vii.Chapter.

Wysedome oughte to be preferred aboue all thinges.

A I My selfe am also a mortall mã, like as all other, and am come of ye earthy generation of him that was first made, & in my mothers wõbe was I fashioned to be flesh: In ye time of ten monethes was I brought together in bloud thorow the seede of man, and ye commodious appetite of slepe. Whẽ I was borne I receaued lyke ayre as other men, & fel upon ye earth (which is my nature) crying & weping at the first as all other do. I was wrapped in swadling clothes, & brought up with great cares. For there is no king that had any other beginning of birth. Al men thẽ haue on entraũ-ce unto life, & one going out in like maner.
B Wherfore I desired, & understandyng was geuẽ me: I called, and the spirite of wisedom came unto me. I set more by her, than by kyngdomes, and roial seates, and counted richesse nothing in comparison of her. As for precious stone, I compared it not unto her: for al gold is but grauel unto her, & siluer shalbe counted but clay before her sight. I loued her aboue welfare and beauty, & purposed to take her for my light, for her light can not be quenched. Al good thinges come to me with her, & innumerable richesse, thorow her hãdes. I was glad in them all, for this wisdom wẽt before me, and I knew not that she is the mother of al good thinges. Now as I my selfe learned unfainedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyd her richesse from no man: for she is an infinite treasure unto men, whiche who so use, become partakers of the loue and frendship of God, and are accepted unto him for the giftes of wisedome.
C God hath graunted me to talke wisely, & conueniently to handle the things that he hath graciously lente me. For it is he, that leadeth unto wisedome, and teacheth to use wisedome aryght. In his hande are both we and oure wordes yea, al oure wis-dome, oure understanding, and knowlege of all our worckes. For he hath geuen me the true science of these thynges, so that I know, how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes, the beginning, ending, and middeste of the times how the times alter, how one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfilled: the course of the yere: the ordinaunces of the starres: the nature and kyndes of beastes: the furiousnesse of beastes: the power of ye windes: the imaginations of men: the diuersities of yong plantes: the a uertues of rotes, and all suche thinges as are secrete D and not loked for, haue I learned. For the worcke master of all thinges hath taught me wisedome. In her is the spirite of understanding, which is holy, manyfold, one onely, subtill, curteous, discrete, quicke, undefiled, playne, swete, louing ye thing ye is good, sharpe, which forbyddeth not to do well, gentill, kynde, stedfaste, sure, fre, hauing al uertues, circumspect in all thin-ges: receauing all spirites of understandyng, beyng cleane and sharpe. For wis-dome is nimbler than al nymble thinges: she goeth thorowe, and attayneth to all things bicause of her cleanesse. For she is the brethe of the power of God, and a pure cleane expressing of the clearnesse of almighty God.
Therfore can no undefiled thyng come unto her, for she is the brightenesse of the euerlasting lyght, the undefiled mirroure of the maiestie of God, and the image of E hys goodnesse. And for so muche as she is one, she maye do all thinges, and beyng stedfast her selfe, she renueth al: and amõg the people conueyeth she her self into the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes and Prophetes: for God loueth no man, but him in whom wisedome dwelleth.
For she is more beautiful than the Sũne and geueth more lyght than the starres, and the daye is not to be compared unto her: for upon the day commeth night. But wickednesse cannot ouercome wisedome:
and folyshnesse may not be with her.

The.viii.Chapter.

The effectes of wisedome.

A Wysedome reacheth frō one end to another mightely, and louingly doth she order all thinges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen from my youth vp: I did my diligence to marye my selfe with her, suche loue had I vnto her beautie. Who so hath the company of God, commendeth her nobilitie: yea, the Lorde of all thynges, him selfe loueth her. For she is the scolemaistresse of ŷ nurtour of God, & the choser out of his works. Yf a man would desire richesse in this life, what is richer thā wisdome, ŷ worketh all thīges? Thou wilt say vnderstādyng worketh. What is it amōg al thīgs, ŷ worketh more thā wisdome? Yf a man loue vertue, and righteousnesse, lette him laboure for B wysdome, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernesse, prudence, righteousnesse, and strength: whiche are suche thinges as men can haue nothyng more profitable in their lyfe. Yf a man desire much knowledge, she can tel the thinges that are past, and discerne thinges for to com: she knoweth the subtilites of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentences. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thinges, or euer thy come to passe, and the endes of all times and ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wil take her vnto my companye, and cōmune louingly with her no doubt, she shal geue me good counsaile, and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse, & grefe. For her sake shall I be well and honestly taken among the commens and lordes of the counsaile.

Thoughe I be yōg, yet shal I haue sharpe vnderstanding, so that I shall be meruelous in the sight of great men, and the faces of Princes shal wonder at me: whē I holde my tong, they shal abyde my leisure: when I speake, they shal loke vpon me: & yf I talke much, they shal lay their hands vpon their mouth.

C Moreouer, by the meanes of her, I shall obtaine immortalitie, & leaue behynd me an euerlasting memoriall among thē that come after me. I shall set the people in order, & the natiōs shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes shalbe afrayde when they do but heare of me, among the multitude I shal be counted good: & myghty in battaile. When I come home, I shal fynde rest with her: for her company hath no bitternesse, & her felowshyp hath no tediousnesse, but myrthe and ioye.

Now when I considred these thinges by my selfe, and pondred them in my hert, how that to be ioyned vnto wysedome is immortalitie, and great pleasure to haue D her frendeshyp, how that in the workes of her handes are infinite richesse: how that, who so kepeth companye with her shalbe wise, and that he which talketh with her, shal come to honour: I went about seking to gather her vnto me: For I was a lad of a rype wyt, and had a good vnderstanding. But when I grew to more vnderstanding, I came to an vndefiled bodye. Neuerthelesse, when I perceaued that I could not kepe my selfe chaste, except god gaue it me, (& that was a point of wisdom also, to knowe whose gifte it was) I stepped vnto the Lord, & besought him, & with my whole hert I sayd after this maner.

The .ix. Chapter.

A prayer of Salomon to obtaine wisdome.

O God of my fathers, & lorde of mercies (thou that haste made A all thinges with thy worde, & ordeined mā thorow thy wisdome, that he shoulde haue dominion ouer the creature whiche thou hast made: that he should order the world according to equitye and righteousnesse, & execute iudgement with a true herte) geue me wisedō, which is euer about thy seate, & put me not out from among thy childrē: for I thy seruaunte and sonne of thy hādmayden, am a feble person, of a short time and to yong to the vnderstādyng of iudgement, & the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfect among ŷ children of men, yet if thy wisdom be not with him, he shal be nothing regarded. But thou hast chosē me to be a kyng vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast commaūded me to build a tēple vpō thy holy mount, and an aultar in B the city wher in thou dwellest: a lykenesse of thy holi tabernacle which thou hast prepared from the beginning, and thy wysedome with the, which knoweth thy workes, which also was with the, when thou madest ŷ world, & knew what was acceptable in thy syght, & right in thy cōmaundements. O sende her out of thy holy heauens & from the throne of thy maiestye, ŷ she maye be wt me, & labour with me: that I may knowe, what is acceptable in thy syght. For she knoweth, and vnderstādeth al thinges, & she shall leade me soberlye in my workes, and preserue me in her power.

so shall my workes be acceptable, & the shall I gouerne thy people righteously, & be worthie to sit in my fathers seate. For what man is he, that may know the coū-saile of God? Or, who can thynke what ẏ wil of God is? For the thoughtes of mortall men are measurable, & our forecastes are but uncertaine. And why? a mortall 6 corruptible body is heuy unto the soule, & the earthly mansion kepeth down ẏ understanding that museth upō many thinges.
Very hardly can we discerne the thynges that are upō earth, and great labour haue we, or we can finde the thinges which are before our eyes: who wil then seke out the grounde of the thynges that are done in heauen? Oh lord, who can haue knowlege of thy understādīng and meaning, except thou geue him wisedom, and sende thy holy ghost from aboue? that the wayes of thē which are upon earth, may be refourmed: that men may learne the thinges that are pleasaunte unto the, and be preserued tho-row wisedome.

The. x. Chapter.

The deliueraunce of the righteous cōmeth tho-rowe wisedome.

preserued the righteous thorowe a pore upper hand so that the nations were puft

And for a tokē, of a remembrāūce of the unfaithful soule, there standeth a piller of salte. For al such as regarded not wisedō, gat not only this hurt, that they knew not the thinges which wer good, but also left behynd thē unto men, a memorial of their they sinned, they could not be hyd. But as

The. xi. Chapter.

The miracles done for Israel. The vengeance of sinners. The great power and mercy of God.

She ordred their workes in the A hādes of the holy Prophet: so Exo. xvi.

enemyes thou gauest mans bloud in stead of liuing water. And where as they had thou wouldest bring thine owne vnto hoas a father and proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boysterous kyng, laide hard to their charge, and condẽpned them. Whether they were absente or pre-sente, their punishement was alyke. For their grefe was double: namely, mournig, and the remembraũce of things past. But when they perceaued that their punishmẽ-tes dyd them good, they thought vpon the Lord, and wondered at ẏ ende. For at the last they helde much of him, of whom in ẏ outecasting they thought scorne, as of an kyll them with their horrible sight. Yea, without these beasts might they haue ben slayne with one wynde, being persecuted of their owne workes, & scattered abroade any thing endure, yf it were not thy will?

The .xii. Chapter.

The mercy of God towarde sinners, the workes of God are vnproueable. God geueth leysure to repent vs.

O Lord, how gracious & swete A is thy spirite in all thinges?
Therfore chastnest thou the measurablye that go wrong, and warnest thẽ concernyng the thinges wherein they offende: thou spekest vnto them (O Lord) and exhortest them to leaue their wyckednesse, & to put their trust in the. *As for those olde inha- Deu. biters of the holy lande, thou mightest not away with thẽ, for they committed abhominable workes against the: as witchcrafte, sorcerie, & Idolatrie, thei slew their owne children without mercye: they dyd eate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the bloud: yea, bicause of such abhominations, misbeleues, and offeringes, thou slewest ẏ fathers of the desolate soules by the hãdes of our fathers: that the land whiche thou louest aboue all other, myghte be a dwelling for the children of God, B Neuerthelesse, thou sparedest them also (as men) & sendedst the forerũnes of thine host euen hornettes to destroy them out by litle & litle. Not that thou wast vnhable to subdue the vngodly vnto the righteous in battaill: or with cruel beastes, or with one roughe worde to destroye them together: But thy minde was to dryue them out Exod. by litle, & litle, geuing thẽ time and place to amende: knowyng well, that it was an vnrighteous nation, & wicked of nature, and ẏ their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede from the beginning, and feared no man, yet hast thou pardoned their sinnes. For who will saye vnto ẏ why hast thou done that? Or who wil stand against thy iudgement? Or who will come before thy face, an auenger of vnrighteous men? Or who wil blame the, yf ẏ people perish, whom thou hast made? C For ther is none other god but thou that I.Pet. carest carest for al things: yͤ thou mayest declare how that thy iudgement is not vnright.

There dare nether king, nor tiraunte in thy sight require accomptes of thẽ whom thou hast destroyed.
For so much then as thou art righteous thy selfe, thou ordrest al things righteously: and to punish him that hath not deser-ued to be punished, yͤ takest it for a straũge, and aliene thing in thy lande, and power.
For thy power is the beginning of righte-ousnesse: and bicause thou art Lorde of all things, therfore art thou gracious vnto al.
When men thinke the not to be of a full strength: thou declarest thy power & boldly deliuerest thou thẽ ouer, yͤ know the not.
But thou Lord of power iudgest quietly, & ordrest vs with great worship, for thou mayest do as thou wilte.
D By such workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a man also should be iust & louing: & hast made thy children to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgest, yͤ geuest rowme to amende from sinnes.
For in so muche as thou hast punished, & with such diligence deliuered the enemies of thy seruauntes, which wer worthy to dy, (where thorow thou gauest them time & place of amendement, yͤ they might turne fro their wickednesse) with how great diligence thẽ punishest thou thine owne chil-dre, vnto whose fathers thou hast sworne, & made couenauntes of good promises? So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punishest our enemies diuerse wayes, to yͤ intente that whẽ we punish, we should re-mẽber thy goodnesse: & whẽ we our selues are punished, to put our trust in thy mercy.
E Wherfore, wher as mẽ haue liued ignorauntly, and vnrighteously, thou hast punished thẽ sore, euẽ thorow the same thin-Sap.xi.c. ges that they worshipped. * For they wẽt Roma.i.c. astray very long in the waye of errour, & helde the beastes (whiche euen their enemies despised) for godds, liuing as childrẽ of no vnderstanding. Therefore hast thou sent a scornefull punishment among thẽ, as among the children of ignoraunce. As for suche as would not be refourmed by those scornes and rebukes, they felte the worthy punishment of God. For the thinges that they suffered, they bare them vnpaciently, being not content in them, but vnwilling: And when they perished by the same thin-ges yͤ they toke for goddes, they knowledged then, that ther was but one true god, whõ afore they would not know: therfore came yͤ ende of their dãpnation vpon thẽ.

The.xiii. Chapter.

Al thinges be vayne, except the knowlege of god. Idolatrers, and Idols are mocked.

Vayne are all mẽ, which haue A not knowledge of God, * as Rom.i.b. wer they, that out of yͤ good things which are sene, knew not him that of him selfe is euerlastig. Nether toke they so muche regarde of the workes that are made, as to know, who was the craftesmã of them, but some toke the fire, some the wind or aire, som the course of the starres, some the water, some toke Sunne and Moone, or the lightes of heauen whiche rule the earth for gods. But thoughe they had such pleasure in their beauty, that they thought them to haue bene goddes: yet should they haue knowen, how much more fairer he is that made them.
For the maker of beauty hath ordeined al B these thinges, Or if they marueiled at the power & workes of them, they should haue perceaued therby, yͤ he whiche made these thinges, is myghtier than they. For by the greatnesse and beauty of the creature, the maker therof maye plainely be knowen.
Notwithstãding, they are yͤ lesse to be blamed, that seke God, & would finde him, & yet mysse. And why? for so muche as they go about in his workes & seke after them, it is a token, yͤ they regard & hold much of his workes yͤ are sene, howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For if their vnderstanding, & knowlege be so great: that they can discerne the world, and the creatures, why do they not rather finde out yͤ Lorde therof?
But vnhappy are they, and among the C dead is their hope, that cal thẽ gods which are but the workes of mens hãdes: golde, siluer, and the thing that is founde out by cunning, the similitude of beastes, or any vayne stone that hath bene made by hand of olde. * Or as when a carpenter cutteth Esa.44.b. downe a tre out of the wood, & pareth of yͤ Jere.x.a. barcke of it cunningly: & so with yͤ one part maketh a vessel to be vsed, & dresseth meat with yͤ residue. As for the other part that is lefte, which is profitable for nothing (for it is a croked pece of woode & ful of knobs) he carueth it diligẽtly thorow his vanity, and according to the knowledge of his cũ-ning he geueth it some proportion, fashio-neth it after yͤ similitude of a man, or ma-keth it like som beaste, straketh it ouer w read, & painteth it, and loke what foule spot is in it, he casteth som colour vpon it.

D The maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wall, & maketh it fast with yron, prouiding so for it, lest it happē to fall: for it is wel knowen, that it cā not helpe it selfe: And why, it is but an image, and must of necessity be helped. Then goeth he, and offereth of his goodes vnto it, for his childrē, and for his wife: he seketh helpe at it, he asketh counsel at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it ŷ hath no soule: for health, he maketh his petitiō vnto him that is sicke: for life, he prayeth vnto hym that is dead: he calleth vpon him for helpe that is not hable to helpe him selfe: and to sende him a good iourney, he prayeth him that may not go. And in all the thinges ŷ he taketh in hand (whether it be to obtaine any thyng or to worke) he prayeth vnto him, that can do no maner of good.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

The detestation, and abhomination of Images. A curse of thē, and of him that maketh them. The euelles that come of Idolatry.

A AGayne, another man purposing to sayle, and beginning to take his iourney thorowe the raginge sea, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke, ŷ is farre weaker, thā the tre that beareth him. For as for it, couetousnesse of mony hath foūd it out, & the craftesman made it with hys cunnyng.
But thy prouidēce, O father, gouerneth Exo 14.b al thinges from the beginning. For thou hast made a way in the sea, & a sure path in the middest of ŷ waues: declaring ther-by, that thou hast power to helpe in al thīges: yea, though a man wēt to ŷ sea without ship. Neuerthelesse, that the workes B of thy wisdome should not be vaine, *thou Gen. 6.b hast caused an Arke to be made: and therfore do men commit their liues to a smale pece of woode, passing ouer the sea, in a shippe, and are saued.
Gen. 7.d *For in ŷ old time also when the proude giauntes perished, he (in whom the hope was left to increase the world) went into the shyp, wich was gouerned thorow thy hand, & so lefte sede behinde him vnto the worlde. For happy is the tree, where tho-row righteousnesse cometh: but cursed is Psal. 115. a. the ydol that is made with handes: yea, both it and he that made it. He, bicause he and. 135.c made it, and it bicause it was called God.
Baruc. 6 d. where as it is but a fraile thing. *For the Psa. 7. d vngodly, & his vngodlinesse are both like abhominable vnto god. Euen so ŷ worke and he ŷ made it also: shalbe punished together. Therfore shal ther a plage come vpon the Idolles of the Heathen: for out of the creatures of God, they are become an abhominatiō, a temptation vnto the sou-les of men, & a snare for the fete of the vnwise. And why, the seking oute of Idolles is the beginning of whoredom, & the bringing vp of them is the destruction of lyfe. C For they wer not frō the beginnig, nether shall they continue for euer. The welthy Idlenes of mē hath found them out vpō earth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for hys sōne that was taken awaye from him, he made him an Image (in al the hast) of hys dead sonne, & so began to worship him as a god, which was but a dead man, & ordayned his seruauntes to offre vnto him.
Thus by processe of time: & thorow an vngratious custom, this errour was kept as a law, & tirauntes compelled men by vio-lēce to honoure images. As for those that wer so far of, that men might not worship thē presētly, their picture was brought frō farre (like the image of a kyng whom they would honour) to the intent ŷ with greate diligence they might worship him whiche was far of, as thoughe he had ben presēt.
Again, the singular cunning of the craftesman gaue the ignoraunte also a great occasion to worship images. For ŷ worke-man willing to do him a pleasure that set him a worke, laboured with al his cūning D to make the image of the best fashion.
And so (thorow the beautye of ŷ worke) ŷ cōmon people was deceaued, in so muche that they toke him now for a God, whiche a litle afore was but honored as a man.
And this was ŷ errour of mānes life, whē men (ether for to serue their own affectiō, or to do some pleasure vnto kinges) ascribed vnto stones & stockes ŷ name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.
Moreouer, this was not inoughe for thē that they erred in ŷ knowlege of God; but wher as thei liued in ŷ great wars of igno-raunce, those many, & great plages called De.1 they peace. For ether thei slue their own Iere.7 childrē, and offred thē, or did sacrifice in ŷ and.1 night season, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so ŷ they kept nether life nor ma-riage cleane: but ether one slue another to death maliciously: or els greued his neighbour wt aduoutrye. And thus wer al thin- E ges mixt together: bloud, manslaughter, theft, dissimulation, corruptiō, vnfaithfulnesse, sedition, periury, disquieting of good men,

men, vnthankfulnesse, defiling of soules chaunging of birth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage, misorder of aduoutrie and vnclennesse. And why? the honouring of abhominable images is ye cause, the beginning, and end of all euell. For they that worship Idoles: ether they are mad when they be mery, or prophecie lies, or liue vngodly, or els lightely forsweare them selues: For in so much as their trust is in the Idoles (which haue nether soule nor vnderstanding) thoughe thei sweare falsely, yet they thincke it shall not hurt them.

Therfore commeth a great plage vpon thē, & that worthely, for they haue an euel opinion of God, geuing hede vnto Idoles, swearing vniustly to deceaue, & dispising righteousnesse. For their swearyng is no vertue, but a plage of them that sinne, and goeth euer with the offence of ye vngodly.

The.xv.Chapter.

The voice of the faithfull, praising the mercy of God, for whose graces sake they serue not Idoles.

1 But thou (O our god) art swete, long suffering, & true, & in mercy ordrest thou all thynges. Thoughe we sinne, yet are we thine, for we know thy stregth. Yf we sinne not, then are we sure, ye thou regardest vs. For to know the, is perfecte righteousnesse. Yea, to know thy righteousnesse and power, is the rote of immortality. As for the thing ye men haue found out thorow their euell science, it hath not disceaued vs: as the paintinge of the picture (an vnprofitable laboure) and carued image, with diuers coloures, whose sight enticeth the ignoraunt: so that he honoureth and loueth the picture of a dead image that hath no soule.

B Neuerthelesse, they that loue such euell thinges, are worthy of death: they ye trust in them, they ye make them, they that loue them, and they ye honour thē. The potter also taketh and tempereth softe earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashion of a vessel, whatsoeuer serueth for our vse, and so of on pece of clay he maketh som cleane vessel for seruice, and some contrary. But where to euery vessell serueth, that knoweth the potter him selfe. So with his vaine labour he maketh a God of the same clay: this doth euen he, which a litle afore was made of earth him selfe, & within a litle while after (when he dieth) turneth to earth againe.

C Notwithstanding, he careth not ye more bicause he shal laboure, nor bicause his life is short: but striueth to excel goldsmithes, the siluer smithes, & copersmithes, and taketh it for an honour to make vaine thinges. For his hert is asshes, his hope is but vaine erth, and his life is more vile than clay, for so muche as he knoweth not hys owne maker, that gaue him his soule to worke, and brethed in him ye breath of life. They counte our life but a pastime, & our conuersation to be but a market, and that men shoulde euer be getting, and that by euel meanes. Now he that of earth maketh fraile vessels and images, knoweth him selfe to offende aboue al other.

Al the enemies of thy people that holde D thē in subiection, are vnwyse, vnhappy, & exceding proude vnto their owne soules: for they iudge al the idolles of the Heathē to be goddes, which nether haue eyesight to se, nor noses to smel, nor eares to heare nor fingers, or hādes for to grope: and as for their fete, they are to slowe to go. For man made them, & he that hath but a borowed spirit, fashioned them. But no man cā make a God lyke vnto him: for seyng he is but mortal himselfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He him selfe is better thā they whom he worshipped, for he liued though he was mortal so did neuer thei. Yea, thei worship beastes also, which are most miserable: for cōpare thinges, that can not fele vnto them, and they are worse than these.

Yet is there not one of these beastes that with his sight can behold any good thing, neyther haue they geuē praise or thanckes vnto God.

The.xvi.Chapter.

The punishment of Idolaters, and the benefites done vnto the faithfull.

FOr these & such other thinges A haue they suffered worthy punishement, & thorow the multitude of beastes are they roted out. In steade of ye which punishmētes thou hast graciously ordred thine own people, & geuen them their desire that they longed for: a new & straunge taste, *preparing them quailes to be their Nu.xi.g. meate: to the intent that (by the thynges whiche were shewed and sent vnto them) they that were so gredye of meate, mighte be withdrawen euen from the desire that was necessarye. But these within shorte tyme were brought vnto pouerty, and tasted a new meate. For it was requisite that (without any excuse) destructiō shuld come vppon those whiche vsed tyrannye, and to shew only unto yͤ other, how their enemies were destroyed.

Sap.xxi.b *For when the cruel wodnesse of yͤ beastes came upō them, they perished thorow B the stinges of the cruell serpentes. Noth-stādinge thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they wer put in feare for a litle season, that they might be reformed, hauing a tokē of saluation, to remember the commaundement of thy law. For he that con-uerted, was not healed by yͤ thīg yͤ he saw, but by thee, O sauioure of all. So in this thou shewedst thine enemies, that it is yͤ, which deliuerest frō all euel. As for them Exo.x.d. *when they wer bittē with grashoppers and flyes, they died, for they were worthy to perish by suche. But neyther the teth of dragons nor of venemous wormes ouercame thy children, for thy mercie was euer by them, and helped them. Therfore, were they punished to remember thy wordes, but hastily wer they healed again, lest they should fal into so depe forgetfulnesse, that they might not use thy helpe. It was nether herbe nor plaister that restored thē to health, but thy word (O lord,) which hea-C leth al things. It is thou, (O Lord,) that Deu.32.f hast yͤ power of life & death: *thou leadest 1.Re.2.b. unto deathes dore, & bringest up againe.
But man thorow wickednesse slayeth his own soule, & when his spirit goeth forth, it turneth not again, nether may he cal againe the soule that is taken away. It is not possible to escape thy hande. For yͤ un-godly that would not know the, were punished by the strength of thine arme: with straunge waters, hailes and raynes were they persecuted, and thorow fire were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thing that fire myght do more than water which quenched al thinges, but the world is the auenger of the righteous. Some time was the fire so tame, yͤ the beastes whiche wer sent to punish the ungodly, brent not: & that bicause they should se & know, that they were persecuted with the punishmēt D of god. And somtime brent yͤ fire in yͤ water on euery side, yͤ it might destroye yͤ un-Exo.16.a righteous nation of the earth. * Againe, thou hast fed thine owne people with Angels fode, & sent thē bread ready frō heauē (without their labour) being very pleasaūt and of good tast. And to shew thy riches & swetenesse unto thy children, thou gauest euery one their desire, so yͤ euery mā might take what liked him best. But the snow & yse abode the violence of the fire & melted not: that they might know, that yͤ fire burning in yͤ haile & raine, destroyed the frute of yͤ enemies: yͤ fire also forgat his strength again, yͤ the righteous might be norished.
For the creature yͤ serueth thee (which art E the maker) is fearce in punishing the unrighteous, but it is easie and gentle to do good, unto suche as put their trust in the.
Therfore did all thinges alter at yͤ same time, and wer al obedient unto thy grace, which is the nurse of al things, according to yͤ desire of them that had nede therof: yͤ thy children, (O lord,) whom thou louest, might know, * that it is not the nature of Deu.8.a the growing of frutes that fedeth men, Mat.4.a but that it is thy worde, which preserueth them that put their trust in the. For loke what might not be destroyed with yͤ fire, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle sunne beame, it melted: that al men might know, that thanckes ought to be geuē unto the before the sunne rise, and that thou oughtest to be worshipped before the daye spring. For the hope of the unthankefull shal melte away as the winter yse, and perishe as water, that is not necessarye.

The.xvii.Chapter.

The iudgementes of God upon the Egiptians. A Greate are * thy iudgements, Roma.11 O lord, & thy counsels cā not be expressed: therfore men do erre, that will not be refourmed with thy wisdome. * For Exo.1.c whē yͤ unrighteous thought to haue thy holy people in subiection, they wer bound with the bandes of darkenesse, & long night, shut under yͤ rofe, thinkyng to escape yͤ euerlastyng wisdome. And while they thought to be hid in the darkenesse of their sinnes, they wer scatered abrode in yͤ very middest of yͤ darke coueryng of forget-fulnesse, put to horrible feare & wōderous trouble: for they had no corner wher they might kepe them frō feare (bicause yͤ sound came down & vexed them): yea, many terrible & straūge visions made thē afraide.

No power of the fire might geue them B light, neither might the cleare flammes of the starres lighten that horrible nyght.
For there appeared unto them a sodaine fire, very dredfull. At the whiche (when they sawe nothing) they were so afrayde, that they thought the thyng whiche they Exo.7.b sawe, to be the more fearfull. * As for the sorcery and enchauntment that they used, it came to derision, and the proude wisdome was brought to shame. For they that promised to driue awaye the fearfulnesse and drede from the weake soules, were sycke
for

for feare them selues, & that with scorne.
And though none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayed of the beastes which came vpon them, and at the hyssing of the serpētes. In so much that with treblyng they sowned, and sayd: they saw not the ayre, which no man yet may escape.
C For it is an heuie thing, when a mans own conscience beareth recorde of his wickednesse and cōdempneth hym. And why? a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh Psal.47 a euer cruell thinges in hande. * Fearful-nesse is nothing els, but a declaring that a man seketh helpe and defence, to answer for him selfe. And loke how much lesse the hope is within, ỹ more is the vncertaintie of the matter, for ỹ which he is punished.
D But they that came in the myghty nyght, slepte the slepe that fel vpon thē from vnder and from aboue: some time were they afrayde thorow the feare of the wonders, and some time they were so weake ỹ they sowned withall: for an hastie and sodaine fearfulnesse came vpon them.
D Afterward, yf any of them had fallen, he was kept and shut in prison, but without chaines. But yf any dwelt in a village yf he had bene an heard or husbandman, he suffered intollerable necessitie: for they wer al bound wt one chaine of darkenesse.
Whether it were a blasing wynde, or a swete song of the birdes among ỹ thycke braunches of trees, or the vehemencye of vasty running water, or great noise of the falling downe of stones, or the plaiyng & runnyng of beastes whom they sawe not, or the myghty noise of the rearing beasts, or the sound that answereth agayne in the hye mountaines: it made them sowne for very feare. For all the earth shined with cleare light, and no man was hyndered in his laboure. Only vpon them there fel an hevy night, an ymage of darcknesse that was to come vpon them: Yea, they were vnto them selues the most heuy and horrible darkenesse.

The .xviii. Chapter.

The fire lyght that the Israelites had in Egipt. The persecution of the faithful. The Lord smote all the first borne of Egipt. The sinne of the people in the wildernesse. Aaron stode betwyxt the liue and ỹ dead, with his censoure.

A Neuertheles, thy saintes had a very great lyghte (and the enemies heard their voice but they saw not ỹ figure of thē.) And bicause they suffered not the same thinges, they magnifyed thee: & they that were vexed afore (bicause they were not hurt nowe) thanked the, and besought the (O God) that there might be a difference. * Therfore had they a burning Ex. 14 b piller of fire to leade them in the vnkno-wen waye, and thou gauest them the Sunne for a free gyfte without any hurt.
Reason it was that thei should want light and be put in the prison of darknesse, whiche kept thy childrē in captiuity, by whom the vncorrupte lyghte of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuen.
* When they thought to slay the babes of B Exo.1.b. the ryghteous (one beyng layde oute, and Exo.14.c preserued to be leader vnto the other,) * thou broughtest out the whole multitude of the children, and destroyedst these in the myghtye water. Of that nyght were our fathers certified afore, that they knowing vnto what othes they had geuen credēce, might be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued the health of the righteous but the vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou haste hurt our enemyes, so haste thou promoted vs whome thou calledest afore. For the righteous children of the good men offered secretly, and ordred the law of righteousnesse vnto vnity: that the iuste shoulde receaue good and euil in like maner, singing praises vnto the father of all menne. Againe, there was hearde an vnconuenient voice of the enemies, and a pyteous crye for children that wer bewailed. The master and the seruaunt were punished in lyke maner. For they altogether had innumerable that dyed one deth. C Exo.12 c * Neyther were the lyuyng sufficient to bury the dead, for in the twynkelyng of an eye, the noblest nations of them was destroyed. As ofte as God helped them afore, yet would it not make them beleue: but in the destruction of the firste borne, they knowledged, that it was the people of God. For while al thinges wer stil, and when the night was in the myddest of her course, thy Almyghtye worde, O Lorde, leapte downe from heauen out of thy royall throne, as a rough man of warre, in ỹ myddest of the land that was destroyed: & ỹ sharpe swerd perfourmed their straight commaundement, standing and filling all things with death: Yea, it stode vpon the earth and reached vnto the heauen. Thē the sight of the euill dreames vexed them sodenly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares.
Thē lay there on here, another ther, half dead,

dead, half quicke & shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed thẽ, shewed them these thinges afore: so that they wer not ignoraũt wherfore they perished.

D The tẽptation of death touched ÿ righteous also, & among the multitude in the wildernesse there was insurrectiõ, but thy wrath endured not long. For ÿ blameles man went in al the hast, & toke the battaile vpon him, brought forth the weapõ of his ministration: euen prayer & the censoures of recõciling: set him selfe against ÿ wrath, and so brought the misery to an end: declaring therby, that he was thy seruaũt. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodely power, nor with weapons of might: but with the word he subdued him that vexed him, putting them in remembraunce of ÿ othe & couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the dead were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, & parted the waye vnto the liuyng. * And why? in his

Exo. 28. a. b. c. long garment was al the beauty, and in ÿ the foure rowes of ÿ stones was the glory of the fathers grauen, & thy maiestye was written in the crowne of his heade. Unto these the destroyer gaue place, and was afrayed of them: for it was onely a temptacion worthy of wrath.

The.xix.Chapter.

The death of the Egiptians, and the great ioy of the Hebrues. The meate that was geuen at the desire of the people. The elementes serue not onely to the will of God, but also to the wil of man.

A As for ÿ vngodly, ÿ wrathe came vpõ thẽ without mercie vnto the ende. For he knew before what shoulde happen vnto thẽ, howe that (when thei had consented to let them go, and had sent out with great diligence) they would repent, & folow vpõ them. * For when they wer yet mourning

Exo.14.a and making lamentation by the graues of the dead, they deuised another folishnes: so that they persecuted thẽ in their flying, whom thei had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessity also brought them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten ÿ thinges that happened vnto them afore. But the thing ÿ was wanting of their punishment, was requisite so to be fulfilled vpon thẽ with tormentes, that thy people might haue a maruellous passage thorow

B & that these might finde a straũge death. Thẽ was euery creature fashioned again of new, according to ÿ wil of their maker, obeing thy commaundemẽtes, that thy children might be kept without hurt. For the cloud ouershadowed their tẽtes, & the dry erth appered, wher afore was water: so ÿ in the red sea, there was a waye without impediment; and the great depe became a grene fielde: where thorow all the people went ÿ wer defended wt thy hande, seyng thy wonderous & maruelous workes.

For as the horses, so wer they fedde, and leaped lyke lãbes, praisyng the, O Lorde, which haddest deliuered them: And whye? they wer yet mindeful of the thinges that happened while they dwelt in ÿ land: how the ground brought forth flyes in stead of catel: and how the ryuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges, in steade of fyshes.

* But at ÿ last they saw a new creation C Exod. Nu.14. of birds, what time as they wer deceaued with lust and desired delicate meates. For when they wer speaking of their appetite, the quailes came vp vnto them frõ ÿ sea, & punishmentes came vpon ÿ sinners, not without the tokẽs which came to passe afore by the vehemẽcie of the streames: for they suffered worthily according to theyr wickednesses, they dealt so abhominably & churlishly wt strangers. Some receaued no vnknowẽ gestes: som brought ÿ straungers into bondage ÿ did thẽ good. Beside al these thinges there wer some, ÿ not only receaued no straũgers with their wylles, but persecuted those also, * & dyd them much euil, that receaued thẽ gladly. Therfore wer they punished with * blindnesse, like as thei ÿ wer couered wt sodain darknesse at the dores of ÿ righteous, so that euery one sought ÿ entraunce of his dore.

Thus the elementes turned into thẽ selues, like as when one tune is chaunged vpon an instrument of musyke, and yet all the residue kepe their melodye, which may easily be perceaued, by the syghte of the thinges that are come to passe.

D The dry land was turned into a water, & the thing ÿ afore swamme in ÿ water, went now vpon the dry ground. The fyre had power in the water, cõtrary vnto his owne vertue: & the water forgat his own kinde to quench. Again, the flames of poisom beastes hurte not the flesh of thẽ that went with them, nether melted they ÿ yse, which els melteth lyghtely. In al thinges hast thou promoted thy people (O Lorde) and brought them to honour: thou hast not dispised them, but alway, and in al places hast thou stande by them.

The Prologue of Iesus the sonne of Sirach vnto his Boke.

Many and great men haue declared vvisedom vnto vs out of the lavv, out of the prophetes,& out of other that folovved thē. made with the faythfull in the mothers wombe:it shall go with the chosen wemen, & shalbe knowen of the righteous & faithful. The feare of the lord is the right God seruice , that preserueth and iustifyeth the hert,and geueth mirth and gladnesse.
Whoso feareth the Lord shalbe happy,and whē he hath nede of cōfort,he shalbe blessed. To feare god is the wisdom þ maketh rich,& bringeth al good with her. She fil-leth the whole house with her giftes,& the garners with her treasure. The feare of þ Lorde is the crowne of wisdom, & geueth plẽteous peace & health. He hath sene her and numbred her: knowledge & vnderstã-ding of wisdome (which are the gyftes of God) hath he powred out as rayne, and them that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honoure.

The feare of the Lorde is the roote of wisdome, and her braunches are long life.
In the treasures of wisdome is vnderstã-D ding and deuotion of knowledge, but wis-dome is abhorred of sinners. The feare of the Lord dryueth out synne, for he that is without feare, cã not be made righteous, and his willful boldenesse is his own destruction. A pacient man will suffer vnto the time, and thẽ shal he haue the reward of ioy. A good vnderstãding wil hyde his wordes for a time, and many mennes lippes shall speake of his wisedome. In the treasures of wisedome is the declaration of doctrine, but the sinner abhorreth the worship of God. My sonne yf thou desire wisdom, kepe the commaũdement, & God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurtour, he hath pleasure in faith and louing mekenesse, & he shall fill the treasures thereof. Be not obstinate & vnfaithful to ye feare of ye lord, & come not vnto him wt a double hart. Be not an Ipocrite in the sight of men, & take good hede what thou speakest. Mark wel these thinges, lest thou happen to fal, and bring thy soule to dishonour, & so God dis-couer thy secretes, & cast ye down in ye middest of the cõgregatiõ: bicause thou woul-dest not receaue ye feare of God, & bicause thy hert is full of fainednesse & dysceite.

The .ii. Chapter.

He exhorteth ye seruauntes of God to ryghteous-nesse, loue, vnderstanding, and pacience, & exhorteth him that feareth god, to belieue, to hope, and to loue, bicause God neyther confoundeth nor forsaketh them that trust in him. Acurse vpõ the suttle, fearce, and impacient of heart.

O ye that feare the Lorde, set your loue v-

Consider the olde generations of men, O B ye children, and marke them well: * was Psal.

in his feare, and was forsaken? Or whom did he euer dispise, that called faithfully vpon him: For god is gratious & mercifull, he forgeueth sinnes in ye time of trouble, & is a defender for all them that seke him in the trueth. Wo be vnto him that hath a double heart, wycked lippes & euell occupied handes, and to the sinner that goeth two maner of wayes. Wo be vnto thẽ that are lose of heart, which put not their trust in God, and therfore shall they not be defended of him. Wo be vnto thẽ that haue lost patience, forsaken the right wayes, & are tourned backe into froward wayes.
What will they do, when the Lorde shall C kepe his commaundement. They ye feare the Lord, wil seke out the thinges, that ar his mercye is as great as him selfe.

The .iii. Chapter.

To our father & mother ought we to geue double honoure. Of the blessyng and curse of the father and mother. No man ought ouer curiouslye to searche out the secretes of God.

The children of wisdome are a A congregatiõ of the righteous, & their exercise is obedience & loue. Heare me your father, O my deare children, & do thereafter, that ye may be safe. * For ye lord wil haue the father honoured of the children: and loke what a mother commaũdeth her children

children to do, he wil haue it kept. Who so honoureth his father, his sinnes shalbe forgeuen him: * and he that honoureth his mother, is lyke one ÿ gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne children, and when he maketh his prayer he shalbe hearde. He that honoureth his father, shal haue a long life: and he that is obediẽt for the Lords sake, his mother shal haue ioye of him.

B He that feareth the lord, honoureth his father and mother, & doth them seruice, as it were vnto the Lord him selfe. Honoure thy father in dede, in word, & in al paciẽce, that thou mayest haue Goddes blessing, & his blessing shal abyde with the at the last.

*The blessing of the father buildeth vp the houses of the childrẽ, but the mothers curse roteth out the foundations. Reioyce not when thy father is reproued, for it is not honoure vnto the, but a shame. For the worship of a mannes father is his own worship, and where the father is without honoure, it is the dishonesty of the sonne. My sõne, make much of thy father in his age: and greue him not as longe as he lyueth. And if his vnderstanding faile, haue pacience with him, and despise him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgottẽ: and when thou thy selfe wantest, it shalbe rewarded the (& for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompẽced with good: yea, it shalbe founded for the in righteousnesse) & in ÿ day of trouble ÿ shalt be remẽbred: thy sinnes also shal melte away, like as the yse in the faire warme wether.

C He that forsaketh his father, shal come to shame: and he that defyeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, performe thy workes with louig mekenesse, so shalt thou be loued aboue other mẽ. The greater thou art, the more humble thy selfe in al thinges, & thou shalt fynde fauour in ÿ sight of God. For great power belongeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowly.

Psal.131. a. Prou.25. d Roma.12. a. * Seke not out ÿ things that are aboue thy capacity, and search not the ground of such things as are to myghty for thee: but loke what God hath cõmaunded ÿ, thinck vpon that alwaye, and be not curious in many of his works. For it is not nedefull for the, to se with thine eyes the thinges ÿ are secrete. Make not thou to much search in superfluous things, and be not curious in many of his workes: for many thinges are shewed vnto the already, which be aboue the capacitye of men. The medlyng with such hath begiled many a man, and tangled their wittes in vanity. Now he ÿ loueth parel, shal perish therin.

D An hard hert shal feare euill at ÿ laste: (and he that loueth daunger shal perishe therin,) an hert that goeth two waies, shal not prospere: & he that is froward of hert, wil euer be worse & worse. A wycked hert shalbe laden with sorowes, and the vngodly sinner will heape one sinne vpon another. The counsell of the proude hath no health, for the plante of sinne shalbe roted out in thẽ, and not knowen. The hert of him that hath vnderstanding shall perceaue hye thinges, and a good eare will gladly herken vnto wisdome. An hert that is wise and hath vnderstanding, will abstaine from sinnes, & encrease in the workes of righteousnesse. Water quencheth burning fire, * and mercy reconcileth sinnes. Psa.xli.a God hath respecte vnto him that is thankful: he thincketh vpon him agaynst the time to come: so that when he falleth, he shall finde a strong holde.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Almes must be done with all mekenesse. The studie of wisdome and her frute. A iudge oughte to be mercifull. An exhortation to eschue euil and to do good.

My sonne, * defraude not the pore A of his almes, & turne not awaye Deu.xv.b thine eyes from hym that hathe nede. Dispise not an hũgry soule, and defie not the poore in his necessitye: greue not the hert of him that is helplesse, and withdraw not thy gift from the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not away thy face from the nedye. Cast not thyne eyes asyde from the pore, for any euill, that thou geue him none occasion to speake euil of the. For yf he complayne of the, in the bitternesse of his soule, his prayer shalbe herd: euen he that made him shall heare him. Be curteous vnto the cõpany of the poore: humble thy soule vnto the elder, & bow downe thy head to a mã of worship. Let it not greue the to bow down thine eare vnto ÿ poore but pay thy det, and geue him a frendelye answere, and that with mekenesse.

B *Deliuer him that suffreth wrong frõ Esa.14.c. the hand of the oppressour, & be not fainte harted when thou syttest in iudgemẽt. Be merciful vnto ÿ fatherlesse as a father & be in stead of an husbãd vnto their mother so

so shalt thou be as an obedient sonne of ÿ hiest: and he shall loue the more than thy mother doth. Wysedome bredeth life into her children, receaueth them that seke her and wil go before thē in the way of righteousnesse. He that loueth her, loueth lyfe, & they that seke her diligentlye, shall haue great ioye. They that kepe her, shal haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honour her, shalbe the seruauntes of ÿ holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge the Heathen: & he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safelye.

C He that beleueth her shall haue her in possession, and his generation shal endure: for when he falleth she doth go with him, and cheseth him among the best. Feare, dread, and temptation shall she bryng vpō him, and trye him in her doctrine: till she haue so proued him in his thoughtes, that he commit his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablysh him, bring the right way vnto him, make him a glad man, shew hym her secretes, and heape vpō him the treasures of knowledge, vnderstanding and righteousnesse. But yf he go wrong, she shal forsake him, and geue him ouer into the handes of his enemye.

D My sonne, make much of ÿ time, eschue the thing that is euill, & for thy life shame not to say the truth. For there is a shame that bringeth sinne, and there is a shame that bringeth worshyp and fauoure: *Accepte no person after thine one will, that thou be not confounded to thine owne decay. Be not ashamed of thy neyghbour in his aduersitie, & kepe not backe thy counsel when it may do good, neyther hyde thy wysdom in her beauty. For in the tong is wysdome knowen, so is vnderstandyng, knowledge, & learning in the talking of ÿ wise, & stedfastnesse in ÿ workes of righteousnesse. In no wyse speake againste the worde of truth, but be ashamed of ÿ lyes of thine owne ignoraunce. Shame not to confesse thine errour, and submyt not thy selfe vnto euery man bicause of sinne. Withstand not the face of the myghty, and stryue thou not against the streame. But for righteousnesse take paines with al thy soule, and for the truth striue thou vnto death, and God shal fight for thee against thine enemies. Be not hastie in thy toung, neither slacke & negligent in thy workes. Be not as a Lion in thine own house, destroiyng the housholde folkes, and oppressyng them that are vnder the. *Let not thine hand be stretched oute to receaue, & shut when thou shouldest geue.

Leui xix.c — Act.xx.g

The.v.Chapter.

In riches may we not put any confidence. The vengeaunce of God ought to be feared, and to repitaunce may we not be slowe.

Trust not vnto thy riches, * & I say not: tush, I haue ynoughe for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in ÿ time of vengeaūce, and temptation.) Folowe not the lust of thine own heart in thy strēgth, and say not: tushe, how haue I had strēgth or who wil bring me vnder bicause of my workes? for doubteles God shall auenge it. And saye not: I haue sinned, and what euill hath happened me? For the Almighty is a pacient rewarder.

B *Bicause thy sinne is forgeuen thee, be not therfore without feare, neither heape one sinne vpon another. * And saye not: tushe, the mercye of the Lorde is great, he shal forgeue me my sinnes, be they neuer so many. *For lyke as he is mercyfull, so goeth wrath from him also, and his indignation commeth downe vpon sinners.

C Make no tarying to turne vnto ÿ lord and put not of from day to day: for sodenly shal his wrath come, and in the time of vengeaunce he shal destroy the. *Trust not in wycked ryches, for they shal not helpe the in the day of punishment & wrath. Be not caried about with euery wynde, & go not into euery way, for so doth the sinner that hath a double tong. Stande fast in ÿ way of the Lord, be stedfast in thy vnderstanding, abide by the word, and folow ÿ word of peace and righteousnesse. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, and make a true aunswer with wisedome. * Be swifte to heare, but slow & pacient in geuing answer. If thou hast vnderstanding, shape thy neyghbour an answere: If no, lay thy hand vpon thy

D mouth, lest thou be trapped in an vndiscret worde, & so confounded. Honour and worship is in a mans wise talking, but ÿ tong of the vndiscrete is his owne destruction. Be not a priuy accuser as long as thou liuest, & vse no slaunder with thy tōg. For shame and sorow goeth ouer ÿ theefe, and an euil name ouer him that is double tonged: but he that is a priuy accuser of other men, shalbe hated, enuyed & confounded. Se ÿ thou iustifie the smal & great alike.

standing,(lest thy strength be hurt by foo-lishnesse,and)lest thy leaues wither, and wicked soule destroyeth him that hath it, maketh him to be laughed to scorne of his first and be not hastie to geue him credẽce.

For som man is a frende but for a time, & there is some frende that turneth to enemitie,and taketh part against the,& yf he know any hurt by the, he telleth it out.*

A faithfull frend hath no peere,ŷ weight

Lord shal prospere with his frendes:& as he is him selfe,so shal his frends be also.
My sonne,receaue doctrine frõ thy youth olde. Go to her as one that ploweth and soweth,& waite pacietly for her good fru-tes. For thou shalt haue but litle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of her frutes right soone. O howe exceadyng sharpe is wisdome to vnlearned men:an vnstedfast body wil not remaine in her.

Unto such,she is as it were a touchstone, and he casteth her from him in al the hast, for wisdom is with him but in name,there be but few that haue knowlege of her.
(But with them that knowe her, she aby-deth euen vnto the appearing of God.) Geue eare(my son)receaue my doctrine, neck:bowe downe thy shulder vnder her, beare her pacientlye,& be not wery of her bandes. Come vnto her with thy whole hert,& kepe her wayes with al thy power.

Seke after her,and she shalbe shewed the,
and when thou hast her,forsake her not. D For at the last thou shalt fynd rest in her,& that shalbe turned to thy great ioye.Then shal her fetters be a strong defence for the and her yoke a glorious raiment. For the beauty of life is in her,and her bãdes, are the couplyng together of saluation. Yea,& glorious raiment is it,thou shalt put it on, and the same crowne of ioy shalt ŷ weare.
My sonne,yf thou wilt take hede,thou shalt haue vnderstanding,& yf thou wylte applye thy mynde, thou shalt be wyse. If thou wilt bow down thine eare thou shalt receaue doctrine,and yf thou delite in hearing,thou shalt be wise. Stande with the Loke not vpon a woman that is desirous of many men, lest thou fall into her snares. Use not the cōpany of a woman that is a player & a daunser and heare her not, lest thou perish thorow her enticing. Beholde not a mayden, that thou be not hurt in her beauty. Cast not thy minde vpon harlottes in any maner of thig, lest thou destroy both thy selfe and thine heritage. Go not about gasyng in euery lane of the citie, nether wander thou abroade in ẏ streats therof. Turne away thy face from a beautifull woman, and looke not vpon the fairenesse of other.* Many a man hath perished thorow the beauty of wemen, for thorow it the desire is kyndled as it were a fyre. An aduouterous woman shalbe troden vnder fote as mire, of euery one that goeth by ẏ way. Many a man wondering at the beauty of a straunge woman hath bene cast out, for her wordes kyndle as a fire. Sit not with another mannes wife by any meanes, lie not with her vpon the bed: make no wordes with her at the wine, least thine heart consent vnto her, & so thou with thy bloud fall into destruction. Forsake not an olde frend, for the new shal not be lyke him.

And thoughe ẏ Phisicion shew his help

C *Prosperity, & adversity, life, and death povertye, and richesse come al of the Lord.
Wisedom, nurtour, and knowledge of the lawe, are with God: love, and the wayes of good are with him. Errour, and dark-nesse are made for sinners, (and they that exalte them selves in evill, ware olde in evel.) The gifte of God remaineth for the righteous, & his good will shal geve prosperity for ever. Some man is riche by ly-his reward, in that he sayeth: * now have I gotten rest, and now wil I eat & drinke of my goods my self alone. And yet he cõ-sidereth not, that the time draweth nye (& death approcheth) that he muste leave all these things unto other men, and die him-

D worke unto thy age. Continue not in the worcks of siners, but put thy trust in god: and bide in thine estate: for it is but an ea-sye thyng in the sight of God, to make a pore man rich, & that sodely. The blessing of God hasteth to the reward of the righteous, & maketh his fruts sone to florish, & prosper. Saye not: what helpeth it me? & what shal I have yͤ while? Againe, say not:
I have ynoughe, how can I wante?
*When thou arte in welfare, forget not adversitye: & when it goeth not wel wͭ thee, have a good hope, that it shalbe better.
For it is but a smal thing unto God, in the day of death to reward every man according to his wayes. The adversitye of an houre maketh one to forget al pleasure: & when a man dyeth, his workes are discovered. Prayse no bodye before his death:
E for a man shalbe knowen in his children.
Bring not every man into thine house, for the disceatful layeth wayte diverslye.
Like as a partrige in a maunde, so is the hert of the proude: and lyke as a spye that loketh upon the fall of hys neyghboure.
For he turneth good unto evel, and slaundereth the chosẽ. Of one sparke is made a great fire, (& of one disceatful mã is bloud increased,) & an ungodly mã layeth waite for bloud. Beware of yͤ disceatfull for he imagineth wicked things, to bring yͤ into a perpetual shame. Yf yͤ takest an aleaunt unto thee, he shal destroy thee in unquiet-nesse, & drive thee from thine own waies.

and geveth no almes, for the hyest hateth the sinners, and hath mercy upon thẽ that shew the workes of repentaunce. Geve thou unto such as feare God, and receave not a sinner. As for the ungodlye and synners, he shal recompence vengeaunce un-Geve thou unto thẽ good, and receave not the sinner: do wel unto hym that is lowly but geve not to the ungodlye. Let not the than they selfe therin. For so shalt thou receave twyce as much evill, in all the good that yͧ doest unto him. And why? yͤ hyghest hateth sinners, & shal reward vengeaunce to the ungodlye. In prosperitye, a frende shal not be knowen: & in adversity an ene-wealth, it greveth his enemies: but in he-vines and trouble a man shall knowe hys frende. Trust never thine enemie, for like as an yron rusteth, so doth his wickednesse and thoughe he make muche crouching &

The. xiii. Chapter.

The companies of the proude and of the riche are to be eschued. The loue of God. Lyke do company with their lyke.

A Who so toucheth pitche, shal be syled withall: & he that is familiar with ẏ proud, shall clethe hym self wyth pride. He taketh a burthen vpō him, that accompanyeth a more honourable man than him selfe. Therfore kepe not familiaritye with one that is rycher than thy selfe. How agree the ketel & the pot together? for yf the one be smitten against the other, it shalbe broken. The riche dealeth vnryghteously, and threatneth with all: but the pore being oppressed, and wrongfully dealte with all, suffereth scarcenesse, and geueth faire woordes. Yf thou be for his profite, he vseth the: but if thou haue nothing, he shall forsake thee. As long as thou hast any thyng of thine own, he shal be a good felow w thee: yea, he shall make the a bare man, and not be sory for thee. Yf he haue nede of thee, he shal defraude thee: (and with a priuy mocke) shal he put the in an hope, and geue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shall he shame the in his meate, vntill he haue supte the cleane vp twyce or thryce, and at the last shal he laughe thee to scorn. Afterwarde, when he seeth that thou hast nothing, he shall forsake thee, and shake his heade at thee. (Submit thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon his hande.)

B Beware that thou be not disceaued, and brought downe in thy simplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wisdome: lest when thou art brought low, thou be disceaued thorow folishenesse. If thou be called of a mighty man, absente thy selfe, so shall he cal the to hym the more ofte. Preace not thou vnto him, that thou be not shut out: but go not thou farre of, least he forget the. Withdraw not thy selfe from his speche, but beleue not hys many words. For with much communication shall he tempte the, and (with a priuy mocke) shal he question thee of thy secretes. The vnmercifull mynde of his shall marke thy wordes, he shal not spare to do the hurt, & to put the in prison. Beware and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in perill of thy ouerthrowyng.

Now when thou hearest his wordes, make thee as though thou werest in a dreame, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and cal vpon him in thy nede. Euery beast loueth hys lyke, euen so lette euery man loue his neyghboure. Al fleshe will resorte to their like, and euery man will kepe company with such as he is him selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth the vngodly with the righteous. C * What felowshippe should an holy man haue with a dogge? How can the rich and ẏ pore agre together? The wilde Asse is the lyons pray in the wildernesse, euen so are pore men the meate of the rich. Like as the proude may not away with lowlynesse, euen so do the riche abhorre the pore. If a rich man fall, his frendes set him vp againe: but when the poore falleth, his acquaintaunce forsake him. If a riche man fal into an errour, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye him.

D But if a poore man go wrong, he is punished: yea, though he speake wysely, yet can it haue no place. When the riche man speaketh, euery body holdeth his tong: and loke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto ẏ cloudes. But if the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? and yf he do amysse, they shall destroye him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no sinne in hys conscience, and pouertye is a wicked thing in the mouth of the vngodly: The heart of a man chaungeth his countenaūce whether it be in good or euil. A cherefull countenaunce is a token of a good heart, for elles it is an harde thyng to knowe the thoughte.

A Delite not thou in ẏ multitude of ungodly children, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not god. Trust not thou to their lyfe, and regarde not their labours: for one sonne that feareth God is better, than a thousande ungodly. And better it is for a man to dye without children, than to leaue behinde him suche children as are ungodlye. For by one that hath understanding, may a whole citie be upholden, but though the ungodly be many, yet shal it be wasted thorow thē. Many such things hath mine eye sene & greater thinges than these haue I heard with

Like as his mercy is great, euen so is his punishment also, he iudgeth a man according to his workes. The ungodlye shall not escape in his spoile, and the long pacience of him that sheweth mercy, shal not bide behind. Al mercy shal make place unto euery man according to the worthinesse of his workes, and after the understanding of his pilgrimage.
C Say not thou: I wil hyde my self from god, for who will thinke upon me from aboue? I shal not be knowen in so great an heape of people, for what is my soule among so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen: yea, the heauen of heauens, the depe, the earth, and al ẏ therin is shalbe moued at his presence: ẏ mountaines, the hilles, & the foundatiōs of the earth shall shake for feare when God visiteth thē. These thinges doth no hart understande, but he understandeth euery hart, and who understādeth his wayes? No mā seeth his stormes, and ẏ most part of his workes are secret. Who wil declare the works of his rightousnesse? Or who shalbe able to abide the? For the couenaunt is far from some, and the trying out of mē is in the end. He that is humble of hart, thinketh upon such thinges: but an unwise and erronious mā casteth his minde unto folish thinges.
D My sonne, herken thou unto me, and learne understādinge, and marke my wordes with thine hert, I will geue the a sure doctrine, and plainly shall I instruct the: (marke my wordes thē in thine hart: for in rightousnesse of the spirit do I speake of the wonders ẏ God hath shewed among hys workes from the beginning. And in truth do I shewe the knowledge of him.) God hath set his workes in good order frō the beginning and part of thē hath he sundred from ẏ other. He hath garnished hys workes from euerlasting, and their beginninges, according to their generations. None of them hyndred another, nether was any of thē disobediēt unto his word. After this, God loked upon the earth, and filled it with his goodes. With al maner of liuing beasts hath he couered the ground, & thei al shalbe turned unto earth againe.

of wyckednesse, it is no wysedome and the prudence of sinners is no good vnderstã-

The.xx. Chapter.

Of correction, and repentaunce. Of the gyft of the wise man: and of the foole. Of lying.

Some

Some man reproueth his neighbour ofte times, but not in due season: Againe som man holdeth his tōg, and he is wise and discret. It is much better to geue warning, and to reproue, than to beare euil wil: for he that knowledgeth him selfe openly, shalbe preserued from hurt and destruction. Like as when a gelded man thorow desire and lust defyleth a mayden, euen so is it with hym that vseth violence: & vnrighteousnesse in the law. O how good a thing is it, a man that is reproued to shew opēly his repentaūce: for so shalte thou escape wilfull sinne.

Some man kepeth stilence, and is foūd wise: but he that is not ashamed, what he sayeth, is hateful. Some man holdeth his tunge, bicause he hath not the vnderstandyng of the language: & some man kepeth silence, waiting a conueniente time. * A wise man wil hold his tong til he se oportunity, but a wanton and vndiscret body shall regard no time. He that vseth many words shall hurt his owne soule, & he that taketh auctority vpon him vnrightouslye, shalbe hated. Some man hath ofte times prosperity in wicked things: Againe, som man getteth muche, & hath harme & losse. There is som gift that is nothing worth: Againe, there is some gifte, whose reward is double. Some man getteth a fall for being to proud, and som commeth to worshyppe from low estate. Some man bieth muche for a litle pryce, and must praye for it seuen folde.

To daye he lendeth, to morowe he asketh agayne, and such a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thancke for all my good dedes: yea, euen they that eate my breade, speake no good of me. O how ofte, and of howe many shal he be laughed to scorne & he taketh a more perillous fal by such wordes thā yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the falles of wycked men come hastily. In the mouthe of hym that is vntaughte, are many vnconuenient, & vnmete wordes. A wyse sentence shal not be alowed at the mouth of the fole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man sinneth not, bicause he hath not where withal, and in his rest he shalbe stinged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwise bodyes sake destroyeth he it, and with acceptyng of persons shall he vndo hym selfe. Some man promiseth his frend a gifte for very shame, and getteth an enemy of him for noughte. A lye is a wycked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouthe of the vnwyse. A theefe is better than a man that is accustomed to lye, but they both shall haue destruction to heritage. The conditions of lyars are vnhonest, and their shame is euer with them. C

A wyse man shal bryng him selfe to honour with his wordes, * and he that hath vnderstanding, shalbe set by among great men. * He that tilleth his lande shall encrease his heape of corne: he that worketh righteousnesse shalbe exalted, and he that pleaseth great men, shal escape much euil. * Rewardes, and giftes blynd the eyes of the wise, and make him dūme, that he cannot tel men their faultes. * Wisdome that is hyd, and treasure that is hoorded vp, what profite is in thē both? Better is he ȳ kepeth his ignoraunce secret, than a man that hydeth hys wysdome.

Exo.xx.c * First, she hath bene vnfaithfull vnto the lawe of the hyghest: Secondelye, she hath forsaken her owne husbande. Thyrdelye, she hath playde the whore in aduouterye, and gotten her children by another man.
She shall be brought oute of the congregation, and her children shalbe loked vpon. Her children shall not take roote: and as for fruite, her braunches shall bryng forthe none. A shamefull reporte shall she C leaue behinde her, and her dishonoure shal not be putte oute.
And they that remayne, shall knowe, that there is nothing better, than the feare of God: and that there is nothing swetter than to take hede vnto the commaunde-mentes of the Lorde. A great worshippe is it to folowe the Lorde, for long life shal be receaued of him.

The.xxiiii.Chapter.

A prayse of wisedome procedyng forthe of the mouth of God. Of her workes and place where she resteth.

A Wysedome shall prayse her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the middest of hys people: in the congregations of the highest shall she open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholding of his power: in the middest of her people shall she be exalted and wondred at in the holyfulnesse.
In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe commended, and among suche as be blessed, she shalbe praysed and shall saye: I am come oute of the mouth of the highest, firste borne before all creatures.
I caused the lyght that fayleth not to arise in the heauen, and couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwellynge is aboue in the heyghte, and my seate is in the pyller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute the compasse of heauen and pearsed the grounde of the deape: I haue walked in ÿ floudes of the sea, and haue stande in all landes: my dominion is in euerye people and in euerye nation, and with my power haue I troden downe the heartes of all, both hye and lowe.
In all these thynges also I soughte B reste, and a dwellyng in some inheritaũce.
So the creator of all thynges gaue me a commaundement: and he that made me ap-poynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: let thy dwelling be in Jacob, and thine inheritaunce in Israell, and rote thy selfe amonge my chosen.
* I was created from the beginning Pr. and before the worlde, and shall not leaue of vnto the worlde to come. * In the holy Ex. habitation haue I serued before him, and so was I stablished in Sion.
* In the holye citye rested I in like ma- Psa. ner, and in Jerusalem was my power, I toke roote in an honourable people euen in the portion of the Lorde, and in hys heritage, and kepte me in the fulnesse of the Saincetes. I am sette vp an hye lyke a Ceder vppon Libanus, & as a Cypres tree, vpon the mounte Hermon: I am exalted lyke a Palme tree in Cades, and as a Rose plante in Jericho: as a fayre Oliue tree in the fielde, and am exalted lyke as a plantaine tree by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the stre-tes as the Cinamom and Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: yea, a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Mirre of the beste.
I haue made my dwellinges to smell C as it were of Rosen, Galbanum, of Clo-ues, and incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and my odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Terebinth haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are the braunches of ho-noure and louing fauoure. * As the vine Joh. haue I brought forthe fruyt of a swete sauoure

fauoure, and my floures are the frute of honoure and riches. I am the mother of beauty, of loue, of feare, of knowlege, and of holy hope. * In me is all grace of life & trueth. In me is all hope of lyfe & vertue.

O come vnto me, all ye that be desirous of me, and fill your selues with my frutes: for my spirite is sweter than hony, and so is myne inheritaunce more than the honye combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me, shall haue the more hunger, and they ỹ drinke me, shall thirste the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shal not come to confusion: and they that worke in me, shal not offẽd. They that make me to be knowne, shall haue euerlasting lyfe.

All these thinges are the booke of lyfe, the couenaunte of the hyghest, and the knowlege of the truth. * Moses commaunded the law in the preceptes of righteousnesse for an heritage vnto the house of Iacob, and committed the promises vnto Israel. * Out of Dauid his seruaunte he ordened and raysed vp a moste myghtye kyng syttyng in ỹ seate of honoure for euer more: * he filleth all things with wisedome lyke as the floude of Phison, and as the floud of Tigris, when the newe frutes are growyng.

D * He bringeth a plenteous vnderstandyng lyke Euphrates: and filleth it vp as Iordaine in the tyme of haruest. This maketh nurture to breake forth as ỹ light, and as the water Geon in the harueste.

The first hath not knowen her perfectly, no more shall the last seke out the grounde of her. For her thought is fuller than the sea, and her councell is profounder then the greate deepe.

I wysedõme haue cast oute floudes. I am as a great waterbroke oute of the riuer. I am as the ryuer Dorix, and as a waterconduite am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I will water the garden of my yong plantes, and fill the frute of my byrth. So my water broke became exceading great, and my ryuer approched vnto the see. For I make doctrine to be vnto al mẽ as light as the faire morning, and I shall make it to be euer the clearer. I will pearse thorow all the lower partes of the earth, I will looke vpon all suche as be a slepe, and lyghten all them that put theyr trust in the Lorde. I shall yet poure out doctrine, lyke as prophecie, and leaue it vnto suche as seke after wysdome, and theyr generation shall I neuer fayle, vnto the holye euerlasting worlde. * Beholde, howe that I haue not laboured for my selfe onely, but for al them that seke after the truthe. Ecc.34.c

The.xxv.Chapter.

Of thre thinges whiche pleaseth God, and of thre whiche he hateth. Of nyne thynges that be suspecte, and of the tenth chefelye of the malice of a woman.

Thre thynges there are, that my spirite fauoureth, which be also alowed before God and men. * The vnity of brethrẽ, * the loue of neyghbours, * a manne and wyfe that agre well together. A
Gen. 13.b Ro.xii.a Ecc.xl.d

Thre thynges there be whyche my soule hateth, and I vtterlye abhorre the life of them. A poore man that is proude. A ryche man that is a lyer, * and an olde body that doteth, and is vnchaste. Ge.18.b

Yf thou haste gathered nothyng in thy youth, what wylte thou fynde then in thyne age. O howe pleasaunt a thyng is it, when graye headed menne are discrete, and when the elders can geue good counselle. O how comelye a thyng is wysedome vnto aged menne? yea, vnderstandyng and counsell is a glorious thyng. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience: and the feare of God is theyr worshyppe.

There be nyne thynges, whiche I haue iudged in myne hearte to be happye, and the tenthe will I tell forthe vnto men with my tongue. A man that whyle he lyueth, hath ioye of his children, and seeth the fall of his enemyes. Wel is him that dwelleth with an huswyfe of vnderstanding, * and that hath not fallen with hys tongue, and that hath not bene fayne to serue suche as are vnmete for hym. Well is hym that fyndeth a faythfull frende, and well is hym whiche talketh of wysdome to an eare that heareth hym. O howe greate is he, that fyndeth wisedome and knowledge? Yet is he not aboue hym, that feareth the Lorde. The feare of God hath sette it selfe aboue all thinges. Blessed is the man vnto whome it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Unto whome shall he be likened, that kepeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynning of hys loue, and the beginnyng of fayth is to cleaue faste vnto it. B

The heuinesse of the hearte is all the punishement, and the wickednesse of a woman goeth aboue all. All punishment and plague is nothyng in comparison of the plage of the heart, euen so al wyckednesse is nothing to the wickednesse of a womã.

What soeuer happeneth vnto a man is nothyng in comparison of it, that hys euill willers doe vnto him: and all vengeaunce is nothing to the vengeaunce of the enemye.

There is not a more wicked head than C the head of the serpente, and there is no Pro.xxi.a. wrath aboue the wrath of a woman. * I wil rather dwell with a Lion and a Dragon, than to kepe house wyth a wycked wyfe.

The wyckednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, she shal muffle her countenaunce as it were a beare, and as a sacke shall she shewe it among the neyghbours. Her husbande is brought to shame among his neyghbours and when he heareth it, it maketh hym to syghe. All wyckednesse is but lytle to the wyckednesse of a woman, the portion of the vngodlye shall fall vpon her.

Lyke as to clymé vp a sandye waye is

The.xxvi.Chapter.

The prayse of a good woman. Of the feare of three thinges, and of the fourth. Of the gelous and dronken woman. Of two thynges that cause sorowe, and of the thirde which moueth wrath.

Happye is the man that hathe a vertuous wyfe, for the nũber of his yeares shal be double. An honest womã maketh her husbande a ioyfull man, and she shall fyll the yeares of hys lyfe in peace. A vertuous womã is a noble gifte, which shalbe geuen for a good portion vnto suche as feare God: Whether a man be ryche or poore, he maye haue euer a merye hearte, and a cherefull countenaunce. A

There be thre thinges that my heart feareth, and my face is afrayde of the fourth. Treason in a citie, a seditious people, and noisome tongues, al these are heuier than death. But when one is gelous ouer hys wife, it bringeth payne and sorowe vnto the heart: and a woman that telleth out al thinges, is a scourge of the tongue. When one hath an euill wife, it is eu͂e as whẽ an vnlike payre of oxen must draw together. * he that getteth her, getteth a Scorpion. A dronken woman is a great plague, for she can not couer her owne shame.

The whordome of a woman maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes and eye lyddes. B * Yf thy daughter be not shamefast, holde her straytly, lest she abuse her selfe thorow ouer much libertye: Beware of all the dishonesty of her eyes, and maruelle not yf she do agaynst the. Lyke as one that goeth by the waye and is thirsty, so shall she open her mouth, and drynke of euery next water that she may get.

By euery hedge shall she sitte downe, and open her quyuer against euery arow. A louing wife reioyseth her husband, and fedeth his bones with her wisedome. A woman of fewe wordes is a gift of God, & to a wel nurtured mynde may nothing be compared.

An honest and manerlye woman ys a gyfte aboue other giftes, and there is no C weyght to be compared vnto a minde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the sunne when it aryseth, is an ornamente in the hyghe heauen of the Lord, so is a vertuous wife the beautye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lyght is vpon the holy candlesticke so is the beauty of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pillers are vpon the sockettes of siluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constaunte mynde. Perpetuall are the foundations that be layed vpon an whole stonye rocke: so are the commaundementes of god vpon the heart of an holy woman.

[illegible] the pore that woulde be riche. The probation of the man that feareth God. The vnconstauntnesse of a fole. The secretes of a frend, are not to be vtte[red]. The wycked imagineth euill, which retourneth vpon himselfe.

By cause of pouertye haue many one offended: & he that seketh to be riche, tourneth hys eyes aside. Lyke as a nayle in the wall sticketh fast betwixte two stones, euen so doeth sinne sticke betwixte the byer & the seller. Yf he hold him not diligently in the feare of the lord, his house shall soone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as whe[n] one syfteth, y filthinesse remaineth in the syue: So remayneth there som vncleane thing in the thought of man. The ouen proueth the potters vessell, * so doeth tēptation of trouble trye righteous men.

* The tree of the fielde is knowen by hys fruite, so is the thoughte of mannes heart knowen by his wordes. Prayse no man excepte thou haue heard him, for a man is knowen by his words. Yf thou folowest rightcousnesse, thou shalt get her, and put her vpō thee as a faire garment. And y shalt dwell with her, & she shall defende the for euer: and in the day of knowledge thou shalt finde stedfastnesse. The birdes resorte vnto their lyke: so doeth the trueth turne vnto them that be occupyed withall. The Lyon wayteth the praye: So doe the sinners lurke vpon the worhers of wickednesse. The talkyng of him y feareth God, is nothing but wisedome: as for a foole, he chaungeth as y Moone. Yf thou be among the vndiscret, kepe thy wordes tyll a conuenient tyme, but among such as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkyng of fooles is abhomination, and their sporte is voluptuousnesse and misnurtour. * Muche swearing maketh thy heere to stande vp, and to striue with suche stoppeth the eares.

Yea, thou canst not come by him: For he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roe escaped out of y snare, for his soule is woūded. They that reioyce at the fal of thē righteous, shalbe taken in the snare: anguishe of hearte shall consume them before they dy. Angre and rigorousnesse are two abhominable thinges, and the vngodlye hath thē both vpon him.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

We oughte not to desire vengeaunce, but to forgeue the offence. Of the vyces of the tongue, and of the daungers therof.

A HE that seketh vengeaūce, shal fynde vengeaunce of the Lorde, whiche shall surelye kepe him his sinnes. *Forgeue they neighboure the hurte y he hath done to the and so shal thy sinnes be forgeuen the also, when thou prayest. A mā that beareth hatred against another, how dare he desire forgeuenesse of God? He that sheweth no mercye to a man which is lyke himselfe, how dare he aske forgeuenesse of his sinnes? If he y is but flesh, beareth hatred & kepeth it, who will entreate for his sinnes. Remēbre the end, and lette enemitie passe, which seketh death and destruction, and abide thou in the commaundementes, remembre the cōmaundementes, so shalte thou not be rigorous ouer thy neyghboure.

De. 32. a. Ro. xii. c. Mat. v. b. & vi. b. 18. b.

Thynke vpon y couenaūt of the highest, and forgeue thy neighbours ignoraunce.

B Beware of strife: and thou shalte make thy sinnes fewer. For an angry mā kindleth variaunce, and the vngodly disquieteth frendes, & putteth discord among thē that be at peace. The more woode there is, the more vehement is the fire: and the mightier that men be, the greater is the wrathe, and the longer the strife endureth the moore it burneth.

Ecc. 38. a Pro. 26 a.

An hasty brauling kindleth a fire, and hastye strife shcddeth bloud. A tongue also that beareth false witnesse bryngeth death. If thou blowe the sparke, it shall burne. If thou spitte vpon it, it shall goe forth: and both these go out of thy month. *The slaunderer & double tonged is cursed, for manye one that be frendes setteth he at variaunce. The thirde tong hath disquieted many one, and driuen them frō one land to another. Strong cities, of the ryche hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowen the houses of great menne. The strength of y people hath it brought down and bene the decay of mighty nations.

Ec. xxi. d

Thy third tong hath cast out manye an honest woman, and robbed them of their labours. Whoso herkeneth vnto such, shal neuer finde rest, and neuer dwell safely. The stroke of the rod maketh adders, but the stroke of the tong smytteth the bones in sunder. There be manye that haue perished with the swearde, but manye moe thorowe the tong.

C Wel is him that is kepte from an euill tong and commeth not in the anger therof, whiche draweth not the yoke of suche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the yoke therof is of yron, and y band of it of stiele. The deth therof is a verye euill death: hell were better for one than suche a tong. But the fire of it may not oppresse thē that feare God, and the flame therof may not burne them. Such as forsake the Lorde, shall fal therin: and it shal burne them, and no man shall be able to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, and deuoure them as a leoparde. Thou hedgest thy goodes with thornes: why doeste not thou rather make doores and barres for thy mouthe? Thou weyest thy golde and siluer, why doest thou not weye thy wordes also vpon the balaunce? Beware, that thou slyde not in thy tong, and so fall before thine enemyes, that lay wayte for thee, and thy fall be incurable, euen vnto death.

The. xxix. Chapter.

How we ought to lende our money: and doe almesse. Of a faythful man answeryng for his frend. Of liberality and Hospitalitye.

A WHo so will shewe mercy, let him lende vnto hys neyghboure: and he that is able, let him kepe y commaundement. Lende vnto thy neyghboure in tyme of hys nede, and paye thou thy neyghbour agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde, and deale faythfully with him and thou shalt alway finde the thing that is necessarye for thee. There haue bene many, that when a thyng was lent them, rekened it to be founde, and made them trauaille and laboure that had helped thē. While they receyue any thyng, they kysse the handes of suche as geue them, and for their neighbours good they humble their voyce. But when they should pay agayne, thei kepe it backe, & geue euil wordes, and make many excuses by reason of y time: & though he be able, yet geueth he scarce the halfe againe, and rekeneth the other to be founde. And yf he withholde not his money, yet hath he an enemye of him, & that vndeserued.

Deu. [illegible]

He payeth hym with cursynge and rebuke, and geueth him euill wordes for his good deede. There be manye one, whiche are not glad for to lende, not bicause of euill, but they feare to lese the thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pacience with y the simple, and withhold not mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes nedes sake, and lette him not goe empty fro thee because of his necessitye. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burie it not vnder a stone, wher it rusteth and corrupteth.

B *Gather thy treasure after the commaundement of the highest, and so shall it bring thee more profite than golde: Laye vp thy almesse in the hād of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all euell.

*A mans almesse is as a purse with him, and shal kepe a mans fauour as the apple of an eye, and afterwarde shal it arise, and paye euerye man his rewarde vpon hys heade. It shal fyght for the against thyne enemys, better thā the shield of a giaunt, or speare of the mightie.

C A good honest man is suretye for hys neyghbour, but a wycked personne letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshyp of thy suretye, for he hath geuen hys soule for thee. The vngodlye dispyseth the good dede of his surety, and the vnthankful and ignoraunte leaueth his suretye in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neyghbour: and when he hath lost his honestie, he shall forsake him. Suretishyppe hath destroyed many a riche man, and remoued them as the waues in the sea. Mighty people hath it driuen awaye, and caused them to wander in straunge countreyes. An vngodly man trāsgressing the commaundement of the Lorde shal fal into an euill suretishyppe: And though he force himselfe to gette out, yet shall he fall into iudgement. Helpe thy neyghbour out after thy power: and beware that thou thy selfe fall not into suche det. *The chiefe thing that kepeth in the life, is water and bread, clothing, and lodginge to couer thy shame.

D Better it is to haue a poore liuyng in a mannes owne house, than delicate fare among the straunge. *Be it litle or muche that thou hast, hold thee contente withal, and thou shalte not be blamed as a vagabound: for a miserable life is it, to goe frō house to house: and wher a man is frende, he dare not open his mouth. Though one be lodged, and haue meate and drinke, yet shal he be taken as vnworthy, and heare many bitter rough wordes, namely thus: Goe thy waye thou straūger, and prepare a table for thi selfe, and fede me also of that thou hast. Awaye thou straunger, so that he regardeth his honoure no more, my brother commeth into my house, and so he telleth him the necessitie of his house. These thynges are heuye to a man that hath vnderstanding: namely, ÿ forbidding of the house, and that the lender casteth him in the teeth.

The.xxx. Chapter.

Of the correction of children. Of the commoditie of health. Death is better than a sorowfull lyfe. Of hydde wisedome. Of the ioye and sorow of the hearte.

A Who so loueth hys childe, *holdeth him still vnder correctiō that he may haue ioye of him afterward, and that he grope not after his neighbours dores. *He that teacheth his sonne, shall haue ioye in him, and nede not to be ashamed of him, among his acquaintaunce. Who so informeth and teacheth his sonne, greueth the enemy, and before his frendes he may haue ioye of him. Though thy father dye, yet is he as thoughe he were not dead: For he hath left one behind him that is like him. In his life he sawe him, and hadde ioye in him, and was not sory in his death, neyther was he ashamed before his enemyes. For he left behind him an auenger against his enemies, and a good doer vnto the frendes. He that chasteneth his childe bindeth the woundes together, that his heart may feare euery worde. An vntamed horse will be hard, and a wanton childe wil be wilfull. Yf thou bring vp thy sonne delicately, he shall make the afrayde: and yf thou play with him, he shal bring ÿ to heuinesse. Laugh not wt him, lest thou wepe with him also, and lest thy teeth be set on edge at the laste.

B *Geue him no libertie in his youth, and excuse not his folie. Teache thy childe, and be diligent therin, least it be to thy shame. Better is the poore being whole and strong, than a man to be riche, & not to haue his health: Health and wel fare is aboue all gold, and a whole body aboue all treasure. There is no richesse aboue a sounde body, and no ioye aboue the ioye of the hearte. Death is better than a wretched lyfe, and eternall rest better than continuall sycknesse. Where is there such a one and we shal cō-might offend, and hath not offended? Who fore shall hys good be stablished, and the open not thy mouthe wyde vpō it, & make eye is a shrewe.

What thyng created is worse than a wicked eye? therfore wepeth it before eue-ry mans face: Laye not thine hande vpon B euery thing that thine eye seeth, and striue not with him in the dish. * Ponder by thy selfe, what thy neyghbour would faine haue, and be discrete in euery point. Eate the thing that is set before thee manerly, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to much, lest thou be abhorred. Leaue thou of first of al bicause of nourtour, least thou be he whom no man maye satisfie, whiche maye turne to thy decay. When thou sittest D among many men, reach not thine hande out first of all. * O howe well content is a wise man with a litle wine? so that in slepe thou shalte not be sycke thereof, nor fele any paine. A swete wholesame slepe shall such a one haue, and fele no inward greif.
He riseth vp by times in the morning and is well at ease in him selfe. But an vnsa-ciable eater slepeth vnquietlye, and hath ache and paine of the body. Yf thou feelest thee that thou hast eaten to muche, arise, go thy way, cast it out of thy stomacke, and take thy rest: and it shall ease thee, so that thou shalt bring no sicknes vnto thy body.
My sonne, heare me, & despise me not, C and at the last thou shalt finde as I haue tolde thee. * In all thy workes be diligent and quicke, so shall ther no sicknesse happe vnto thee. * Who so is liberall in dealyng out his meate, many men shall blesse him, and praise him with their lippes: and the same is a sure token of his loue and faith-fulnesse. But he ye is vnfaithful in meate, the whole citie shall complain of him: and that is a sure experience of his infidelitie, and wickednesse. * Be not thou a wine bibber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man.
The fire proueth the harde yron, euen so doth wine proue the heartes of the proud, when they be dronken.
* Wine soberly dronken, quickeneth the D lyfe of man. Yf thou drynkest it measurably, thou shalt be temperate. What lyfe is it, that maye continue without wine?
What taketh awaye lyfe? euen deathe.
Wyne was made from the beginning to make men glad, and not for dronkennesse.
Wyne measurably dronken is a reioycyng of the soule and body. (A measurable drinkyng is health to soule and bodye.)
But

But yf it be dronken with excesse, it maketh bitternes & sorow unto the mynde. Dronkēnesse fylleth ẏ mynde of the folish with shame & ruine, minisheth ẏ strength and maketh woundes. *Rebuke not thy neyghbour at the wyne, and dispise him not in his myrth. Geve him no dispitefull wordes, and preace not upon him with contrarye sayinges.

¶ The .xxxii. Chapter.

Of discretion and prayse of the preacher, and of the hearer. Of the feare, faith, and confidence in God.

A If thou be made a Ruler, *pride not thy selfe therin, but be thou as one of the people. *Take diligent care for them and loke well therto: and whē thou hast done al thy duty, set the downe, that thou mayest be mery with them, and receave a crown of honour. Talke wisely and honestly, for wisdom becommeth thee right well. Hindre not musicke. Speake not, wher there is no audience: *& poure not forth wysedom out of time, at an importunity. Lyke as the Carbuncle stone shyneth that is set in gold, so doth a songe garnishe the wine feast, and as the Smaradge that is set in golde, so is the swetenesse of Musyke by the mirth of wyne. (Geve eare and be still, and for thy good behaviour thou shalt be loved.)

B Thou yong man speake that becommeth thee, and that is profitable, and yet scarce when thou art twyce asked. Comprehēde muche with fewe wordes. In many thinges be as one that is ignoraunt: geve eare and holde thy tong withal. Yf ẏ be among mē of higher autority, desire not to cōpare thy selfe unto them: and when an elder speaketh, make not thou many wordes therin. Before the thunder, goeth lightening, and before nourtour and shamefastnesse goeth love and favoure. Stande up by times, and be not the last: but gette the home soone, and there take thy pastime, & do what thou wilte: so that thou do no evil and defie no mā: but afore al thinges geve thankes unto him that hath made thee, & replenished thee with his goodes.

C Whoso feareth the Lord, will receave his doctrin: and they that get them to him by times, shall fynde grace. he that seketh the law shalbe filled withal. As for him ẏ is but fayned, he wilbe offended thereat. They that feare the Lorde, shall finde the Judgement, & their righteousnesse shalbe kindled as a lyght. An ungodly man will not be refourmed, but can helpe him selfe, with the example of other in his purpose. A man of understādinge dispiseth no good counsaill: but a wilde & proude body hath no feare. Yea, even when he hath dealte rashly with another man, but his owne doynges shalbe hys rebuke. My sonne, do nothing without advisement, so shal it not repente thee after the dead. Go not in the way wher thou mayest fal, nor wher thou mayest stumble against ẏ stone. Geve not thy selfe into a laborious slippery way, & beware of thy children, and take hede of them that be thine own housholde. In all thy workes, put thy trust in God, from thy whole harte, for that is the keping of the cōmaundementes. Who so beleveth goddes worde, taketh hede to the commaundementes: and he that putteth hys truste in the Lord, shall wante nothyng.

The .xxxiii. Chapter.

The delyveraunce of him that feareth god. The answere of the wyse. The litle discretion of a foole. Man is in the hande of God, as the earth is in the hand of the potter. We ought not to dispose our selves to become subiect to other.

There shall no evil happen unto him ẏ feareth God: A but when he is in temptation, the Lord shal deliver him, & kepe him from evil. A wise mā hateth not the law, but an ypocrite is as a ship in a raging water. A man of understanding geveth credence unto the law of God, and the law is faithfull unto him. Be sure of the matter, then talke therof: Be first wel instruct, thē mayest thou geve answer. The heart of ẏ folish is like a cart whele: & his thoughtes runne about lyke an axel tree. Like as a wild horse ẏ neieth under every one that sitteth upon him, so is it with a scornful frend. Why doth one day excel another, seyng al ẏ dayes of the yere com of the Sunne? The wysdom of ẏ Lord hath so parted them asundre, and so hath he ordained the times, & solemne feastes. Some of thē hath he chosen and halowed before other dayes. And al men are made of the *ground, and out of the earth Gen. ii. A best. * Against euill is good, and againste death is life: so is the ungodly against such as feare God. Beholde, these are the wor-kes of the highest, and there are euer two against two, and one set against another.

I am awaked up last of al, as one that ga-thereth after in haruest. In the giftes of God, and in his blessyng I am increased, and haue fylled my wynepresse, lyke a Ec.24.d grape gatherer. * Beholde, howe I haue not laboured only for my selfe, but for all suche as loue nourtoure and wysedome.

C Heare me, o ye great men of the people, and herken with your eares ye rulers of the cõgregation. Geue not thy sonne and wife, thy brother and frende, power ouer thee, while thou liuest: and geue not away thy substaunce and good to another, leste it repente thee, and thou be fayne to beg therfore thy selfe. As long as thou lyuest

For better it is thy children to pray thee, than that thou shouldest be fayne to loke in their handes. In all thy workes be excellent, that thine honour be neuer stay-ned. At the tyme when thou shalt end thy dayes, and finish thy life, distribute thine enheritaunce. The fodder, the whippe, & the burthen belongeth unto ÿ asse: Meate, correction, and worke unto thy seruaunt.
Yf thou set thy seruaunt to labour, thou D shalte fynde rest. But if thou let hym goe ydle, he shall seke lyberty. The yoke, and the whipp bowe downe the harde necke, but tame thou thy euil seruaunt with bon-des and correction. Sende him to labour, that he go not ydle. For idlenesse bringeth muche euil. Set him to worke, for that belongeth unto him, and becõmeth him wel.
Yf he be not obedient, bynde his fete: but Eccl.7.c do not to muche to him in any wyse, and without discretion do nothing. * Yf thou haue a faithful seruaunte, let him be unto thee as thine owne soule: intreate hym as a brother, for in bloud hast thou gottẽ him.
Yf thou haue a seruaunte, hold him as thy selfe: for thou haste nede of hym as of thy selfe. Yf thou intreate him euill, and kepest him harde, and makest him to be proude, & to runne awaye from the, thou canste not tel, what waye thou shalt seke him.

The .xxxiiii. Chapter.

Of dremes, diuinations and enchauntmentes. We ought to confute vayne hope, and lyinge. The prayse of them that feare God. Of diuerse workes of men. God doth not alowe the workes of an unfaithfull man.

Unwyse people begile thẽ-selues with vaine and di-sceatful hope, and fooles trust in dreemes. Whoso regardeth dreames, ys like him ÿ will take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after the winde. Euen so is it with the apperinges of dreames. Before the face, is ÿ lykenesse of a face. Who can be clensed of the uncleane? Or what trueth can be spoken of a lyer? Sothsaying, witchcraft, sorcerie and dreaming is but vanitie: like as when a woman trauelleth with child, and hath many fantasies in her hert. Wher as such visions com not of God, set not thine hert upon thẽ. For dreames haue deceaued many a man, and failed them that put their trust therin.

The law shalbe fulfilled without lies, B and wysedome is sufficient to a faythfull mouth. What knowledge hath he that is not tried? A wise man that is wel instruct, understandeth muche, and he that hath good experience can talke of wisdome. He that hath no experiẽce, knoweth litle: & he ÿ erreth, causeth muche wickednesse. He ÿ is not tried, what thigs knoweth he? Who so foloweth no rule, is ful of wickednesse.

When I was yet in errour, I learned muche also: yea, I was so learned that I coulde not expresse it all, and came ofte in peril of death therfore, till I was deliue-red from (it thorow ÿ grace of god.) Now I se, that they whiche feare God haue the right spirit: for their hope standeth in him that can helpe thẽ. And the eyes of ÿ Lord are on them, ÿ loue him. Who so feareth ÿ Lord standeth in awe of no man, & is not afraied, for ÿ Lord is his hope & comforte.

Blessed is the soule of him that feareth ÿ C Lorde: In whom putteth he hys truste?
Who is his strength? * For the eyes of the 1.Par.b.
Lord haue respect unto thẽ that loue him.
He is their mighty protection, and strong ground. A defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote none day, a succoure for stum-blyng, and an helpe for falling. He setteth up the soule, and lighteneth the eyes. He geueth lyfe, and blessing. He that geueth an offering of unrighteous goodes, hys offering is refused: and the scornefull dealynges

inges of ẏ vnrighteous please not God.
The Lorde is theirs onely, that paciently abyde him in the way of the trueth, and of ryghtousnesse. The Hiest doth not alow the giftes of the wicked. * And God hath no delite in the offeringes of the vngodly, nether maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblations. Who so bringeth an offering out of the goodes of the poore, doth euen as one that kylleth the sonne, before the fathers eyes.
D The bread of the nedeful is the life of the poore: he that defraudeth him thereof, is a man of blood. Whoso robbeth his neygh-bour of his liuing, doth as great sinne as-

The.xxxvi.Chapter.

A prayer to God in the persone of all faithfull men: with the praise of a good woman.

H Aue mercie vpon vs, O Lord, A thou God of all thinges. Haue respect vnto vs, shewe vs the lyght of thy mercies, and send thy feare among the heathen and straungers, which seke not after thee, that they may know how that there is no God but thou, and that they may shew thy wonderous workes. Lifte vp thyne heade ouer the outlandish Heathen, ẏ they maye learne to know thy might & power. Like as thou arte halowed in vs before them, so bring to passe, that thou maiest be magnified also in them before vs that they maye know thee, like as we know thee. For ther is none other God but only thou. O Lord, Renue ẏ tokens, & chaunge the wondeway the aduersary, and smite the enemye.

Make the time shorte, remember thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous workes may be praysed. Let the wrath of the fire consume them, that liue so carelesse: & let them perish that do ye people hurt. Smite in su-der the head of the princes that be our enemies, and say there is none other but we.

Gather all the tribes of Jacob together again, that they may know, how that ther is none other God but only thou, that they maye shewe thy wonderous workes, and be thou thy peoples heritage, lyke as from .Cor.2.b the tonge tasteth venisone, * so doth an heart of vnderstanding marke false wor-a man of experience lyfteth him vp again.

D The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better than another.
A faire wyfe reioyceth her husbande, and a man loueth nothyng better. Yf she be louing and vertuous wi hall, the is not her husbande lyke other menne. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodlye possession: she is vnto him a helpe, and piller wherupon he resteth. Wher no hedge is, there the goodes are spoyled: and wher no huswyfe is, there the frendles mourhath no nest: and muste turne in where he may abyde in the nyghte.

The.xxxvii. Chapter.

and afterward he stande against thee, and loke what shall become of thee.

Aske no counsaile at him, that suspec- B teth thee for an enemy, and hyde thy counsaile from such as hate thee. Aske no counsaile at a woman, concerning the thynges that she longeth for, nor at a fearful & faint herted bodye, in matters of warre: or at a marchaunt, how deare he will cheape thy wares towarde hys: or at a bier of selling: Or at an enuious man, of thākes geuing:
Or at the vnmerciful, of louing kindnesse: or at an vnhonest man of honesty. Or at ye slouthfull, of workyng. Or at an hirelyng which hath no house, or profite, of welthe.
An ydle body would not gladly hear speake of much labour. Take no such folks to cousaile: but be diligente to seke counsaile at a vertuous man, that feareth god, suche one as thou knowest to be keper of the comaun-dementes, which hath a minde after thine own minde, & is sory for thee whē thou stublest. And holde thy counsaile fast in thine hart: for there is no man more faithfull to kepe it: than thou thy selfe. For a mans C mynde is some time more disposed to tell out, than seuen watchmen that syt aboue above al this, pray the hyghest that he wil leade thy way in faithfulnesse and trueth.

Before all thy workes aske counsaile first:
and or ever thou doest any thyng, be well avised. Ther be foure thiges that declare a chaüged hert, whereout there springeth evel and good: death and lyfe, and a mas= terful tōg that bableth much. Some man is apte, and well instructe in many thyn= ges, and yet verye unprofytable unto hym selfe. Some man there is, that can geve wyse and prudent counsaile, and yet is he hated, and continueth a begger: for yͤ grace is not geven hym of God to be accepted.
Another is robbed of al wisedom, yet is he wyse unto him selfe, & the frute of under= standing is commendable in his mouth.
D. A wyse man maketh his people wyse, & the frutes of hys wysdom fayle not. A wise man shalbe plenteously blessed of God: & all they that se hym, shall speake good of him. The life of man, standeth in the num= ber of dayes, but the dayes of Israell are innumerable.
A wise man shall obtaine faithfulnesse, & credence among his people, and his name shalbe perpetuall. My sonne, prove thy soule in thy lyfe: and yf thou se any evell every carpēter also, and workemaster that laboureth stil night & day: he carveth, gra= cunning thinges, his heart imagineth how he may cunningly cast an ymage, his dili-he watcheth, how he maye sette it out, and

So doth the potter sit by his worke, he diligent & careful in all doings, and his labour and worke is without numbre. He fashioneth the clay with his arme, & with his feete he tempereth it. His hert imagidiligēce is to clense the ouen. Al these hope in their handes, and euery one thinketh to

The .xxxix. Chapter.

A wise man. The workes of God. Unto the good, good thinges profite, but vnto the euell, euen good thinges are euell.

He that applieth his minde to the vnderstanding of yͤ A law of God, doth diligently seke out the wisdome of them of the olde time, and exerciseth him selfe in the Prophetes. He kepeth the sayings of famous men, & preacheth to the vnderstanding of darke sentēces of wisdō.
He seketh out the mystery of secrete sayin-ges, & exerciseth him selfe therin cōtinually. He doth seruice among great men, & ap-pereth before the Prince. He goeth into a a straunge country, & trauaileth thorow it loke what good or euell is among men, he proueth it, & seketh it out. He purposeth in his hert, to resort early vnto the Lord that made him, and to pray before the Highest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, and prayeth for his sinnes. When yͤ great Lord will, he shall be fylled with the spirit of vnderstanding that he may then poure out D wyse sentences, and geue thankes vnto yͤ Lorde in his prayer. He shall order his de-uice, and leade his knowledge a right: and geue him vnderstādyng of secrete things.
He shall shew forth the science of his learning, and reioyce in the couenaunt of the law of the Lord. The whole congregation shal commende his wisdom, & it shal neuer be put out. The remēbraunce of him shall neuer be forgotten, & his name shall cōtinue frō one generation to another. ✠ Hys wisdom shal be spoken of among the peo- Ec.44.b ple, and the whole congregation shal opely declare his prayse, whyle he lyueth he hath a greater name than a thousand beside: & after his death, the same name remayneth vnto him. Yet will I speake of moe men of vnderstanding. For I am full as the Moone.

Herken vnto me, ye holy vertuous children, bring forth fruite, as the Rose that is planted by the brookes of the field, & geue C ye a swete smel as Libanus. Florish as the Rosegardeine sing a song of prayse.
O geue thākes vnto God ouer al his wor-kes. Geue glory and honour vnto yͤ Lord, shew his prayse with your lyppes: yea, euen wyth the song of your lyppes with harpes, & playing, and in geuing thankes vnto him, saye after this maner. * All the Gen.1.d workes of the Lord are exceading good, & all his commaundementes are mete & cōuenient in due season. A man nede not to say: what is this? what is that? For at time conuenient they shall al be sought. At hys commaundement the water was as a wal and at the word of his mouth, the water stode still. * In his commaundement is Gen.7.d euery thing acceptable and reconciled, & his health cānot be minished. The workes of al flesh are before him, and there is nothing hyd from hys eyes. He seeth from euerlastyng to euerlastyng, and there is nothyng to wonderful, or hye vnto him. A man nede not to say thē, what is this or yͭ?
For he hath made all thinges to doe good vnto man. His blessing shal runne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earth lyke a floude of water. Like as he maketh yͤ water for drouth, so shall hys wrath fall vpon the Heathen.

✠ His wayes are playne and right vnto the iust, but the vngodly stumble at them. E For the good are good thynges created from the beginning, and euill things for yͤ vngodly

vngodly. *All things necessary for the life of man are created from the beginnyng: water, fire, yron, ⁊ salt, meale, wheat, and hony, milke, and wyne, oyle, ⁊ clothing. *All these thinges are created for the best to the faithfull. But to the vngodlye shall al these thinges be turned to ẏ hurt ⁊ harme. There be spirites that are created for vēgeaūce, ⁊ in their rigorousnesse haue they fastened their tormentes. *In the time of the ende they shal poure out their strength ⁊ pacify the wrath of him that made thē. *Fyre, hayle, hunger, and death: all these thinges are created for vengeaunce. The teeth of wylde noysome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the sweard are created also for vengeaunce, to the destructiō of the vngodly.

They shalbe glad to do his commaundementes: and when nede is, they shalbe redy vpon earth: and when their houre is com, they shal not ouerpasse the cōmaundemente of the Lorde.

Therfore haue I taken a good courage vnto me from the beginning, ⁊ thoughte to put these things in Wryting, ⁊ to leaue them behinde me. * Al the workes of the Lorde are good, ⁊ he geueth euery one in due season, ⁊ when nede is, so ẏ a mā nede not to say: this is worse than ẏ. For in due season they are al pleasaunt ⁊ good: And therfore prayse the lord with whole hert ⁊ mouth, ⁊ geue thankes vnto his name.

The.xl. Chapter.

Many miseries light in a mānes life. All thinges passe awaye, but a firme and a stable faith remayneth: Of the blessing of the righteous, and prerogatiue of the feare of God.

A A Great trauaile is created for all men an heuye yoke vpon al men children, from the day that they goe out of their mothers wombe, till they be buried (in ẏ earth) the mother of al thynges: namely, their thoughtes and imaginatiōs feare of ẏ hert, councel, meditatiōs, ⁊ longing, desire the day of death frō ẏ highest that sitteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto ẏ lowest and most simple vpon the earth: from him that is gorgiouslye arayed, and weareth a crowne, vnto him that is but homely, and simply clothed. There is nothyng but wrath, enuy, fearfulnesse, vnquietnesse, and feare of death, rigor, anger ⁊ strife. And in the night, when one shulde rest ⁊ sleape vpon his bed, the slepe chaūgeth his vnderstanding and knowlege. A litle or nothing is his rest. And in slepe his mynde (as when a man dothe lye in a traunce) is troubled with Imaginatiō.

He feareth and is disquieted in the vision of his hert, as one that renneth oute of a battaile, and in the time of health he awaketh and marueilleth that the feare was nothyng. Suche thynges happen vnto all fleshe, both man and beaste: but seuen folde to the vngodlye. Moreouer, death, bloudshedyng, strife, and sweard, oppression, hunger, destructiō, and punishment: * these thinges are all created agaynst the vngodlye, and for their sakes came the floude also. *All that is of the earth, shall turne to earth againe: and all waters ebbe againe into the sea. All brybes and vnrightousnesse shalbe put away, but faythfulnesse and truth shall endure for euer. The substaunce and goodes of the vngodlye shalbe dryed vp, and sinke awaye as the water floude, and they shall make a sound lyke a greate thōder in the rayne.

Like as the righteous reioyceth, when he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressoures be faynte, when their goodes banishe and consume awaye. *The children of the vngodly shall not obtaine many braunches: And the vncleane rootes vpon the hye rockes, shalbe rooted out before the grasse by the water side and vpon the riuer banckes.

Frendlinesse, and liberalitye in the increase and blessyng of God, is like a paradise, and garden of pleasure: such mercy also and kyndnesse, endureth for euer. * To labour, and to be content with that a man hath, is a swete and a pleasaunt lyfe, but sweter than they both in to haue the treasure. To beget children, and to repaire the citie, maketh a perpetual name, but an honest woman ys more worthe than they both. Wyne and musyke reioyce the hert, but the loue of wysedome is aboue them bothe.

Pipynge and harpyng make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thine eye desireth fauour and beauty, but a grene sede tyme, rather than they both. A frende and companion com together at opportunity, but aboue them both is a wyfe that agreeth with her husband. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shall delyuer more than they both. Golde and syluer fasten the feete, but a good councell ys more more pleasaunt than they both. Tempo-rall substaunce and strength, lyft vp the mynde: but the feare of the Lord, more thā they both. The feare of the lorde wanteth nothing, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Lorde is a pleasaunt garden of blessing, and nothing so beautiful as it is.

My sonne lead not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye than to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne liuing howe to vp-hold his life, for he feedeth him selfe with other mennes meate. But a wyse and wel nurtered man wil bewar therof. Begging is swete in the mouth of the vnshamefast, but in his belly there burneth a fire.

The.xli.Chapter.

Of the remembraunce of death. Death is not to be feared. A curse vpon them that forsake the lawe of God. Good name and fame. An exhortation to geue hede vnto wisedome. Of what thinges a man ought to be ashamed.

A O Death, how bitter is the re-membraunce of the, to a man that seketh rest and cōfort in his substaunce and riches, vnto the man that hath nothyng to vexe him, and that hath prosperity in al thinges: yea, vnto him that yet is able to receaue meate: O death, how acceptable and good is thy iudgement vnto the nede-full, and vnto him whose strength faileth, and that is nowe in the last age, & that in al thinges is full of care and fearfulnesse: vnto him also that is in dispaire, and hath no hope nor pacience: Be not thou afraide of death: remember them that haue bene before thee: and ẏ comme after thee: this is the iudgemēt of the Lord ouer all flesh.
Ge. 8.b. *And why wouldest thou be againste the pleasure of the highest: Whether it be ten, an hundreth, or a thousande yeres: death asketh not how longe one hath lyued.
B The children of the vngodly ar abhominable children, & so are they that kepe cō-Ec.40.c pany with ẏ vngodly.* The inheritaunce of vngodly children shall come to naught, and their posteritye shall haue perpetuall shame, and confusion. The children complaine of an vngodly father, & why for his sake they are rebuked and dispised. Wo be vnto you. (O ye vngodly) which haue forsakē the lawe of the Hyghest God: if ye be borne, ye shalbe borne to cursing, if ye die, the curse shalbe your portion.
Ec.40 b *All that is of ẏ earth, shal turne to erth againe: so goe the vngodly also out of the curse into destruction. The sorow of men is in their body: but the name of ẏ vngod-ly shalbe put oute.
*Labour to get the a good name, for that shall continue surer by thee, than a thousande great treasures of gold. A good lyfe hath a numbre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.
*My children kepe wisedome in peace for wisdom that is hyd: & a treasure that is not sene, what profite is in them both? A man that hideth his folishnesse, is better than a man ẏ hideth his wisedome. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in al things, & alway to be aschamed. True faith must proue & measure it.
Be ashamed of whoredom before father & mother: Be aschamed of leasing before the prince & men of auctority: Of sinne before the Iudge & ruler. Of offence before ẏ congregation & people: Of vnrighteousnesse before a cōpanion & frend. Of theft, before thy neighbours. * As for ẏ trueth of god, and his couenaūt, be not aschamed therof.
Be aschamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bread: Be aschamed to loke vpon harlottes: Be aschamed to turne away thy face from thy frende. Be aschamed to take & not to geue. Be aschamed also to loke vpō another mannes wyfe, & to make many trifling wordes w her mayden or to stand by her bedside. Be aschamed to vpbrayde thy frende: when thou geuest any thing, cast him not in the teeth withall.

The. xlii.Chapter.

Secretes may not be opened. The law of God must be taught. A daughter. A woman. God knoweth all thinges: yea, euen the secretes of the harte.

R Ehearse not a thyng twyce, & A disclose not the wordes, ẏ thou hast heard in secret. Be sham-fast, & well manered in dede, so shall euery mā fauour thee.
Of these things be not thou aschamed, and accepte no person to offende. Namelye, of these thinges be not aschamed: of the lawe of God, of the couenaunt, of Iudgement, to bring the vngodly frō his vngodlinesse vnto righteousnesse: and to make hym a good man: to deale faithfully w thy neighbour and companion: to distribute the heritage vnto thy frendes: to be deligent to kepe true measure and weyght: to be content whether thou gettest much or litle: to deale truly with temporall goodes in bying and selling: to bring vp children with diligence

diligence to correcte an euill seruaunte, to kepe that thine is from an euill wife: to set a locke wher many hãdes are: what thou deliuerest, and geuest oute to be kepte, to tell it, and to weye it: to write vp all thy out geuing and receauyng: to enfourme the vnlearned and vnwise: Of the aged, that are Iudged, of the yong. yf thou be diligent in these thynges, trewlye thou shalte be learned and wyse, and accepte of all menne.

B The daughter maketh the father to watche secretelye: And the carefulnesse that he hath for her, taketh away his slepe, yea, in the youth, lest she shuld ouergrow him: And when she hath an husbande, lest she should be hated: lest she should be defyled or rauished in her virginity, or gotten with childe in her fathers house: Or (whē she commeth to the man) lesse she behaue her selfe not righte, or continue vnfruitful. *yf thy daughter be wanton kepe her straightely, lest she cause thine enemyes to laugh thee to scorne, and the whole citie to geue the an euill reporte, and so thou be fayne to heare thy shame of euery man, & be confounded before all the people. *Beholde not euery bodyes beauty, and haue not to muche dwelling among women. For lyke as the worme and mothe cometh out of ÿ clothing, so doth wickednesse com of women.

It is better to be with an euill man, thã
C with a frendely wife, that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I will remembre the workes of the Lord, and declare the thing that I haue sene. In the wordes of the Lorde are his workes. The Sunne ouerloketh all thinges with his shyne, and all his works are full of the clearenesse therof. Hath not the Lord brought to passe, ÿ hys saincte shoulde tell out all his wonderous workes, whyche the almightye Lorde hath stablished: Al thinges endure in hys glorye. He seketh oute the grounde of the depe, and the hearte of men, and he knoweth all their ymaginacion and wisdome. For the Lord knoweth all science, and he loketh into the token of the time. He declareth the thinges that are paste, & for to com, and discloseth thinges that are secrete.

D *No thoughte may escape him, neither may anye worde be hydde from hym. He hath garnished the hye excellent workes of his wisedome, and he is from euerlasting to euerlasting. Unto him maye nothing be added neither can he be minished, he hath no nede also of any mans cõsel. O howe amiable are all his workes, and as a sparke to loke vpon. They lyue, all and endure for euer: and when so euer nede is, they are all obedient vnto him. They are al double, one against another: he hath made nothyng that hath faulte or blemishe.

*He hath stablished the goodes of euery one: and who may be satisfied with hys glorie, when he seeth it.

Job.15.b. Esa.19.c. De.32.a.

The summe of the creation of the workes of God.

A The glory of the height, is *the faire and clere firmament: the beauty of the heauē is his glorious clearenesse. The Sunne when it appeareth, declareth the day in the going out of it, a marueilous worke of ÿ highest. At none it burneth the earth, and who maye abyde for the heate thereof? Whoso kepeth an ouen when it is hoote, thre tymes more doth the Sunne burne vpon the mountaines, when it breatheth out the fire beames and shineth with the brightnes of it, it blindeth the eyes. Great is the Lorde that made it, and in his commaundement he causeth it to rũne hastily.

Psal.8.a

*The Moone also is in all, and at conuenient season it sheweth the times, and is a token of the time. *The token of the solemne feast is taken of the Moone, a light that minisheth, & increaseth againe. The moneth is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderously in her chaunging.

Gen.1.b. Exo.12.a

B The armye of heauen also is in ÿ height in the firmament of heauen: It geueth a cleare and glorious shyne. This is the clearnesse of the starres, the beautiful apparell of heauen, the apparel that ÿ Lord lighteneth in ÿ heyght. In his holy worke they continue in their order, and not one of thē fayleth in his watche. *Loke vpon the raynebowe, and praise him that made it: very beautifull is it in his shine. He cõpasseth the heauen about with his clearnesse, & glorye, the handes of the hyghest hath bended it. Thorow his commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thunder of his iudgement to smite hastily. Thorow his commaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes flye as the foules. In his power hath he strēgth-ned the cloudes, and broken the hayle sto-C nes. The mountaines melte at the syghte of him, the wynde bloweth according to his will. The sounde of his thunder bea-teth the earth, and so doth the storme of ÿ northe: the whyrle wynde also lyghteth downe as a fethered foule: casteth oute and spredeth the snowe abroade: and as the grashoppers that destroy all, so falleth it down. The eye marvelleth at the beautye of the whitenesse therof, and the hearte is afraide at the rayne of it. He poureth oute the frost upon earth lyke salte, and when it is frosen, it is as sharpe as the pricke of a thistle.

When the cold North winde bloweth, harde Christall commeth of the water. He lyghteth downe upon al the gatheringes together of water, and putteth on the waters as a breast plate. He devoureth the mountaines, and burneth the wildernesse and looke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fire. The medicine of al these is, whē a cloud commeth hastely: and when a dew commeth upon the heate, it shalbe refres-shed agayne. In his word he stilleth the wynde: In his councel he setteth the depe, and (the Lord) Iesus plāted it. They that D sayle over the sea, tell of the parelles and harmes therof, and when we heare it with our eares, we marvelle there at. For there be straunge wonderous workes, diverse maner of nice beasts & whalefishes.
Thorowe him are all thynges set in good order, and perfourmed, and in his worde all thinges endure.

I speake muche, but I can not sufficiētlye attayne unto it, for he himselfe only is the perfection of all wordes. We shoulde praise the Lorde after all oure power, for he is great in all his workes. The Lorde Ps.xcvi.a is to be feared: yea, very great is he, * and marvelous is his power. Praise the Lord magnifie him as muche as ye maye, yet Ps.cvi.a. doeth he farre exceade al praise. * O magnifie him with al your power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wise able sufficiently to praise him. Who hath sene him, that he might tell us?
Deu.v.c * Who can magnifie him so greatlye Iohn.i.b as he is. For there are hydde yet greater thinges than these be: as for us, we have sene but few of his workes. For the Lord hath made all thinges, and geven wisdom to suche as feare God.

The.xliiii.Chapter.

The praise of certaine holy men. Henoch, Noe, Abraham, Isahac and Iacob.

Et us commende ÿ noble famous men, and the ge- A glorious Actes hath the Lorde done, and shewed his great power ever sīce the beginning. The noble famous menne raygned in their kingdomes, and bare excellent rule. In their wisdome and understanding, they folowed the councel shewed in the prophetes. * They led the folke tho-row the councell and wisdome of the scry- Ec.x bes of the people. Wise sentences are foūd c. in their instructiō. They sought the swetenesse and melody of musike, and brought forth the pleasaunt songes in scripture.

They were riche also, and could comforte and pacifie those that dwelte with them.
All these were verye noble and honorable men in their generations, and were well reported of in their times. These have left a name behynde them, so that their praise shal alway be spoken of. Afterward, there were some, whose remembraunce is gone.
* They came to nought, and perished, as though they had never bene: and became Ge. as though they had never ben borne: yea, and their children also with them.

Nevertheless, these are loving menne, B whose righteousnesse shall never be forgotten: but continue by their posteritye.
Their children are an holy good heritage.
Their sede endureth fast in the covenaūt.
For their sakes shall their children and seede continue for ever, and their prayse shall never be put downe. Their bodyes are buried in peace, but their name liveth for evermore. The people can speake of their wisedome, and the congregation can talke of their prayse. * Henoch walked righte and acceptably before the Lorde: Ec. therfore was he translated for an exam- Gen.

* Noe was a stedfast and ryghteous mā: Gen.

unto the earth, when the floude came.
An everlasting covenaunt was made wt hym, that all fleshe shoulde * perishe no greate father of manye people, in glorye C was there none lyke unto him. He kepte Ge.

naunte with him. He sette the couenaunt in his flesh, and when he *was proued, he was founde faithfull. Therfore swore god vnto him, with an othe, that he wold blesse all people in his seede, that he would multiplye and increase him as the dust of the earth, and to exalte his seede as the starres: yea, & that his seede shoulde haue the possession and inheritaunce of the lande, from sea to sea, and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the worlde.

*With Isaac dyd he stablish the same couenaunte, for Abrahã his fathers sake. yea, that gracious blessyng, and health of all men and couenaunt, dyd he stablyshe with Isaac, and made it to reste vpon the heade of Iacob. He knew him *in that he prospered him so well and richelye, and gaue him an heritage, and sundred hys portion by it selfe, *and parted it among the twelfe tribes. Mercifull men brought he out of him, whiche found fauour in the syght of all fleashe.

The.xlv.Chapter.

The prayse of Moses, Aaron, and Phinehes.

Moses* beloued of God & man whose remẽbraunce is in hys prayse, him hath the lord made like in glorie to saintes, and magnified him, so that the enemies stode in awe of him, thorowe his wordes he dyd greate wonders. He made him greate in the sighte of kynges, gaue him commaundemente before his people, and shewed him his glorious power. *He stablished hym with faithfulnesse and mekenesse, and chose him out of all men. For he heard hys voyce, & he ledde him in the darke cloud *& there he gaue him the commaundementes: yea, the lawe of lyfe and wisdome, that he myghte teache Iacob the couenaunt and Israell his lawes.

B He chose Aaron hys brother also out of the tribe of Leui, exalted hym whome he made lyke to him.* An euerlastyng couenaunte made he with him, and gaue him the priesthode in the people. He made him glorious in beautifull araye, and clothed him with the garment of honour. He put perfecte ioye vpon him, and gyrded hym with strength. He decked him with syde clothes, and a tunicle, with an ouerbodycote also & a gyrdle. Roũde about made he him belles of golde, and that manye:* that when he went in þ sound might be hearde, that thei might make a noise in þ sanctuary, & geue þ people warnyng. The holye garment was wroughte & browdred with gold, yelow silke & purple. And in þ brest lappe there was a goodlye worke, wherin was fastened lyght and perfectnesse.

C *Upon the same also there was a worke fastened, and set with costely precious stones, all bounde with golde: and thys he brought in his ministration.

The stones wer fastened for a remembraũce after the numbre of the twelfe tribes of Israell. Upon his miter there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holinesse, a famous & noble worke, garnished, and pleasaunt to loke vpon. Before hym were there sene no suche fayre ornamentes, and these it behoued him alwaye to vse: There might none other put them on but onely his children and his childres children perpetually. Daylye perfourmed he his burnte offerings two times. *Moses fylled his handes, and anoynted hym with holy oyle.

D This was nowe confirmed him with an euerlastyng couenaunte, and to hys sede, as the dayes of heauen, namely, that hys children shoulde alwaye minister before him, and perfourme the office of the priesthode, and wishe the people good in his name. Before all menne liuing chose he hym, that he shoulde offer incense before the Lorde, and make odoures for a swete sauoure and remembraunce, that he shoulde reconcile the people of the Lorde with him agayne. *He gaue him auctoritye also in his commaundementes, and in the couenaunte, that he shoulde teache Iacob the statutes, and testimonies, and to enfourme Israell in hys lawe.

E *Therefore there stode vp certaine agaynste hym, and hadde enuye at hym in the wyldernesse, namely, they that wer of Dathan and Abirams side, and the furious congregation of Chore.

This the Lorde sawe, and it displeased him, and in his wrathfull indignation were they consumed. A greate wonder dyd he vpon them, and consumed them with the fire. Beside thys he made Aaron yet more honourable and glorious. He gaue him an heritage, and parted the first fruites vnto him. Unto him speciallye he appointed the bread for sustenaũce, (for the Priestes dyd eate of the offerings of the Lorde) this gaue he vnto him and hys

For when the people were turned backe, he put hym selfe forth right soone, and that with a good wyll, to pacifye the wrath of the lord toward Israell. Therfore was there a couenaunt of peace made with him, that he should be ẏ principal among ẏ righteous, & ẏ people ẏ he & his posterity shuld haue the office of the priesthode for euer. A Josu.12.c. Nu.27 d De.34.b Josu.1.a. Manlye and strong in battaile *was Jesus the son of Naue, which in steade of Moses the Prophete was geuẽ to be captaine of the people, whiche accordinge vnto his name, was a greate sauioure vnto the electe of God, to punish the enemyes that rose vp against Israell, that Israell myghte obtayne their inheritaunce. O how greate, noble, and excellent was he, when he lifte vp his hande, and drewe out his swearde agaynst the cityes? Who stode so manlye before him? For the lorde himself brought

He called vpon the hyghest and moste myghtye, when the enemyes preaced vpon him on euerye side, and the Lorde hearde him with the hayle stones. They smote the Heathenishe people myghtilye, and in the fallyng downe they slue all the aduersaries, so that the Heathen knewe hys hoste, and all hys defence, that the Lorde him selfe fought agaynst thẽ, for he folowed vpon the myghtye men of them.

The prayse of Nathan, Dauid, and Salomon.

AFterwarde in the tyme of kyng Dauid there rose vp a Prophet called Nathan: for lyke as ye fat is taken awaye from the offering, so was Dauid chosen out of ye children of Israell. He toke hys pastime with the Lions, as with kiddes, and with Beares, like as with Lambes. * Slue he not a gyaunt, when he was yet but yong, and toke awaye the rebuke from hys people? What tyme as he toke ye stone in hys hād, and smote down the proude Goliah with the slyng. For he called vpon the hyghest Lord, which gaue hym strength in hys ryghte hande, so that he ouerthrewe the mightie Gyaunte in the battayle that he might set vp ye horne of hys people again.

B *Thus brought he him to worship aboue all Princes, & made hym to haue a good report in the prayse of the Lorde, that he should weare a crown of glory. * For he destroyed the enemies on euery syde, rooted out the Philistines hys aduersaryes, and breake their horne in sunder, lyke as it is brokē yet thys day. In al hys works he praised the highest and holiest, & ascrybed the honor vnto hym.

With his whole heart dyd he prayse the Lord, and loued God that made hym. * He set singers also before the aultar, and in their tune he made swete songes. He ordeined to kepe the holy dayes worshipfully, and that the solemne feastes thorow the whole yere should be honorably holdē with praising the name of the Lorde, and with singing by tymes in the morning in the sanctuary.

C *The Lord toke away hys sinnes and exalted hys horne for euer. He gaue hym the couenaunt of the kyngdome, and the throne of worship in Israell. * After hym ther rose vp ye wyse sonne called Salomō and for hys sake he droue the enemies away farre of. Thys Salomon raigned wt peace in hys tyme, for God gaue hym rest from hys enemies on euery syde, that he might builde hym an house in hys name, and prepare the Sanctuary for euer lyke as he was well instruct in hys youth, and filled with wisdom and vnderstādyng as it wer with a water floud. He couered and filled the whole lande wt similitudes and wyse prudent sentences.

D Hys name went abrode in the Iles, bicause of hys peace he was beloued. All lādes maruelled at hys songes, prouerbes, similitudes, and at hys peace, and at the name of the Lord god, which is called the God of Israell.

*He gathered golde as tynne, & he had as much siluer as leade. *He was moued in inordinate loue toward women, and was ouercome in affectiō. He stayned his honor and worship: yea, hys posteritie defiled he also, in brynging the wrath of the Lord vpon hys children, and sorow after hys ioy, *so ye hys kyngdom was deuided and Ephraim became an vnfaythful and an vncōstant kyngdom. *Neuerthelesse, God did not slake hys mercy, neither was he vtterly destroyed bicause of hys works that he should leaue hym no posterity. As for the sede that came vpon hym, which he loued, he brought it not vtterly to nought but gaue yet a remnaūt vnto Iacob, and a roote vnto Dauid out of hym. E Thus rested Salomon wt hys fathers, and oute of hys sede he left behynd hym a very folishnesse of ye people, and such one as had no vnderstanding. *Euen Roboam, whych turned away the people thorow hys coūsell, and Ieroboam the sonne of * Nebat, which caused Israell to synn, and shewed Ephraim ye way of vngodlines: insomuch that their synnes and misdedes had the vpper hande so sore, ye at the last they wer dryuen out of ye lande for the same: yea, he sought out, & brought vp all wickednesse, tyll the vengeaunce came vpon them.
